Concluding his evidence, Sir Douglas, remarking that the nation is expecting soon to celebrate Peace, asked: "How can the nation be asked to rejoice when those who have given their all in the struggle are in such a state of want? No man should suffer because he has served his country. My desire is to get the best possible terms for every man. You surely do not want to pauperise any man. On the contrary you want to be generous."

The Chairman said that the most fruitful source of irritation was the protracted delay in dealing with cases. Could Sir Douglas Haig suggest how such delays could be avoided?

Sir Douglas Haig said there should be a co-ordinating authority, and an officer should have full pay until a pension was awarded.

At close of the session the Chairman said that the Field Marshal's evidence had been of the greatest possible assistance to the Committee.

NEVER LOST A SHIP.

PROUD RECORD OF GREAT ATLANTIC CAPTAIN.

Commander D. Dow, who saved the Lusitania from capture by a German warship and the Mauretania from being torpedoed, retired yesterday from the Cunard service after 43 years in the Mercantile Marine and the Navy.

Commander Dow sailed from New York in charge of the Lusitania at midnight on August 4, 1914, and next day, by heading into a fog bank and changing course, eluded an enemy warship which tried to intercept him. While commanding the Mauretania as a troopship in the Mediterranean in 1915 he saw the wake of a torpedo and flung the helm hard over. The torpedo missed the ship by barely 5 feet.

Commander Dow was on sick leave when the loss of the Lusitania was announced.

Among other exploits Commander Dow crossed the Atlantic three times in 22 days, and on one of these voyages broke the record by driving the Mauretania across in 4 days 10 hours 41 min. In a long career he never lost a ship.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

MURDER AND SUICIDE WITH A SHOT-GUN.

A terrible double tragedy occurred at the residence of Mr. F.H. Mowatt at Stoke Pogis yesterday. The servants, alarmed by the report of fire-arms, rushed to a bedroom and upon entering saw a ghastly sight. Mrs. Mowatt had been shot while lying in bed and the side of her head was blown away, while Mr. Mowatt was lying on the floor dead with a wound in his head. A double barrelled shot-gun was between his legs.

It is believed that Mowatt, who had been very depressed lately and suffered greatly through sleeplessness, first shot his wife and then turned the weapon on himself.

Mrs. Mowatt was a daughter of Colonel Ward Bennett.

TOO MUCH MARRIED.

UNFORTUNATE ADVENTURES IN MATRIMONY.

Recently, in the Divorce Court, Captain Alfred Raphael Campbell was defendant in two actions on the same day. One was an application for divorce by his wife and the other was a suit for nullity of marriage brought by Miss Hanne.

This second action led to his arrest and appearance before the Marylebone Court yesterday, when he was charged with bigamously marrying Miss Hanne on Christmas Day 1915 at Alexandria, Egypt, his wife, to whom he was married in June 1913 at the Chapel Royal, Savoy, being alive.

Defendant pleaded not guilty and reserved his defence.

He was committed for trial.

BACK TO THE ARMY AGAIN.

The number of recruits for the post-war army from May 28th to June 25th was 15,434. Of these 6,512 enlisted for two, three or four years, and there were 6,156 re-enlistments.

BEDFORD W.A.A.C. MYSTERY.

WAS SHE MURDERED BY A JEALOUS WOMAN?

The startling new theory that Miss Nellie Rault, the member of the Q.M.A.A.C., who was murdered at Haynes Park Camp, near Bedford, on May 12, may have met her fate at the hands of a revengeful woman, came to light on Saturday.

It is argued that most of the wounds on Miss Rault's body were of a superficial character, that they were inflicted in the course of a sudden quarrel, during which she made an attempt to run away and was pursued by her assailant.

This, of course, gives a still more dramatic complexion to the affair, but the theory has yet to be submitted to the examination of the Scotland-yard experts.

There are now no fewer than ten experienced detectives engaged in unravelling the mystery under the direction of Chief Inspector Wensley.

Mr. Wensley has now been hard at work for nearly a week, and has interrogated between thirty and forty persons at Haynes Park Camp. The scene of the murder has been photographed, and, as far as possible, Mr. Wensley and his assistants have reconstructed the crime.

A puzzling aspect of the drama is the discovery some distance from the body of a novel Miss Rault was reading, while the finding of an Army table knife near the body is another matter that baffles the police.

This knife, it should be remarked, was not the weapon which, in the opinion of the doctor, caused death.

A sharp instrument was used, and whether the assassin threw it away or still has it in his, or her, possession is problematical. A diligent search of the woods has not helped Scotland-yard.

CHANNEL TUNNEL.

LECTURE AT THE LEAVE CLUB.

For over a hundred years the idea of a tunnel between England and France has been a subject of controversy and enterprise. The story was unfolded to a large audience at the Leave Club on Tuesday evening by Baron d'Erlanger, Chairman of the London Committee of the Club. He spoke with expert knowledge, as it was he who formed the Channel Tunnel Company in England.

The Chair was taken by Major General Sir S. Lawford, K.C.B. and among the distinguished audience were Lieut.-General Sir C. W. Jacob, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Lieut.-General Sir A. Godley, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Lieut.-General Sir A. Haldane, K.C.B., D.S.O. Major-General Sir W. Heneker, K.C.B., Major-General Chichester, C.M.G., Brig. General Fuller, C.M.G., and many others.

The lecture said that the idea of the tunnel originated in France at the time of Napoleon I, after the signing of the Peace of Amiens, but as the peace did not continue for long the project was dropped until about fifty years later. A company was formed in 1869 and all arrangements were made. The protocol between the two countries was signed but the Franco-German War broke out and once more the matter had to be postponed: In 1876 a fresh start was made and the protocol was again signed. Companies were started on both sides of the channel and two thousand yards of tunnel were made from each coast, when the Board of Trade ordered the cessation of the work owing to the opposition which was being raised. At present however, there is a great movement on foot for resuming the work.

The Baron claimed that if the Channel Tunnel had been in existence in 1914 the war would not have taken place, and that in the event of another war the tunnel would be of immense value, and could easily be destroyed if necessary.

After this interesting lecture Sir S. Lawford thanked Baron d'Erlanger and Miss Decima Moore on behalf of the audience and in a short but stirring speech, called for three cheers for the Baron, who had done so much for the Leave Clubs in Paris and Cologne.

The response left no doubt as to the popularity of the Club.

RIVAL REGIMENTS.

CIVILIANS SUFFER THROUGH SOLDIERS' DISPUTE.

Several officers and men were seriously injured during a riot at Pembroke Dock on Monday night, when a free fight lasting an hour and a half occurred between the Welsh Regiment and the Duke of Wellington's Regiment. It appears that men belonging to the latter regiment left the camp at 9.30 and met members of the Welsh Regiment in the main street. Stones were thrown and several civilians were struck by heavy missiles, one receiving a nasty wound on the head. Two officers were badly wounded and the scene looked ugly for a long time. Eventually the men were persuaded to return to their respective camps.

CANADIANS SENTENCED.

Two Canadian soldiers arrested in connection with the Strand trouble on Monday night were sentenced to fourteen days imprisonment for assault on constables.

At Tower Bridge police court, another Canadian private was sentenced to ten weeks hard labour for being drunk and disorderly and assaulting constables.

EXPERT DESERTER.

Private James Smith, of the South Staffordshire Regiment, who was remanded at Grimsby on Saturday to await an escort, was said to have been arrested six times for desertion, and on each occasion, before the military could punish him, to have escaped from escorts or broken arrest.

Detective Inspector Dixon described Smith as being able to run like a hare. A house had to be surrounded before he was captured on this occasion.

WOMEN AND THE WAR.

The war has been hard to win, but it would have been infinitely harder to win if our womankind had not played their noble and heroic part.

The Commander-in-Chief of the British Army of the Rhine, when he formally opened the Princess Victoria's Club for Nurses, a much-needed and desirable institution in the Sachsen Ring, paid a hearty tribute to the patriotic labours of women who have fully shared the trials, hardships, and dangers of a bitter and tedious campaign. Such a tribute is as opportune as it is merited. As the newspaper of the British soldier in Germany, we add our tribute to the unrivalled work which the women of Britain achieved during almost five years of tragic warfare.

It is impossible to exaggerate the extent, the devotion, and the inspiration of that work.

Even yet it surprises the soldier. Tenderness, unselfishness, cheerfulness, he looked for and found in happy abundance. But few expected the versatility, efficiency, and daring that have so notably marked the services of our sisters.

"Woman's at best a contradiction still." We are still as perplexed as Pope, but our perplexity savours of admiration — and our admiration has had in this war a natural history.

If there was one class which more than any other might have been pacifist, it was our women. Yet it was not from them that pacifism recruited its imaginative and unheroic ranks. Women took an early and strong stand on behalf of liberty and righteousness of national life.

But they did more than show the pathway of honour. They did man's work when men were needed on the battlefield, and it is a truism that they have made good in almost every profession that men used to adopt.

Even more than that — they made the arms and shells that speeded victory; they enlisted as auxiliaries and took their place on the soil of France and Belgium, long before it was delivered from our enemies.

But the most characteristic work of women has been that of comforting and healing. Many have come to work in institutes that have made the lot of the soldier easier to bear, and from the earliest days numbers have come out to tend the wounded and nurse the sick.

It is only a few days ago since our Army was visited by the Matrons-in-Chief of the Nursing Services. Dame E. H. Becher, G.B.E., and Dame E. M. McCarthy, G.B.E., were received by Sir William Robertson, by General Mangin, the French Commander-in-Chief, and by representatives of the American and Belgian armies. They can have no doubt of the warm appreciation which their efficient and whole-hearted work has drawn from the soldiers of the Allied countries. In ancient days the women of Sparta with grim heroism incited their sons to deeds of daring, but in these days the women of England have outshone the stoicism of Greece. They have themselves been our comrades in the fight, and many have given up their lives in Britain's cause.

TO CLEAR UP DOUBTS.

The other day a summary was given in our columns of an Army Order recently issued in regard to demobilization, which, owing to the exigencies of space, was somewhat too brief to be clearly understood by all.

In order therefore, that nobody in the Rhine Army should be misled or disappointed by any premature anticipations being unfulfilled, we think it well to give more fully the new provisions of this new Order.

It provides that, except in the case of personnel serving in India, and the detachment of the Far North and of Siberia, all who are eligible for demobilization under Army Order 55, and who have not volunteered for service with the Armies of Occupation, but have been temporarily retained for the military machinery of demobilization or in over-seas garrisons, will be released with all possible despatch.

These classes include:—

Those who joined the Colours for continuous service prior to January 1, 1916;

Those who have completed their term of Colour service;

Those who have attained the age of 37 or who subsequently attain that age;

Those who are entitled to wear three or more wound stripes;

Those who, before February 1, 1919, were certified for release by the Ministry of Labour;

Those whose release on compassionate grounds or whose claims to return to their pre-war home or business over-seas have been approved by the War Office.

Subject to the necessary transport being available, the despatch for release will be completed within from one to three months.

"WHICH CAME FIRST?"

"Military Collapse or Revolution."

III

The article in yesterday's issue under this title was a continuation of the quotation contained in Thursday's issue, from the "Bergische Arbeiterstimme."

At the present moment the struggle of the parties really responsible for the outbreak and carrying on of the war in a greater or less degree — the Majority Socialists, the Zentrum, and the extreme right, are struggling to make the people forget their responsibility under these heads by attacking the Independent Socialists as the cause of Germany's request for an armistice and of the débacle of the German army.

"The army," they say, "would have been able to resist, and we should have been able to hold out for better terms, if it had not been for the Independents who stirred up the revolution."

The Independents reply — "The army was as a matter of fact unable to resist further — it had yielded up ground, guns, munitions, men, to such an extent that its morale was undermined long before the revolution, and the revolution was the result of continuous defeat and of despair."

Viewed from our side of "No man's land," the contention of the Independents appears correct. By the beginning of September we had droves of German prisoners, we had bitten deep into their line, we had found their counter-attacks enfeebled. Their only hope lay in retreat, and their means of retreat were inadequate. The end was coming into view.

By the end of October it had become apparent that though an armistice might avoid more waste of life, it must be at the cost of surrendering, an overwhelming and inevitable military triumph for the Allies.

The judgment of the German military authorities at the time, whatever they may say now, confirms the argument of the Independents. Ludendorff's exhortation to the authorities at home in the beginning of October, to make peace while the army still stood, we have quoted recently.

Hindenburg's statement in November, that "since the 17th October the recognition of defeat had worked the complete disintegration of the army," emphasizes the same view.

We were constantly hearing not long ago that the majority of Germans were panting for the blessings of a Wilson peace. We learn now that as far as the parties in power are concerned they would have continued doing their best to avoid it, but for the duress of defeat or revolution. This is our view also.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

PAINT AND POWDER.

Sir, — I agree with "Anti-Paint." Even if, as "Kingston" thinks, the girls at home are not more painted and powdered than they were two years ago, wasn't it bad enough then?

What "Kingston" ought to do is to carry his mind back ten years or so, and then he would see what a change for the worse has happened to England's girlhood. But perhaps at that period "Kingston" was too young to notice anything but his toys.

It isn't the girls who have done their bit either, who are the worst offenders, and to drag in that remark of his is beside the point.

MORE ABOUT RAZORS.

Sir,—I was glad to see that someone has referred to the palming off of bogus "Gillette" blades on the British soldier.

I know of other cases of trying to sell inferior articles at the price of high-class. In Bonn, the other day, I was shown a lot of German razors evidently put on the market especially to tempt the Britisher.

One was priced 16 marks and the directions were printed in English, but in spite of liberal stropping it refused to shave satisfactorily, whereas I know men who bought others at the same shop with German names at 10 marks each, that were quite "O.K."

Soldiers should take warning and avoid goods labelled with English names and directions.

PARD.

LATE COFFEE WANTED.

Sir, — I endorse "Outpost's" letter as to the inconvenience of not being able to have such innocuous beverage as lemonade or coffee after ten o'clock in the Officers' Club.

I can well understand that it may be necessary to limit the hours for stronger drinks, but when one arrives at the club, perhaps after a long journey just after ten, and finds that a refreshing cup of coffee is denied to you, it seems hard.

I.H.P.

HAVE YOU THOUGHT?

Sir,—With reference to your article entitled "Have you thought?" I quite agree that more men should take advantage of the facilities offered through the medium of the army schools for improving their educational capacities.

But what I wish to point out is, the fact that very few men get any encouragement or opportunity of taking an educational course, especially if one happens to be billeted a few kilometres from Cologne.

As regards myself, I was employed as a clerk prior to enlistment, and would much appreciate a three month's commercial course to fit me for the time when again I assume civilian duties.

"SIGNALLER NED."

THE G.S. RIBBON.

Sir,—In reply to "1916 Man" concerning the General Service ribbon, I won't believe his wishes are shared by many more in the Army of the Rhine. Evidently he has had a cushy job during the war and doesn't object to share the honours earned by other men.

I can assure your correspondent that there are not many 1916 men in this unit who are keen to sport it whenever it is issued, seeing that everybody is to have it. Surely a 1916 man should have more pride than that.

"NOT A BASE WALLAH."

ON AMERICAN Y.M.C.A's.

Sir,—Last Sunday I passed the entire day at Coblenz, and a point that struck me very particularly was the arrangements made for the comfort of their troops.

On alighting from the train at Coblenz station I noticed a canteen, and on going in I was provided with a most welcome and refreshing snack of splended coffee and sandwiches. When I tendered payment in the usual way of things they informed me that these were provided free of all charge for the benefit of the troops.

Another feature I noted was the American Y.M.C.A., where most appetising meals and hot baths (hot and cold showers), could be had at all times at very reasonable charges.

Whilst not wishing to detract in any way from the great credit due to our own Y.M.C.A. and other voluntary organisations carried on for the benefit of our own troops, I suggest that much might be learned in regard to additional comforts for the men by a short study of the American system prevailing at Coblenz.

INTERCHANGE OF CONCERT PARTIES.

Sir,—The unit to which I belong regards its concert party as second to none, but, as you will realise, it is very difficult to furnish new business which will amuse.

The performers are, after all, amateurs, and it is next to impossible to introduce new songs and the like with each performance if the party is not to suffer in the eyes of the men.

Hence I advocate an interchange of such parties. Every unit which can lay claim to being progressive has a concert party, so that all that is necessary is a medium through which officers in charge can be put into touch with one another.

I respectfully suggest that the Amusements Officer in Cologne provides a register stating the strength of the party, its terms and whereabouts, so that we may consult it and provide an evening's entertainmemt for the men, where otherwise they would be left to their own resources. Perhaps battalion amusement officers will subscribe their views.

"TIGER."

TRAMWAY CRITICISMS.

Sir,—Apropos the alleged "superiority" of the German over the British tramway systems, I may say that the wide guage track is not altogether unknown in England. My own little Lancashire town of 23,000 inhabitants is connected to the larger town of Rochdale by such a track, which I believe is used throughout the Rochdale system.

Also when we get four large coaches with bogey wheels, such as the Cöln-Bonn service, I think it has passed beyond the stage of "tram." I have often been surprised at the number of people who refer to them as trams.

There is a practically similar service between Manchester and Bury (with the same overhead distribution) to which we proudly refer as electric trains.

I do not profess any great acquaintance with the Cologne tramway system, but I have always found that where a track is laid close to the side of the road, as in Severin Strasse (much to the inconvenience of users of the pavement), it is because the narrowness of the street has permitted of no alternative.

No, I do not agree that the "old country is beaten to a frazzle" in this respect. T. H.

HENLEY PEACE REGATTA.

ROWING FESTIVAL.

RHINE ARMY OFFICERS R.C. SCRATCHED FOR KING'S CUP.

The Henley Peace Regatta opened yesterday, when an extensive programme of events was carried out. The draw for heats and stations was made by the Committee of Management as follows:—

KINGS CUP (eight oars).

Heat A: Australian Army No. 2 Crew v. Australian Army No. 1 Crew. Heat B: New Zealand Army Crew v. Cambridge University Service Crew. Heat C: French Army Crew v. American Army Crew. Heat D: Canadian Army Crew (Overseas Military Forces of Canada) v. Oxford University Service Crew. Second Round—Heat E: Winner of A v. B. Heat F: Winner of C. v. D. Final: Winner of E. v. F.

Rhine Army Officers' R.C., Thames R.C. Service Crew, and Wattle Club (A.I.F.) were scratched, and the entry of the National Amateur Rowing Association was rejected.

In Heat C: For the Fawley Cup (eight oars) the Rhine Army Officers R.C. has been drawn against Christ Church, Oxford. The winners of Heat C. row against the winners of Heat A., the draw for the latter being R.M.C. (Sandhurst) v. Cambridge University Second Crew.

THE KING'S CUP.

SIX OF EIGHT CREWS FROM OVERSEAS.

The King's Cup takes the chief place of interest and it could hardly be otherwise, seeing that six of the eight crews competing are from overseas, the Service crews from each "Varsity" being the English representatives.

The draw unfortunately was unkind, for the first two crews drawn were the Australian first and second crews, and one regretted at the moment that the conditions prevailing when the draw for the Olympic Regatta in 1908 was made in the same historic room at the Henley Town Hall, that if two crews from any country were drawn together the second crew drawn should go into the next heat, were not now in force.

On the form shown this race will doubtless be a great one. If the two home crews should prove successful in their heats the draw has been kind to them that they should not meet before the final, but whichever crew reaches this stage, it will only be after a desperate struggle.

The scratchings reduced the number of heats and finals necessary to complete the card to 33—24 on Wednesday, 27 on Thursday, 20 on Friday, and 10 on Saturday, with the two University races, which will be rowed probably on Friday and Saturday.

OLYMPIA CONTESTS.

SPORTING REFLECTIONS

Quoits Challenge.

My note last week recommending the ancient game of quoits as being a suitable pastime for Rhineland has brought me the following welcome remarks from a reader:—"I was very pleased indeed to see your little note in the "Post" to-day about quoits. Yes, why not take this game up, and see if a little league could be organised. We have just had our quoits sent out from England and we are making a start now. We shall be very pleased to give any team a game, either on our ground or on theirs." My correspondent is the Sports Officer of the Cavalry Division H.Q., Quadrath. So roll up, my merry quoiters.

1st Signal Squadron Sports.

Mentioning the Cavalry Division reminds me that on Saturday the pretty village of Quadrath will be the venue of the 1st Signal Squadron Sports, the eliminating heats for which were run last Saturday. Of the many events, the mile race, open to the Cavalry Division, promises to be one of the keenest and most exciting of tussles. In the band race, I observe, a handicap is considerately given according to size of instrument, which is only equitable. At an army sports meeting I once attended, such a handicap was not permitted, and the result was as amusing as it was manifestly unfair.

Sports for Ladies.

In American lawn-tennis circles it is customary to write and speak of "women's doubles," but in less democratic England such events, as everybody knows, are known as "ladies' doubles." Following the English custom, naturally, we have adopted the latter nomenclature "out here." Can Rhineland with some practice ever produce a Mlle. Lenglen or Mrs. Lambert Chambers? Time and the lawn-tennis "tourney" which opens at the Lindenthal Tennis Club on Monday will tell.

Rowing at Henley.

This year's Peace Regatta at Henley is likely to be long remembered, if only because of the unfortunate incident of the turning down of the crew of Service men who were entered for the King's Cup by the National Amateur Rowing Association. In the eyes of the Stewards the men comprising the crew are not amateurs, and I presume the rule which has been applied is the following:— "No person shall be considered an amateur oarsman . . . . who is or has been by trade or employment for wages a mechanic, artisan, or labourer, or engaged in any menial duty." This rule is as antiquated as it is mischievous, and ought to be expunged. The Rhineland Officers' Rowing Club, I observe, have scratched for the King's Cup, but are drawn to compete against Christ Church, Oxford, for the Fawley Cup. Good luck to them.

THE RAMBLER.

BATTALION SPORTS,

8TH. BATT. THE CAMERONIANS (SCOTTISH RIFLES).

The sports of the 8th. Batt. The Cameronians (Scottish Rifles) took place at Hilden on Sunday before a large concourse of spectators.

The flat races attracted large entries, and the two open events, the mile and the 440 yards, drew good fields and furnished some excellent running.

A feature of the short distance races was the attractive sprinting of Capt. E.R. Saltonstall, late Adjt. of the Battalion. The miscellaneous races were a source of much amusement, the boat race, three-legged and palliasse races especially, appealing to the large German spectatorate round the ropes. At intervals during the afternoon the pipers of the 11th. Royal Scots played selections, and a local instrumental band also played tasteful airs.

PRESENTATION OF PRIZES.

Tea and refreshments were served and at the conclusion of the sports the prizes were presented by Brig. General E.S. Girdwood C.B., C.M.G., 3rd. Lowland Inf. Bde., who afterwards, on the motion of Lt. Col. Findlay D.S.O., comdg. the 8th Cameronians, was heartily cheered. Among other spectators were Lt. Col. McKenzie, 3rd. Lowland Division, Lt. Col. Green, 6th. Royal Highlanders, and numerous officers and men from both Lowland and Highland Divisions.

A proposed camp fire concert had to be abandoned owing to a heavy shower of rain, but this was no loss, for a great audience gathered in the well equipped Recreation Hall of the Battalion and listened with rapt attention to a splendid recital of song and story. C.S.M. Searles as a comedian made a great hit, and the singing of Pte. Ward was much appreciated, while Pte. Thomson in the "Yukon Trail" impressed everyone by a wonderful dramatic display. After a speech by the Colonel, the proceedings terminated with the singing of the National Anthem and "Auld Lang Syne."

Much of the success of the sports was due to the splendid organisation of the Sports Committee and to the energetic fashion in which they did their work.

84th BRIGADE R.G.A. CRICKET LEAGUE.

The first of a series of matches between Batteries in the above Bde. took place on Sunday at Mehlem, viz:—77 Siege Battery v. 69 Siege Battery. The latter batted first, but owing to good bowling by Cpl. Fenton and Sergt. Garmousway were all out for 19. Fenton took 6 wickets for 7 runs, and Garmousway 4 for 6. 77 Siege Battery passed their opponents' score with four wickets down, but continuing the game, were all out for 61. Mills (15) and Cpl. Fenton (10) were the only two to reach double figures. Brookes took 3 for 6 and Mason 3 for 18. Totals:—77 Siege Battery ... 61; 69 Siege Battery 19

FRIENDLY MATCH AT BRUHL.

A friendly cricket match took place at Bruhl on Sunday, between the Midland Divisional H.Q., and Signals Midland Division, in which the Signals again won in easy style. H.Q. going in to bat first, only succeeded in scoring 39, owing to remarkably good bowling by Walton and Bailey. The Signals replied with 60, runs. Lieut. Taylor batted well for 13. After tea the H.Q. team again batted and this time were more successful, scoring 67, Ashmore claiming 40 of these (not out), but he had several "lives". Good bowling by Best, Bailey and Walton, who took 3 wickets each, was a notable feature of this innings.

The Signals replied in the second innings with the same score, 67, thus running out winners by 21 runs. Best batted well for 14 and Blackwell as wicket-keeper did remarkably well, making several smart catches.

Mr. Edward Robbins, secretary of the Football Association of Wales, has received a letter from Sir Sidney Greville, stating that the Prince of Wales will have much pleasure in complying with the request recently made through Lord Kenyon that he should become Patron of the Association.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

7 WICKETS FOR ONE RUN.

121 HEAVY BATTERY R.G.A., (107), v. 303 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A., (11). For the winners Bdr. Whitely and Dvr. Thomas were top scorers with 37 and 34 respectively, and Sergt. Banks was in great form with the ball. His seven wickets for one run is equal to the record in The Cologne Post Cup matches. On the previous day he had taken seven wickets for five runs against another Battery but this was not a Cup match.

EASTERN DIVISIONAL H.Q. (73 for 6) v. 52nd WELSH Regt. (111) on Siegburg Prison Ground on Saturday. For the Welsh Regt. top scorers were Sgt. Kay 43, Lieut. Needham 20, Mr. Hughes 13, and Capt. Worlock 13. Bowling:— Cpl. Gill 2 for 42, Capt. Morgan 1 for 16, Spr. Thompson 1 for 14, and Capt. Carroll 2 for 0. Eastern Division top scorers were C/Sgt. Sandell 29, and the Revd. P. W. Brumwell not out 19. Bowling:—Pte. Lawton 3 for 24, Lt. Needham 2 for 18, Major Montgomery 1 for 19. The above match was abandoned through rain, and will be replayed at the first opportunity.

LANCS DIV. H.Q. (163 for 10) v. 52nd WELSH REGIMENT (94 for 10). Batting for the former, Lieut. Almond scored 53; Major Rountree 36; Major Collier, 31; and Cpl. Smith, 12. Lieut. Almond also took 5 for 34; and Cpl. Smith 2 for 3.

174 SIEGE BATTERY (59 for 1) v. 509 FIELD COY. R.E. (56) at Weilerswist, on Monday. The Sappers started disastrously, losing 5 wickets for 4 runs. With the advent, however, of Sapper Prince, things began to look rosier. Prince hit merrily, eventually being caught in the country at 34. Bdr. Graham took 8 for 19. On resumption the Gunners scored 54 without loss, when Whittingham was caught in the slips, his score being 37. Gunner Rysell contributed 16 (not out). As the weather was a bit doubtful, stumps were drawn, with the score at 59 for 1 wicket, leaving 174 the victors by 9 wickets.

83rd FIELD COY. R.E. (56) v. 83rd (DUBLIN) GENERAL HOSPITAL (28). For the R.E's, Sapper McDonna took 5 wickets for 10 runs, and Lieut. Keane 5 for 16. Sapper McDonna, with 15 runs, headed the batting.

LONDON D. M. T. COY. v. 14 G. H. Q. RESERVE. M. T. COY. at Merheim on Monday. The G. H. Q. Coy. won the toss, and decided to put the London D.M.T. Coy in first. The first five wickets fell rapidly, the score only standing at 30, until Pte. Spearman came in, who showed brilliant style and, aided by Pte. Hawkins, scored a very creditable 45, the final score being 88. The G. H. Q. Coy. failed to make any stand at all, the only man to make double figures being Cpl. Whiting, who made 17. For the winners, Lieut. Wright took 9 wickets for 27.

180th LABOUR COY. (74) v. H.A.C. (42) at Kalk on Tuesday. Bowling for the winners, Smart took 4 for 18, and Main 4 for 14. For the H.A.C. Freeman took 6 for 14, and Key 3 for 29.

17th LANCERS v. 53rd SHERWOOD FORESTERS.

On Saturday the 17th Lancers played the 53rd Sherwood Foresters on a tricky wicket at Liblar, and won by 11 runs in a very low-scoring game. Scores:—53rd Sherwood Foresters, 21 (Lieut. Murchie, 10; Capt. Fowler, 5 wickets for 10 runs; Capt. Boles, 4 for 11. 17th Lancers, 32 (Capt. Boles, 11; Capt. Frith, 7 wickets for 9 runs; L.Cpl. Bull, 2 wickets for 7 runs).

DEMPSEY v. CARPENTIER.

TEX RICKARD OFFERS 50,000 DOLLARS FOR A MATCH.

Francois Descamps, manager of Georges Carpentier, received a telegram from Tex Rickard, organiser of the world's heavy-weight boxing championship match between Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey, at Toledo this week, offering Carpentier 45,000 dollars plus 5 000 dollars expenses, for a match with Dempsey at the National Sporting Club, New York, during January next.

Before replying definitely, Descamps has asked as to the conditions of the match and the number of rounds.

CORBETT ON WILLARD.

Jim Corbett, now a strikingly successful screen star, has a good deal of respect for Jess Willard, the champion, but he names James J. Jeffries as the greatest fighter he has ever seen. "Jess Willard," Corbett gives as his opinion, "would have been great at any time, no matter who the heavy-weights were, not because of his natural fighting ability, though he has that, but because of his great size. And he combines that with remarkable agility and speed for a big man. But the greatest fighter I have ever seen was Jeffries—when he was Jeffries. Barring Willard, he was the biggest champion we ever had. He weighed 230lb stripped, and was hard as nails."

OTHER OPINIONS.

Asked by the "World" to give their views on the forthcoming fight for the heavy-weight championship, Mike Gibbons, contender for the middle-weight crown, says: "Willard's experience, punch, and great strength will be too much for Dempsey to surmount. It takes more than gameness to whip Willard. Ask Frank Moran." Sam Langford, once a challenger for the title, says: "Willard's weight and all-round ability will win for him. It is asking too much of Dempsey to beat that big fellow. I feel sorry for him, for he seems to be a nice little fellow."

WILDE-MOORE FIGHT.

ARTICLES SIGNED FOR COMING CHAMPIONSHIP MATCH.

Articles were signed on Tuesday for the championship match between Jimmy Wilde and Pal Moore, who meet at Olympia on July 18th in a 20 rounds contest for a purse of £5,000 and side stakes amounting to £500.

BAKERS BILLIARD MATCH.

On Monday evening the R.A.S.C., attached to the 93rd Brigade, paid a visit to the "Dough Boys" at Kalk. The visitors gave the Bakers a good evening's sport and an early return match is already fixed for the 14th of July. Cpl. Robinson, Cpl. Frehearn, Cpl. Coles were the three best players for the visitors. The home team has had to pick a new team owing to the "demobbing" of their old players. Pte. Hunter and Pte. Swaby two new players, each won his game.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

£200 A Day.

An ex-policeman is said to have made £200 a day at Ascot races by hiring a meadow and storing motor-cars at £1 each.

Noted Hockey Player.

To the memory of Lt. C. D. Sneath, Middlesex Regt., a well-known Middlesex hockey player, a window has been erected in Hendon Parish Church.

Well-known Yacht Refloated.

The well-known yacht Naida, owned by Mr. McCalline, which stranded on Varden Ledge, Totland Bay, Isle of Wight, was succesfully refloated early on Sunday by the Cowes tug and brought to Cowes.

Athletic Sport Boom.

Entries all round for Saturday's meetings were so good as to justify the opinion that there is a real boom in athletic sport. This is to be expected after the encouragement given to athletics in the Army.

Mlle. Lenglen.

"Why are you watching this match," said a stranger to a man at the court side when Ritchie and Dixon were for the time being in the throes of "ping-pong." "Because Mlle. Lenglen plays here next," was the reply.

London Football.

At a meeting of the London Business Houses Association football section it was decided to run a league competition, also a cup competition, instead of two competitions on the knock-out principle during next season.

No French Racing on Fete Day.

There will be no racing in France on July 14, the date of the Fete of the Republic, the French racing authorities having decided to postpone all meetings on that day. July 14 is to be devoted solely to the victory celebration and fetes.

Recreational Facilities.

Other cities might easily follow the example of Leeds, whose park superintendent has been instructed to make such arrangements as are practical for the provision of suitable cricket pitches in the parks and recreation grounds for the school children.

Australian Rowers.

The Oxonian, American, and Australian crews have covered the half course, at Henley, in identically the same time, 3 min. 25 sec., but the Australian performance was the best, as they continued over the full course, which they did in the excellent time of 7 min. 9 sec.

Golf Sloggers.

Mitchell and Ray are probably the longest drivers in golf—at any rate, when they let themselves go. Duncan is not so obviously a slogger, but he hits the ball considerably harder than most, and in something like the way in which Harry Vardon used to "punch" the solid gutta-percha ball.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Thursday, July 3, 1919.

Surface wind, moderate, between South-West and West. Fair, but some likelihood of occasional showers. Good visibility.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

A Merry Peace Ball.

On Monday night the Continental Hotel was the scene of a most enjoyable Peace ball given by the officials of the Y.M.C.A. in Cologne. A first class programme was eagerly danced through, and bridge, billiards, etc. helped to make the party go with a swing. The large number of officers — of both sexes — who attended, kept the fun going until an early hour and everyone voted the whole of the proceedings a huge success.

Peace Night at Lowland D.H.Q.

A supper and dance were held at the General Mess, Ohligs, a night or two ago night to celebrate the signing of peace. Though rather of an impromptu nature both the supper and dance reflected great credit on the Mess President, Tom Strachen, and the cook, "The Gunner." The supper, laid out in fine style by the competent waiters was greatly appreciated, and the end of an excellent repast left the men in good humour for the concert and dance following.

"The Castles."

The other evening "The Castles" Concert Party (354 Siege Battery R.G.A.), gave their second performance before a crowded and enthusiastic audience in their hall at Wuschheim. Their costumes, stage effects, selections and executions reflect very great credit upon the organizers. The programme ranged from farce to melodrama. Gnr. Bramley's female impersonations were excellent. Bdr. Denley proved himself quite a versatile artist, being as successful as a dude, as a heavy villain. These two artists' impressions of every day life were quite a feature of the entertainment. The comedy parts were well sustained by Gnrs. Fuller and Hambin, as also were the concerted and solo items by Sgt. Rushton, Cpl. Whyman and Gnr. Butler. Gnr. Buckin proved an able accompanist.

"The Prongs."

I have received a letter from an Amusements Officer, who waxes very enthusiastic over a performance of "The Prongs" at Gladbach. Now I have seen "The Prongs," and heartily endorse all he has said. They are undoubtedly a fine all-round party. But he has set me thinking. Who is the new leading lady? What is his — or should it be, her name? The Amusements Officer cannot tell me, but he says this delightful lady's rendering of Marie Lloyd's "A little bit of what you fancy," was quite the best thing he had heard or seen. Really, with this new prodigy and old members like Sig. Batey and Jimmy Robinson, I should think "The Prongs" brighter than ever. The Rhine Army Amusements Officer must book them for a week in Cologne.

Concert and "Hop."

At the Leave Club the entertainment given on Tuesday, by Miss Sara Silvers, who has spent the last three years in giving concerts to our troops in France, was much appreciated. It was quite informal, but she must be congratulated on the successful way in which she kept her audience continuously amused and interested for over an hour. The men thoroughly enjoyed every item, particularly her songs "Maire my Girl," "The Stoker of the Lusitania" and "Hunting Submarines — A Grimsby Boat." They also seemed to find singing and whistling choruses under her direction very entertaining. A remarkable dance was given in the theatre at 6.30. Among other demonstrations given were "How not to dance the One Step and the Valse." The only criticism it is possible to make is that Cpl. Heather and Sergeant-Major Felgate both dance so beautifully that it was very difficult for them to dance as badly as the people they were trying to imitate.

Shakespearean Evening.

A record number assembled at the weekly Meeting of the Y.M.C.A. Reading Circle, Euskirchen, to hear the Rev. Mansfield give his second Shakespearean evening.

His exposition of the great dramatist's "As You Like it," given a month ago, was a great success, but the "Merchant of Venice," the subject of this week's discourse, even eclipsed that masterly effort.

The Rev. Mansfield is by no means a novice in the study of Shakespeare, and his portrayals of Portia, Antonio and Shylock assumed breath in the masterly handling of the play, from which he extracted the essentials of the plot, leaving the less important details as a shadow throwing these principals into a relief at once rich and prominent.

A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Mansfield for such an instructive and entertaining hour brought a most most successful meeting to a conclusion.

"Tiger Pips" Score.

The Tiger Pips are much to be congratulated on the fine programme which they gave at the British Empire Leave Club, despite the fact that one of their best comedians had met with an accident, and was unable to perform. The lighting effects were charming, and the costumes of the troupe looked most picturesque. Pte. Whithead got very much applauded for his songs, "Bully Beef and Biscuits", and Pte. Senior's "It's the Drums" was much appreciated.

The violin solo by L/Cpl. Senicle (52nd. Notts and Derbys) was a real musical treat, and the audience insisted upon an encore from him.

A wrong Impression.

A paragraph yesterday may have given the impression that the British Rhine Army Dramatic Company had been formed to produce three-act plays every other week at the Deutsches Theatre Cologne, but I want to make it clear that the original idea of arranging tours throughout the whole area has not been changed. It is the intention of the Rhine Army Dramatic Company to visit Duren, Bonn, Euskirchen and 2nd Corps Area.

Their first visit outside Cologne will be at Bonn on Friday 11th July, when "The Mollusc" will be performed.

A Peace Night Concert.

Recently the 51st. Battn., Royal Sussex Regt., gave a highly successful impromptu concert at Seelscheid. The primary object was to choose talent for a costume concert-party; its secondary object—to give vent to the high spirits generated by the numerous rumours of peace which had filtered through, and by the official announcement made at the commencement of the concert by its organiser, the Adjutant.

The concert opened with a pianoforte solo by Pte. Topp, of 'X' Company followed by 'X' Company's minstrel troup in a medley of popular songs; the Padre took the crowded house with him in the chorus of that fine old favourite "Clementine," followed by 2 Lt. O'Brien in an amusing monologue. The artistes included C.S.M. Bell, C.S.M. Wells, Sergt. Cogger, Corpl. Southcott, L.Cpl. Missen and Ptes. Pollard, Price, and Fletcher. The last item was a sketch, by a 'W' Company party, stage-managed by Corpl. Hankin, entitled "Guard-mounting in Ragtime", which was a great success.

Echoes from Rhineland.

A Wedding Incident.

It was at Buisdorf where German roadmenders were at work with a British built steam-roller. A triple wedding had taken place and the whole party was happily proceeding on foot to whatever it is that they call the wedding breakfast. Down from the roller and up the road hurried the labourers, and across the pathway they slung a strong rope barrier. Mein Herr the roller-driver then produced from his capacious pocket a shoe-brush with which he flicked imaginary mud from everyone's boots, afterwards passing his hat round to the men of the procession who tipped him with various notes and shook his brawny hand. He then saluted them as they continued their happy stroll.

A Mystery Solved.

Inch by inch, foot by foot, very cautiously he crawled along on the roof of one of the large houses at Lindenthal. No town-cat with all his experience could have used more judgment. No boots, no stockings camouflaged his dainty feet. Steady now, steady, one can see him standing on the chimney-top with rope in hand, a living statue. Ye Gods, he cannot hang himself there surely. The mystery is revealed. At the end of the rope a ball of iron, another foot of rope and one sees a circular brush. Down the chimney it disappears, to re-appear in a few seconds. He is the German chimney sweep.

Preparing for the Tourist.

Signs are not lacking that the Rhinelander is getting ready for the civilian tourist invasion. In the vicinity of the little village of Küdinghoven, for instance, the natural beauty of the countryside has been greatly enhanced by the addition of rustic-work fences and conveniently placed steps etc. Shady arbours have been fitted up with seats and rockeries built; while in one delightful spot a fine specimen of the beautiful dog-rose has been carefully preserved to form the centre of an artistic rustic scheme, in which figures a miniature waterfall contrived from a hill-side streamlet. From this particular point of vantage a splendid view of the picturesque Rhine may be obtained.

Sawdust and Sand for Food.

The release for sale in Rhineland of the Brötchen, — the German equivalent of the English breakfast roll, — which has till recently been "verboten," marks another step towards peace conditions, and away from the food substitutes of war. However, justified were the old folks at home in their outcry against war commodities, surely the bread they ate could not compare for vileness with the stuff inflicted upon the German civilians during the war and since. The constituents of "Kriegsbrot" at one time was flour 50%, sawdust 30%, and straw-flour 20%. The unscrupulous profiteer frequently added a proportion of silver-sand for the purpose of increasing the weight.

Motorist Troubles.

Driving a motor-car through the streets of a busy town is, at the best of times, rather a nerve-racking occupation. In Germany, the proceeding is made increasingly difficult by reason of the extraordinary disregard by pedestrians of the customs of the road. It frequently happens that one has to pull up with considerably more suddenness than is good for the car, what time someone ambles cheerfully across the road without looking either to the right or left. It is indeed surprising that accidents are not a good deal more frequent than they are, and the explanation can only be the skill of motor drivers generally-both English and German.

Our National Anthem.

Comments have often been made lately of the attitude of our troops when the National Anthem is played. A correspondent says that the other night in one of the cinemas the orchestra composed of German musicians concluded the show by playing. "God Save the King," but according to him, only one young soldier stood at attention. The remainder ignored it and walked out. "Surely," he says, "this is not true British sentiment in regard to our National Anthem? Have we forgotten our dead comrades. Do we disregard the glorious traditions of our country and all that they stand for?" It is to be hoped that the instance cited is an isolated one, for, especially in an occupied country, everyone should be scrupulously, careful to do honour to the King, as head of the Empire we are all so proud of.

A Sultan's Skull.

One of the articles, No. 246, in the "Particular Settlements" of the Peace Treaty, stipulates that within six months the skull of the Sultan of Makowa must be handed over to the British Government. The German Colonial Office (retired now from the business) professes to know nothing about it. Who was Makowa? In the early nineties of the last century, the Germans were prosecuting colonial acquisition in East Africa, the persuasion used against the Ulche tribe being a Captain Prinz, and an armed force. During a little argument, which happened at Zelewski, the chief nigger lost his life and his life head, which was of particular anatomical interest. The German authorities says that a warrant officer "souvenirred" the skull, and that as it is not in any museum or institution in Germany, it is probably buried in East Africa. Captain Prinz, who might have thrown some light on the matter, is dead.

Few Cats.

One of the things many of our soldiers seem to have noticed in Rhineland is the scarcity of cats. In a day's walk the number seen may be easily counted on the fingers of one hand. Where are they? The explanation given by a correspondent may or may not be the correct one, but he says that in the backyards of the houses in the village he is billeted in, he has seen feline skins hanging on the walls. He suggests that it was "pussie" — roasted or boiled or made into "delicatessen" — that helped to keep the Rhinelanders from starvation in the latter days of the war. We wonder.

Closing a Popular Buffet.

It is announced that the buffet at Victoria station, London, has just to closed after four years continuous activity. There must be a great number of members of the Rhine Army who will ever cherish the happiest recollections of moments spent in the cheery precincts of the buffet. The ladies who ministered to the needs of Tommy's "inner man" worked under trying conditions and for long hours. Many a man arriving at the station late at night or in the "wee sma' hours" of the morning, returning from leave, will ever remember how the sunny influence of these ladies coupled with delightful sandwiches and steaming hot coffee, all supplied free of cost, speedily disposed of his feelings of "fed-uppishness."

"Walking out" Etiquette.

A certain custom in Germany has been generally noticed. When one watches the young couples (and old ones too) walking arm in arm along the pavement, it will be seen that the lady, or "Fräulein" in Germany whilst "spazieren" with her "Herr" does not always walk on the inside of the pavement — as is the custom in England, according to our laws of etiquette. From enquiries made concerning "Deutsche Etiquette" it appears that in Germany, it is correct for an unmarried woman to always walk on the gentleman's left, whilst a married woman should always walk on her husband's right.

Homes from Home.

Judging by the cheery faces and the persistent inclination to burst forth into song, the thousands of troops who have passed through Cologne during the past few days are pleased with the prospect of returning to their former billets.

To the older soldiers the advance immediately preceding the signing of Peace was reminiscent of the march from France into Germany in December of last year. The wearing of steel helmets and the temporary one night billets en route brought back vivid recollections of the none too enjoyable occupation of taking up positions in the occupied area.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" wants to encourage all ranks of the Rhine Army to make use of their powers of observation and whenever any phase of life in the occupied territory strikes any of his readers or whenever they come across any unusual incident he would like to have a short paragraph about it. Such items should never exceed 150 words, and even shorter notes will be acceptable. Every day the sum of 10 marks will be given for the best sent in, and it should be borne in mind that in awarding the prize, more credit will be given to the subject than to the style of writing, so that lack of literary ability will be no deterrent to anyone. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's winner of the prize of 10 marks is Sgt B.G. Blades, 52nd King's Liverpool Regt., Rhine Army.

RATIFYING PEACE

SLIGHT DELAY AT BERLIN PROBABLE.

It is learned from an authoritative quarter that no decision has yet been reached at Berlin as to when the Peace Treaty will be ratified, the reasons being that a number of important questions must be settled in advance. One of these concerns the new frontier lines in the territories to be ceded.

Unrest still continues in East Germany, but the danger of concerted action against the terms of the Peace Treaty seems to have disappeared.

Despite the disturbed state of German industry, dealings on the Berlin Stock Exchange continue. Rates of exchange have improved on increased buying by neutrals and by the Germans themselves.

BELL'S BELIEF.

THAT THE ALLIES WILL NOT ENFORCE PEACE TERMS.

According to the latest information, the Dutch Government does not intend to hand over the ex-Kaiser to the Allies.

Herr Bell, one of the signatories of the Treaty, in an interview given to an American journalist said that he hoped the Allies would reconsider the Peace Terms. He thought them impossible of fulfilment.

He also expressed his belief that the Allies would not insist on the extradition of the ex-Kaiser and other high personages.

BERLIN STRIKE.

FOOD AND COAL SUPPLIES GIVING OUT.

Latest messages from Berlin state that the traffic strike is likely to be of long duration. A very limited amount of goods traffic is being maintained, but if the strike continues, food and coal supplies will soon run out.

It has been definitely ascertained that the strike is due to the work of agitators. Quantities of literature have come from Bolshevists in Budapesth, while the arms possessed by many have been proved in some cases to have reached Hamburg by sea, hidden in coal cargoes.

A bank strike has not yet been declared, though the leader, Emouts, remains in custody. It is officially declared that he was arrested for carrying on Bolshevist propaganda on an extensive scale and for participation in the Communist movement aiming at the overthrow of the present regime.

HAMBURG'S PLIGHT.

DASTARDLY PLOT TO DESTROY RELIEF FOOD.

The Berlin correspondent of Politiken reports an attempt made at Hamburg to destroy by explosion the immense stocks of American foodstuffs stored there. The food depots had been watched by special guards, but the men deserted their posts. A number of prisoners who escaped last week joined with members of the Sailors Union in a plot to destroy the stores.

News of the affair leaked out and the police were able at the last moment to frustrate the plan. All the railway stations and most of the public buildings in Hamburg have been occupied by Government troops, who met with no resistance except in the suburb of St. Pauli, where a few shots were fired.

The town resembles an armed camp, the streets being full of ammunition wagons. Guns have been placed in position on the Town Hall Square, and machine guns cover all important points.

ESTHONIAN CAMPAIGN.

RIGA STILL OCCUPIED BY GERMANS.

The Lettish Press Agency states that the report of the Lettish troops having taken Riga is premature. The Germans on Saturday last repulsed an attack by Esthonian and Lettish forces on the Gogel river front.

General von der Goltz has now completely thrown off the mask and is openly carrying on war against Livonia and Esthonia. He has proclaimed himself Governor General at Riga and placed the town under Martial Law.

GOEBEN'S FUTURE.

Dr. Macnamara informed Viscount Curzon in the House of Commons yesterday, that so far, no definite decision has been taken regarding the final disposition of the battleship Goeben. It is assumed that the question will be dealt with in the Turkish Peace terms.

Tipsy French soldiers at Fiume demonstrated in favour of the Jugo-Slavs. In consequence General Svie confined all French troops to barracks.

MURMANSK FRONT.

GOOD SHOOTING BY ENEMY ARCHIES.

General Maynard reports from the Murmansk front that Italian troops have captured an enemy position on the Shunga Peninsula. Their casualties were only five wounded against the enemy's five hundred. On June 28th a mixed force of Russians and Serbians, backed by British artillery and aeroplanes and a small Canadian detachment, captured the village of Diahovi Gory, inflicting heavy losses.

Enemy anti-aircraft guns have been active against our aeroplanes, some of which have been hit. Several successful encounters are reported from the Archangel front. On the right bank of the Dvina the front has been pushed forward to the river Selmenga, and on the left bank we hold Yakevlevsko.

During the night of June 29th forest fires broke out on the railway and the front had to be temporarily evacuated. The enemy attack on Kleshevo on June 28th was broken up by artillery fire.

GREEKS v. TURKS.

PROGRESS OF WAR IN ASIA MINOR.

The following official communiqué has been issued from the headquarters of the Greek army operating in Asia Minor:

SMYRNA, June 28.

"Fifteen thousand Turkish troops, with guns and machine guns, under the command of Turkish officers, are concentrated at Belikesser, Soma, and Thyatira-Akhis-Sar. Three classes of reservists have been called under the colours. This army is commanded by Jejets (?) Pasha and Nureddin Pasha. The advanced posts of the enemy are at Michil. Five thousand to six thousand more Turks are concentrated at Salihli, and they pushed towards Ahmedli. The enemy was attacked on June 23 by our troops at the latter place, and completely dispersed. Some casualties are reported.

"On June 25 our outposts on the east of Kinik were attacked by Turkish troops. The enemy was repulsed. Two machine-guns have been taken. On the same day one Turkish battalion appeared at Gounous (Gomej), on the north of Pergame. Our troops attacked and pursued it as far as Baykey (on the river Madaras). The latter place was occupied by the Greek troops. On the same day Turkish bands, numbering 100 men, appeared on the south of Aidin. Attacked by our troops, they have been compelled to cross the river Meander. Forty men of the band are reported as killed.

"The Turkish forces, numbering about 40,000, are distributed as follows: Ten thousand at Belikesser, 3,000 at Soma, 3,000 at Salihli, 5,000 at Akhissar, 3 000 east of Pergame, 3,000 on the range of Bosdag, 10,000 at Denizli, and 3,000 at Aidin. An unknown number of troops are also reported at Adramytti, equipped with forty-seven guns, numerous machine-guns, and considerable cavalry.

"The action of Turkish forces started on June 19, when they attacked and have taken Pergame. (N.B.—This place has been recaptured since then by Greek troops). On June 19 the Turkish forces at Denizli surrounded and took Nazily. At the same time, two columns, numbering 6,000 men, were advancing, one from Salihili against Kassaba.

TRUCULENT GERMAN PRISONERS.

Two thousand German prisoners in West Camp, Park Hall Camp, Oswestry, threatened to riot yesterday.

Having had breakfast, but seeing no rations for dinner, they refused to parade. In a body they came with sticks to the barbed wire, threatening their guards.

Reinforcements were sent for and 250 soldiers with fixed bayonets quelled the disturbance.

The dinner rations arrived during the morning.

THE TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

The French public is deeply interested in the Convention between France, Great Britain and America. The attitude observed by the greater part of the British Press has made the best impression, and ratification by America is considered certain.

FRENCH BOY SPY SHOT.

The execution took place on Tuesday at Rouen of Georges Duval, an agricultural labourer, aged seventeen, who was recently condemned to death by court martial for having communication with the enemy.

In October, 1914, Duval betrayed to the German authorities two English soldiers who were lying hidden in his district, in consequence of which the two Englishmen were immediately shot.

It is suggested that the large military camps at Ripon, as soon as they are evacuated, should be utilized for commercial purposes. The idea is viewed with favour by the War Office and other Government Departments concerned.

OFF TO AMERICA.

BRITISH AIRSHIP STARTS HER RECORD VOYAGE.

The British airship R. 34 left East Fortune aerodrome Scotland at 2.48 p. m. on Wednesday (British Summer time) en route for America.

The weather was dull and foggy when she left East Fortune. The airship made a beautiful ascent amid the cheers of the aerodrome contingent. Previous to their departure the staff of the aerodrome, under the presidency of Major Hunt, gave a dinner to the crew of the R. 34.

She has kept in wireless touch with this side so far, and several messages reporting satisfactory progress have been received.

At 5.30 the airship reported that she was passing over Rathlin, North Ireland, bearing West and going well. At 8 p. m. she reported her position as 50 degrees 20 minutes North, 10 degrees 40 minutes West. Shortly after ten came the report that the R. 34 was passing through fog and that everything was going well.

Latest messages show that the airship is still going well and is in wireless touch with the Azores, St. John's and Clifden, Ireland. It is flying at two thousand feet at thirty knots. The reliability of the wireless installation is demonstrated by the regularity with which messages have been received every hour since the start. The position of the airship at midnight was 54 degrees 5 minutes North, 24 degrees 15 minutes West.

As a wish has been expressed that R. 34 should mark her arrival over Canada, it has been arranged that, if weather and other conditions permit, she will pass at a low altitude over Halifax and drop a message. A bag of mails is being carried to the United States. The actual distance of the course to be followed in each direction is 3,100 nautical miles, the speed it is proposed to maintain being 40 knots, equivalent to 46 miles per hour (air speed), but so much depends on the weather that to attempt a definite estimate of the duration of the flights is not possible. For the outward journey the time required may be upwards of 100 hours, or more if the speed is reduced, whilst that for the return flight may be considerably less, perhaps about fifty hours, owing to the assistance that will probably be afforded by the westerly winds prevailing over the course.

SHIP AND CREW.

R 34 was designed by the Admiralty and constructed by Sir William Beardmore and Co. Ltd., Inchinnan, near Glasgow. The gas-containing hull of the airship comprises a skeleton streamline framework of polygonal cross section, built of light metallic girders. This framework is divided into chambers, in which drum-shaped gas-bags are enclosed. The whole is covered with sheets of doped linen stretched tightly over the framework. The length of R 34 is 643ft. with a maximum diameter of 78ft 9in. Four gondolas are attached to the underside of the hull, the navigating compartment being situated in the leading portion of the forward gondola. All the controls of the airship are centred in this compartment, or cabin, which is connected by telephones, telegraphs, and voice-pipes with the other gondolas and the various stations of the crew. In it also is the wireless cabin. Five Sun-beam engines of the "Maori" type, of 275 horse-power, drive the airship. The sternmost gondola contains two engines geared to drive one large propeller. There are thus five engines and four propellers. Its actual weight is slightly over thirty tons, and in favourable conditions it can carry nearly twenty-nine tons of useful load, including crew, petrol, oil, and ballast. Six officers and twenty N.C.O.'s and airmen of the Royal Air Force, under the Command of Major G. H. Scott, A.F.C., form the navigating crew of the R. 34, and, in addition, three officers, one an officer of the U.S. Navy, are being carried to America as passengers, whose services can be called upon if necessary.

CANADIAN CASH.

REMORSEFUL ACTION BY EPSOM RIOTERS.

Colonel Guest, commanding at Woodcote Camp, Epsom, has handed over a cheque for £172 which was subscribed among the staff and patients at the camp, for the widow of Station-Sergeant Green, who died from injuries sustained in the recent riots.

RESULT OF WAR STRAIN.

An inquest was held at Turnditch, near Derby, on Wednesday on the Rev. Arthur Cyril Hornby Hall, 33, vicar of the parish and formerly curate at Fleetwood, who shot himself with a German revolver on Sunday morning. Telling his wife he was going to look over his sermons, he went downstairs in his pyjamas, and hearing a report some time later, Mrs. Hall entered the study and found him dead, with a bullet wound in the forehead. Deceased was at one time chaplain on the training-ship Cornwall, and in 1916 he became a Chaplain to the Forces in France. During the Somme battles he had several narrow escapes, and on one occasion at night he fell into a shell hole, seriously injuring his knee. He was afterwards in hospital at Sheffield for three months, and following this he had a severe attack of influenza, which left him very depressed. He had also worried over a dispute in his parish concerning the form the peace celebrations should take, and whether he should participate therein.

The widow stated that they removed from London to Derbyshire mainly in the interests of her health.

A verdict of suicide during temporary insanity was returned.

PRINCE OF WALES MOVES.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales ceased yesterday to occupy rooms at Buckingham Palace and took up his residence in apartments prepared for him at St. James' Palace. On Tuesday night for the first time an addition was made to the Court Circular, dated from St. James, and recording the movements of the Prince.

DIVORCE.

COLONEL WEDGWOOD, M. P., STATES HIS CASE.

It was announced on Tuesday, that Colonel Josiah Clement Wedgwood, M. P. for Newcastle-under-Lyme, was re-married on Wednesday last at Chelsea Registry Office, to Florence Ethel Willet, of 14, Kingsmead-road, Streatham, described as a spinster, 41 years of age, and the daughter of Edward Guy Willet, deceased.

Colonel Wedgwood, whose age was given in the marriage register as 47 years, was described as the divorced husband of Ethel Kate Wedgwood, formerly Bowen, spinster. The ceremony took place very quietly, only two other people being present. The two witnesses were Rosamund Wedgwood and F. R. Willet. After the marriage the newly-wedded pair left to spend their honeymoon at some unknown destination.

Colonel Wedgwood was divorced on Dec. 10, 1918, and the decree nisi was made absolute on June 23 last. In a letter to the "Staffordshire Sentinel" dealing with his divorce, he says:

"My married life was a very happy one until in 1913 my wife ceased to love me. She is one of those who believe that to live with a man you do not love is prostitution, and we separated for many years. I kept hoping that she would change, for after twenty years the break always seems inconceivable. I offered to start again in a new country where no one would know us. It was all useless, and when I came back from Africa in 1916 and failed again I, at last realised that plans had to be made to reconstruct my life and home.

CHURCH AND STATE.

"I consulted a colleague, a leading K.C. in the House. He told me that there were only two ways for me to get free and re-establish a home. I could acquire a Scottish domicile and then divorce my wife for desertion, or I could let myself be divorced by her under English law. It takes (I think) three years to acquire the rights and privileges of a Scotsman, and it would have meant uprooting myself from Staffordshire, so I finally chose the second alternative.

"The law, which the Church will not allow us politicians to change, insists that a wife shall only be able to divorce her husband if he has been found guilty of desertion and adultery. More merciful than the Church, the laws allows desertion to be assumed if a writ for the restitution of conjugal rights is obtained, and not complied with, so letters were exchanged and I was duly found guilty of desertion.

"All the world read in the papers that I had deserted a wife and seven children after twenty years' married life. Such a thing, if true, strikes me as being more blackguardly than adultery.

There was no protest from Mr. Sinker (vicar of St. George's, Newcastle), but I am not likely to forget that day in the House of Commons. I spoke six times that day on the Education Bill to a perfectly silent House, feeling that every man was saying, "That is the man who has deserted his wife and seven children!"

"The next stage was to get myself proved guilty of adultery. I chose the simplest way, took a suite of rooms at the Charing Cross Hotel and took a lady there who was not my wife. As a matter of fact, there was no adultery there. It is not exactly a festive occasion when you are carefully providing evidence to end a happy married life.

OUR DIVORCE LAWS.

"I cannot imagine what sensible people should expect me to be doing with a sitting room at a London hotel except to sleep in, or why anyone who has a comfortable flat in London should go to the Charing Cross Hotel at all, but people who knew that my children were at Moddershall with me and saw that the 'desertion' conviction must be formal, immediately jumped to the conclusion that the member for Newcastle was a thoroughly bad lot, and smacked their lips over 'guilty of adultery.'

"I think Mr. Sinker might have been more reticent in the matter, as had I committed this rightful sin it would only have been to satisfy the insistence of his Church. Even this avenue to freedom is barred to all but the rich. It has cost me several hundred pounds. Our divorce laws constitute the grossest case of one law for the rich and another for the poor, for which again Mr. Sinker and his kind are resposible.

"Throughout I have done what I conceive to be the most honourable thing in the most honourable way, and I have had good friends to back me up, but I ask you to observe what happens to a public man who tries to act honourably. Out of 900 similar cases last year, mine was the only one reported three times; my portrait was in the picture papers three times. I was deluged in anonymous abuse three times. An honourable name was dragged in the mud, and foremost in the hunt is a minister of the Church of England."

The letter concludes: "Before these lines are read I shall have exercised my right of remarriage, and in that I believe I shall have the good wishes of all that is best in the county of my birth."

BETTER BEER.

UNLIMITED QUANTITY BUT RESTRICTED QUALITY.

It was announced yesterday by Mr. Bonar Law that the Government has decided to remove all restrictions as to the quantity of beer brewed. The restrictions on gravity will be continued but the gravity in each grade will be increased by four degrees. Beer of the specific gravity of 1,020 will be sold at two pence a pint. It is the intention of the Government to terminate the existence of the Central Control Board and replace it by a commission.

GUN-SHOT TRAGEDY.

A verdict of "Murder" against Mr. Francis Herbert Mowatt, who shot his wife and afterwards shot himself on Tuesday morning, was returned at the inquest held at Stoke Lodge, Stoke Poges, yesterday. The finding in the case of Mr. Mowatt himself was that he committed suicide while temporarily insane.

Witnesses were unable to throw any further light on the cause of the tragedy.

The "River Clyde" transport, of Gallipoli fame, has been salved and it is expected that it will shortly be taken to the Thames for inspection.

ALIENS TO GO.

ONLY VERY EXCEPTIONAL CASES EXEMPT.

The House of Commons Standing Committee on the Aliens' Restriction Bill passed yesterday, by fourteen votes to twelve, a clause making it a statutory obligation to deport within one month of the passing of the Act all enemy aliens except those granted licences after due inquiry. The Government opposed the clause in favour of their own proposal for an Order in Council to effect the same purpose.

Sir John Butcher, a member of the advisory committee, in submitting the clause, said that in November 1918 there were in this country 21,000 enemy aliens uninterned, and in April last there were 5,000 uninterned Germans.

"The country is sick and tired of government by Orders in Council," he declared. "Only great pressure on the Home Office resulted in the internment of aliens during the war, and now we are faced with the stern duty of seeing that none but very exceptional cases are exempt. The country demands it, and the Government have promised it.'

Sir H. Nield said that the Prime Minister and others had pledged themselves that every interned German should be repatriated, and the country was asking for the fulfilment of that promise.

The Home Secretary claimed that the Secret Service of this country was the most effective in the world, and said that the spy danger during the war had been greatly exaggerated, although the number of spies had not been exaggerated.

AMAZING CAREER.

CHAPLAIN, STOCKBROKER, AND THEN A COMMON SOLDIER.

The varied career of an ex-Army chaplain was described in the Divorce Division yesterday, in a petition in which Mrs. Hilda Johnson asked to have her marriage dissolved on the ground of the desertion and misconduct of her husband, Noel Hugh Johnson.

It was stated that Mrs. Johnson was formerly married to a major.

Mr. J. H. Murphy (to Mrs. Johnson): I think that your husband was the co-respondent in the Hawkes divorce case, and that you were married afterwards? — Yes. My husband was formerly a chaplain in the Army, and when the war broke out he enlisted as a private. Afterwards he obtained a commission.

Mr. Justice Horridge: How is it he is described as a stockbroker's clerk?

Mr. Murphy: He was a chaplain before his marriage.

Mr. Justice Horridge: First a chaplain, then a stockbroker's clerk, and then a common soldier!

Mr. Murphy: He had to leave the Church after the divorce proceedings, and he went into the City.

A decree nisi was pronounced.

HONOURABLY ACQUITTED.

DID NOT BORROW FROM GERMAN PRISONER.

The General Court-martial which has been investigating the charges against Lieut. Frank Godker, interpreter specialist attached to the German prisoners' camp at Penarth, concluded its sittings yesterday.

The charges were that Lieut. Godker had borrowed money from, and neglected to pay it back to a German prisoner.

The accused's answer to the charges was a complete denial. He proceeded to say that the German, Randzis, from whom he was alleged to have borrowed the money, had given a lot of trouble by his conduct towards the women clerks and had been spoken to about it.

The Court found Lieut. Godker not guilty on all charges and he was honourably acquitted.

BEST GUARANTEE FOR PEACE.

Replying to the toast of his health at a farewell dinner last night, Mr. Hughes, the Australian Premier, said we had got the best peace possible under the circumstances. Whether as good a treaty would have been signed in November last or early this year is more than doubtful. The treaty is condemned by some as unjust, but with that he disagreed. It is easier to ask if the world is safeguarded against future German aggression than to answer.

He did not believe that Prussian Militarism is dead. The German to-day is as he was yesterday, and in this generation there will be no repentance. The treaty would prevent them from becoming a deadly menace to the world for a season, and afterwards we must look to the League of Nations. The best guarantee for peace, however, is the new triple alliance of Great Britain, America and France.

PARISH SCANDAL.

A clergyman whose conduct was stated to be a scandal to the parish, was divorced yesterday. He was the Rev. John Henry David Creighton, formerly rector of Foulsham, Norfolk. The woman in the case was a governess named Dorothy Knight.

Mrs. Creighton said there were four children of the marriage. Her husband met Dorothy Knight while he was rector of King's Somborne, Southampton. He used to stay out late. Her husband had £800 a year at King's Somborne and nearly £1,000 at Foulsham, but he was so extravagant that she had to earn money to keep the home going.

While she was on munition work at Norwich her husband lived with Dorothy Knight, and he had to leave his parish.

Mr. Asquith arrived in Cologne yesterday.

President Poincaré will review American troops on the Place de la Concorde to-day, American Independence Day.

HOW WE CAN HELP.

Now that Peace has been signed, the great necessity of the British nation is to maintain its business reputation, to put its finances on a secure basis, to foster a greater feeling of confidence in the commercial world, clearing the way for the development of its industries and export trade, and thus creating employment for the demobilized. And while doing all these things it is essential that the cost of living shall be lowered.

The Victory Loan, which is now offered for subscription, and is available for everyone — even those who possess a few pounds only — is the surest and safest road by which to return to the more normal conditions which will enable us to reap the fruits of victory.

These fruits cannot be fully enjoyed while our existence is still governed by the temporary expedients of war necessity.

We have to stop the system of State borrowing for short periods, which was a necessary evil during the war, but which constitutes an encumbrance and source of weakness to our whole financial fabric and has been the root cause of the high prices from which we all suffer.

The present abnormally costly rate of living is the greatest of our national handicaps. Prices are high to-day, mainly because there is a great demand for a limited number of commodities. We must release money for industry that at present goes into short loans for the government. This can be used for increasing our output of goods.

We have to replace the mass of these short term loans by others for a long term to be provided by the savings of the nation. The Victory Loan will ensure that this is done, and all of us are invited to take our part in laying the foundations of a sound economic future.

To make the financial situation safe and sure, we can all help by devoting all our available savings to national ends. By so doing we reap a good reward in better interest than is possible from any other investment, with equal security and in remarkably liberal terms of redemption.

Yet, after all, the fact that the return we reap from our investment is good, should be a secondary consideration.

The first purpose of patriotism is to serve one's country, and the country's need does not end with the war.

Our soldiers, by offering their services to fight Germany, have already, we know, shown the highest form of patriotism. Its value to the Empire can never be repaid adequately.

And now, if they are called upon to show a further proof of their patriotism by taking up the Victory Loan as far as they are able, we know they will not fail.

INDEPENDENCE DAY.

The Fourth of July is a day of festival in the United States of America, for on that date in the year 1776, the Declaration of Independence was proclaimed.

The American colonists endured the ordeal of battle for seven years, but they won their freedom and inaugurated a noble history of democracy in the western world. It was the Peace of Versailles, 1783, that sealed their victorious campaign.

Once more the United States of America have fought in a war of independence. This time they have battled not against Britain and not for any national ambition, but against Germany and against the false ideal of a militarist State.

Great as was the eighteenth century war of independence this war is greater. It has been a campaign against the oppression of the sword and the dominance of autocracy.

Versailles is again the scene of peace. As it was a happy auspice for American democracy, so may it now be a propitious omen for a new world in which the League of Nations and not proud despotism shall be supreme.

DEMOBILIZATION.

From the number of letters received, it is evident that our recent note an demobilization aroused considerable interest.

Yesterday we published under the caption "To Clear up Doubts", the chief provisions of a recent Army Order on the matter, but there are still one or two points obviously requiring further elucidation.

In the first place the Army Order from which we quoted was only issued to prepare the several administrative branches for action on certain events taking place and will only become operative on the issue of a future order. Until this is issued no action can be taken.

Further, there was a serious omission. A sentence having an important bearing on the subject was omitted from the report from which we took our information.

The words "on A.F.Z. 32 or A.F.Z. 56 were not given" and the full paragraph should read "Those who before February 1, 1919 were certified for release by the Ministry of Labour on A.F.Z. 32" or A.F.Z. 56. No other Army Forms operate under this clause—only the two named.

So, for the time being, the process of demobilization of men from the Rhine Army will proceed as heretofore.

CONCERNING CHEVRONS.

He was seated at my right-hand side in the large Y.M.C.A. concert hall "Somewhere in Deutschland." He looked about twenty-eight years of age, perhaps more. I am just twenty-one, and my pals constantly affirm that I appear younger. I am often referred to as the Babe.

The concert — as are most entertainments for soldiers — was late in commencing. My neighbour turned to me, determined to pass the time in conversation.

"Got a match, chum?" he asked, as a means of introduction. As I produced a box, I noticed him studying my brand-new uniform, conspicuous by the absence of long service stripe, chevrons, and war ribbons.

"Been in Germany long?" he queried, as he lit his pipe.

"About two months," was my truthful response.

"Ah! You're one of the young guards, I presume. It's a grand thing for you lads to be able to play even the comparatively minor rôle of occupying Germany. But thank your stars you weren't in France when the fighting was on. Ever seen a shell-hole?"

"One or two," I answered in a humble, noncommital tone of voice.

"Oh! So you noticed a little of the devastation the war has caused. I suppose you passed through Bailleul on your way up to Germany. Now if you had been at Nieuport in '17, ——"

Here he broke off into a discursive history of the various fronts; spoke of the March retreat, with bated breath; mentioned Ypres and Shrapnel Corner as "hot shops"; gave a brief account of the battle of Messines; named "Bully Court" and Hohenzollern Redoubt with the authoritative air of a participant in those actions; emphatically condemned the strategy of our leading generals as puerile; compared the German artillery to ours, with distinct disadvantage to the latter; then ended with a brief summary of the progress of the last, victorious push all along the line.

"Then came the grand finale at Mons," he concluded, "A fitting place to end the war where first the conflict waged. Ever been at Mons?"

"Yes," I said, then noticed with amazement a single blue chevron adorning his right cuff.

"Do you happen to have an active service chevron you could sell me?" I asked politely.

"I've got a spare one," he replied, "though its hardly fair to put one up until you've been out over nine months. Anyhow, you can have it."

"I'm sorry, but that's no use," I remarked sweetly, as he produced a blue chevron. "It's the wrong colour. I've got four of those, but I want a red one. You see, I was at Mons in '14."

Moral — Don't mislead others by not wearing your decorations, and don't let chevron-less men mislead you! C.M.B.

IN THE SUBURBS OF COLOGNE.

Coleridge, the poet, had nothing better to say of Cologne than that it was "the abode of ugly wenches and nasty stenches." Would he say the same to-day?

One need not be an admirer of Cologne and her suburbs to note the general cleanliness of the streets.

This was probably the cause of Coleridge's complaint, although it may have been the evil-smelling factories he was referring to.

But after all Cologne does produce chocolate and scents, the smell of which he could not have condemned.

In casual strolls one still comes across unaccountable piles of tins and rubbish, but not in the main thoroughfares.

A stranger looking for the home of the working man would not readily observe it. In England one may recognise it by those rows and rows of red-brick houses of monotonous similarity, whereas the houses occupied by the German working class differ from one another enormously.

Architects in the Army tell me they are going home full of ideas.

These houses present a perfectly amazing exterior, and inside, the rooms are high and in every way fit to accommodate the large families that are so invariably the rule.

One notices how little slate is used for the roofs and if one examined these buildings more closely one would discover many points that make for economy and a low rental.

As far back as 1890 an Englishman wrote: "People at home have but a faint idea of the sort of houses inhabited by the working classes in Berlin. A visitor from London would not believe his eyes on being shown the enormous palatial-looking residences, and the wide spacious streets, open to fresh air, provided for the workmen in this Capital."

As in Berlin, so the houses here and around, though not perhaps justifying the above description, compel the attention of the stranger.

Perhaps it is because of these advantages that children in Germany seem to develop, physically and mentally, more rapidly than in England and especially does this seem true of the fairer sex.

Doubtless however the explanation of the buxom women can be traced back to the days when the Germans fought the Roman legions under Marius. Then, if the Roman invader proved victorious and routed the Hun, the women defended the camp.

The children in the suburbs are able to play all day owing to numerous public-gardens, which take off so much of the drabness of the streets and provide places of rest and gentle exercise for the aged and in firm.

Perhaps Coleridge might have been persuaded that there are other than "ugly wenches" in Cologne. Cologne is chiefly Roman Catholic in its religion, and should still show something French in its taste.

However the bulk of German femininity in its environs dress inartistically and are far from chic in appearance.

Tennis and dancing, which help so much towards the trim ankle and figure are by no means prominent, but swimming is fairly popular.

Perhaps one day the Germans will realise that more good can be done on the play ground of democracy than on the parade ground of militarism. H.C.W.

O THAT 'TWERE POSSIBLE.

O that 'twere possible
After long grief and pain
To find the arms of my true love
Round me once again! . . . .

A shadow flits before me,
Not thou, but like to thee:
Ah, Christ! That it were possible
For one short hour to see
The souls we loved, that they might tell us
What and where they be!

TO CELEBRATE PEACE.
A Torchlight "Tattoo" Suggested.

Sir,—

Doubtless there will be a ceremony of some sort to mark the official celebration of the conclusion of Peace. Do you think the Commander-in-Chief would direct that a torchlight tattoo be included among the observances to be held at Cologne?

Such an event would serve many purposes. It would enable the civilians to see something of the purely spectacular side of the British Army and enable us to renew acquaintance with a very popular feature of pre-war Army life.

I venture to suggest, that the Neumarkt, if cleared of the vehicles, would be a very convenient and commodious venue. There are numerous streets from which the bands and torchbearers could march on to the ground in proper tattoo manner and there is ample accommodation for sightseers in a picturesque setting.

I should be pleased, if so desired, to submit general details of the proposal. This might save valuable time, as the official celebrations at home are due a fortnight from now.

Yours truly
J.W.N.

A TRAIN SUGGESTION.

Sir,—

Re letter in to-day's issue by "Bogey" in regard to express trains between Bonn and Cologne stopping at Marienburg.

If "Bogey" has used his eyes, though it is quite evident he has not, he will have noticed that the conductor has to signal from the telephone box at Marienburg to the last block cabin on the railway stretch that he has entered the tramway portion at Marienburg, consequently the stopping of the train.

I should advise "Bogey", in future, to use his eyes, or perhaps see an optician, before committing his hasty thoughts to "cold" print. T.O.C.

WHEREABOUTS OF UNITS.

Sir,—With the reshuffling of units during the past few weeks officers and men returning from leave have found themselves in a quandary as to their destination.

A stroke of good fortune enables one to run across an old friend and the problem is solved, but many men have returned to their former billeting area to find that the battalion has quitted, and strange faces are to be seen in the old billets.

At least one unit notified its move through the notice board at the Officers' Club. Whoever was responsible for it showed creditable initiative, and it is surprising it was not more widely followed. "LUTE."

THE G. S. RIBBON.

Sir,—Some of the "Young Guards" appear to be very keen on chevrons and ribbons for what they have done, but I think the boys of sixteen to nineteen who came out and fought in the trenches in the dark hours of the war are those who need more recognition. The "young guards" I admit are mostly splendid fellows, but they didn't win the war, all the same.

OLD GUARD.

A BELATED RIVER TRIP.

Sir,—Evidently "Bitte Sehr" has little experience of the fair sex or he would know that unpunctuality in a lady is after all only one of her virtues to which we mere males pay homage.

The weakness is admirably satirised in an advertisement well-known to most smokers of cigarettes.

Does your correspondent appreciate the inequality of the tasks? I do not know the time of the early morning parade with our esteemed friends, but with man on the horizon and a river trip in prospect; well, the finishing touches to the toilette require much more consideration than is usually the case.

If "Bitte Sehr" contemplates courtship, let him fix his theatre appointment for an hour well in advance of the beginning of the show and then roll up at the time he intended to meet the lady. It is big odds that he will then have to wait. After all W.R.A.F's are only women.

"HAD SOME"

PAINT AND POWDER.

Sir,—Being somewhat interested in the correspondence of "Anti-Paint" and "Kingston," I would like to mention that whilst on leave last week, I was myself very much struck by the large percentage of British girls who are indulging in artificial colouring of their features (an indulgence rarely to be found amongst the German feminine sex). It is noticeable in small country towns, besides London.

I fail to see what is gained by those who indulge in this art. Do highly coloured cheeks and lips tend to attract the fellow? For my part I should think it would more likely turn anyone against them.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

FIVE WICKETS FOR ONE.

LIGHT DIV. H.Q. (35) v. NO 1 LIGHT RLY. SIG. COY. (25). Low scoring on both sides prevailed during this very exciting match. Cpl. White, L/Cpl. Neville, L/Cpl. Brittain and Dvr. Jupp for Light Division and Sapper Lewis for Signals batted well. The chief feature of the game however was the splendid bowling of Cpl. White for H Q., who going in a second time at a critical period, secured 5 wickets for 1 run. The fielding on both sides was exceptionally good.

WAHN SURVEY DET. (75) v. VI CORPS SIG. COY. (34). For W.S.D., Lieut. Crease was top scorer with 37, and Lieut. Jones carried out his bat for 16. None of the losing team reached double figures, Lieut. Payne being chief scorer with 9. For the winners, Sapper Dewhirst captured 7 wickets for 15.

92nd FIELD AMBULANCE (72) v. EASTERN DIVISION SIGNAL COY. (46), on the ground of the former on Tuesday. For the 92nd Field Ambulance the chief scorers were Cpl. Langford 17, Pte. Buncroft 15, Pte. 17th LANCERS (226 FOR 9) v. 51st AUX. BUS. COY. R.A.S.C., (58) on Kalk Racecourse on Tuesday. For 51st Aux. Bus. Coy. R.A.S.C. Pte. Tudor (14) and Pte., Beaumont (14), were the leading batsmen. Capt. Fowler took 6 wickets for 26, and Capt. Boles 3 wickets for 27. For 17th Lancers Sgt. Payne scored 75 not out; Capt. Fowler 60 (retired) and S.S.M. Simpson 23; Pte. Tudor took 4 wickets for 45, and Pte. Beaumont 2 wickets for 13.

LONDON D.M.T. COY (79) v. 52 R.W. WARWICK REGT. (25) at Merheim on Wednesday. The Warwicks won the toss and decided to put the London D.M.T. Coy in first. The scoring was slow at first, (37 for 5 wickets). The lost wicket made a good stand putting on 23 runs. The highest scores being Pte. Pollard 12, L Cpl Haynes 11, Lieut. Wright 10, and Pte. Jacobs. 10. The Warwicks did not make any stand against the bowling of Lieut. Wright and Pte. Jacobs and the whole side was out for 25. Lieut. Wright taking 7 wickets for 19, and Pte. Jacobs 3 for 5.

EASTERN DIV., (53) v. 16th LANCS. FUS. (122) at Siegburg on Monday. The victory for the Fusiliers was decisive and was due to the deadly bowling of Ptes. Camp and Poray supported by the keenest of fielders. Capt. Boden's 31 and Lieut. Thompson's 25 (not out), were the leading scorers for the winners. Capt. Carrol with 14 led the H.Q., scorers.

9th CORPS H.A. (109 for 5 wickets) v. MIDLAND DIV. H.Q. (73) at Bruhl on Tuesday. H.A. batted first and quickly lost a wicket, but Lieut.-Col. Langhorne (55) and Nunns (33) by very fine cricket, took the score to 85. H.A declared, with 5 wickets down for 109. H.Q. replied with 73; Dowson (18) and Lieut Taylor (11), being the only ones to reach double figures. The bowling honours were carried of by Ashmore, (5 for 26) for Midland, and Lister, (5 for 27) and Field, (4 for 12) for H.A.

TURF TOPICS.

BY "JERRY M."

A remarkable week's racing wound up at Sandown Park on Saturday. Huge crowds were again the order, and all records were broken at Newbury, on Wednesday and Thursday.

We had quite an interesting afternoon on Saturday, when the "Chevron's Cup" was a great success. Confined to Officers of His Majesty's Services who had served overseas, quite an excellent entry was obtained, and no less than 14 went to the post.

There was some interesting wagering when the books opened; 3 to 1 the field was on offer, with "A Sitter," "Waltz," "Spirt" and "Crown Again" the chief fancies. Those in the "know" about "Waltz" jumped in at 3, and there was such a big commission for "Waltz" that in a few minutes "evens" had to be accepted. "A Sitter" receded to 6 to 1, and "Spirt," "Crown Again," and "Neurotic" at 7's and 8's; while 33 to 1 bar 5 was vainly offered.

A False Start.

After a false start the field got well away. "Crown Again" dashed to the front, but was finished, at the entrance to the straight. Mr. Brown rode a well judged race on "Waltz" and coming to the front a quarter of a mile from home, won amidst ringing cheers.

In the Wellington Handicap, "Kings Idler" whom we waited for since Wednesday, completed a nice double at the useful price of seven to one.

In the last race "Double Note" only just landed the odds laid on him by a short lead after a very scrambling finish.

AQUATIC SPORTS.

10th BATTALION THE "QUEEN'S" R.W.S. REGIMENT.

The preliminary heats in connection with the above were decided on Thursday, June 26, but owing to the unkind attentions of Jupiter Pluvius together with a shortage of water in the river at Engelskirchen owing to the opening of the floodgates, the finals were not decided until the following Monday. Lieut. Gunn, the Sports Officer, had prepared an interesting programme and as a result the numerous spectators witnessed some very keen and exciting racing. At the conclusion the prizes were presented to the winners by the commanding officer, Col. R. O'H. Livesay, C.M.G., D.S.O.

It is interesting to note that the Educational Staff was well represented, the 1st and 2nd prices in the principal events being secured by two of its members. The following is a programme of the events with the winners:—

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Better than the "Jazz".

The other evening I saw a number of young men and women in old English costumes trooping into Rhine Army G.H.Q. Curious to know what the occasion was I entered the swing doors and found that the pupils of Miss Daking, who has been fostering the cult of Old-English Folk Dances among the troops in France since early 1917, were giving an exhibition of these under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., to the officers of the Staff in the entrance hall of the Excelsior. She has appointed three assistants to teach these wholesome and pretty old world dances in each Corps in the Rhine Army. The youths and maidens danced delightfully the old measures that have been seen on village greens for hundreds of years. The quaintest was a Yorkshire sword dance with dramatic ending, performed by six males. Altogether it was a most interesting display.

"The Robin Hoods" at Wiesdorf.

"Robin Hoods" continued their successful tour of the Southern Division by packing a spacious hall to overflowing the other evening. Bert Lennard still remained the life and soul of the party. Undoubtedly clever and very versatile, he played with unflagging energy. Another outstanding feature was a screamingly funny turn by Pte. Valenski and Capt. Payre. The party is extremely fortunate on the vocal side. Jack Walker did very well in his song "The Compy. Sergt. Major," and is the possessor of a fine baritone voice. Dick Oliver displayed a voice of extraordinary sweetness and power in his song "Land of long ago," while Bob Dommett in addition to singing ballads in an agreeable manner, joined Lennard in a comedy duo very successfully. Victor Barr (Cynthia) the charming girl sang her numbers with point and expression, her dresses being extremely pretty. Aubrey Ford, the fiddler, as usual played the violin with masterly air. Ernest Anderson was a capable accompanist, while the excellent orchestra did full justice to some fine selections during the evening.

A Future Arthur Prince.

The ever popular form of entertainment dispensed by the ventriloquist is undoubtedly very scarce in Rhineland. I was very pleased to have the opportunity yesterday, therefore of witnessing a private rehearsal given by an exponent of the art who is likely to remedy this deficiency, as far as one man is able, by performing with skill and with a dummy that alone should create plenty of merriment by its appearance. The individual referred to is quite a past master in the art of voice throwing and, with well written patter, he should turn out to be a valuable acquisition to one of our best concert parties.

Good Dramas Coming.

The Lena-Ashwell Dramatic Company, whose three one act plays, "Box B", "Mrs. Armstrong's Admirer", and "Postal Orders" have proved such a success, are now embarking on an even more ambitious programme, for after a trial run at Ohligs they are opening at the Apollo Theatre, Cologne on Monday with "The Duke of Killiecrankie," Capt. Robert Marshall's clever three-act-play. This it will be remembered, was first produced about ten years ago, but was recently revived by Mr. Weedon Grossmith at the Criterion.

A Strong Caste.

The caste is certainly formidable, and there is no doubt that the characters are in very capable hands. Mr. Robert Nolle, who has so ably played the part of the gentleman burglar in "Mrs. Armstrong's Admirer" is in the role, while "Henry Pitt-Webby" will be portrayed by dashing Julian D'Albie. Miss Morce Ault will undertake the difficult work of playing a double part, Lady Ponghouse and Mrs. McBayne, and the others in the caste are the Misses Hilda Sims, and Sylvia Oakley, and Henry Carlisle and Wm. Fagan. The play is being produced by Miss Cicely Hamilton. It is advisable to book early, as the house is sure to be full each night.

A New Concert Party.

"The Darts" made their debut recently at Euskirchen and are to be congratulated on their performance. The show, I hear, was well supported by the troops of the district. Standing out among the foremost turns were "The girl in the Park" in which Ptes. Sheridan and Kendall kept the house rocking with laughter. A sketch entitled "Demob" was well staged, and Capt. Shaw as the soldier to be "demobbed" caused endless amusement. Pte. Bell, as the female impersonator was greatly admired, and a good many left the hall under the impression that he was not a mere male at all. I wish all success to "The Darts".

In a few Lines.

There are rumours that a skating rink that has been unused during the war is to re-open at Bonn.

At a performance of "The Importance of being Earnest" at the Deutsches Theatre this week, the sound of a ringing bell occurred while the would-be ringer was still several yards away from the bell-push. Trifles of this nature detract from the effectiveness of a play.

JACQUES.

OLD SCOUTS' CORNER.

Last Saturday we had a very pleasant jaunt to the top of the cathedral, ascending in the process (according to our official recorder) 493 steps. Although it was not ideal, the weather was good enough to permit of a splendid view of the surrounding country being obtained. Tea at Lindenthal, and a visit to the performance given by the Lena Ashwell Dramatic Company completed the day's proceedings.

* * *

At Wednesday's meeting, five new members were enrolled, and a paper on "How to run a successful scout camp" contributed by Signallers Woods and Curling, provoked an interesting discussion. A sing-song, in which Corporal Sands presided at the piano in his usual admirable manner, terminated an interesting evening.

* * *

To-morrow (Saturday) we are rambling to Godesburg. Meet at the tram terminus (by the Hohenzollern Bridge) at 2.45 p.m., so as to catch the 3 p.m. car to Bonn. Bring your own grub, and roll up, old scouts— the more, the merrier.

* * *

On Saturday week, July 12th, we are having our Peace celebration, at which we shall be honoured with the presence of Captain Hydeman, a former London Commissioner. Full details will be given next week, but in the meantime, don't forget to keep the date open.

HAWKEYE.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

New Blood For Brentford.

"Billy" Brawn, the old international, Aston Villa, and Chelsea player, has joined the management of the Brentford Football Club. He has just signed on E. Taylor, the Chelsea half-back, and Thompson, of the Arsenal.

Retirement Of "Judy" Stevens.

W. Stevens, of Harrow, known to all the racket world as "Judy" Stevens, is retiring from the position of instructor at Westminster this term.

The Calcutta Sweep.

Inquiries made in usually well-informed circles have failed to unearth the slightest shred of evidence that the result of the draw has yet reached England.

Newspaper Cricket.

A cricket match played this week between the "Daily Mail" and the "Daily Express" resulted in a win for the latter, the scores being: "Daily Mail," 60; "Daily Express," 125 for 7.

French Racing Strangled.

The horse shortage in England is nothing to what it is in France, French racing having been strangled by the war. It was in a spirit of sporting resignation that the French decided to carry out their rich programme at Auteuil and Longchamp.

English v. Scottish Bowlers.

The annual English v. Scots match of the Bellingham B.C., six rinks aside, resulted in a win for the English by 121 to 101.

Inter-Theatre Golf.

The golf match between the Playhouse and the Adelphi Theatre, in the Inter-Theatre Shield Competition, was played on the Wimbledon Parks Club's course yesterday, and resulted in a win for the Playhouse by two matches to one.

Midland A.A.A. Championships.

Two Midland Counties A.A.A. championships recently were held at Coventry. L. Blewitt (Birchfield H.) won the four miles in 19 min. 58 2-5 sec., and the Birchfield Harriers' "B" team won the mile relay race in 3 min. 45 sec.

Gent's Team Complete.

F. T. Mann, Middlesex, will fill the vacant place in the Gentlemen's team against the Players at the Oval this week. D. J. Knight was originally selected, but a strain prevents him playing.

Award Of Blues.

At Lord's this week Mr. Miles Howell the Oxford captain, awarded Blues to Mr. H. P. Ward (Shrewsbury), Mr. F. W. Gilligan (Dulwich College) and Mr. G. F. Pearse, the Australian, a right-hand leg break bowler.

MLLE. LENGDEN CHALLENGER.

In the final of the Ladies' singles at Wimbledon Mlle Lenglen, who easily defeated Mrs. Satterthwaite 6—1, 6—1, now challenges Mrs. Lambert Chambers for the title.

In the Gent's doubles Lycett and Heath beat Cannon and Garland 6—1, 7—6, 6—4; O'Hara Wood and Thomas beat Garland and Davis 7—5, 7—3, 4—6, 6—3; Patterson and Brookes beat Riseley and Dixon 6—3, 6—2, 6—1.

Mixed doubles: Miss Addison and Decugis beat Mrs. Beamish and Watt 6—3, 6—1; Mrs. Larcombe and Thomas beat Mrs. McNair and Doust 6—1, 6—1.

VICTORY LOAN SWEEP.

B.E.L.C's. ENTERPRISING PROJECT.

Evidently encouraged by the enormous success of the Derby Sweepstake, the authorities of the British Empire Leave Club, Cologne, have hit upon the happy idea of organizing a similar project in connection with the Victory Loan.

Ten marks is a trifling amount when regarded in the light of the present rate of exchange. It certainly is not sufficiently large to buy a Victory bond complete, nor is it even sufficient for a war savings certificate. In view of this, the natural inclination is to decide—provided that ten marks is the limit of one's resources—that one cannot participate in the great project that is to help to make the winning of the war worth while.

The British Empire Leave Club will reply to such an argument: "Nothing of the kind!"

Ten marks will enable the fortunate possessor to take a ticket in the Victory Bond Sweep and if his luck is "dead in" he will receive in return an amount of sufficiently substantial proportions to make a comfortable little nest egg for any rainy days Fate may have in store for him.

In other words, the whole of the proceeds of the sweep will be devoted to the purchase of Victory Bonds. Then the draw will be made and 50 per cent. of the value of the amount subscribed will go to the lucky winner; there will be a second prize of 20 per cent. and a third of 10 per cent. The balance of 20 per cent. will be equally divided among the next twenty numbers drawn.

Applications for tickets should be made to Lieut.-Col. J.A. Levey, D.S.O., O.B.E., British Empire Leave Club, Cologne, on the prescribed forms. All envelopes should be plainly marked "Personal."

Echoes from Rhineland.

Death of a Brave Officer.

His many friends will learn with regret of the death from pneumonia at the 36th C.C.S., Cologne of Lieut. G. S. Dennis, of the 11th Durham Light Infantry, and latterly of the Intelligence Corps. On the outbreak of war he was one of the earliest volunteers, enlisting as a private. In October 1915 he went to France with the Royal Fusiliers. He was in most of the fighting during that memorable winter, and distinguished himself by his steadiness in action and general soldierly qualities. In July 1916 he received his commission in the D.L.I., and continued in the fighting line throughout the remainder of the war. Lieut. Dennis was 38 years of age and was very popular with all ranks. The funeral takes place to-day (Friday) in Südfriedhof Cemetery, the cortege leaving 36th C.C.S. at 14.30. Those wishing to attend the burial service should be at the cemetery by 14.55. No. 10 tram should be taken.

Yesterday's Peace Holiday.

To anyone in the large occupied towns yesterday, it was impossible not to observe that there was a holiday spirit abroad. A general cessation of military parades and, when possible, all duty, gave all ranks stationed in isolated parts an opportunity to visit the more important centres. Consequently from an early hour, trams, trains, and all other available means of conveyance emptied ample quantities of khaki freight into Cologne, Bonn, Düren, Euskirchen, and other places of interest. All the clubs, hotels and cafés were, throughout the day, kept fully occupied, and in the evening every place of entertainment was filled to overflowing. There was a general atmosphere of happiness and jollification noticeable even in the villages where troops, desiring to spend a quiet and less strenuous holiday arranged various forms of sport, impromptu entertainments, and, in some cases, marked the occasion by lighting bonfires and firing Verey lights after darkness had fallen.

A Musical Drive.

The other week a rather unusual sight was noticed in a town some kilometres from Cologne. A carriage, not unlike a Victoria, drawn by one horse, was proceeding slowly through the streets. The occupants of the carriage were a man and a woman of apparently middle age, and before them on a small table a hornless gramophone was discoursing music, to their evident delight. The outside of the carriage was gaily decorated with ivy and evergreens. Perhaps the people were celebrating some special occasion, but at any rate they were blending the delights of a summer outing with the musical charm of the gramophone.

Partners Advertised For.

The many marriage advertisements to be found in German newspapers are amusing. This method of seeking a partner for life strikes the average Briton as unromantic and too business-like altogether. These advertisements are very small but are easily recognisable by the word "Heirat" (marriage) which is always printed in bold type. The following is a specimen of what one may read in any German newspaper: "Young man in his thirties, of independent means, good-looking seeks the acquaintance of a young lady of means. Widows not excluded. Photograph and letter to be sent to so-and-so." This, of course, is only a sample specimen. Some are very confidential indeed. There are at least as many ladies who send such advertisements as men.

Snowed Under.

So many enquiries reach this office about demobilization that it has been found absolutely impossible to deal with them in the columns of the paper. With the very best intention in the world to be helpful to every soldier in the Rhine Army, we did, at the outset, answer as many as possible, but latterly the number of queries has been so overwhelming as to render such a service quite impossible. To do justice to such replies would occupy the whole time of a least one member of our staff and at least a column a day. So, reluctantly we have to refer all applicants for advice on "demobbing" to the special officer in each unit detailed for such work.

Cheers for the British.

The popularity of the 2/4th Hampshires is, we hear, firmly established in the hearts of the children of the small village of Hunger. The recent sudden orders for concentration necessitated a school being taken over. When the billeting party arrived, the classes were in full progress and the officer in charge dismissed them from their studies. The children were very quickly outside and at once raised three hearty cheers for the British. Until the Hants moved back to their old billets the children enjoyed a holiday.

Fritz the Improver.

To say that the German is eminently thorough is to state a very obvious fact, and although we proudly claim the honour of evolving the "push-truck" from a soap or sugar box and a pair of perambulator wheels we are forced to recognise the superiority of the useful little hand-wagon constructed by the native of this country. This vehicle is built on the lines of the British farm wagon, with rails and pillars, four substantial wheels and forecarriage, the whole measuring about 4 ½ feet by 2 ½ feet by 1½ feet inside, and capable of taking quite a good load. One can see these hand-wagons used for a variety of purposes, from transporting a Tommy's kit from the station to the Rest-Camp, to moving bit by bit, the larger portion of a house-full of furniture.

The Bogey-Men.

An amusing incident happened to some soldiers of the Rhine Army, when visiting the Cologne Zoological Gardens a few days ago. While standing near the lion and tiger cages, a well-dressed lady with a little child approached and stood a few yards off. The youngster suddenly darted away from his mother and went in between the outer protecting rail and the tiger's cage. The lady, in consternation, cried in German: "Oh, do come away, dear, or those terrible Englishmen will take you away." The humour of the incident is evident when one considers that the Tommies were cited as "bogies," in preference to man-eating tigers, which, at that moment were the nearest living creatures to the child. The soldiers' ruffled feelings were, however, soothed on seeing the good lady's embarrassment when she realised, by their hearty laugh, that her remark had been understood.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhinelond, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's winner of the prize of 10 marks is Signaller W. McCleary, R.G.A., att'd 2nd Midland Inf. Bde. H.Q. Sigs R.E., Rhine Army.

PRIME MINISTER'S PEACE SPEECH.

FACTS AND REASONS.

INSPIRATION FOR THE FUTURE.

TEXT OF NEW FRENCH TREATIES.

PREMIER'S SPEECH.

WHAT THE PEACE TREATY HAS ACCOMPLISHED.

In anticipation of the Prime Minister's speech yesterday afternoon on the subject of the Peace Treaty, the House of Commons was crowded. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales occupied his seat over the clock and the American Ambassador was with many other diplomats in the distinguished strangers gallery.

The Premier on rising to make his statement asked leave to introduce two Bills to enforce the most momentous document to which the seal of the British Empire had ever been affixed. The first was designed to carry into effect the Peace Treaty and the second was for approving the new treaty between the British Government and the Government of the French Republic. Europe had trembled, said the Premier, at the tramp of Germany's military machine, but her army is now inadequate to disturb the peace of even the feeblest of her neighbours. The terms of peace are in many respects terrible, but terrible were the deeds which justified it and still more terrible would have been the consequences had Germany succeeded. Colonies measuring one and a half million square miles had been torn from her side. By the treaty, territories which ought never to have belonged to Germany had been restored to France, while over Poland flies the flag of a free and independent people. Nobody, thought the Premier, can claim that the reparation terms are unjust, unless they believe that the justice of the war was on the side of Germany.

HISTORIC GERMAN BLUNDER.

Was it unjust that we should in our economic terms make it clear that Germany was not to take advantage of her wanton destruction of the trade machinery of her rivals in Belgium and France in order to get ahead in the competitive race. That was one of the things that money did not put right. We had put in a clause for the protection of those countries. He asked anybody to point out in the main conditions a single act of injustice or anything which a perfectly impartial court would not have adjudicated upon in exactly the sense as the council which had sat at Paris for six months scrupulously examining all conditions decided upon. The war cost millions of lives. It cost actually in expenditure for all lands thirty thousand million, with all that that sum represented in possible happiness for the human race. "That is what happened when they failed. What would have happened if they had succeeded? The world is rocking and reeling under the blow—the blow that failed." The Premier said there were three ways of dealing with the crime. One was to say to Germany "You tried and failed, so sin no more". Let them go across the Rhine. There one saw no devastated cities, no scorched plains. Factories were there, machinery was there — their own and other people's. If they had taken that course Germany would have been better off than the people she victimised. To have done so would have been putting a premium on militarism.

The second course was to get to the other extreme and treat Germany as Rome treated Carthage or, might he say, as Prussia treated Poland — to destroy her national existence; tear her to pieces; fling one piece to one country, another to another and a third to another. That was the way Prussia treated Poland. That was not merely a crime, it was a blunder, and after a century and a half Poland reappeared as a formidable foe. He was glad they had not soiled their hands with Prussian methods in dealing with Prussia. What was their method? To compel Germany, as much as was in her power, to restore, to repair and to redress, to take every possible precaution against the recurrence of such another crime, and to make such an example as would discourage ambitious rulers — yea, and ambitious peoples — from ever again attempting to repeat this infamy. That was not vengeance, it was discouragement. Every delegate felt in his heart the supreme need for imposing terms that would make not merely rulers but nations shrink from attempting a crime of that kind.

GERMANY'S PEACE ARMY.

Regarding guarantees, the first was the disarmament of Germany. The reduction of the German Army to a hundred thousand was quite adequate for the maintenance of peace in Germany. Then came the question as to whether it should be a voluntary or conscript army. The British delegation had no hesitation in pressing that it should be a voluntary army with long term of service. The first proposal was that there should be a conscripted army of two hundred thousand. That would have meant that in ten years we might have had one and a half million trained men in Germany and in twenty years three millions, and, as everybody knew, that was more or less the method by which Germany created the army with overthrew Napoleon. "We did not think that was disarming Germany and we advocated a long service army which would leave the mass of the population untrained and make it impossible for Germany to raise a large army. We regard the disarmament of Germany, the destruction of her armaments and arsenals and the taking away of her guns, as one of the firmest guarantees of peace which you can exact."

FRANCE APPREHENSIVE.

Then came another guarantee.. It has been entered into with the approval of the League of Nations. "France has within living memory been invaded twice by Germany. She has a population of forty millions facing a hostile population of sixty or seventy millions. France has legitimate reason for a feeling of nervous apprehension when Britian has gone home, when America has left three thousand miles between her and the coast of France and when the gallant men of British overseas Dominions who fought so bravely on French soil have departed and France sees herself then, with only the Rhine between her and this foe, which has trampled on her flesh twice within living memory.

So France says 'we would like to know if you Britons and Americans who helped to emancipate our soul are still behind us. If there is any wanton aggression will you help us?'

I invite the British Parliament to say 'yes' (loud and prolonged cheers). The League of Nations, he continued, would be valueless unless it had just sanction behind it and all the strength of the nations prepared at a moment's notice to stop aggression. Otherwise it would be a 'scrap of paper'! The Bill which he had foreshadowed only engaged us if there was wanton provocation on the part of Germany. One of their guarantees was the Army of Occupation, but he was perfectly certain that France did not wish to keep an Army there for a single day beyond absolute necessity. If Germany showed good will and gave the necessary guarantees for the execution of the treaty, France was quite prepared to reconsider at the proper moment the question of occupation. "We have an understanding with France that the moment the German Government carry out their undertaking regarding disarmament the cost of the Army of Occupation shall not exceed two hundred and forty million marks yearly."

THE SPIRIT OF PATRIOTISM.

He now came to the League of Nations. That great and hopeful experiment was only rendered possible by the other conditions. Without disarmament, without indications which the war had given that the nations of the world were determined at all costs to enforce respect of treaties, the League of Nations would be just like other conventions of the past, — some thing that would be blown away by the first gust of war or by any fierce dispute between nations During the last two years of war, concluded the Premier, the heaviest fighting, judged by casualties, was undertaken by the British Empire. Without the British Navy and Mercantile Marine, the war would have been over in six months.

The Premier concluded a fine speech with a fervid peroration. "The victory has been a tremendous one" he said, "let us rejoice as men rejoice, not under the delusion that all troubles are over but rather as men who feel the spirit of courage and resolution which enabled us to overcome and will enable us cheerfully to face what lies ahead. The losses of war will take a deal of repairing. What have we got? Output decreased and cost of production increased. That is the opposite road to the one which lead to prosperity. Let us cling together, act together, work together. Don't let us demobilize the spirit of patriotism too soon. Keep it in the ranks till the Empire has won through to the real and glorious victory."

The Premier was loudly cheered on resuming his seat.

GERMAN POLITICS.

LARGE FORTUNES TO BE HEAVILY TAXED.

The senior Committee of the National Assembly sitting at Berlin yesterday, discussed the provisions of a Bill for the taxation of large fortunes. The Bill demands careful preparation and cannot be submitted to Parliament until Autumn. It is understood that the proceeds of the tax will as far as possible be paid into the War Loans Constitution Bill, which will probably be ready by the middle of July.

The National Assembly will be dissolved in December and new elections will take place in January next. The Vossische Weimar correspondent reports that the National Assembly will on Saturday deal with the Peace Treaty. A majority for ratification is already assured.

AUSTRIA'S INDEMNITY.

ADJUSTING THE PROPORTION OF PAYMENT.

From Vienna it is reported that German Austria's future army, in accordance with the peace conditions, will be two-thirds less the Slav armies.

The proportion of war debt falling on German Austria will be 25 per cent higher than the proportion alloted to the Slav states, but it is hoped that these conditions may be alleviated.

Compensation for damage done in Italy will be at the rate of exchange of thirty to forty lire, against one hundred Austria kronen.

CANADIANS GOING HOME.

About 5,200 troops, 168 officers, and 61 nurses, returning to Canada after their war service in Europe, in addition to 290 civilian passengers and 734 bags of mails, were conveyed on the White Star transport Olympic this week, from Southampton to Halifax, Nova Scotia. The Mayor of Southampton (Alderman Kimber) addressed words of farewell to the departing soldiers and nurses before the ship left port.

Great Britain's naval construction programme for 1920 has been considerably reduced.

TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

TO PROTECT FRANCE FROM UNPROVOKED AGGRESSION.

The following Treaties have been concluded between Great Britain, France and the United States.

The text of the pact between the United States and France runs:

Considering the fact that the United States of America and the Government of the French Republic are equally animated by the wish to maintain the peace of the world which has been so happily restored by the Peace treaty signed at Versailles the 28th of June 1919 which put an end to the war commenced by the aggression of the German Empire and ended by the defeat of this power,

Considering that the United States of America and the Government of the French Republic are fully convinced that an act of unprovoked aggression directed by Germany against France would violate the letter and the spirit of the treaty of Versailles thus exposing France again to the intolerable charges of an unprovoked war and that a similar aggression on the part of Germany would constitute a hostile act against all powers who have signed that treaty, an act calculated to trouble the peace of the world by dragging into war directly the states of Europe and indirectly the whole world,

Considering that the United States and the Government of the French Republic fear that the stipulations concerning the left bank of the Rhine and contained in the Treaty of Versailles, may not assure immediately to France on one side, and to the United States on the other security and appropriate protection.

Consequently the United States of America and the Government of the French Republic have agreed on the following:—

If the stipulations concerning the left bank of the Rhine contained in the peace treaty with Germany signed at Versailles 28th of June 1919 (articles 42, 43, and 44) would not guarantee immediately to France the appropriate security and protection the United States of America will be bound to come immediately to her help in the case of an act of non-provoked aggression directed against her by Germany.

The present will have to be submitted to the Council of the League of Nations and will have to be recognised by the Council, if necessary by majority, as an agreement conforming to the covenant of the League. It will remain in force until on the demand of one party of this treaty the council decides, if necessary by majority, that the League of Nations itself guarantees a sufficient protection. The present treaty will be submitted to the French Chambers for approbation, and to the Senate of the United States at the same time as the treaty of Versailles.

Signed:—Clémenceau, Pichon, Woodrow Wilson, Robert Lansing.

The agreement between Great Britain and France is concluded in identical terms. The present treaty before ratification by His Britannic Majesty will be submitted to Parliament for approbation; before ratification by the President of the French Republic it will be submitted to the French Chamber for approbation.

Article 5 of the present treaty does not impose any obligation on any of the dominions of the British Empire unless and until it is approved by the Parliament of the interested Dominion.

Made in double at Versailles at the 28th of June 1919.

Signed: Clemenceau, Pichon,
Lloyd George, A.J. Balfour.

SCENE IN THE HOUSE.

WOMEN EJECTED FROM THE GALLERY.

Late yesterday evening, during the discussion on the Insurance Bill in the House of Commons, a woman in the public gallery rose and shouted "I protest against our sons being sent to Russia to fight the Russians."

An attendant caught hold of the woman, who repeated her protest several times before she could be removed. A man sitting just behind sprang to his feet and struck the attendant as he was removing the woman.

A second woman then rose and shouted "Why don't you dissolve? We want a Soviet." The speaker ordered the gallery to be cleared. The man who struck the attendant, speaking with a marked foreign accent, shouted "Your wickedness and shamelessness is appalling!" He got no further, being hustled out. The remainder of the gallery was speedily cleared.

The business of the house was interrupted for over three minutes.

THE LAST TROOPS FOR RUSSIA.

The transport Czar sailed from Southampton last evening with some 1,600 officers and men, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Cross, for Russia. In wishing them God speed the Mayor said: "We are assured that you are the last contingent of British soldiers who are likely to be sent to Russia."

BELGIAN DECORATIONS.

PRESENTATION BY GENERAL MICHEL AT COLOGNE.

In February of this year, the King of Belgium graciously conferred decorations upon a large number of British soldiers of the 2nd Army. They ranged in rank from major-generals to privates and since the awards were announced, the honoured ones have moved to all parts of the world.

As a considerable number of these were accessible in Cologne and its environs, however, yesterday was considered an opportune time to make the presentations, and arrangements were exceedingly well completed by the 2nd Army Headquarters Staff.

The imposing square in front of the Excelsior Hotel was the scene of the particularly happy ceremony and in brilliant sunshine a very large crowd of soldiers and civilians watched the proceedings.

The presentations were made by Lieut.-General Michel, General Officer commanding the Belgian Army of Occupation, who was accompanied by his chief of staff and A.D.C. He was received by the Commander in Chief.

The guard of honour, furnished by the 9th D.L.I., having been inspected, those concerned proceeded to the court-yard at the rear of the Hotel and decorations were then presented in accordance with the appended list, the band of the 17th Lancers playing enjoyable selections meanwhile.

Among those who witnessed the ceremony were Major-General Sir A. A. Montgomery, C.G.S., G.H.Q., Lieut.-General Sir C. Jacob (2nd Corps); Lieut.-Gen. Haldane (6th Corps), and Lieut.-Gen. Morland (X Corps).

At the conclusion of the ceremony, representatives of the French, American and Italian Missions were presented to General Michel and the C. in C. led three cheers for the King of Belgium which were heartily accorded.

PEACE DRINKS.

CANADA NOT TO REMAIN DRY.

The Dominion Senate has rejected the Canadian Government's prohibition Bill for a second time and amended the measure so that the prohibitory provisions expire with the proclamation of peace instead of twelve months afterwards.

IMPRESSIVE MILITARY FUNERAL.

"Some corner of a foreign field, that is for ever England." In the tastefully laid out and well kept cemetery at Sudfriedhof the remains of Lieutenant G. S. Dennis, Intelligence Corps (late of the D.L.I.), were laid to rest yesterday in the special part reserved for the British and their allies.

Numerous officers and other ranks from the Intelligence Corps and the D.L.I. were present at the graveside. The cortege proceeded on foot from No. 36 C.C.S., the coffin resting on a gun carriage. The following acted as pallbearers:—Lieut Gibson, and 2nd Lieut. Saville.

Among other officers who attended were: Lieut.-Col. A. A. Fenn, D.S.O., (Commanding Intelligence Corps), Major Quarry, Capt. Barmby, Capt. Willison, Lieut. Patterson, Lieut. Hemming.

The Durham Light Infantry furnished the firing party and the band of the same regiment played impressively the Dead March ("Saul").

LONDON RACE RIOTS.

Stories of the feud in the West Ham district between black and white seamen were heard at the Old Bailey yesterday, when John Martin, 29, a coloured seaman, was charged with wounding James Hanrahn, ship's fireman, with intent to do him grievous bodily harm.

Mr. Percival Clark, for the prosecution, said the case arose out of the disturbances in the East-end, which were said to be due to the attitude of black men towards white women. On May 27 a serious disturbance occurred at West Ham. Prisoner was in a lodging-house with a number of other coloured men and a crowd of white people assembled outside. According to the evidence of the police, prisoner was seen to rush out of the lodging-house with a pistol in his hand, which he fired at the crowd, Hanrahn receiving a bullet in his arm. Prisoner was struck on the head by a police truncheon, and was arrested.

In the witness-box prisoner said, "Me no shoot. The crowd knock me down with large sticks."

Martin was found not guilty, and discharged.

R. 34's PROGRESS.

AERIAL FLEET TO WELCOME AND ESCORT HER.

Latest reports about the British airship "R 34," which left Scotland on Wednesday morning for New York, indicate that she is continuing her voyage westward, and is expected to arrive at Long Island this morning. Messages were fewer yesterday than on the previous day, no direct news being received between ten o'clock in the morning and eight o'clock at night.

The following are the wireless messages received from the airship during yesterday:

4.0 a.m. The Air Ministry states this morning that the British Airship "R 34" wirelessed at 3 a.m. G.M.T. position 52.50 N., 28.10 W.

7.11 a.m. "R 34" reported her position at 6.11 a.m. G.M.T., 52.30 N., 30 W. (Just more than half-way.)

10.0 a.m. A wireless message radiated by the "R 34" at ten o'clock (British summer time) indicates that her position at that hour was approximately 52deg. 50min. North and 34deg. 30 min. West. The airship was then cruising above the fog.

1.14 p.m. The Air Ministry announces: The Commander-in-Chief of the Atlantic and Home Fleet has communicated the following message by wireless to the Air Ministry: H.M.S. Renown heard "R 34" wireless signals strength 7 (that is, fairly loud and readable signals) at 12.14 G.M.T."

7.30 p.m. A wireless station on this side of the Atlantic reports having heard H.M.S. Tiger speaking with the "R 34" in the position 54.20 North, 40 West. All apparently O.K. at 6.30 p.m. Greenwich mean time.

The "R 34" will be met off the coast by a welcoming fleet of United States naval aircraft, including several seaplanes and the dirigible "C 3." The latter is housed at Montauk Point, ready to start. If no wireless from the "R 34" is received by Friday morning she will go to search for the distinguished visitor. The officials here in charge of the wireless telegraphs expect to get into communication with the "R 34" tomorrow night. A wireless telephone has also been installed. On the aviation field there are 8,000 containers, holding 1,500,000 cubic feet of hydrogen, much more than enough for her replenishment.

RAILWAY DISPUTE.

AGREEMENTS NOT KEPT IN THE SPIRIT.

A dispute has arisen between the National Union of Railwaymen and the Great Northern Railway Company over the interpretation of the recent agreement made between the Union and the Railway Executive Committee. The Union Executive has informed the Board of Trade and the Railway Executive that unless the Great Northern is compelled to interpret agreements in the spirit as well as in the letter the Union will take immediate steps to force them to do so.

THE SUTTON MURDER.

YOUTH SENTENCED TO DEATH.

Mr. Justice Darling, at Surrey Assizes yesterday, passed sentence of death on William Nelson Adams, seventeen, for the murder of George Jones, aged sixty, at Sutton.

It was stated that the prisoner met Jones on the Embankment and went with him to Sutton on the night of June 10. Next morning Jones was found with wounds, from which he died in hospital. Prisoner was arrested with Jones clothing and watch and chain in his possession. He stated: "I stabbed him three times. He asked me to do it. Jones was worrying about an income-tax demand, and that was why he asked me to kill him."

The defence set up the plea that the prisoner was of such a defective mind that he did not know he was doing wrong. The jury recommended him to mercy.

TRAITOROUS EX-M. P.

Ignatius Timothy Tribich Lincoln, formerly Liberal M.P. for Darlington, was discharged from Pentonville Prison yesterday after serving a sentence of three years' penal servitude passed on him in July, 1916, at the Old Bailey.

On his discharge Lincoln was met by two officers from Scotland Yard and taken in a taxicab to Liverpool-street Station. He was afterwards escorted on the train to Harwich, bound for Rotterdam in accordance with the expulsion order made against him by the Home Secretary. He was, hower, subsequently brought back to London again and lodged in Brixton prison.

In December, 1918, the Home Secretary made an Order revoking Lincoln's certificate of naturalization. It was then stated that the Home Secretary was satisfied that Lincoln had "shown himself by act to be disloyal to his Majesty."

TRAGIC PEACE SALUTE.

Two deaths have followed in the wake of the peace celebrations at Torry Battery, Aberdeen.

While the salute was being fired on Saturday evening Lieut.-Colonel W. Minto, R.G.A., and Gunner Shepherd were both injured—the latter having an arm blown off by a misfire. Shepherd died shortly after the accident, and Colonel Minto died yesterday morning.

The colonel was a solicitor in civil life, a son of the late Professor Minto, of Aberdeen. He had been on garrison duty at Aberdeen for some time.

"I am quite prepared to be run down for his sake," said a pretty Belgian governess to Mr. Justice Darling at the Surrey Assizes yesterday, when he sentenced Corporal Arthur Low, of the Canadian Army, to three months' hard labour for committing bigamy with her.

WHAT NEXT?

In the past few years, many milestones have been passed so far as aerial travel is concerned. One marvellous feat follows another so rapidly that we are disposed to become almost indifferent, and not to realise their significance and true value.

It is little more than fifteen years since Orville Wright made the first flight in an aeroplane. He flew in the air for a mere two hundred yards; yet that was amazing then.

Not ten years ago Bleriot crossed the English channel after many others had failed. That feat has long ceased to be considered remarkable. Then greater distancese were essayed. Paulhan piloted a machine from London to Manchester, Beaumont circled Great Britain, Audemar went from Paris to Berlin.

The war came, and great strides in the wonders of aerial flight were made. Long distance bombing trips into Germany were of daily occurrence.

Since the Armistice there have been many air journeys of prodigious length. Commander Savory has flown from London to Constantinople—2,000 miles—Major General Salmond has crossed from Cairo to Delhi, and Major McLaren has flown from England to India. More recently Lieut. Roget on a flight from France to Tangier covered 1,375 miles without a stop.

All were great performances, but even these were overshadowed by the daring of the Atlantic passage successfully accomplished only a week or two ago.

To-day we are awaiting news of the anticipated arrival on the American shore of the British airship, which is voyaging across the Atlantic Ocean. All the previous noteworthy feats in the air have been accomplished by "heavier than air" craft.

This is the first serious attempt of the "lighter than air" type to emulate what has been done by the plane. Everyone is watching the result expectantly.

But in a very short time even the Atlantic flight will cease to be acclaimed as anything out of the ordinary. The progress in aerial travel is so swift.

Naturally one is tempted to ask now: "What next will be attempted?"

If a super-daring airman makes up his mind to encircle the globe, will anyone be staggered at the news?

BEST OF ALL.

Demobilization is what a large number of soldiers are looking forward to, but are you looking to the future — the future that is all unknown to us? Yesterday we spoke of the need for subscribing liberally to the Victory Loan. To-day we want to say something about War Saving Certificates.

Why help our late enemy to pay the War Indemnity by spending all your pay in his cafés and on worthless souvenirs, when you can invest it at a high rate of interest in these Saving Certificates? No man who has suffered in the conflict wants anything to remind him of it, so be wise, and take care of your money.

Remember, your future prosperity depends on your individual effort.

Everything possible is being done to make this easy for Tommy, so that he can buy War Savings Certificates on the instalment system — amounts, however small, are gladly received, and everyone can be supplied with a subscription book free of charge.

If you are in doubt, or desire information on any point, consult the Secretary of any of the Army War Savings Associations, who is only too willing to explain everything. A Certificate only costs 15.6d., and in five years you can get £1 for it. In ten years £1.6s.

Should unforeseen circumstances arise, and you need your money, you can draw it out any time, with the accrued interest to date, so what better investment can be made?

THEN AND NOW.

We have all, in some degree, I suppose, the blood of adventurers in our veins, and the noise of battle coming through our office windows in those memorable August days five years ago, filled us with nausea for our desks.

We felt the rooms were stifling us; we loathed the bricks and mortar and yearned for open spaces where the four winds blew, we despised the miserable artificial life of cities; there was life before us—and death, the risk that made it worth the while.

We snapped the bonds of quiet lives and left the sordid strife of men; we armed and prepared for a sterner and more glorious struggle.

And one cold morning in April 1915 we might have been seen stamping up and down the quay at Havre, our spurs jingling lively in the frosty air, in tune with our spirits, the keen air as exhilarating as wine. We should have pitied, had we thought of them, those people in England who were yet abed. Life had begun.

* * *

Four years have passed and we are veteran soldiers now—one soon grows old on the battlefield. When we look back upon those years it is not without considerable emotion.

We see the salient animate with battle, the air tremulous with the boom of guns; cavalry in action, infantry advancing to the attack. The pageantry and the romance of the years parade and march past like pictures on a screen.

The Guards sweep over the slopes at Loos, the Somme is fought again; Vimy Ridge disappears in a blizzard of snow, Hill 70 becomes obscured in a cloud of dust and smoke, our horses plunge and flounder in the mud of Passchendaele. Wytschaete Ridge is lost and Foch's reserves come up, veterans of Verdun, stepping to a tune, their rifles swinging to the song. And then one sees the soul of France again, the 75's at Scherpenberg and at the shambles of Westoutre.

The deafening and triumphant fire at Villers Bretonneux comes to our ears, and the Canadians leap over into the mist. Through Caix, Rosières, Chaulnes, right across the Somme we go; smash through the Hindenburg Line; through Bohain and Le Cateau and across the Sambre—Oise Canal, till the bugles sound "Cease Fire."

There was something to do in those days, there was a movement; early mornings in the saddle when the air was cool and sweet; gipsy life of chaege and travel — one felt the joy of being.

But the life of the roads is gone now, and the days begin to Pall. Sometimes when more than usualy impatient of the insipidity of life and memory tantalises us with the crowded and picturesque days of adventure that have passed, we half wish the guns would take the road again.

OWEN OLIVER.

OUR BATTALION CINEMA.

A FIRST NIGHT SHOW!

On the face of it, it seemed a comparatively easy matter. Everyone in mess was very impressed. Tommy must be amused presumably to prevent the boredom attached to the life of the Army of Occupation. Hence our cinema.

Some took a mercenary point of view and talked of profits, others of the relaxation such a show would afford. Few took account of the difficulties. Advice was freely given, suggestions rolled up unasked for; of practical help there was none.

True, there was a capital hall, electrically lighted, good staging and all the accessories. Really things looked promising. The pace at which they moved overwhelmed one. We awoke one morning to find the weekly change of pictures advertised from every available yard and stable door in the area.

The German printer had obviously turned the midnight oil to good account, while the regimental billposter, with a hundred and one stations offered without payment, had painted the town blue. Blue placards were to be seen on all hands.

The machine, as all machines do until they are run, seemed all that could be desired. At any rate all the parts were there. He was an optimist who persuaded us to forego a trial run. Army blankets obliterated all daylight; forms were requisitioned and a piano installed. We surpassed ourselves.

Tommy was there in great force. Half an hour before the show was timed to commence it was impossible to approach the entrance. The queue wound its way through the yard into the street. Money rolled into the exchequer and our visions of profit became more roseate.

The Brigade staff from the neighbouring schloss were visibly impressed, and the amusement officer primed himself upon the congratulation which seemed likely to come his way.

The virtue of punctuality went by the board. The preliminaries embraced a series of flickers which conveyed very little even to an individual with the wildest imagination. Tommy watched our early efforts with admirable patience. The machine was clearly failing to live up to its guarantee.

The Army blankets which had been commandeered to keep out the light of day were not exactly proof, but the bugbear was the entrance to the hall. Late comers were clearly amazed at their reception. Their entry drew lusty protests, each more emphatic and forcible than the last. Nothing but the nailing up of the door would satisfy some parts of the house.

As the pianist struggled bravely with his repertoire, three antiquated compositions borrowed from a neighbouring mess, Tommy became more sarcastic. Somehow those films would not come right.

It was difficult to know where the exclusive three part comedy which figured in our programme began and finished. Another essay saw "The End" inscribed on the sheet followed by the fag-end of a thrilling episode.

Tommy's sarcasm knew no bounds. From the darkness came pointed advice on the running of a cinema show, and the amusements officer grew very sad of countenance. The rot started when a party made tracks for the doors. The tickets guaranteeing a free entry the following evening were turned down in disgust, and the promoters of the show wended their way to billets sadder but wiser men. As a "first night" it was very disappointing, but, then, things have improved since.

Give a man a horse he can ride,
Give a man a boat he can sail;
And his rank and wealth, his strength and health,
On sea nor shore shall fail.

Give a man a pipe he can smoke,
Give a man a book he can read:
And his home is bright with a calm delight,
Though the room be poor indeed.

Give a man a girl he can love,
As I, O my love, love thee;
And his heart is great with the pulse of fate,
At home, on land, on sea.

JAMES THOMSON.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

TO CELEBRATE PEACE.

A further suggestion.

Sir,—The suggestion of J.W.N. is most opportune, and speaking for most men in my battalion, I hope it will be carried out.

It would be a most impressive spectacle to have a military tattoo in the heart of Cologne and would do much to maintain our prestige as the Army of Occupation.

Such a ceremony would buck up the morale of the troops wonderfully, and I am sure I voice the view of the majority of the Rhine "boys."

One more word. Why not also a display in the afternoon, of gun mounting, musical rides, physical drill, etc. — a sort of open-air military tournament in fact — also, in the Neumarkt, if there is time to arrange it.

"DURHAM."

ARMY EXPRESSIONS.

Sir,—When are the coined words of the war going to be demobilized? The English newspapers, and particularly the periodicals, continue to persist in using such expressions as "camouflage", "stunt", "opened fire", "over the top", "burst of fire", etc., in reports of various civilian happenings with irritating frequency.

Even as recently as a fortnight ago, a comedian in London adopted the hackneyed gag of referring to the orchestra as the men in the trench.

Surely we have had enough of this sort of thing, and I for one shall be glad to be able to read a newspaper that is entirely free from such weak humour.

CLASS DISTINCTIONS.

Sir,—A few days ago a letter appeared concerning the distinction of class, and the slaves we are to such. The writer said that the world is run from day to day by those who work and by those only. The others are merely parasites.

I admit that the working classes form a powerful support of the commercial fabric, but I venture to suggest that the principal foundation of the country is formed by the middle classes.

To take a worn-out topic — the war. During the five years of strife the working classes contributed men, but enjoyed better positions and emoluments than ever before; the upper classes contributed money, but were not familiar with war's ghastly hand upon their shoulder; the middle classes gave of both, and, in consequence, were the most impoverished.

Also, I hold the view, that wit or brains are the things that matter above everything else in the present world of commerce, politics, and science.

"LYRIC."

FORM OF ADDRESSES.

Sir,—As a new and very youthful observer of Continental customs and one aware of the value of comparison I have been struck by the value of the German method of addressing an envelope, an arrangement which I think must help the postal authorities considerably.

How much better is the method which places the City or town before the street and the number of the house. Naturally in the sorting, the ultimate destination is of first import. Then arises the question of the street and lastly the number.

If I remember rightly the introduction of a similar method was openly advocated at home, but there the matter rested. Its adoption is a suggestion thrown out by

G.B.

TRIPS TO THE BATTLEFIELD.

Sir,—I hear that parties of the "Young Guards" are to be taken to see the battlefields of France. While I quite agree that this will be an object lesson they should profit by, in showing them where the "Old Guards" suffered and fell, I would submit that we of the old brigade who went through the horrors of the struggle should also be given the chance of going back to the scenes of carnage to look at the sacred ground on which our pals paid the great penalty. Could this be arranged?

ONE OF THE "WAR WORN."

THE CIVIL EMPLOYMENT SCHEME.

Sir,—Reading your leader on "Civil Employment," it struck me that there should be no class distinction between officers and O.R.s in a scheme such as was described.

For officers, as officers there can be no two opinions, good luck to them I say; in the military machine they are as necessary as capital is to labour in ordinary industry.

But when the job of war is over, it should be remembered that in the army as it is made up to-day, there are men with brains — and money, too, among "other ranks".

I hope Mr. Hastings Pimbury will remember this and modify his scheme accordingly.

AN "O. R."

CABARETS FOR THE TROOPS.

Sir,—Has the time not arrived when cabarets should be allowed to stage English turns and an all-English programme? It has been a long standing grouse with the troops that much of the business staged at these places of amusement is unintelligible to 75 per cent of the audience.

Quick to recognise this, a least one manager made representations on the subject, but his application was promptly turned down. Much headway has however been made since the dog-days of last year. Musical repertoires have been overhauled and the nightly programmes contain a fair sprinkling of familiar compositions while undue prominence is given to dancing and other turns which at least have the merit of being intelligible. What we now require are English turns.

I know it will be argued that there are many concert parties to be seen, but these shows lack the cabaret atmosphere. Why not take over a few of such places and thus keep the profits out of German pockets.

"BUFF."

THE QUESTION OF LANGUAGES.

Sir,—Many correspondents have already examined this question in your most valuable paper from different points of view. May I advocate the study of foreign languages for another reason.

Human language is an instrument for thinking. Thought is the highest function of man. Therefore we may say, with the French writer, La Bruyère, that a man who knows two languages is worth two men. Indeed, he has at his disposal two different instruments to exercise his thought.

We shall never understand the way Germany thinks unless we learn German. I even venture to say that if all the Germans could have spoken English or French, they would have understood the spirit which fired the Allies, and it may be that war could have been prevented. May be — may be not! Not an international language, but the study of foreign languages will be a good support for the League of Nations.

Saint Thomas Aquinas said "Timeo hominem unius libri," I fear the man of one book; he meant probably that the man of one book is the man of one opinion, intolerant and uncompromising.

UNFORTUNATE FOUL.

An unfortunate foul stopped what would have been a very interesting race between Australia and New Zealand, for the Leander Cup, fourth heat. Just after the start, Australia, whose steering was not good, came right across and fouled their opponents in the latter's water. As the New Zealanders claimed the foul, the umpire had no option but to give them the race.

A SPORTING CHANCE.

VICTORY BOND SWEEP'S PROMISING START.

They're off! The British Empire Leave Club Victory Bond Sweep has been launched, and already there are indications that enormous success is to attend the scheme.

Forms of applications for tickets have been so ingeniously circulated that there is no excuse for every man in the British Army of the Rhine not being in possession of one.

All you have to do is to extract that spare ten marks note from your wallet, fill up the form, and send them both—by any means you like—to Lieut.-Col. J. A. Levey, O.B.E., D.S.O., British Empire Leave Club, Cologne, and then wait to see what happens.

You may be one of the fortunate twenty-three who are to receive substantial returns for the small outlay, and even if you are among the "also rans", you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you contributed a little to the thousands of pounds that it is hoped the members of the Rhine Army are going to subscribe to the great Victory Loan.

It is important that no time should be wasted in buying tickets, for no entries can be accepted after 9 o'clock on Friday evening July 11th.

A WORLD'S RECORD BROKEN.

WILD ENTHUSIASM AT INTER-ALLIED SPORTS IN PARIS.

The first two heats of the 800 metres relay race at the Inter-Allied Sports in Paris, briefly reported in our issue of Wednesday, proved the sensation of the meeting, provoking wild enthusiasm on the part of the crowd. The world's record of 1min 33sec was beaten by both heats by 2 4-5sec. Finer running and picking up has probably never been seen on any racecourse. America gained the first heat, with Australia close up, while Canada won the second heat, with France a good second. Time for both heats, 1min 33 1-5sec. The final of the broad jump was gained by Butler (America), with 24 ft 9½ in, being well over the French record, but slightly behind the Olympic record. In the final of the foils Nadi (Italy) was first, and Piquemal (France) second. Other results:

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.—Greece 3, Roumania 2; Belgium 7, America 0.

200 METRES SPRINT (Semi finals: first two in each heat to qualify for the finals).—First Heat: Howard (Canada), 1: Tescher (America), 2. Time, 22 3-5 sec. Second Heat: Lindsay (New Zealand), 1: Haddock (America), 2. Time, 22 2-5sec. Third Heat: Haliburton (Canada), 1: Paddock (America), 2. Time, 22 3-5 sec. The French record for this distance, namely 22 3-5 sec., was thus equalled twice and beaten once.

WELTER-WEIGHT BOXING.—Salvan (Roumania) beat Martonni (Italy) in the third round on points.

1,500 METRES FINAL.—Stout (America), 1: Armand (France), 2: Lapierre (Canada), 3. Time, 4 min 5 3-5sec.

INTER-ALLIED GOLF.

As the result of play in the Allied Military Championship, confined to military who have fought on the side of the Allies during the war, America qualified at La Boulie to meet France by virtue of a win over England.

50th BRIGADE R.F.A. SPORTS.

DISMOUNTED EVENTS IN TWO DAYS' MEETING AT SOLINGEN.

The concluding day of these sports at Solingen was reserved for dismounted events and the programme was again of the most interesting description, for the possession of the Major Andrew Challenge Cup was not finally decided until C. Battery won the Tug-of-War and with it, the coveted trophy, which at one time appeared certain to go to A. Battery.

Brigadier General Sandys was again present and distributed the prizes. Major G.R.S. Patterson and Capt. W. Carter were the judges. The band of the 1/5 K.O.S.B. gave selections of music!

WEAVENS C. C. V RHINE RAILWAY TELEGRAPHS.

At Mulheim on Tuesday, this fixture provided an excellent day's sport despite the Arctic weather. Batting first, the officers of Railway Telegraphs hit up 240 for 5 wkts. (Lt. Teesdale, R.E. 124 not out. Capt. Evans, R.E. 31.) The "Weavens" were not able to top this score, and the result was, Rhine Rly. Teles. 240 for 5. Weavens C.C. 104.

1st. CAV. DIV. SIGNALS v 6th. RLY. TELE. COY.

This friendly match was played on Wednesday at Mulheim, and provided a most exciting finish. 6 R.T.C., batting first, made 126. Lt. H.M. Chrystall, R.E. 42 runs. The Cav. Signals found the bowling of Cpl. Fish rather difficult, and nine wkts were down for 90 runs, but thanks to the Jessopian tactics of Squad. S. M. Ellis, the total was carried to 126 before he was bowled. Result a tie, 126 runs each.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

STILL UNBEATEN.

77 SIEGE BATTERY (114) v. MID. DIV. D.A.C. (24) at Nieder Elvernich on Wednesday. For 77, Hirst (26 not out) and Hays (19) batted very well. Harkers (12) and Garmonsway (10) also reached double figures, whilst Extras (28) helped considerably in the total score. The D.A.C. team found runs very difficult to get, the whole side being out for 24, Fenton taking 5 wickets for 9 runs and Garmonsway 4 for 10. In the six matches played these two are the only bowlers, their team have had to call upon. Fenton has taken 33 wickets for 91 runs, an average of about 2.7.

9th CORPS TROOPS M. T. Coy. (129) v. 16th FIELD AMBULANCE (14) at Euskirchen. Pte. Mills (26) and pl. Parrett (25) were the top scorers for the home team, while Ptes. D. N. Jones and Leach shone as bowlers, taking 5 wickets for 5 and 3 for 7 respectively. For the visitors, Ptes. Hoole and Varley were the most successful bowlers taking 3 for 16 and 3 for 10 runs respectively. This is the fourth win out of seven matches for the 9th Corps Troops M.T. Coy.

LONDON D.M.T. COY (71) v. 53rd R. WARWICK'S (38) at Merheim on Thursday. For the London D.M.T. Coy the best scorers were C.Q.M.S. Hedges (16), Pte. Pollard (13), and Pte. Hawkins (12). The Warwicks did not succeed in scoring many runs, their first five wickets falling for 23. The remaining five only putting on 5 runs. For the London D.M.T. Coy, Lieut. Wright took 7 wickets for 13, and Pte. Jacobs 3 for 10.

CAV. AMM. COL. R.H.A. (117 for 7 declared) v. 9th T.M. BTY. (12) on Thursday. Before the latter went in to bat, a heavy storm prevented play for 20 minutes, rendering the wicket extremely difficult. They suffered disaster at the hands of Bush and Rice. For the R.H.A. Bush played excellent cricket, scoring 33 and taking 5 wickets.

4th CORPS TROOPS M.T. COY (107) v. 6th FIELD AMB. (67) at Düren on Wednesday. For the losers Owen and Fawcett batted well, whilst Col. Rankin and Harris were the most successful bowlers. For the winners, Cpl. Windgoose again did well with bat and ball, and was unlucky in being bowled, off his pads. He was ably assisted on the good work by Lt. Adams, and Ptes. Watson, Whitehouse and Brisley.

77th SIEGE BATTERY (85) v. 42nd STAT. HOSPITAL (29) at Godesberg on Monday. Sergt Garmonsway 29 and Harker 10 (not out) were the only two to reach double figures for the 77th S.B., all the side being out for 85. Sergt Stansfield 5 for 31 and Pte. Evans 4 for 47 shared the bowling. 42nd Stat. Hospital team fared very badly on going in to bat, losing 3 wickets for 3 runs the whole side only making 29. Cpl. Fenton 5 for 12 and Sergt. Garmonsway 4 for 12, carried off the bowling honours.

THE CALCUTTA "SWEEP."

LUCKY 13 OWNER OF WINNING TICKET.

The result of the Royal Calcutta Club Derby Sweepstake, drawn on May 31, has reached England at last.

Assuming that the total subscription is £120,000, the owner of ticket Q 327 (which drew the winner, Grand Parade) will receive £48,000; the owner of ticket R 4590 (which drew the second, Buchan) will receive £24,000; and the owner of ticket F 20 8 (which drew the third, Paper Money) will receive £12,000.

Next come the holders of the 117 tickets that drew horses. Between them they will receive 20 per cent. of the funds—£24,000. This works out at £205 each. The remaining 10 per cent. (£12,000) is shared between the expenses and the race fund.

The superstition surrounding the number 13 may now be considered to have received its knock-out blow, as the holder of the winning ticket deliberately chose 13 as his nom-de-plume.

The price of a ticket was 10 rupees or 16s 8d.

WILLARD INJURED.

DAMAGED EYE A TARGET EOR DEMPSEY'S BLOWS.

In a wireless message sent off from America before the great Dempsey-Willard fight yesterday, a New York correspondent telegraphs as follows:—

Jess Willard's partisans are much alarmed over an accident which has occurred to him.

During a training bout with Walter Monaghan, his sparring partner, Willard received a cut about an inch long over the left eye. They say this cannot heal properly before the fight, and that it will serve as a target for Dempsey's blows.

Sporting critics declare that the rules favour Dempsey, since the Ohio regulations bar the kidney punch and similar blows, and require the fighters to "break clean" from clinches. This will prevent Willard from off-setting his opponent's speed by putting superior weight on him in frequent clinches.

The match was timed to take place in Toledo, Ohio, at 3 p.m. yesterday (about 9 p.m. London time) but the result had not come to hand when we went to press.

POLO MATCHES.

Aldershot Infantry Cup:— After beating Coldstream Guards B team by 2—1 a composite team of four officers of Foot Guards contested the final with the Grenadier Guards who won by 2—0.

Military Cup (semi-final) at Hurlingham:— 15th Hussars beat Coldstreams by 10—3.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Horses for Belgium.

Mr. Grundy, the trainer, is about to return to Belgium with some 20 horses.

A Blazing Error.

Too many mistakes were made by the linesmen in the Gobert and Patterson lawn-tennis match. The Australian displayed justifiable resentment at one blazing error.

Lawn Tennis Tragedy.

A contributor to an English newspaper suggests that lawn tennis is in need of as much briskening as cricket. He refers to the postponement of a match for hours because a lady left her tennis things at home.

International Bowls.

Held in abeyance for four years, the international bowling matches are to be resumed this year. They will be decided on the green of the Edenside Bowling Club, Carlisle, on July 9, 10, and 11. Fourteen players are receiving caps for the first time.

Remarkable Girl Swimmer.

At the age of 17 years, Miss Constance Hopwood, of 101, West Green, Tottenham, has won the diploma of the Royal Life Saving Society with honours, she being the youngest holder in the world of this distinction. She has always been a remarkable swimmer, and at the age of 11 won a mile championship.

The King at Newmarket.

The King has been residing privately for a few day's holiday at Newmarket this week, staying as usual at the Jockey Club Rooms.

Novice Sculling at Eton.

There was a record entry of 183 competitors for Novice Sculling at Eton. The final was easily won by J. S. Herbert, G. L. Billson being second, and J. V. Wrigley third. Time, 10 min. 40 sec.

Boxing at the Ring.

A welter-weight contest for £50 aside between W. Farrell (Southwark) and Kid Carter (America) is the outstanding bout at the Ring, Blackfriars, on Monday afternoon. Two bouts over ten rounds will also be included in the programme.

"That Bloke."

"That bloke plays like an Australian!" "The bloke" was Kingscote—a trooper of Anzac cavalry spoke. The tribute—the highest in his vocabulary—was drawn almost unwillingly because the favourite of the "diggers," Pat O'Hara Wood, was going under.

Century Earns A "Blue."

R. L. Holdsworth, of Repton, has been given his place in the Oxford cricket eleven to play Cambridge at Lord's. Early last month he scored 47 for Warwickshire against Derbyshire, and his innings of 102 against the M.C.C. this week earned him his "blue."

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Saturday, July 5, 1919.

Wind mainly South easterly 10-15 m.p.h. Cloudy. Some thunder likely. Warmer. Fair visibility.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Difficulties Overcome.

Despite the loss, by demobilization of several of their members, particularly the chief comedian, the C.X L.I. Concert Party (141st Field Ambulance) under the supervision of Capt. Crawhall, is still going strong, and possesses sufficient talent to enable it to retain its position as a first class concert Party. Their recent show at the "Meeanee" Cinema, Hersel, was very good indeed, and the individual turns well merited the vociferous applause which greeted them. I believe that the female impersonator—who by the way is one of the very best I have seen—changes "her" dress no less than seven times during the show. With their chorus strengthened, I can see this party enjoying a long run at one of the big theatres in the near future.

At the Apollo.

There are several striking features in the performance, of the revue, "Well, I'm —!" by "The Tabs" Concert party at the Apollo this by week. There is the wonderful agility of Jack Knowles, whose limbs are as flexible as steel springs; the wonderful, pure soprano voice of Miss Hilda Potts, of whom more frequent appearance would be agreeable, and there is the finished and artistic violin playing of Alfred Barker. Mention has already been made in this column of the complete performance, but these points — to say nothing of the excellent stage management, the pretty scenery and the sympathetic — though sometimes a trifle loud — accompaniments of the orchestra, appealed to one more forcibly than ever, on the occasion of a second visit.

A Popular Burlesque.

Mention of "The Tabs," by the way, reminds me that their "East Lynne" burlesque seems familiar. I traced the cause of the familiarity to "The Robin Hoods" and in a chat with Bert Leonard, the producer of a similar show, he remarked that "The Robin Hoods" had been running an "East Lynne" skit since January and intended to perform it in Cologne during their forthcoming visit. It is questionable whether "Jane Shore" or "East Lynne" has formed the more popular basis for this type of entertainment. At any rate they have both had an extraordinary amount of attention bestowed upon them by concert parties for years.

Splendid Progress.

A recent visit to the Y.M.C.A. at Euskirchen shows what splendid work is being done there. The difficulties that the organisers have had to contend with, have been great but an energetic, hard-working staff have overcome all these. The hall in which they operate was opened early in the year by Brigadier General J. C. Harding Newman, C.B., C.M.G. Formerly a German dancing saloon, it has been transformed, and now forms a rendezvous at which all ranks gather, and where the comforts of all are ministered to. Billiards is a great feature and a full programme of concerts is well supported. A good library is in evidence and other rooms are devoted to German classes, a reading circle, and a camera club. Altogether one finds the Y.M.C.A. at Euskirchen to be a place of life, of pleasure and gaiety in all its cleanest forms, and one realises what this splendid organisation for our troops is doing not only here but everywhere in Rhineland.

Crowded Out.

The B.E.L.C. whist drive was again held indoors on account of the weather. These events seem to grow more and more popular and although forty-five tables were arranged many would-be players were again disappointed. The first gentleman's prize was won by Pte. J. Brown with a score of 150, and the first ladies' by Pte. R.A.Rance with 156. The second and third gentlemen's prizes went to Sgt. Slaughter and Pte. Read with scores of 146 each, and the second and third ladies' prizes to Pte. W.H. Ward and Bombardier Sharp with scores of 153 and 148 respectively. Mr. Halley again kindly took charge of the proceedings and Cpt. Taylor proved a most efficient M.C.

Drama and Education.

There are many in Germany who have not the time, the inclination or the facilities for reading the great masterpieces of drama. But among them there are not a few who are ambitious to become familiar with the more important plays. If only from an educational point of view, therefore, the advent of the British Rhine Army Dramatic Company is a valuable adjunct to the soldier's social life. The Company immediately established itself a warm favourite when, on May 8th "The Mokuscs" (Hubert Henry Davies) was produced. Since then a wide and enterprising field has been conquered by the presentation of such diversified plays as "Man and Superman" (G. B. Shaw); "The New Sin" (B. Macdonald Hastings); "Candida" and "How he lied to her Husband" (G. B. Shaw) and "The Importance of being Earnest" (Oscar Wilde) The concluding performance of the last named play will be given to-night at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne.

In a few lines.

"The Chevrons" concert party gave a successful performance to a crowded audience at Duren yesterday evening.

An officer who had recently returned to Düren from leave in Paris says, that although the entertainments available there are varied and many, there is probably not one that is of the pre-war standard.

The first "provincial" performance of the Army Dramatic Society will be at Bruhl on Wednesday next.

It is possible that Jenny Hasselquist, the famous Swedish dancer who made a big name in London, will pay a visit to Cologne.

Another likely future engagement includes the Tolmar Concert Party, run by two French ladies who entertained thousands of troops in France during the war.

"The Title," Arnold Bennett's latest play, which is to be given at the Deutsches Theatre in a fortnight, will be preceded by "The Ghost of Jerry Bundler," by W. W. Jacobs.

"HOW CAN I RESTORE LOST NERVE FORCE?"

Weakened or Exhausted nerves are brought about by the gradual "starvation" of the Nerve Cells, principally those of the Brain, through the "wearing out" effects of Worry, Anxiety, Insomnia, Over-work, etc. In such conditions medicines and "tonics" which only STIMULATE and do not NOURISH are worse than useless—they are harmful.

The only Permanent Restorative to Health is DR. MULLER'S NUTRIENT, the new scientific discovery for nervous people, an extraordinary valuable nerve cell food which is assimilated by the impoverished nerve centres and restores them to their former strength and vitality. In due course this potent preparation revitalises the whole system.

The Benefit is Certain. The Brain becomes more active, the Mind more cheerful, and the Memory stronger. The stamina and energy of the body increases, and disinclination for effort (a common symptom of exhausted nerves) disappears.

REBUILDS AND REVITALIZES THE BRAIN AND NERVE CENTRES.

Peace Thanksgiving.

To-morrow is to be observed as Peace Sunday in the Army Churches, Cologne. There will be a United Thanksgiving Service at 10.30 a.m. in the Church of England Military Church, Schildergasse, which will be for all branches of the Protestant Church, and it is expected that it will be largely attended by all ranks. There will accordingly be no morning service in the Military Church for Scots and English Free Churches.

A Famous Preacher.

The Rev. Hugh Black D.D., Professor of Practical Theology in the Union Seminary, New York, arrives in Cologne to-day. Before he went to the United States, Dr. Black was a member of the celebrated ministerial partnership of White and Black in St. George's U. F. Church, Edinburgh. He is the author of a number of thoughtful works, including "Friendship" and "The Practice of Self-Culture." We understand that Professor Black will preach in the Military Church, Filzengraben, on Sunday at 6 p.m., and then in the Central Y.M.C.A. Hall, Friesenstrasse, at 7 p.m. On Monday night at 6.30 he will lecture in the Scottish Churches' Club, Schildergasse.

Zigarren Stores.

It has been rather astonishing to many members of the Rhine Army when inspecting the interiors of the numerous "Zigarren" stores in the occupied area, to find the shelves so well filled with that excellent commodity. Taking into consideration the length of the war, and the fact of the blockade, it was quite expected to find cigar stocks in an impoverished state. The contrary, however, seems to be the case. One or two reasons for this may be advanced. The Germans — that is to say, the male element — were always great cigar smokers, and on the outbreak of war there were probably large stocks of raw leaf and the finished article in the country. In addition, it is possible that supplies were obtained from Holland, which possesses a vast cigar-making industry; Belgium too, contained a large number of cigar factories and these probably were forced to produce "smokes" for German consumption. The major portion of the cigars from these latter doubtless found its way into Germany.

Something for Nothing.

A little while ago, an announcement was made in a few lines in this journal that the Physical and Recreational Training Superintendent was in possession of a small quantity of indoor games, and applications for these, as free gifts, were invited. On the morning of the appearance of this paragraph, hundreds of letters were delivered at G.H.Q. They arrived from all quarters by aeroplane, Royal mail, motor lorry, cycle and by every other known means. From that time onward, the headquarter office of the P. and R. T. Staff has had a busy time dealing with the inundation of correspondence and telephonic enquiries. It is stated that about the only conceivable article that has not been asked for is a church organ, but in the meantime, all available supplies of games are exhausted.

The Staking of Beans.

We published a note recently in regard to the use of stout poles for training runner beans in Rhineland. Commenting on this, a correspondent says that in the village where his unit is stationed the method employed is different. The beans, to the number of ten or twelve, are sown in clumps or rings and when the runners are beginning to shoot up, the pole is placed in the centre of them. This, of course, is done in England occasionally, but not often. Another plan adopted in Rhineland is to grow beans without any sticks just as the market gardeners do at home, pinching the tops of the runners when they start to flower. But the chief method seems to be the one noted in our previous paragraph.

The Village Crier.

The town crier is a personage to be met with in many towns at home, a survivor of days gone before, but in many of the villages on the Rhine he is a very important individual whose daily round is looked for. Hard on the ringing of his bell, doors and casement windows are thrown open and due deference is paid to his intimations. One could not fail to be struck by the authority which he excercised, only excelled perhaps by the village policeman, whose services in requisitioning goods were so very necessary and so very effective. The writer recalls how chairs were required for the use of men in the village schoolroom. Two were asked for from each house and the mere repeatal of the demand accounted for their ready production. Many of the owners did not care to enquire where they were going and whether they would get them back. Such is the respect for authority.

Wine Tasting de Luxe.

Anyone who frequents public drinking places or has watched a German in the society of his home will have been interested by the care which he exercises in the opening and tasting of a bottle of wine. It has become a fetish with him. He opens the bottle with extreme care, using the cork to wipe away any material at the extreme neck of the bottle. Next comes the sampling. The smallest quantity is run into a glass and is passed under the tongue. He then proceeds to "eat" the wine, masticating it as he would solid food and having satisfied himself on this point he helps himself to a full glass. The tasting of wine is conveyed in a well-known German picture to be seen in many places. Tasting has been reduced to a fine art.

Street Cleaning.

Attention has already been directed to the rather crude method of street cleansing in vogue up and down the Rhinelands. It appears to be the general rule that the householder is responsible for the causeway in front of his residence, an admirable arrangement which might well be adopted in areas at home where the Council authorities hesitate to make such a duty compulsory with the result that the pedestrian on a fall of snow spends a very unhappy time. In the villages, however, it seems that from time to time the road gulleys are flushed, a signal for the appearance of housewives and others who proceed with the aid of the switch broom to cleanse the pathway in front of the house. Little fault is to be found with this except that it strikes one as absurd that they should brush away at the gulley, when the flow of water is likely to bring down the residue of filth from a neighbour's front higher up the hill.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's winner of the prize of 10 marks is Pte. R. C SEYMOUR, RAVC, H Q., Sub. Div. No. 8 Veterinary Hospital, Rhine Army.

Notes from London Town.

WORKING FORWARD.

Quickly—almost hurriedly—the London season is working out its course. In a short time Goodwood will be here, and the Duke of Richmond's "best paying farm" may once more be visited by thousands of people long denied a trip to the charming pleasaunce. The opera will have come to a close; the Russian Ballet will have folded its wings and "properties", and scenery, and dresses, and silently stolen away. We are going back to the normal, and the almost mechanical happenings of the Capital's holiday year progress as usual. Much will depend upon the time and the place of the Peace celebrations, but even these will not keep in town, those citizens who have long resolved to leave it for a real vacation. Theatrical managers are, accordingly, "playing for safety," and one need not be surprised to find some production he thought was doing well, being suddenly switched off "in consequence of previous arrangements," or on some other equally idiotic excuse. The summer-time is once again a real summer-time in town, and people wander about in the parks and the open spaces, unhampered by the fear of dreaded police whistles, the booming of cannon and a stampede for life. Considering the risks ever present last year, the multitude scarcely appreciates the golden and happy colours of the new time they are enjoying.

CHERRIES OVER THE WALL.

An amusing dispute has been brought about by nature in a Surbiton garden. The fruit of certain pear and cherry trees, planted by an industrious amateur gardener, has taken the wrong turning—all the fruit-bearing branches project well over the neighbour's wall.

The cherries, now turning a tempting red with plenty of flesh, on Saturday brought matters to a climax. The neighbour was surveying them with satisfaction after the rain and sunshine.

Suddenly a voice interrupted him. The man whose cherries had taken the wrong turning was heard to remark, "Our cherries are beginning to get nice and ripe."

"I beg your pardon," said the neighbour, "but I think you mean my cherries."

"Certainly not; I repeat our cherries. The law distinctly states that while I cannot come into your garden to pick the cherries you most certainly are not entitled to them."

"Oh! The law says that, does it? That's very interesting," and he slowly and carefully proceeded to select one of the most luscious-looking cherries'

"They are very good," he remarked. "Can you tell me their name and history? I must get a tree like that."

The neighbour has the law on his side.

WHAT HE FEARED.

In the witness-box of a London police court a big policeman was giving evidence. It was a commonplace case, and his story would seem to have been simple enough. Yet he trembled visibly, and presently became hopelessly entangled.

The magistrate, without being impatient, appeared surprised and a little put out. The clerk, perhaps himself given to attacks of self-consciousness, evidently understood, for he prompted the constable from time to time with little suggestions, at which the officer clutched gratefully.

As he left the box, his ordeal over, I saw on his breast the ribbons of the Military Medal and the Mons Star; on his fore-arm many foreign service chevrons.

Smilingly the clerk pointed them out to the magistrate, and I overheard his remark:—

"Not much afraid of the Germans, apparently, sir; but desperately afraid of you."

ARMY HUTS AS HOMES.

The conversion of the Army hut to civilian needs, offers a way out of the troublesome crisis in the housing problem. At present there is a general shortage of the material required for building houses—stones, concrete or bricks—whilst on the other hand, there is an abundance of Army huts, which are standing idle and unused. Why not demobilize these Army huts and use them as bungalows in connection with the Land Settlement Scheme? The work of dismantling and re-erection would absorb a fair percentage of the unemployed, many of whom, being ex-soldiers, are familiar with the construction and erection of these huts; such skilled labour may not be easily obtained in the future, and now is the time to commence, with the fair weather ahead. The building would encourage the settler to commence cultivating his land, because he would be certain of warmth and shelter when the bad weather comes.

TORPEDO PROOF SHIPS.

It seems that the Admiralty was repeatedly asked why torpedo proof ships were not built. The answer, if it could have been published, was that such ships were being built. The Admiralty built a whole class of warships which could not be sunk by torpedoes and were fitted with what was known as a "blister" or "bulge." Our newest battleships are thus constructed and can defy existing torpedoes.

Another wonder of the war was our 18in. gun, the most powerful ever made. It fired a shell of 3,300lb., 7ft. long, to a distance of 20 miles, where it would pierce a foot of the hardest steel. It was actually used in the attack on Zeebrugge with excellent effect.

ASKED AND ANSWERED.

"W.A.":—The Ministry of Munitions is still in existence.

F.E. STEELE:—You are not entitled to wear any Italian medal ribbon at present.

F. FLINDERS:—L/Cpl. J.T. Clark informs us that the record attendance at a football match in the British Isles is 127.347 on the occasion of the Scotland v. England international match played at Hampden Park, Glasgow on April 5, 1914. "Gunner" and Pte. G. Crawford plump for the game on the same ground and between the same teams in 1912 when 127.354 saw the match.

"R.F.B.":— You say your Commanding Officer cannot supply you with information as to your gratuity. Try your Record office.

H. MASTIN:—The Derby Recruiting campaign closed on December 15, 1915. If a man was rejected under the scheme then we fail to see how he can regard himself as a "Derby man." If a man attested under it and joined up when called upon, then he comes under that category.

"INQUISITIVE" asks who is "The Voice on the Wire," a feature of many cinema programmes.

"G.D.":—A man placed under open arrest can be confined to camp. Time awaiting trial is often taken into consideration in passing sentence.

PTE. J.E. CLARK:—The cigarette and tobacco issue varies. Usually it amounts weekly to a box of matches and five packets of cigarettes or tobacco in lieu of cigarettes. You must not expect a classic brand.

"GEORGE":—We are not aware of an alteration in the regulation which provides that a soldier serving on a 21 years engagement can be discharged at his own request on completion of 18 years service with a view to a modified pension.

ROYAL FUSILIER:—Sergeant-majors, not Sergeants-major, Courts-Martial, not Court-Martials.

"G.H.H.":—A soldier serving in India in 1915 would be entitled to the 1914-15 star.

Other queries will be dealt with to-morrow. Demobilization questions cannot be replied to: we have not space.—Ed.

BRINGING THE GUILTY ONES TO ACCOUNT.

TRIAL TO BE HELD IN LONDON.

BETTER NEWS FROM ALL THE RUSSIAS.

POLAND CALLS FOR ROUMANIAN HELP.

EX-KAISER'S TRIAL.

TO AFFORD AN OBJECT LESSON TO THE WORLD.

The Allies decision to try the ex-Kaiser was obtained by Mr. Lloyd George and M. Clemenceau, says a news agency, against the opposition of the American delegates, who thought the ex-Kaiser had been punished enough. The American delegates only consented to his being brought to trial on condition that the death penalty was not enforced, and that the trial should take place in London, where justice could be administered fairly.

It is suggested that a British cruiser with other vessels will be sent to Holland to receive the ex-Kaiser, and that if found guilty he will be exiled to some remote spot and kept under guard by the League of Nations. It is not believed that Holland will raise prolonged opposition to the handing over of the gentleman concerned and a request for his surrender will be made a most immediately. The trial cannot begin for at least two months. It will be carried out with all the impressive and majestic dignity of British justice and as it is intended to be an object lesson to the whole world, full publicity will be given to the proceedings.

U-BOAT COMMANDERS.

SURRENDER SOON TO BE DEMANDED.

Among those to be tried by the Allied tribunal for grave breaches of International Law and crimes of especially brutal character are some seventy German officers. They are mostly submarine commanders, whose names and whereabouts are known. The demand will shortly be made for their surrender. Trial and punishment will follow in due course.

EBERT TO CLEMENCEAU.

Herr Ebert, President of the German National Assembly, has written to M. Clemenceau acknowledging receipt of the note handed to Herr Bell at Versailles last Saturday.

He expresses a hope for the early liberation of German prisoners of war and declares that he will do everything possible to hasten the ratification of the Peace Treaty.

GERMAN POLITICS.

DISMANTLING THE MILITARY MACHINE.

A Berlin message says it is reported from Kolberg that the German High Command has been dissolved and that Field Marshal Hindenburg has left the town. Before his departure, he received a telegram from Herr Bauer, the new Premier, thanking him in the name of the Fatherland for the services he had rendered, both during the war and after the armistice. A similar message of appreciation was sent to Noske.

The resumption of diplomatic relations between Germany and Russia is being hurried forward and nominations to the diplomatic posts are being made. Count Kessler's name is associated with the post of Minister at Moscow and Professor Hollman is thought to be likely candidate for Kieff.

AUSTRIA'S DEMAND.

ENTRY TO LEAGUE OF NATIONS POSTPONED.

The League of Nations Commission considered yesterday afternoon a demand by Austria for admission to the League of Nations immediately on the signing of peace. There is no doubt as to the reply. Austria will not be granted immediate entry, but will be informed that she will be admitted after a relatively short space of time.

It is probable that the conditions laid down will be similar to those for Germany. The Austrian demand is regarded in Paris as originating in the desire to discuss on a position of equality the indemnity to be imposed on the former Danubian Empire and thus seek to avoid a portion of the cost.

ADMIRAL VON REUTER.

Admiral Von Reuter was on Friday removed from Park Hall Camp, Oswestry, to Donington Hall. He was accompanied by the Commandant of the German officers' internment camp and the German servants who have been attending him at Park Hall Camp. This is the first time, since the scuttling of the German fleet at Scapa Flow, that he has been separated from his staff, who still remain at Oswestry.

The King has approved of the appointment of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales to be Colonel-in-Chief of the Royal Canadian Leinster Regiment.

RUSSIA.

BRIGHTER PROSPECTS IN ALL QUARTERS.

According to the latest information in the possession of the Government the situation has greatly improved in the Archangel region, although the Bolshevists have been joined by Communists and their morale thereby proportionately increased.

On the other hand the Crimea is now clear of Bolshevists. The inhabitants show unrestrained joy at their release from the tyrannic red troops.

In the Murmansk region our seaplanes have bombarded the station of Kyapeselga and secured a direct hit on a moving train. One of our machines was brought down, but the pilot and observer reached our lines.

In the Baltic provinces the Germans have retired to a distance of seven miles from Libau and Lettish troops have arrived. Russian troops are in partial occupation and are asking for allied control.

From the Southern region the report that Denikin captured Tsaritsa on June 26th with 10,000 prisoners is confirmed.

POLAND AND ROUMANIA.

SECRET AGREEMENT FOR MILITARY ASSISTANCE.

The Ukranian Press Agency reports that for the past two weeks the Ukranian Army under General Grekoff has been fighting against the Polish Army of invasion East of Lemburg.

The Polish Press now demands the assistance of Roumania which was promised, it is said, under the terms of a secret Polish-Roumanian agreement. Poland is expecting the Roumanians to advance from the Buckovina and Kolomea.

TROOPS IN RUSSIA.

BY AUTUMN ONLY VOLUNTEERS WILL REMAIN.

From official sources we gather that British troops will shortly be withdrawn from the Caucasus and that by the time the ice forms, there will be no British troops left in North Russia except only volunteers and official missions. Evacuation of troops from that region has already begun. This implies no change of policy on the part of the Government as it was always the intention to evacuate the Caucasus and extricate the troops from the North.

ROUMANIAN BLUFF.

The departure of Signor Bratiano from the Peace Conference is not generally considered as conclusive. It is not believed that Roumania will finally refuse to sign. The probability is that a Ministry of officials will be constituted who will undertake the responsibility of signing.

FIUME DISTURBANCES.

A message from Fiume to Rome states that the disturbances between the French and Italians have been renewed.

Several French soldiers were wounded by citizens in a brawl which occurred because one of the soldiers took away the Italian colours from a young Italian lady.

HABSBURG MORALS.

REVOLTING AMOURS OF AUSTRIAN PRINCESS.

Prince Otto Windischgraetz has filed a Separation Bill in the Vienna Divorce Court against his wife, the former Archduchess Elizabeth, daughter of the late Crown Prince Rudolph and grand-daughter of the Emperor Francis Joseph, charging her with adultery and immoral conduct. It was originally a love match, but the relations between the pair afterwards turned to undisguised hatred on the part of the Princess, who, according to the petition, formed improper relations with the captain of a submarine boat named Lerch, who became distinguished for his deeds of valour, and later was killed in the course of a submarine raid on the Venetian coast. Lerch, it is alleged, had many successors, all naval officers, with the Princess, whose behaviour became quite notorious. The publication of further particulars in regard to the petition is prohibited owing to their revolting character. The Princess has filed a counter-bill, alleging adultery on the part of the Prince.

BERLIN TRANSPORT STRIKE.

The traffic strike at Berlin continues, but the transport of food is being carried on by volunteers on the train service.

A railway strike has now broken out at Frankfort. Marked unrest also continues to prevail at Munich, where another attempted attack on the barracks has been frustrated.

TECHNICAL WIFE.

TWELVE-GUINEA NIGHTIES FOR ELOPEMENT TROUSSEAU.

At Marylebone Police Court yesterday Mrs. Velma Isaacs, of Rodney Court, Maida Vale, the divorced wife of Mr. Marcel Godfrey Isaacs, was again charged with obtaining goods to the value of £318 17s. by false and fraudulent pretences from Messrs. Debenham and Freebody, Wigmore-street.

The prisoner was arrested at Euston Station as she was about to leave London for America in the company of the co-respondent in the recent divorce proceedings. She asked if she could not pay for the things then, and added, "I did not do it to defraud Debenham's, but to make Godfrey Isaacs pay something for me." The greater part of the property was in her trunks.

Mr. F. Freke Palmer, for Messrs. Debenham and Freebody, preferred a further charge of obtaining credit to the extent of £334 17s by fraud other than false pretences. He detailed the circumstances of the prisoner's visit to Messrs. Debenham and Freebody, when on opening an account she said she was the wife of Mr Godfrey Isaacs, a son of Mr. Godfrey Isaacs, of Marconi House, and a niece of Lord Reading. She gave an address in Lauderdale-mansions. In view of her statement she was trusted with goods on various occasions. The firm began to be suspicious, and on making inquiries ascertained that she did not reside at Lauderdale mansions and that she was not the wife—except technically—of Mr. Marcel Godfrey Isaacs in the sense that he was the person responsible for her debts. When arrested she made the statement that she "did it to make Godfrey Isaacs pay something for her and not to defraud." It was rather a startling proposition, said counsel, that such a wife should expect her husband or father-in-law to pay for the linen she was going to wear while living with a co-respondent and with whom she was about to elope.

Hilda Kemp, an assistant at Messrs. Debenham and Freebody's, created some amusement by her assertion that nightdresses at £6 to £12 each were not very expensive. The bill included:—Nightdresses £35 3s. 6d., linen £67 14s. 6d., dressing-gown £11, petticoats £20 43s. 6d., bags £22, bag and puff £15 10s., stockings £8 13s. 6d.

The magistrate asked Miss Kemp if Mr. Cox saw all these things. "Yes," was the reply, "he was quite close when Mrs. Isaacs was giving particulars about herself, but he did not seem to mind."

A further remand was ordered, bail being refused.

HAIG'S CRUSADE.

JUSTICE WITHOUT POLITICAL FLAVOUR.

Speaking at Chester yesterday, after being made a Freeman of the City, Sir Douglas Haig said that the honour was intended not for him only but for the army which he had been so proud to command.

The thought ever present in his mind was "How could he be faithful to them?" He could at least do his best to see that those who came back, and above all those who had suffered, were fairly and justly treated. He intended to do that to the best of his ability and he would regard it as a calamity if the various movements now on foot for the benefit of service men developed a political flavour. He wanted the same justice for all. It was not really a difficult task, for he was convinced that the country was behind them.

TAKING THE SHILLING.

OLD ARMY RAPIDLY DISAPPEARING.

Recruiting is progressing very satisfactorily. During the last five or six weeks an average of between four and five thousand men have enlisted in the regular army and over 20,000 old regulars have re-engaged. Among the new recruits the bulk of the new men have enlisted for terms of seven or four years, and in addition 25,000 men in the Armies of Occupation who were entitled to release have volunteered to remain for another year.

From these figures it will be seen that a volunteer force of considerable proportions now exists and if recruiting progresses at the same rate and there are no untoward developments abroad there is reasonable ground for hoping that all men who fought in the war will be released before the expiration of the Military Service Act.

The first obligation of the authorities is to send twenty battalions to India to relieve the garrisons there.

FARMERS' GIFT TO FRANCE.

British farmers have just sent, through the medium of the Agricultural Relief of Allies Committee, a further important consignment of livestock to the peasants returning to their farms in France in the neighbourhood of the battle zone. The gift comprised 37 pedigree dairy shorthorn bulls, 286 heifers, and 1,000 head of live poultry which are to be distributed in the Department of the Somme. Later on it is intended to send sheep and pigs of suitable English breeds.

PENSIONS FOR FORMER WARS.

Mr. Washington Evans announced in the House of Commons yesterday, that the Government has decided to increase the scale of pensions to officers and men wounded in former wars and to their widows.

The scale will be altered so as to bring the pensions up to the level of those given for disablements in the present war. The concessions date from April 1st.

GOVERNMENT DEFEATED.

SEX EQUALITY FOR FRANCHISE AND POSITIONS.

Last night in the House of Commons the Government was defeated by 100 votes to 85 on the third reading of the Women's Emancipation Bill. This Bill was brought in by Mr. Spoor, the Labour member for Bishop Auckland. Its object is to remove certain legal restraints and disabilities at present entailed upon women to which men are not liable; to enact that women shall not be disqualified by sex or marriage from holding any civil or judicial office of profit or trust; that women shall exercise the same franchise privileges as men and that Peeresses in their own right shall not be disqualified from sitting in the House of Lords.

Major Astor, on behalf of the Government, moved the rejection of the Bill, promising to introduce next week a Government measure in its stead. He failed, however, to carry the House, and the vote went against the Government amidst much good humoured chaff and cries of "Resign."

WAR MEDAL RIBBONS.

ILLEGAL UNTIL OFFICIALLY SANCTIONED.

Although we have seen both officers and men in Cologne wearing the General Service War Ribbon it is well for everybody to know that the time for wearing the British war medal ribbon is not yet, and any one so doing before the issue of an authorising order, shortly to be made by the Secretary for War, is acting illegally.

No person is at present authorised to sell the ribbon and to work under the registered design, or deal in it, without the sanction of the Secretary of State.

These facts were elicited in the Chancery Division yesterday when Mr. Justice Astbury granted a temporary injunction restraining a trading company from selling any ribbon of a design which is the same as, or is a fraudulent or obvious imitation of, the design registered by the Secretary for War, who sought the injunction.

It was pleaded for the trading company that a Government announcement amounted to a licence to use the design in question, and that it might be when the case came before the court again that an application would be made to have the design taken off the register.

ONE MAN BUSINESS.

INCLUDED AMONG "EXTREME COMPASSIONATE GROUNDS."

An Army Council Instruction issued on Friday adds to the list of soldiers who may be released from the Army on "extreme compassionate grounds", the proprietor of a one man business as defined below:

"A soldier shall be deemed to be the proprietor of a one man business if, for a consecutive period of at least 12 calendar months immediately previous to the date when he first joined the colours for immediate service he was the sole owner of, and carried on, on his own account, any profession, calling, or business for gain, other than that of clergyman, dentist, doctor, physician, or surgeon. No such proprietor of a one man business shall be released unless he joined the colours for immediate service on or before 1st January, 1917, and is over 30 years of age at the date of his application for release, and unless the resumption or continuance of his business is jeopardised owing to his absence."

W.A.A.C. MURDER.

DETECTIVES MAKE FRESH DISCOVERIES.

Just as the public were about to despair of a solution to the baffling murder of Miss Nellie Rault, who was stabbed to death at Haynes Park Camp on May 12, Chief Inspector Weasley of New Scotland-yard hit on a discovery last evening which may prove the turning point in the investigation of the crime.

Unconsidered trifles have sent murderers to the scaffold before now, and Nellie Rault's assassin may yet find that he was guilty of a fatal mistake in his attempt to defeat justice.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL FINED.

Mr. A. H. Illingworth, M.P., the Postmaster-General, was fined £3 at Otley yesterday for keeping four dogs without licences.

A policeman visited Mr. Illingworth's Yorkshire residence, Denton Hall, Wharfedale, with reference to a dog, and found two retrievers and two Aberdeen terriers. Mr. Illingworth produced an out-of-date licence.

Mr. Illingworth wrote stating that the licence had been overlooked owing to the pressure of public business in London.

TO ASSIST EMIGRATION.

A Committee is now sitting to consider the best use to which the balance of two and a half million pounds in the Prince of Wales' fund can be put. It is probable that a large portion of the money will be devoted to assisting ex-service men who desire to emigrate.

RECORD PRICE FOR A PICTURE.

A record price for art auction room sales was realised yesterday afternoon when Sir Joshua Reynolds' portrait of Mrs. Siddons as "The Tragic Muse" was sold at Christie's to Mr. Marshall for £54,600.

In authoritative circles at Paris it is expected that Germany will ratify the Peace Treaty about July 15th.

BRITISH AIRSHIP ACROSS ATLANTIC.

R. 34 PASSES NEWFOUNDLAND IN A DENSE FOG.

For the third time the Atlantic crossing has been accomplished in the air, and of the three, the two most creditable, because of their greater length and difficulty, have been made by Great Britain.

Before these lines are in print, the R.34 will have reached Long Island and received an uproarious greeting from the multitude assembled there to witness her arrival.

She made land on Friday morning, striking Newfoundland off the south arm of Notre Dame Bay, near Fogo Island. She then swung south. Between Bonavista Bay and Trinity Bay she met dense fog, and was not only lost to view, but unable to reach Cape Race station, the extreme southern point of Newfoundland, with her wireless.

The Air Ministry made the following announcement at 1.15 on Saturday morning:—

The following wireless message from R.34 to Cape Race has been received from the Western Union Cable Company:—"To Air Ministry, London. Passed over coast near Trinity Bay and proceeding to New York. Passing out from Fortune Bay. Signed, Scott, R.34."

General Seely, Under-Secretary of State to the Air Ministry, has wirelessed to the R.34's commander, Major Scott:—

"Warmest congratulations to yourself and General Maitland and all your gallant comrades, on your magnificent achievement and best wishes for completion of voyage."

Sir Charles Harris, the Govenor of Newfoundland, has also sent the following wireless greeting from St. Johns:—

"Officers and crew of the R.34, on behalf of Newfoundland I greet you as you pass us on your enterprising journey."

DANGEROUS POLICY.

DIRECT ACTION DENOUNCED BY LABOUR LEADERS.

At the annual council meeting of the General Federation of Trade Unions which was opened at Scarborough, motions expressing disagreement with the decision of the Labour Party's Conference at Southport last week were discussed.

Mr. T. Mallalieu, vice-chairman, presided at the meeting and stated that the Federation had an aggregate membership of one million two hundred and fifteen thousand.

Speaking of the resolution on "direct action" carried by the Labour Party at Southport last week, Mr. Mallalieu said: "Direct action, if it comes about, may involve this Federation in very serious liabilities, possibly in liabilities which cannot be met. Direct action for political ends seems to me to be an exploitation of Trade Union methods and funds for purposes for which they have not been contributed. It may give a death blow to Trade Unions, and I hope they will consider well their position and the risks which they will run before they decide to adopt direct action for political purposes.

It seems to me that the suggestions for such action arise largely from disappointed politicians. The General Election brought us many disappointments. We have only to perfect our action and activity at the polls to get the right men in the right place and to redress our political grievances. To talk of downing tools in such circumstances and on such issues is to prove to the world that we are not only bad losers, but men of mean intellectual stature and unworthy of the power to rule.

DEATH SENTENCE.

MINER MUTILATES HIS VICTIM'S CORPSE.

At the Stafford Assizes yesterday, Henry Thomas Taskin, a miner, was sentenced to death for the murder of his wife at Hednesford under exceptionally brutal circumstances. After killing his wife the prisoner mutilated the body and dropped various parts of the corpse into the well of a gasholder.

For the defence it was urged that he was suffering from insanity at the time, but the medical evidence disproved this.

MODEST HEROES.

A special parade was ordered on Thursday of Australians at Westham Camp, Weymouth, to discover the names of the two men who jumped from Weymouth Bridge into the Harbour and rescued a girl who was being swept away in a strong current. The unknown heroes, who had refused their names and were taken back to camp in a state of collapse, were Corporal McCraw and Lance-Corporal P. Costello, both 30th Battalion and New South Wales men. They sailed for Australia yesterday.

BLIND OFFICER DIVORCED.

In the Divorce Court recently Mrs. Cecilia Lowry was granted a decree nisi against her husband, Captain Gerald Lowry, who lost his sight in the war as the result of a gunshot wound.

Nothwithstanding his infirmity, the parties were married in 1915, but afterwards, either through the effect of his wound or the loss of his sight, the respondent became a most violent man. He knocked his wife about, and in September 1918 left her altogether.

GRAVES AND MEMORIALS.

Supplementary estimates tabled at the Ottawa Parliament include a vote for half a million dollars for war memorials in France and Flanders and another half million for the War Graves Commission.

The Executive of the National Union of Railwaymen has decided to postpone action as concerns the Great Northern Railway until Tuesday next.

CLEARING THE AIR.

Few homes have escaped the terror of the conflict now happily closed by Peace. Families, rich and poor, have willingly contributed their quota; many have to mourn the loss of one of the circle, but, looking at the matter from a wider standpoint, what is to be the outcome of this sacrifice?

Will it bring a new national atmosphere which will enable ideals of the time to bear fruit? Can we hope for a better understanding between classes, a more amicable relationship between capital and labour, a sweetening of the life of the nation? If so, then our efforts will not have been in vain.

We have seen a distinct welding together of interests. Classes have come to understand each other anew.

Political dissension has largely been swept by the board and jealousies and petty strife sunk in a common national aim.

We have had a remarkable demonstration of loyalty throughout the Empire. No one doubted the affection off all British peoples to the Empire, but few amongst us dreamed that the Empire would present such a united force in combating a common peril.

The Empire can justly claim to have given of its best, and, having satisfied itself on that point, will be fortified by it in an effort to reconstruct the past and give a lead to a better understanding amongst mankind.

If the war has done nothing else than to clear the air which nations breathe, then at least the toll will not have been in vain.

MEN FOR MEN'S WORK.

Most of us foresaw that one of the after-war problems would be the attitude of employers towards the women who came forward to fill the business and industrial ranks, when they were depleted by the departure of men for the fighting line. Would these employers want to retain these women who showed themselves suited to the work entrusted to them, and would these women in their turn elect to retain their positions?

During the war, women generally declared that they were only holding the mens' place till they returned, but now war is over and men are seeking their old employment, they find numbers of the other sex clinging to their jobs, with the assent of the employers.

It is obvious that the aptitude of woman for many branches of work will cause this state of things to continue to a great extent, especially if she is content to accept lower wages than the man. Women are in a large majority and it is not possible for all to marry or find household employment, even if they wish.

It was prophesied that after the war men would prefer to take up what are more properly mens' vocations than the office or the shop; to go on the land, either at home or in the Colonies, to work at the bench. But experience shows that this dream has not come true.

Great Britain is not yet sufficiently organised to effect such an adjustment of tasks. But it seems the only final remedy, and it will have to be applied. Men must do men's work. Meanwhile, industrial sex-trouble seems inevitable.

JUSTICE FIRST.

The current rumour is that Sir Douglas Haig has refused to accept any customary recognition of his distinguished services until the grievances of the gallant men who fought under his command have been remedied. And the very earnest tone in which the Field Marshal spoke this week before the Pensions Committee, as well as the strong indictment he brought against the existing system, or the deplorable want of it, certainly lends some colour, to the theory.

One gets the impression of a warm-hearted comrade who feels that some of the men who did great work for the nation during the worst days of the war are being now treated with scant consideration by an ungrateful country, or at all events by the country's representatives.

Sir Douglas was most emphatic in his expressions, and his evidence must have great weight. "No man should suffer," said he, "because he has served his country."

No one will quarrel with that dictum by our greatest soldier. But the difficulty is to reconcile sentiment and reality. Not all the gallant fellows who did well as soldiers can be made equally successful as civilians. Some are quite unsuited for ordinary life.

But it is equally certain that many good men are not receiving the consideration and encouragement they ought. A new spirit needs to be breathed into some of our public departments.

THE VILLAGE PASTOR.

A Contrast.

The village pastor is a fine big man, and does not wear the orthodox attire which you see at home.

He has a splendid manse near to his church which outwardly looks in excellent condition, but on looking inside you find it in a bad state of repair, and very dirty. The floor is rotten, the ceiling down, the pews dusty, and the organ sadly out of tune.

The State pay his stipend, and are supposed to keep his church in repair, but whilst the cottages of the worshippers are in a splendid condition, their church is wretched and uninviting.

The pastor's wife acts as caretaker, and their little son tolls the bell each day at 12 o'clock, not for a service, but to tell the people of the village that it is lunch time.

I wanted the church for my parade service, so went in search of the pastor. I found him in his fields in shirt sleeves, mowing his grass and smoking a huge pipe.

He is a fortunate man in many respects, for he owns two splendid cows, and several acres, and I must confess that whilst his church is neglected, his fields and garden are in a splendid condition. His three children are chubby and the picture of health, and the mother said: "It is the milk of our cows which makes them so."

His pastoral duties are very light for he has but one service per week.

On Sunday evening I saw him in a field still smoking his big pipe and playing a game of croquet with his children.

His arduous task of one service in the morning was finished, and he needed some recreation to refresh his jaded spirits.

He proudly surveyed his land and cast his eye over the results of his week's labour—a fine rick of hay. Near by, his two cows were munching the cud, the birds were singing and the evening sun shedding its soft radiance over the peaceful manse and meadowland, and his soul was at rest.

In the days before the war I remember a party of German pastors who toured England. We gave them a great reception and I was present at one. Over the pulpit, the Union Jack and German Eagle were entwined, and many brilliant speeches were made. At a dinner held in the school-room, we drank their health, called them jolly good fellows, and pledged them in eternal friendship.

We were all cousins, brothers, comrades in a great cause. "War!" "Impossible!" "Never should we fight each other."

That was in the spring of 1914. What a lot they must have seen and duly noted as they visited our towns and enjoyed our hospitality.

In 1919 I meet one of these pastors once more and preached to a congregation of British Tommies in his dilapidated church, where prayers have been made for over four years for our defeat, and the curses of Heaven called down upon us.

We sung our hymns to the accompaniment of his wheezy organ, and after a terrific struggle we have signed the peace Treaty. What a strange irony! What an awakening!

I found no warmth of welcome in my greeting with the pastor; he was frigid. We did not fraternise; neither of us wanted to.

Between 1914, with its reception of our brother pastors in England, and 1919, with its return visit in the shape of an Army of Occupation there is a great gulf fixed, a gulf of bloody combat, of fierce hatred. Will it ever be bridged? Time will show.

So I leave the spiritual guide of this village congregation with his pipe, his cows and fields, to meditate on the fact that in his church have worshipped those true sons of Britain, who have saved the world from the Huns who would have ruthlessly destroyed it, blessed in their task too by the prayers of those pastors who enjoyed the warmth of our hospitality and betrayed it.

THE TICKET AND THE TALE.

From Pte. JOSEPH BRILTON. "X" Branch, H.Q 21st. Army, to: Cpl. F. J. THRILTON, Camp Commandant's Office, H.Q., 14th Army.

Dear Thril,—Yes; Pivvyjoint has got his ticket. A queer story, and though none of us have all the facts, here it is, as complete as possible having regard to the scanty material available.

It started a month ago, on Parade. We had almost finished numbering off, when Pivvyjoint arrived, looking as conscious of time as a messenger boy at a Punch-and-Judy show. The S.M. looked surprised, but said nothing. Probably, he decided that discretion was the better part of discipline where personnel clerks were concerned, his own knowledge of personnel work being about as extensive as Germany's colonial possessions. But to continue. Tompkins, having just shouted his number—21 — Pivvyjoint, to everybody's amazement ejaculated:

"Araminta's age."

"What's wrong with you?" shouted the S.M.

With an obvious effort, Pivvyjoint pulled himself together:

"Sorry, Major.....22.....Of course,.....22."

The incident closed, and the Parade dismissed.

Some hours later, Love asked Pivvyjoint for his demobilization papers, and, it seems, was greeted thus:

"Thou art a soldier of the King — a right noble calling, by my halidom. Gladly would I serve thee, oh! brightest of thy kind. What seekest thou?"

The bright one answered briefly: "Blighty forms, rations and pay."

"Thou art going to a far country?" — began Pivvyjoint.

"Bet yer rum-ration I am, once I get outer this issue. Gotter get to the Base, fust, though."

"Thou art a base knave, but promise me they shall not injure my Araminta."

"Cut it out, Pivvy. Serves her right if she is injured. Don't hold with gurls out here, and she's simply askin' fur trouble, with that name.

"Listen! She's in danger: her reputation's at stake. Come, let us rescue her from that villain Stoneheart."

"Orl right fur you, ole' man. You're single, but wot 'ud my ole' woman say ter me, chasing rahnd after a gurl. I should be in worse danger than your Arryminter's ever likely to be. Yer knew my ole' Dutch, yer'd find some other digger to put it acrost ole Stoney-yard."

But Pivvyjoint had gone, leaving Love convinced that he was "clean off 'is rocker: no one at 'ome upstairs at all." Pivvy was found later, wandering in the streets. Taken before the M.O. he accused that respectable husband and father of designs on his Araminta. The M.O. was so far impressed that he marked him for Blighty. Meanwhile, we are all wondering whether to regret a shattered intellect or to admire a calculating mind. What's your opinion?

J. BRILTON.

* * *

Dear Bril,—Um! So much for the ticket. Attached gives the story. F. J. THRILTON.

(PARAGRAPH IN "DAILY WIRE.")

"Araminta," the winning story in the Y.M.C.A. Short Story Competition for the Rhine Army, is the work of Mr. Thorvald Pivvyjoint, written prior to his recent demobilization. It will appear in the August "Flighty"; also an article by the author entitled: "How I got my Ticket."

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

THAT LATE COFFEE.

Sir,—The complaints that have been made as to not being able to obtain coffee and mineral waters after ten at the Officers' Club, do not apply to the Annexe No. 2 Club. There we have always served both coffee and soda water to anyone who requires either, up to midnight.

THE N.C.O. IN CHARGE.

CARS AND WIVES.

Sir,—Private X may be a wealthy motoring enthusiast, and if so I would not wish to deprive him of his Rolls Royce if he can get it out here.

Personally I think most O.R.'s—and officers as well—if they are married, would prefer to have their wives with them in Rhineland to any car or cycle.

I hope the authorities will soon be able to arrange this. I know it has been under consideration, and now peace is signed, perhaps it will not be long before this is possible.

"LONELY."

PAINT, POWDER AND MARRIAGE.

Sir,—I find the "Paint and Powder" correspondence very interesting, appearing as it does at a time when such a subject as English-German marriages is being so much discussed.

Our soldiers certainly compare the girls they meet out here with those at home. It is quite natural that they should do so.

Whatever conclusions they may come to, however, none can deny that there are still many splendid girls at home who are worthy of the very best we can give them, even if they do make up their faces.

Your recent article "Women and the War" points out the noble part many of them took in it, and surely they ought to call forth our love and admiration now, more than ever they did.

I think any British soldier in Germany who has thoughts of marriage, would be well advised to consider first the girls at home, whether painted or not, and if he waits till he returns to England, I do not fancy he will ever have cause to repent it.

"PATRIOT."

FRATERNIZATION RUN RIOT.

Sir,—I am aware that the views of a correspondent are not necessarily those of the Editor. Hence I am endeavouring to put into my own words by way of a letter my views on the subject of fraternization, already treated in your columns.

I must confess my mild surprise at the manner in which all reserve is being thrown to the winds in a display of open friendship in cabaret and café.

I am quite willing to admit that fraternization is bound to come, but let it be dignified and restrained and above all free from criticism. This cannot be said of much of the displays of exuberant friendship to be seen in cabaret and café.

There is a danger of making oneself too cheap and by such thoughtless conduct one is not only unfair to other wearers of the uniform, but in danger of losing prestige. This should be borne in mind on all occassions.

"OLD GUARD."

BIRD ACCIDENTS.

Sir,—Your correspondent "Euskirchen" informs us of swallows having been caught by rod and line.

Although it is not altogether a common occurrence yet it is by no means rare, and seldom if ever does the season pass without some paper which devotes a column to "Natural History" recording similar catches.

There are other ways in which our feathered friends come to an untimely end.

Partridges rising from a field dash against telegraph wires in crossing the road; blackbirds and thrushes passing through a hedge get spiked to barbed wire, both with fatal results.

I remember once finding a small bird (common blue tit) which had alighted on a dead thistle and in the attempt to free itself had made matters worse and would certainly have perished a prisoner had I not found it in such a curious predicament just in time.

A.E.

ANOTHER FISHING EXPERIENCE.

Sir,—After reading what "Euskirchen" experienced while fishing in the Rhine, may I relate what happened when I was fishing in the Euphrates near Hit last year?

I made a careless cast, and my leader fly fell in the long grass on the opposite bank; the other fly falling in the water was immediately taken by a large Tigris salmon.

In striking at the fish I found my leader had caught in the ear of a hare which was dragged into the water and drowned.

In hauling my double catch ashore I slipped on a log, sitting down violently on a covey of nine sand grouse.

I forget the name of the fly used, but the breeches that got the grouse were "khaki drill, officers," as supplied from Ordnance.

It is now Euskirchen's move!

ANA NIAS.

WHOSE NATIONAL ANTHEM?

Sir,—A recent paragraph under "Echoes from Rhineland" drew attention to the behaviour of certain soldiers while the tune of "God save the King" was being played. The point is, however, is this tune not purely a German song — either one of their numerous national anthems, or a super-patriotic song equivalent to our "Rule Brittania?"

The fact that in any "Gastwirtschaft" in Rhineland that is provided with an orchestra or automatic piano, the music of the alleged "God save the King" is invariably played at the end of a selection of German music — the civilians lustily singing words to it, seems to lend considerable colour to the supposition that this anthem was "made in Germany." So perhaps after all Tommy may be excused for not rendering homage to such a doubtful "British Subject."

Is it not possible to have a new national anthem for our Empire; purely British, with a more stirring and better refrain and, most certainly, finer words? I think we need one badly.

"RHINO."

CHERRY-RIPE.

There is a garden in her face
Where roses and white lilies blow;
A heavenly paradise is that place,
Wherein all pleasant fruits do flow:
There cherries grow which none may buy
Till "Cherry-ripe" themselves do cry.

Those cherries fairly do enclose
Of orient pearl a double row,
Which when her lovely laughter shows,
They look like rose-buds fill'd with snow;
Yet them nor peer nor prince can buy
Till "Cherry-ripe" themselves do cry.

THOMAS CAMPION.

Dempsey The Wor'd's Champion.

TERRIFIC BATTLE.

WILLARD BEATEN TO A FRAZZLE IN THE 3rd ROUND.

The great Willard-Dempsey fight for the world's heavy-weight boxing champion hip was fought at Toledo, Ohio, on Friday afternoon.

Dempsey won in the third round, after a terrific battle, Willard receiving a gruelling unparalleled in the history of heavy-weight fights.

INTENSE HEAT.

The temperature in the sun was in the neighbourhood o 100 degrees and so great was the heat, that the participants in the preliminary contests were quickly reduced to a state of exhaution. It is estimated that sometning like 80,000 witnessed the principal contest.

DETAILS OF B TTLE.

1st Round:— Willard had the advantage in height, weight, and reach, but Dempsey's supporters relied on the youth and speed of the champion who has established a reputation as a quick knocker-out, a reputation he justified by flooring Willard twice in the first round. Willard was helpless, and had to be assisted to the corner at the end of the round.

2nd Round:— He clinched repeatedly to save himself in the second round.

3rd Round:— In the third round, Dempsey sent an awful left to the jaw, knocking out the champion's teeth, and followed with a terrible smash to the ear. Willard collapsed in his seat at the end of the third round and his seconds threw in the towel when time was called Dempsey was therefore announced the winner.

UNPARALLELED BEATING.

WILLARD'S FACE RESEMBLES A BEEFSTEAK.

Willard received the worst beating in the history of heavy weight fights. He was unable to leave the ring or move from his chair for 10 minutes after he gave up and was seized with a fit of nausea in his dressing-room after he left the ring, necessitating a doctor attending him.

Willard did not land a single solid blow. His face resembled a beefsteak; his right eye was closed, his left eye gashed, his lips were bleeding and his stomach was scarlet.

WHO'S WHO.

Jack Dempsey, from Salt Lake City, Utah, was not even regarded as a possible contender for the title little more than a year ago. He was born on a farm in Colorado 23 years ago and is the eighth of a family of eleven. His father was Irish, and his mother part Indian and part Scottish. He neither drinks nor smokes.

Jess Willard came into possession of the world's heavy-weight title by defeating Jack Johnson in 26 rounds at Havana in April 1915. He spent his early life on a ranch and for years rode broncbos and herded cattle. He has also run a circus. Until Friday's sanguinary debacle, he had fought 46 times, never been knocked down, and never had a black eye or a bloody nose. "I have only had two decisions against me," he recently declared, "one unjust and one fair; at least people say so."

Over 400 newspaper men were at the ringside describing the fight, and arrangements were made for handling 500,000 words of copy.

BRIGADE TUG-OF-WAR.

ELIMINATING CONTEST FOR COMING DIVISIONAL SPORTS.

In order to find out its best all-round sporting battalion, to represent it at the divisional sports which are to take place shortly, the 1st Western Infantry Brigade is arranging a series of tournaments; boxing, running, tug-of-war, etc. The battalion which holds the most points is to be chosen as representative.

The first of these series took place at Bornheim on Friday, when the tug-of-war contests were fought. The competitors were:—1/4 Battn., 52nd Battn., and 9th Battn., Cheshire Regt. Brigade H.Q. had previously decided not to pull. each Battalion was represented by two teams, a "light" and a "heavy," and as usual the two best pulls out of three was the order of the day. Bde.-Maj. G.M.H. Wright, D.S.O., M.C., kindly officiated as judge.

LIGHTS v. HEAVIES.

Ably coached by R.S.M. Martin, who trained them, both the "lights" and the "heavies" of the 1/4th Cheshires put up a splendid show and did not lose a single pull.

In this contest, the 1/4th Cheshires amassed the maximum number of points, 56, and have thus established a good lead. The 52nd Cheshires came next with 28 points.

Awarding the medals to the victorious teams, Lieut.-Col. Crookenden, D.S.O., of the 52nd Cheshires, congratulated R.S.M. Martin on having brought the teams to such a pitch of perfection, and hoped that they would do equally as well in the divisional sports as they had done in the brigade tournament.

The brigade boxing tournament takes place at Bornheim on Monday, while the brigade sports are billed to take place on July 14th.

FIVE MORE DAYS.

VICTORY BOND SWEEP GOING STRONG.

The great Victory Bond Sweep which is being organised by the British Empire Leave Club is to be a short and swift affair. Only five more days remain for the purchase of tickets, so do not neglect the present opportunity and then regret you were too late.

Enquiries at the club yesterday revealed the staff who are looking after the "hard work" part of the sweep, occupied at top speed in dealing with the enormous number of applications that have already been received.

It is unnecessary here to recapitulate the importance of everyone subscribing all his available cash to the Victory Loan; everyone is, or ought to be, familiar with this.

In addition to the ordinary purchase of Bonds, however, if every soldier in the Rhine Army were to purchase a ten mark ticket in the Leave Club Sweep, the result would be that a substantial amount would in this way be lent to the country and twenty-three ticket-holders would be the richer by quite a considerable amount.

It should be remembered that every ten marks subscribed means so much more for the lucky winners and ten marks more at Britain's disposal.

Application for tickets should be made on the proper form to Lieut.-Col. J. A Levey, O.B.E., D.S.O., British Empire Leave Club, Cologne, and should reach him before 9 p.m. on Friday next.

7th FIELD AMBULANCE v. 2 COY. "N" DIVISIONAL TRAIN.

This match was played on the ground of the former on Thursday and resulted in a win for 7th Field Ambulance by 102 runs. For the winners, Capt. Montgomery and Sergt. Fenwick opened the innings and made a good first wicket stand, carrying the score to 72 before Sergt. Fenwick was run out, his share being 32. Capt. Montgomery continued to bat in fine style and contributed 14 before being caught at mid off. None of the other batsmen reached double figures and the innings closed for 139.

No. 2 Coy. opened their innings with Lt. Luscombe and Sergt. Holmes and lost 4 wickets without a run being scored. Then Q.M.S. Harries and Dvr. Dent made a good stand the former making 18 and the latter 11. Pte. Caldwell for the winners bowled extremely well, taking 5 wickets for 10, the first three wickets falling in his first over.

1/6th W. YORKSHIRE REGT. SPORTS.

The 1/6th Battn. West Yorkshire Regt. will hold their sports meeting at Blücher Park, Ehrenfeld on Wednesday, July 9th, commencing 14.45 hours.

BASKET BALL AT RIEHL.

The 9th Cyclists Battalion evened up for their defeat of a week ago, by defeating the Army P. and R.T. School on Friday at Riehl, by a 20 to 10 score. The Cyclists showed a complete reversal of form, while the Headquarters team was somewhat broken up on account of two of the members being on leave, making their team work somewhat ragged. The visitors worked together beautifully, most of their chances at the basket being a result of their wonderfully rapid passing down the floor. Sergeant Frame was the principal score-winner for the Cyclists, though the rest of the team also showed that they could hit the basket on occasion.

The Headquarters team guarded excellently, but could not seem to get their machine working, and seemed to have difficulty in locating the basket. The game was scheduled as a demonstration for the officers and N.C.O.'s attending the school, and was a fine example of the speed with which this excellent game, which is taking such a hold with the Army, can be played.

In the Aympia results, Lieut. Kibler, 5th Lancers, won the championship at arms, not Reed as reported.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

HEAVY SCORING.

EASTERN DIVISION H.Q. (231 for 5 decl.) v. 92nd FIELD AMBULANCE (35 and 23.) on Siegburg Prison Ground, on Thursday. E. Div. H. Q. batted first and the feature of the innings was the splendid partnership for the fifth wicket by Sapper Thompson (68) and Major Tempest (75 not out) which realised 132 runs. The next highest score was 15 by Cpl. Gill. Bowling:—Pte. Hopkinson took 1 for 12. The Fld. Amb. were dimissed for 35, Col. Dobbie having the wonderful analysis of 8 for 8, Cpl. Gill 1 for 21. They batted again, but were again dismissed for 23, Mr. Extras scoring 12. Bowling:— Capt. Morgan 4 for 6, Lt. Shewen 4 for 1. Pte. Walker 1 for 2.

52nd Bn. NORTHUMBERLAND FUSILIERS (153) v. 2nd BRIGADE R.A.F. (37) on the former's ground at Sülz, on Friday. For the 52nd N.F., Capt. Byrne (23) and Pte. Taylor (34) opened the innings, and were not parted until the score reached 60. They were well backed up by Lt. Emery (42 not out), Major Thompson (16) and Sgt. Heap (13). The R.A.F. made 42, of which Austin was responsible for 16 (not out), having batted right through the innings. For the winners, L/Cpl. Wilsher took 5 wickets for 10 runs and Lt.-Col. Hartley, D.S.O. 5 wickets for 22. For the losers Jackson took 6 wickets for 65 runs.

161 R.F.A. BRIGADE (32) v. 41st M.G.C. (128) at Heumar on Wednesday. The only M.G.C. batsmen making any success were Col. Barry 30, Major Boumphrey (23), and Lieut. Andrews (22). The fielding of the opposing team was splendid, and the bowling very good, Lieut. Allen having 7 wickets for 48 runs. The R.F.A's first wickets fell on the second ball from the hands of Driver Gorrard (6 wickets for 18), who, it may be mentioned, has recently made a name for himself as a bowler, and of whom we hope to hear more as the season progresses. Major D. Boumphrey also bowled well, and had 4 wickets for 10 runs to his credit.

D/190 Bde. R.F.A. (51) v. 3rd NORTHERN BDE. (41) on the Battery's ground at Pulh. The game was chiefly noticeable for the effective bowling on each side. No one in the 3rd Northern Brigade, and only one in the Battery team, reached double figures. Driver Bingham bowled extremely well for the winners, taking six wickets for 17 runs, and Lieut. Baines 4 wickets. For the losers, Capt. Montgomery took 4 wickets, Lieut. Harding 3, and Lieut. Brown 2. The Brigade score was passed with three wickets in hand, but the remaining wickets fell quickly, and the total Battery score reached 51.

52nd NORTHUMBERLAND FUSILIERS (86) v. 70th SQUADRON R.A.F. (50) on the latter's ground at Bickendorf on Wednesday. The Fusiliers batted first and wickets fell very quickly, 5 falling for 5 runs. Lieut. Col. Hartley and Sergt. Heap made an excellent stand, however, and succeeded in raising the score to 59 before the latter was bowled. A further stand was made by Lieut. Hargreaves, after which the tail fell quickly. To a total of 86, Lieut.-Col. Hartley contributed 39, Sergt. Heap 21, and Lieut. Hargreaves 19 (not out). For the R.A.F., Feakings scored 12. Col. Hartley, for the Fusiliers, took 4 wickets for 17 runs and L.Cpl. Wilsher took 4 for 23.

52nd MANCHESTERS (98) v. 207th SQUADRON R.A.F. (91) at Hangelar on Wednesday. The 52nd Manchesters batted first and their wickets fell very quickly to the efforts of Champ and Pughe, 8 wickets being down for 39. The last wicket, however, made a splendid stand, Thorpe playing exceedingly well for his 41, when he was accidently hit on the chin by a rising ball and stepped on his wicket. Lieut. Alexander compiled a useful 16 (not out). The home side where dismissed for 91 (Champ 24, Kaye 22). Thorpe took 5 wickets for 52, and Reeves 2 for 20. Each side only batted 10 men.

269 A.E. Coy. (41) v. 73rd ARMY BDE. (29) at Euskirchen on Thursday. For the A.E. Coy. Pte. Lord going in first, carried his bat for 30 runs. Pte. Wilson took 7 wickets for 18 runs, and Pte. Radford 3 for 10. For the 73rd Army Bde. Gunner Hardwick carried his bat through the innings for 10 runs. Lockwood took 6 wickets for 16 runs.

LANCS DIV. M.T. COY. (82) v. 303 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A. (59). For the former, Lieut. Deighton batted well for 21; Lieut. Almond 11, and Cpl. Smith 10. Lieut. Almond took 7 wickets for 14 runs.

4th ROYAL SUSSEX (150 for 9 declared) v. 5th RLY. TELEGR.-COY. at Hennef on Friday. Thanks to fine cricket by 2nd Lieut. Kerley and Pte. Crick—31 and 48 respectively—the Royal Sussex declared at 150 for 9. Ptes. Smith and Creasey also hit successfully. The 5th Rly. Teleg. with a fading light, were dismissed for 70. Bryant bowling well took 4 for 10. C.S.M. Constable was exceptionally smart "Keeping" for the Sussex.

Withington found that Nussey could scull much faster than himself, but whether the Old Etonian can beat Pte. Hadfield (New Zealand) is quite another proposition.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Amateur Actors.

The fact that, up to date, seventeen officers have taken part in the performances given by the Rhine Army Dramatic Company, is not necessarily an indication that the organisation is exclusively for officer members. This is far from actual fact. One other rank had an important part in a recent play and others are likely to appear in future productions. In the meantime, however, the appearance of so large a proportion of officers in the castes is explained by the fact that other ranks are "backward in coming forward." Lieut. S. E. Percy is always glad to see anyone, who even thinks he can act, at the Amusements Office, Cologne.

Forthcoming Engagements.

As briefly announced yesterday, among the prospective visitors to Cologne is The Tolmar concert party. This happy little band of entertainers keeps well clear of the familiar groove, and music and refinement are the keynotes of their performances. The Misses Tolmar are two thoroughly accomplished artistes who play a remarkably large number of musical instruments in addition to singing, dancing and acting. The party also includes Pte Frost, professionally known as Charles Armand, who was the principal bass in Moody Manners and Castellano's Italian opera companies.

The Lights that failed.

Lena Ashwell's Concert Party delighted all and sundry at Sulz, the other evening when they performed at the Gymnasium before a large audience. The artistes included Miss Anita Powell (soprano), Miss Alice A. E. Coppin (contralto), Miss Dorothy F. Horne (violinist), Miss Paul Desborough (soubrette), Miss Grace Iville (accompanist) and Mr. Hubert Hayden (entertainer). Unfortunately the lights failed to function when there was still quarter of an hour to go and the merry proceedings had to be wound up rather hurriedly in consequence. Anyway, in the words of one of the officers present "the show was remarkably good and worth going a long way to see." After the show, the ladies were the guests of the 52nd Bn. N. F. Officers' Mess where a jolly evening was spent.

Inter-changing.

A few days ago there appeared in this journal, an epistle suggesting the interchange of concert parties with the idea of providing more varied entertainment for the soldier inhabitants of the small towns and villages. The suggestion has been anticipated by Capt. Haygarth, Army Amusement Officer, who has already completed a scheme providing adequate visits by various entertainers to all units. Briefly, the idea is that every Division in the Rhine Army will be asked to organise the best concert party possible. For three weeks each party will perform in the area of its own formation and then go on tour in the Army area, extending over eleven weeks. The scheme, which will come in to operation on the 14th July, should do much to brighten the evenings of those troops stationed in benighted villages, miles from anywhere.

Leave Club Concert.

A very enjoyable concert was given at the Leave Club on Friday by the Lena Ashwell Concert Party. The large hall was filled by an enthusiastic audience and each performer had to give encores.

Miss Majory Verel played the slow movement from the Mendelssohn Concerto and as encores an arrangement of Scotch airs, Pierne's Serenade, and a Beethoven Minuet. Miss Adelaide Rind gave the Jewel Song from "Faust" as her principal solo and as encores some charming old English Folk Songs and "Comin thro' the Rye."

Miss Winifred Clark sang some delightful contralto songs, "Mate o' Mine" with violin obligato, and "Come to the Fair," being especially appreciated.

Miss Peggy Skelton's songs at the piano kept the audience delighted. Her songs "Men", "In a Fish Sauce Shop" "Hullo! Too Too," and "Woolla-walloo", in which the audience joined, made quite a hit.

Miss Kate Coates accompanied with great skill and is to be congratulated on the success of her excellent concert party, which provided one of the best entertainments ever held at the Leave Club.

Future Events.

Another full programme is announced for next week at the British Empire Leave Club. At 5 p.m. to-day the Rev. Gower Rees will conduct one of his happy talks in the writing room and this will be followed by a concert by the band of the 17th Lancers at 6.30. For Monday an impromptu concert and practice dances are announced to commence at 5 and 6.30 p.m. respectively, while two concerts and a dancing class will occupy Tuesday evening. On Wednesday, the band of the 6th Dragoon Guards will play at a dance in the theatre commencing at 6.30 p.m.

In few Words.

"The Duke of Killiecrankie" will be given at the Deutsches Theatre on Monday next and during the remainder of the week.

Troops at Duren complain of a scarcity of entertainment.

At a meeting at Newmarked Rooms on Thursday the committee of Tattersall's decided that with reference to bets made on the Milton Apprentice Plate at Doncaster on May 30 last the backers of Grey Cloak are entitled to receive and the backers of Periscope to pay.

Opinions of the Moment.

MAKES THE WORLD GO ROUND.

Charles Garvice, whose novels make so wide a popular appeal that their sale easily beats all records, says: A great deal of amusement was caused lately by the repetition of the word "love" in the letter of a young woman read in court. The amusement was misplaced. There is no more beautiful word in the English language, and I have a suspicion that nowadays it is used not too often, but too infrequently. After all, love is the most important thing in the world. An extravagant statement? Consider it, and you will admit that I am right.

MAKING A SHOW OF WEALTH.

W. B. Maxwell, the novelist, a writer who is gifted with great powers of observation, says: Why do we still act as if we are ashamed of being poor? So much of the old snobbishness is dead, and yet this queer weakness lingers. Only once a year does one really master it, and like a man, expose the bare facts and demand any relief that they render desirable—that is, when making out one's return for the income tax people. Very rich men are never ashamed of bargaining. I have been astounded by hearing them do it. We make it too ridiculously easy for the profiteers, who, of course, see through us and well know our weakness. If we could band together and once overcome the absurd weakness to appear rich, I believe that we should be able to knock the impudence out of them and soon bring down the cost of living.

DEFENDERS OF BRITAIN.

Admiral Sir David Beatty has been speaking of the prowess of Britain's fisherfolk. He says: The fishermen of Britain in peace were the defenders of Britain during the late war. Those fishermen proved to be a magnificent addition to the naval personnel. Without them it would not have been possible for the Navy to achieve that rapid expansion which was necessary to deal with the outrageous submarine campaign of the enemy and the equally outrageous mining policy. They fished for mines instead of fish, and kept the paths of the sea clear for the ships under my command. In honouring them you honour one of the most splendid and loyal bodies of men, whose endeavours have been, and always will be, to live up to the dictum of Nelson, which can be expressed in three simple words, "Do your duty."

THE TEACHING CRAZE.

George Sampson, the literary critic, says: There seems to be an epidemic of instructiveness raging in the modern world. Everybody appears resolved to teach somebody something. There is no escaping the instructor. If you turn to the newspapers, that column with the seductive title is merely an advertisement urging you to become an admiral or a general or both, that sensational headline merely introduces you to another advertisement promising to make you bulbous with biceps, and that pleasing picture is still another advertisement imploring you to become an artist.

WOMAN IN INDUSTRY.

Lady Rhondda, herself a keen and capable business women and the head of more than one commercial enterprise, says: We are told by certain of our legislators that there are processes in industry that they cannot bear to think of women performing. Shall we find when we look into the matter that the processes which cause them this emotion are the well-paid processes? Are women to be forced back into the sweated trades? Or is the bigger, broader view to prevail, and are they to be allowed their fair chance in the industrial and commercial world? Only the future can tell.

PERILS OF VICTORY.

Dr. J. H. Jowett, the famous scholar and divine, says: There is a universal recognition that the pre-war world is practically centuries away, and we can no more get back to it than we can go back to ancient feudalism. What are the disquieting features in the situation? There is a certain spirit of independence which is asserting itself in an almost fierce aggressiveness. It reveals itself in lack of reverence and common courtesy. There is a wide movement towards secularity, which manifests itself in a heedless disregard of venerable sanctities. A further disquieting factor is that in the popular visions and programmes of a reconstructed England a moral and spiritual re-creation is given a subordinate position or is disregarded altogether. In addition to all these ominous things, there is the drink traffic; and there is a most evident increase of drinking among women. All these are among the perils of our victorious day.

THE NEW TEMPLE OF LIFE.

Christ the only Foundation.

(BY A CORRESPONDENT.)

Many great truths be hidden for want of expression, and human beings were never more in need of the help and guidance of great truths adequately expressed, than they are at present.

We are on the threshold of a new epoch in the history of man and everything in the future depends upon the wisdom, and foresight, of those who are now laying the foundations.

Humanity has passed through the labour and travail of a new birth — and this newborn thing which we call the New Age must be "trained in the way it should go".

There are rivals system by which it can be educated, but there is a danger that old prejudices, old antipathies, old jealousies, may cure right judgment in the choice.

These are days of grave responsibilities which every individual man must recognise for the sake of posterity as well as for the present generation.

"A Time like this demands high thoughts, great minds, and ready hands,
Men whom the lust of office will not kill,
Men whom the spoils of office will not buy,
Men who have opinions, and a will,
Men who have honour, men who will not lie."

John Oxenham was inspired when he wrote his foreword to his little book of verse "All Clear", and we may be forgiven, if we repeat his message here.

"Four years of the most hideous warfare the world has ever known — or, we may now hope, is ever likely to know — have razed the Old House of Life to the ground.

The world is still sore cumbered with the ruins, but surely and slowly they are being cleared away and cast on the scrap-heap. Crowns and kingdoms have fallen to the dust.

Those who took the sword, and forced a reluctant world to do the same have fallen by the sword, and for the most part they are powerless for further active ill. For which we are devoutly thankful.

But after the clearance must come the rebuilding, and unless that is done on righteous lines all this horror will have been futile the losses we have suffered both by war and pestilence, will be as nothing compared with the thrown-away future the loss of that which might and ought to be.

The old order can never be renewed. We are grateful, for it was full of evil.

The New Temple of Life must be built on surer foundations, and in all ways builded better. The only foundation is Christ. The only builder is God, through his servants. Anything less is worldloss that may never be retrieved.

Man's refusal of God's proferred way 1900 years ago, was the sorest rebuff He ever received, and the greatest blow. Yet His great offer has never been withdrawn. It still holds good.

Until the world turns from its own ways to His and from the depths of its soul desires Christ back into its life, all its strivings are in vain, blind and futile beatings of the wind and ploughings of the sand.

That is the simple fundamental truth and fact which there is no gainsaying or shirking. We are face to face with it and it means world-life or world-death.

"What are you doing about it?"

KEYNOTE OF R.34's TRIUMPH.

BRITISH AIRSHIP'S SUPERB RECORD.
TRAVELS 3,523 MILES WITH 15 GALLONS TO SPARE.

"WE ARE STICKING IT."

WORLD'S RECORD.

R. 34's TOUCH AND GO FINISH TO ATLANTIC CROSSING.

An Air Ministry communique says that the R. 34 safely landed at Mineola, Long Island, at 2 p.m. on Saturday. She has thus accomplished a voyage of over 3,100 nautical miles to the United States — the longest flight ever made by any aircraft — in one hundred and eight hours twelve minutes. She completed the flight under her own power. The destroyers which the American Navy despatched to her assistance as a precautionary measure, in view of the airship's petrol being nearly exhausted, were not utilized. Early this (Saturday) morning a message was sent out from the airship stating that she would make a temporary landing at Montaux Point in order to take aboard more petrol, but it is understood that the British officials at Montaux communicated their opinion to Major Scott, commander of the R. 34, that it would be better if possible for the airship to continue its journey without making a halt. The commander acted on the suggestion and happily found that he had just enough petrol to complete the journey.

CALL FOR HELP.

After a remarkable voyage across the Atlantic, which included detours to avoid bad weather patches and the traversing of a thick fog bank, the R. 34 was compelled to call for assistance on Friday afternoon when she was still some five hundred miles short of New York. At the time of the call Major Scott, the commander, was merely anxious about his petrol supply. His messages gave no indication of mechanical trouble. Towards the end of the journey strong head winds were encountered which probably compelled the expenditure of greater power.

On receipt of the call for help two destroyers were immediately sent from Machasy Bay main. The airship was informed accordingly and she acknowledged the signal. Great trouble was experienced in locating the exact position of the airship owing to the difficulty of communicating with Bar Harbour.

"WE ARE STICKING IT."

At four o'clock on Saturday morning the naval authorities picked up a message from the airship which gave the exact position and said:

"Flying 1,500 feet. Come and meet us. Making for Boston. Very short petrol."

At 5.10 a.m. a further message was received which ran:

"Now approaching Marchas Vineyard. We are sticking it. Think we will be O.K. This position is 150 miles from Long Island."

Then followed a further message timed 5.3.

"Will land at Montauk and take on petrol. This is about 80 miles from Long Island."

ROYAL CONGRATULATIONS.

As soon as the news of the airship's arrival at its destination was received in London, H.M. the King sent the following telegram to the officer commanding. "Heartiest congratulations to yourself and crew on your splendid achievement and best wishes for a safe return. Your flight marks the beginning of a new era in which the English speaking peoples, already drawn together in war, will be even more closely united in peace."

Other congratulatory messages were sent by Mr. Winston Churchill, Secretary of State for War and General Sykes, of the Air Council and Chief of Air Staff.

When the R. 34 was at a height of 1000 feet, just prior to landing, Major Pritchard leapt from one of the gondolas with a parachute and landed safely in the centre of the field exclaiming "Golly, but I'm glad to get ashore. I feel fine but a trifle stiff."

Major Scott said briefly:

"We took longer than we expected, but there was never any doubt at any time but we would get here. We are very proud to have connected Britain and America, and to have returned the call of Commander Read."

Cheers from thousands of throats greeted the arrival of the airship, which descended very gracefully. Two hundred bluejackets and soldiers assisted the crew in mooring the giant dirigible and making all fast. Simultaneously a military band which was stationed in the reviewing stand, played the British National Anthem, all standing to attention.

The American Press and leading aeronauts acclaim the arrival of the R. 34 as the harbinger of a fleet of passenger carrying airships which, within the next five years, will negotiate the Atlantic passage with the regularity of the steamship services.

LIVING IN THE KEEL.

General Maitland, the official British observer on the airship, has written the log history of the trip, and as the result of the voyage much other invaluable data has been collected.

"Life in the keel of the large airship" he says, "is by no means unpleasant. There is very little noise and vibration, except directly over the engines, also a total absence of wind, and, except at the early hours of dawn, greater warmth than in the surrounding atmosphere. Getting into one's hammock is rather an acrobatic feat, especially if the hammock is slung high, but this becomes easy with practice.

"Preventing oneself from falling out is the thing one must be careful about. In a service airship like the R 34 there is only a thin outer cover of fabric on the underside of the keel on each side of the walking way, and the luckless individual who tips out of his hammock would in all probability break right through this and soon find himself in the Atlantic.

"It is surprising the amount of exercise one can get on board an aiship of this size. The keel is about 600 feet long, and one is constantly running about from one end to the other. There are also the steps in the vertical ladder to the top of the ship for those who feel energetic or have any duty up there. By the time it comes to one's turn to go to bed one generally finds that one is very sleepy, and the warmth of the sleeping-bag and the hum of the engines soon bring sleep."

N.C.4 COMMANDER'S VIEWS.

Commander Read, who took the N.C. 4 across the Atlantic, was among those who greeted the officers of the R 34.

He made the following statement:

"Since the N. C. 4 crossed the Atlantic there have been two other successful attempts. The most important of these three flights was that of R 34. A delay of a day or two meant nothing to her, but to us it would have been fatal.

"The rigid airship has a great future, and it is my deepest hope that British and Americans will push the development of aircraft to the utmost. If we in America do not, we hope that the British will, both for the sake of the art itself, and also to provide a buffer between us and our next enemy, in the same way as during the late war the British Navy stood between us and Germany."

General Maitland said it was intended that the R 34 should start for home at the earliest possible moment, but that she might be unable to leave before 2 a.m. on Tuesday.

In his log he describes the daily routine in addition to recording the events and incidents of the voyage.

HOHENZOLLERNS.

KAISER'S YOUNGER SONS APPEAL TO KING GEORGE.

According to a Berlin message received on Saturday, the ex-Kaiser's younger sons have addressed a telegram to King George, offering to surrender themselves in their father's place, should he be extradited in order to save him from the ignominy of a public trial.

The telegram was couched in the following terms:— "Fulfilling my natural duty as son and officer I put myself with my four younger brothers at the disposal of your Majesty in the place of my royal father in the event of an extradition in order to spare him the sacrifice of a dishonourable step.

In the names of the Princes Adalbert, August Wilhelm, Oskar, Joachim of Prussia.

(Signed) Eitel Friedrich.

The Crown-Prince does not show such filial solicitude, being greatly concerned on his own account. According to a Dutch message he declares that he will never fall alive into the hands of the Allies. Speaking to a Dutch functionary he said "The Allies can only have my dead body. I will myself decide on my life or death."

TRIBUNAL UNRESTRICTED.

The tribunal which will try the Kaiser, "The Daily Chronicle" declares, will be absolutely free to inflict on him any penalty which they think fit, even death. There is no truth in the statement so widely circulated that the consent of the representatives of the United States was only obtained to the trial of Wilhelm the Second on the condition that a death sentence was not to be passed.

The demand for the surrender of the Kaiser has been made to the Dutch government jointly by all the Powers of the Entente. The attitude of the Dutch government is understood to be that while protesting as a sovereign power against what is felt in Holland to be a breach of the right of asylum, it does not feel itself in a position to resist the demand of the Powers. There seems to be no doubt that the Imperial criminal will be handed over to the British authorities, Holland making clear her position in the matter.

At Amsterdam it is now regarded as certain that the question of the extradition of the ex-Kaiser will be decided by a court of justice at Utrecht. A prominent Dutch lawyer declared yesterday that the laws of the country do not provide for an extradition warrant, except in the case of certain crimes, with none of which the ex-Kaiser can be charged.

ITALIAN PROFITEERS.

PILLAGERS FORCE REDUCTION OF PRICES.

The pillaging of food shops at Florence continued on Saturday, with the result that many tradesmen resorted to selling their goods at pre-war prices. Soldiers have occupied the town.

Similar steps were taken at Palermo, where people started pillaging the shops in the main streets. Rome merchants have decided to reduce the price of all goods except luxuries by fifty per cent.

GERMAN RAILWAY STRIKE SPREADS.

The railway strike in Germany has now extended to that portion of the district of Mainz, which is not in the occupied zone of the Allies. Negotiations between the men's leaders and the Hesse Government failed to reach a satisfactory conclusion.

At Hamm, near Muenster, and at Essen fresh rioting has occurred and there has been a recrudescence of the disturbances at Munich.

BATTERED TO DEATH.

ATROCIOUS MURDER IN BROAD DAYLIGHT.

On Friday afternoon Mr. John Thomas Gregory, manager of the Collindale Wine Stores, Collindale-avenue, Hendon, was battered to death with a poker in a room adjoining his shop by an unknown man. People assembled outside heard the blows and saw blood wiped off the windows. Some of them saw a man rush for the backway and escape.

Some time after the murder a man covered with mud, with bloodstained clothes, was in the Burroughs, Hendon (about 1½ mile from the house where the tragedy occurred) inquiring the way to the tube station. It was noticed that his clothing was torn, and it is significant that in some barbed wire at the back of the wine stores pieces of clothing have been found. That is one of the few clues that the police have.

Mr. Gregory, who was between fifty and sixty years of age, had been manager of the premises for about two years, and was last seen alive about three o'clock on Friday afternoon, when the premises had been closed in accordance with the licensing regulations. The sound of a struggle and the breaking of glass were heard by passers-by, and as an entrance was made at the front of the premises a man, described as about twenty-five to thirty years of age, was seen to leave by the back door.

In a room behind the shop, Mr. Gregory was found lying at full length across the fireplace with his head battered almost beyond recognition. On every hand there were signs of a determined struggle. There were pools of blood all over the floor, blood splashes on the walls, the window, and the ceiling, while a pair of tongs, broken in the struggle, a heavy poker, bent nearly double, and a broken wine bottle were lying on the floor. The presence of two wine glasses on the table suggests that the murderer must have been known to Mr. Gregory, and been drinking with him on friendly terms before the crime was committed.

The motive for the murder is uncertain. There was a considerable amount of money in the house, all of which was left untouched, but as the murderer was disturbed this does not prove that Mr. Gregory's assailant was not actuated by a desire to rob him. The wife of the former manager lives in the house, but was not at home on the day of the tragedy.

The police description of the missing man states that he is 25 to 30 years of age, height 5ft. 8in. to 5ft. 10in., of medium build, dressed in a blue suit, light trilby hat, and black shoes. A glimpse of him was obtained by a woman as he appeared at the window, caught hold of the curtains, and drew them close, at the same time rubbing off blood marks on the pane. He was later seen by a young man who lodged in the next house—at the time unaware of the crime—to get over the fence from the garden at the rear of the wine shop and disappear into a passage.

The police theory is that he may be hiding near the scene of the crime, as he could not have proceeded far without attracting attention. It was stated last evening that an important clue had been found which it was hoped would lead to an early arrest.

The inquest, which is to be opened on Tuesday, is not expected to shed much light on the mystery.

MORE CANADIANS FINED.

At Bow-street Police Court on Saturday, Norman Harlingshead, Harry McKay, and Vincent Griffin, Canadian soldiers, were each fined 20s. for being drunk and riotous. Griffin was also ordered to pay £4 for assaulting the police.

On Friday night a policeman spoke to the prisoners and a number of other Canadian soldiers, who were drunk and fighting among themselves in Leicester-square. They refused to go away, and on McKay being arrested an attempt was made to rescue him from custody. Griffin struck Police-constable Miles on the head with a stick, and also punched another constable in the stomach. To protect himself, Miles had to strike Griffin on the head with his truncheon.

MOB-LAW.

ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO STORM A POLICE STATION.

Two soldiers and two sailors appeared in the dock at Edinburgh police court on Saturday, and were remanded for enquiries in connection with a disturbance at Leith-street the previous night.

Following an arrest which had been made by a military policeman, a hostile crowd of civilians, soldiers and sailors made vigorous attempts at rescue. The city police took the prisoner into their custody, and in order to get him to the station, had to draw their batons and charge the crowd several times.

The mob thereupon armed themselves with stones and bottles, and proceeded to besiege the police station. They were finally dispersed by baton charges after the police had been reinforced from other parts of the city. Five members of the police were injured, two of them seriously.

After the affray, three hundredweight of broken bottles and stones were swept up in the vicinity of the station.

HANDLEY PAGE CRASHES.

The British Handley Page machine, which was proceeding to New York having abandoned the Atlantic flight, landed in the streets of Parrsborough (Nova Scotia) at 5.30 this morning.

She was forced to descend owing to an oil tube bursting. Her crew are injured. Her undercarriage is badly damaged.

She is now standing on end with the pilot house smashed and the right wing slightly damaged.

Herr Adolf Weissler, author of a history of jurisprudence, having left instructions that on his grave, "One who did not wish to survive Germany's dishonour" should be inscribed, has committed suicide.

PEACE.

CHURCHES COMBINE IN NATIONAL THANKSGIVING.

Sunday was by Royal Proclamation set apart for peace thanksgiving. A united service for all branches of the Protestant Church was held in the Church of England Military Church, Schildergasse, in the morning. The Commander-in-Chief, Sir William Robertson, G.C.B., K.C.V.O., and the Military Governor, Sir Charles Fergusson, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., were present with many members of their staffs. The Right Hon. H. H. Asquith was also in attendance.

The service was conducted by the Assistant Chaplain General, the Rev. F. J. Anderson, C.M.G. The Assistant Principal Chaplain, the Rev. F. W. Stewart, C.B.E., preached a sermon on a text taken from Jeremiah: "Ye that have escaped the sword, go ye, stand not still; remember the Lord from afar, and let Jerusalem come into your mind."

The Military church was filled to its utmost capacity and the service was appropriate to a great national occasion.

THE KING AT ST PAUL'S.

His Majesty King George V., Queen Mary and other members of the Royal family were present on Sunday morning at the National Thanksgiving for the restoration of peace held at St Paul's Cathedral.

Long before the service was timed to commence the Cathedral was crowded with worshippers, and thousands of others were unable to gain admission. Before entering the Cathedral the King stood on the steps while the Archbishop of Canterbury conducted a short open air service. The massed bands of the Brigade of Guards, attired in their gorgeous peace-time uniforms were present and played the "Old Hundredth" which was fervently taken up by the many thousands gathered around the Cathedral.

After the special prayers had been offered the procession was reformed and entered the Cathedral, where the service was most impressive. The nave was occupied by soldiers and sailors who had served overseas, together with detachments of the various women's corps.

The sermon was preached by the Archbishop, who, in striking phrases, dwelt on the vicissitudes of the war through which they had gone, and said that though the pathway of peace might be rugged we could go forward in thankfulness and hope. The service lasted for one hour, and at the close the National Anthem was sung and a great fanfare of trumpets sounded.

On emerging from the Cathedral the Royal party waited on the steps while the Guards' Band again played the National Anthem. The crowd sang heartily the two new verses which were written with the idea of widening the scope of the words.

HUGE OPEN AIR SERVICE.

There was an impressive scene in Trafalgar Square on Sunday afternoon when representatives of all religious denominations combined in a special thanksgiving service for peace.

The Square was more than filled with worshippers. They overflowed the walls and terraces until the Square presented a veritable sea of faces. Addresses were given by the Bishop of London, Dr. Scott Lidgett, Canon Fleming and Mrs. Booth, wife of General Booth. Led by bands, the whole-hearted singing of the vast concourse of people was profoundly moving and impressive.

CAPTAIN FRYATT.

MILITARY HONOURS AS THE BODY LEAVES FOR ENGLAND.

The body of Captain Fryatt was on Saturday evening conveyed with all due honour to the station at Bruges for removal to England.

It had been dis-interred on Friday from the spot which the Belgians had marked with jealous care, and was at once identified by his brother William Fryatt. A company of eight sergeants of the Liverpool Scottish bore the body to the Seat of the Provincial Government, where, draped in the Red Ensign and surrounded by British and Belgian national flags, it lay in state. On Saturday morning many thousands of the citizens of Bruges and other cities passed before the catafalque.

At 12.15 p.m. a procession was formed outside the Provincial Government building, and when the coffin was carried out into the square, the troops presented arms, a military band played the British National Anthem, and the bells tolled. At the head of the procession rode mounted gendarmes, followed by the banners of the town guilds, a military band, and a detachment of troops. Following the coffin, which was covered with a Union Jack, were Captain Fryatt's brother, the British Minister, General Lyons, the Belgian Minister, M. Ruzette, the Governor of the Province, the General Commanding the Garrison, Captain Hartnell, the Senior British Officer in Brussels, the representatives of the Great Eastern Railway Company, the Burgomaster and Aldermen, the Magistrates, the Provincial Council, the Officers of the Communal Council, and the Consular Body. All along the route, an enormous crowd watched the procession in respectful and sympathetic silence.

At the station the body was placed in a special train which left at 12.20 p.m. for Antwerp. Captain Fryatt's brother, the British Minister, General Lyons, and the representatives of the Great Eastern Railway Company travelled by the same train. As it left, the troops again presented arms and the band played the British National Anthem.

The body of Captain Fryatt was landed at Dover about four o'clock yesterday afternoon. It was taken across from Antwerp by the destroyer Orpheus, which had two other destroyers of the Dover patrol as an escort.

The coffin will be taken to London to-day. Flags flying from buildings on the route to be traversed by the funeral procession will be lowered to half-mast during the passing of the cortège.

HONOURING THEIR OWN.

LONDON'S GREAT WELCOME TO LONDON REGIMENTS.

On Saturday detachments of City and County of London troops marched past the King at Buckingham Palace and thence through the City. Large crowds welcomed these 15,000 or 20,000 London Territorial soldiers.

The troops dispersed at Tower-hill after an impressive march. The weather, dull at the beginning, improved later, gleams of sunshine fortunately coming instead of the downpour which the heavy clouds had portended.

Just before 11.30 the King came to the saluting-point. With him were the Queen, Queen Alexandra, the Prince of Wales, Prince Albert, Princess Mary, the Princess Royal, Princess Maud, Princess Helena Victoria and others. His Majesty wore field-marshal's uniform. Below the dais in the middle of a row of generals stood Mr. Winston Churchill.

The bands played "God Save the King," and the march immediately began. First marched 100 nurses who had rendered service in the war. Next, after an imposing display of laurelled colours, came the senior London regiment of Royal Fusiliers; then the Honourable Artillery Company, infantry and artillery; afterwards other regiments of Fusiliers, the Surreys, the London Scottish, the Rifle Brigade, the City of London Yeomanry (Rough Riders) on black chargers lent them by the Life Guards, the Engineers, and, at the rear, the Transport and Supply, the Field Ambulance, Brigade, and the Territorial Veterinary Corps.

To describe them all would be a long task; but so that the spectators should know who they were, each detachment carried a pennon, on which was inscribed the name and number.

It was a most imposing march throughout. Afterwards various luncheons and celebrations were held. To the Lord Mayor, the King sent the following telegram:

"It gave me great pleasure to review this morning, representative units of the City and County of London, and I congratulate all concerned on the excellent arrangements. I was much struck by the smart appearance of all ranks, and I was especially glad to see on parade so many demobilized men. London may well be proud of her citizens, who in every theatre of war have nobly upheld the honour of the Capital of the Empire."

LOYAL NORTH LANCS.

PRESENTATION OF COLOURS TO THE 12th BATTALION.

The consecration and presentation of the Union flag to the 12th Bn. The Loyal North Lancashire Regiment took place on the Hofgarten, Bonn on Saturday, 5th July.

After being inspected by Lieut. General Sir T.L.N. Morland, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., D.S.O., Commanding the Tenth Corps, the battalion formed hollow square, and the impressive consecration service was conducted by Rev. Hope. The commanding officer, Lieut.-Colonel R. T. Pelly, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., delivered a short address on the history of the battalion since its formation by Lord Derby in 1915.

The Colours were then presented by Lieut. General Sir T.L.N., Morland, who described the regiment as unique in that it was the only regiment in the Army bearing the title of "Loyal." It was a record of which they ought to be proud, and the honours emblazoned on the colours of the regular battalions testify to sacrifices made and to duty nobly done. In Canada the regiment earned the title of "Wolfe's Own" at the storming of Quebec, and in the Penisular war, the Crimea, the Indian mutiny and Afghanistan it had borne itself with great distinction.

Colours, he said, are a symbol of duty towards our King and country, and he felt sure that nothing would ever be done to bespoil or dishonour the flag itself or the memory of those whose sacrifice in the cause had been the greatest.

The battalion then re-formed and marched past with the colours flying.

At the luncheon which was held after the ceremony, the old regimental motto "Loyauté m'oblige" was adopted by the battalion.

CANADIAN WHEAT.

HARVEST PROSPECTS RUINED BY DROUGHT.

Canadian members of Parliament who represent Western districts are receiving from their constituents alarming reports about the condition of the crops in Alberta and Saskatchewan, the great wheat growing lands.

It is estimated that the yield will be reduced by fifty per cent. in consequence of prolonged drought. The outlook in Manitoba, however, is excellent.

EXTENSION OF SERVICE.

The Army Council have decided that any soldier who re-enlisted under Army Order 4 of 1919 for approximately two years, or under Army Order 124 or 125 of 1919 for two years and three months, may, if he so desires, be permitted to extend that period to March 31, 1922, or March 31, 1923, but that he will receive no additional furlough or bounty on that account.

PROPELLERS AS SOUVENIRS.

Anybody who wants an aeroplane propeller as a souvenir can buy one for a few shillings at the showrooms of the Aircraft Disposal Department, York House, Kingsway, W.C.2.

The propellers, which are quite new, are made of the finest walnut and mahogany, and can be used for a variety of purposes such as hat stands with a clock or barometer inserted in the boss, and can also be made into picture frames, jewel and clock cases. The four-bladed ones are being sold at 30s. and the two-bladed at 25s.

The German Government announces increased charges on letters and parcels and the doubling of telephone rates.

Beware of imitations.

The name which the PUMA-Razor has secured for itself in the world is only due to its merits as regards elegancy, neatness, fineness and durability. The continually increasing demand for PUMA-Razors has tempted other razor-manufacturing firms to insign their razors with similar marks with the intention of deceiving the purchaser.

Every Genuine PUMA-Razor bears on its hilt the

Trade PUMA Mark

He who shaves with PUMA knows that it is the best razor which can be manufactured.

When purchasing a razor ask for PUMA with the above trade mark inscribed on the hilt and take care of your own interest in refusing any kind of imitation.

WAR AND LEARNING.

At last the university is winning its rightful place in society. Never before has it bulked so largely in the vision of the populace, never before has its claims and ideals received so much sympathetic attention.

It is one of history's ironies that war which has so often been the foe of letters has now helped the cause of learning. One of the few blessings of five years' tragedy has been the discovery that a soldier's training is incomplete when it does not include the study of books.

It is auspicious that Sir Henry Wilson, Chief of the Imperial Staff, welcomed the conference on Imperial education which was held in England a short time ago—a conference arranged by a committee representing not the Board of Education, but the War Office.

This change in the military tradition of England gives point to Mr. Herbert Fisher's declaration that "the invention of education in the Army is an invention hardly second in importance to the invention of fire-arms." The outcome of the invention, should be that when a man has served his country as a soldier he should resume his civil occupation without handicap.

The new view and new ideal of education demand alteration of academic perspective and recasting of ancient institutions. In days when each army has its secondary school and its university it is impossible to give to such foundations their old place and meaning.

A university need not now be a temple of letters, hoary in fame and tradition, which consecrates the banks of an Isis or a Cam. It may adorn the Hansa Ring of Cologne, the training-fields of Aldershot, the busy streets of an industrial English town, or even the shell factory of Siegburg.

The sweep of democracy is wide, and no longer can even ancient homes of learning keep strait gates before an awakened populace. It is a sign of the times that Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch has already proposed drastic changes for his own university. He would have a Cambridge that welcomes the working-man.

RHINE SHOTS AT BISLEY.

The best wishes for the success of all men serving with the Army of the Rhine will go with those who have been selected to try their skill on the classic ranges at Bisley.

We understand that there are three hundred entries from the Army of the Rhine, and that the twenty that picked shots from these will compete for the coveted and greatest honour of all — the King's Prize.

Of one thing we may be sure. It will be a vastly different Bisley meeting from that of pre-war days. For the first time, women, as becomes the times in which we live, will pit their skill with the rifle against mere man, while representatives of the newest of our militant forces — the R.A.F. will make their debut as expert rifleshots.

Apart from these progressive features we look for a highly successful meeting. The importance of accurate and good shooting cannot be gainsaid It never had a higher value than at the present time and it is only by such meetings as that at Bisley, can we find inspiration and the desire to excel in this essentially national sport.

The doings of the officers and men of the Rhine Army will be closely followed and we wish them all the success they deserve.

THE "COMMON" SOLDIER.

The use by a very learned judge of the term "common soldier", has drawn forth many protests. To which we would like to add our own. With every good intention in the world we suggest that many public men either through lack of tact or inability to appreciate the working of the mind of others in different walks of life, make use of terms which should be relegated to the scrap heap.

The term "common soldier," if it ever had any meaning, has even less to-day, and its use from the Bench might well be avoided.

"First a chaplain, then a stockbroker's clerk and then a common soldier," Mr. Justice Horridge is reported to have said anent the varied career of an ex-Army chaplain, thus, unwittingly perhaps giving offence to many officers and men of the Army of the Rhine.

"Two officers of the old 29th Division", who doubtless recall with pride their days spent as a "common soldier" have taken up the cudgels on behalf of that much maligned individual, and remind Mr. Justice Horridge, that he, in common with the rest of the population of the Empire, was very thankful to accept the protection of the man who quitted the domestic hearth to go and fight.

There is to our minds very little in it, but with so many prepared to take such a term at its literal value we suggest that it be regarded as obsolete.

In no manner of means can the wearer of khaki be regarded as "common". Rather is he an individual whose standing should be a passport to the best which our social fabric has to offer.

A FRUIT WARNING.

Is there anyone in the British Rhine Army who has not noticed the great number of fruit trees in the orchards and along the sides of nearly all the roads in the country districts?

Is there anyone who has not thought to himself what a good time he will have when the fruit is ripe, or wondered how much longer it will be before the fruit is ready to be eaten?

"Prevention is better than cure," is an old maxim, but in recent years it has become more than ever true, and a word of warning about unripe fruit, may not be out of place at the present time.

Since the beginning of the war there has been a large increase in the amount of dysentery in the Rhine area, and although the war is now at an end, the germs of dysentery are still in their old haunts.

It is therefore urgent that every member of the British Rhine Army should be on his guard against dysentery, so after a consultation with a well-known medical officer, we are able to give a few tips which will help to ward off this unpleasant and dangerous disease.

Don't eat food unless your hands are clean. Don't eat fruit or salad unless it has been cooked or rinsed well in clean water. Don't eat unripe fruit or other indigestible food. Don't let flies, dust, etc., carry the germs on to your food. Don't lose any time in reporting sick to your medical officer, if you have a severe attack of colic with diarrhoea. Then, if you take these precautions, you should be able to ward of dysentery.

SALIENT SHADOWS.

Some said that she had a magnetic attraction for him. It may have been so. At any rate from the day he first saw her coming along the road he was filled with admiration, and did not in any way attempt to conceal it from us.

The result of their meeting had rather the opposite effect on him. Hitherto he had been silent, sometimes even morose. But now the world, more especially his world, seemed to hold illimitable possibilities. With her what could he not do!

At the breaking of dawn he was at her side and when the lines of daylight gave way to the darkness nothing less than a direct order would tempt him to depart from her.

Well, I remember his first words on making her acquaintance,. "Ain't she a beauty, lads!" But we didn't respond to his enthusiasm.

"Just look at her carriage." And of course being mere men, we did.

"Lads I would like to hear her speak."

Well that night she spoke not, but in the morning he had his wish. His admiration knew no bounds—not so us. But then we didn't come under her captivating charm. For us the very sight of her was enough.

We thought she was a haughty piece and looked upon her as a bore. And thus she remained in our estimation whilst some uneventful days passed, until we discovered there was another after her. Somehow this knowledge led us to be more respectful towards her, more tender in our remarks to him.

Alas, her life with us was to be a short one. And as at the grey dawn she came swiftly to us, so when the morning mists were rising she departed.

Only then did we realise what her absence would mean.

He was inconsolable. Yes, Jerry had found, her with an "Armour-piercer." Some high explosive.

She—she was a six inch howitzer. And he—why, he was the limber-gunner.

"WIRDYKNOWL."

OUR NEW CHARGERS.

Excitement and hilarity reigned supreme when the Quartermaster announced after dinner that four new chargers were to shortly arrive in the Battalion, for the respective use of the Padre, Education Officer, Signalling Officer and the Officer i/c Outposts.

The excitement was shared by the four would-be recipients of such handsome presents, for they had visions, and such mixed ones too, of highly-polished field boots and sparkling spurs, such as are only worn by the most immaculate R.T.O. or Divisional Gas Officer.

The hilarity was of course shared by the remaining members of our H.Q. Mess, who foresaw Little Tich, our signalling officer, precariously balanced on the back of some enormous beast, fearful lest it should suddenly call to mind the day when it ran first in the Lincoln Handicap.

The Padre was not so disquieted. He assured everybody that he was never so much at home as when steering the very fleetest of horses towards the winning post. He even promised to instruct the other less fortunate beings in the art of "pumbing" and on the following day despatched his batman to Cologne to purchase a pair of the most ornamental spurs procurable.

The Education Officer related his riding class experiences at Canterbury and appeared to satisfy the very sceptical transport officer that at least one of the four could be trusted to get there if occasion arose.

But inwardly the E.O. was not other confident; the whole picture of his riding class days came before him, and he could hear the unkind remarks of the cavalry sergeant still ringing in his ears, "Don't throttle him, Sir"; "When you goes over his head Sir, drop on your feet, Sir."

The Outpost merchant declared that he would never again mount such a ferocious beast, a, only six weeks ago he had nearly got a "Blighty," only his trusty charger was considerate and deposited his load in six feet of water.

Upon the C.O. insisting that he would have to attend riding classes, he thereupon repaired him to his room and compiled an application for immediate demobilization on compassionate grounds.

It has since come to light that he has an affair of the heart and intends to run no risks, as his turn for leave is not very far distant.

* * *

The beasts have arrived and there are two officers who pass very sleepless nights, planning how to escape from the merciless Transport Sergeant the following morning. The Padre has let fall a secret and has been requested to alter a certain page in his A.B. 439. The Outpost officer has gone to England via Rotterdam and has reported his safe arrival at the Abode of Love.

C.C.I.

TIPPERARY.

In those earlier days how the strains of "Tipperary" thrilled us. It was the marching song of the old "Contemptibles" and, for ever its lilt will bring to our minds those wonderful men who smote, and stayed the greatest war machine the world has ever seen.

Its tune may not be the acme of musical art, its words not the best of verse, but we confess to a feeling of regret that such a friend should be so neglected as it is in these more prosperous days.

Neglected! did we say? yea, but not forgotten. This fact was brought home to us by a remarkable scene to be seen in Marzellen Strasse. The actors were two German girls, with guitars, and the audience was made up of British soldiers from the neighbouring hostels.

As we approached within hearing distance, the memorable strains reached our ears. The sight that met our eyes, however, was astounding, for, of a verity, those two frauleins were playing and singing "Tipperary." We gasped, so did our men for an instant, and then there rolled out the familiar and well-loved chorus from scores of throats. In fact the whole street became "Tipperaryised."

What visions it conjured up! The old sixth Division route marches o'er the flats of Cambridgeshire, seasoned warriors soon to play their glorious part; the blue-coated New Army born before its clothes had been prepared; the earlier batches of cadets, thrilled with the patriotism that helped to save our country; and all bound together in a common brotherhood by the strains of a not otherwise remarkable song. And once more, through the glare of Victory, we saw the tears rolling down the cheeks of the mothers and wives and sweethearts as they listened to the marching song which might mean farewell.

Its not so far to Tipperary now. Many have travelled far beyond its borders, down to the end of the "Long, Long Trail," but we shall regret the day when "Tipperary," and all it connoted in those early days has become forgotten.

"OLD GUARD."

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX

Our Readers' Varied Views.

WANTS ROLLER SKATING.

Sir,—I notice that there is a rumour of a Skating ring being opened at Bonn.

Is there any hope of a similar amusement starting in Cologne? I should very much like to see one opened, and I am sure there must be quite a number of rinking enthusiasts here.

"H.J.W.W."

BRITISH v. GERMAN TRAMS.

Sir, — I agree with "T.H." that English electric trains are in no way inferior to the German.

Personally, I think the Cologne and Bonn trains are too heavily constructed, and therefore a greater amount of power is consumed than there should be.

If "J.H." would ponder a few minutes on the subject of the Manchester to Bury lines, he will probably remember that those trains are fed by a live rail, running alongside the track.

"C.S."

MARRYING GERMAN GIRLS.

Sir,—I notice with great satisfaction the letter from "Concordia Victrix" as to "Marriage with Germans." The point therein quoted, "A man shall not marry a German woman," must surely be every true Englishman's law.

It seems impossible to me that any man who has ever been in the firing line, could ever dream of it.

Besides what about the thousands of nice unmarried girls at home; are not they entitled to a little consideration?

AN ENGLISHMAN.

WHY "COMMON"?

Sir,—I notice that Mr. Justice Horridge referred to a man who had been a chaplain and appeared in a divorce suit, as a "common" soldier. I should very much like a definition of that opprobrious term which should never be used in these days.

Does Mr. Justice Horridge know, that it was men whom he stigmatises as "common" soldiers who saved him from the same fate as hundreds of French and Belgian civilians. Men who perished for England at Mons, the Marne, the Somme, Ypres, deserve a better name than this.

X.Y.Z.

STOPPING EXPRESS TRAINS.

Sir — With regard to T.O.C's letter as to express-trains between Bonn and Cologne stopping at Marienburg.

If he had used his brain, though it is quite evident he did not, he would have seen that the point at issue is, that the trains should stop at Rodenkirchen Station. By all means let them stop at Marienburg as well, if the conductor wishes to telephone. I humbly apologise to T.O.C. for not using my eyes!

I do not know anything about the technical working of the train system, and of course there may be some electrical impossibility, which prevents the trains stopping at Rodenkirchen Station. Is there?

"BOGEY."

THE WORKERS' SURROUNDINGS.

Sir,—I could not help thinking as I reviewed from a height the district around Ohligs, and realised that this district is the centre of Germany's great steel industry, how its cleanliness and beauty of surroundings contrast with the unwholesome atmosphere and miserable dwellings of many of our great industrial centres at home.

All around this district the mass of factories shows the extent of its industry. Yet, when strolling the neighbourhood many will comment on the beautiful gardens, well built houses and clean streets.

There, hardly a stone's throw from the factory gates, its workers find peace and pleasure amid pleasant lanes and beautiful woods. Gardens around a factory; except in one or two attempts at "garden cities" in England, rarely did our imagination ever conceive of such Utopian ideas.

"LOWLAND."

SERVICE MEN AT HENLEY.

Sir,—The action of the Henley Stewards in debarring the ex-service men's eight from competing at Henley must have disgusted all fair-minded Britishers.

To my mind, it is an act of snobbery almost without parallel, and a direct insult to these men, who although good enough to fight for their country, are not good enough to compete in a branch of its sport with men, who may be their social, but are certainly not their manly superiors.

A. G. VERE L/Cpl.

MORE ABOUT ENGLISH GIRLS.

Sir,—I would like to know if any of our readers can fathom why we are treated with cold disdain by many of our own girls when on leave at home.

They seem to prefer the company of men from the overseas Dominions. Why is it? Can it be a question of money?

I was quite in sympathy with the officer who wrote you a few days ago and said he was disgusted with the goings on of the girls at home.

To me it does not seem a wonder that so many of our Tommies prefer French, Belgian or — may I say it? — even German girls; after the way that the English girls have grown towards those who have been out here for their sakes and the homeland for four weary years?

"A MUSICIAN."

OUR NATIONAL ANTHEM.

Sir,—Soon after I read the letter about our National Anthem I heard the band of a battalion of Durhams marching through Cologne playing "Land of Hope and Glory."

It struck me at once that here we have ready to hand, a magnificent rousing air that would be ideal for the National Anthem of the British Empire.

It is almost as inspiring as the unsurpassed "Marseillaise" and infinitely superior to the Hanoverian dirge with antiquated and rather puerile words we have to put up with. It is a tune not calculated to arouse patriotic enthusiasm and I think should be "scrapped."

THOROUGHBRED.

ABSENCE.

Here, ever since you went abroad
If there be change, no change I see:
I only walk our wonted road,
The road is only walked by me.

Yes; I forgot; A change there is —
Was it of that you bade me tell?
I catch at times, at times I miss
The sight, the tone I know so well.

Only two months since you stood here?
Two shortest months? Then tell me why
Voices are harsher than they were
And tears are longer ere they dry.

AN ALL-ROUND ATHLETE.

481 SIEGE BATTERY'S SUCCESSFUL SPORTS AT RÖTTGEN.

An exceedingly interesting and successful sports meeting, organised by 481 Siege Battery, R.G.A., was concluded at Röttgen on Wednesday. There was a big attendance, keen contests were witnessed, and the band of the Lancashire Fusiliers from Bonn, kindly lent their presence, and discoursed sweet music.

From an athletic point of view the outstanding feature of the meeting was the brilliant performance of Gunner R. Burrows, a fine all-round man, who gained premier honours in no less than six events, besides participating in others. He was first in the 100 yards, high jump, long jump, putting the weight, and, with Gunner Meakin, was first in the three-legged race. He cleared 4 ft. 11 ins in the high jump, but was not really extended, for in an exhibition jump, at the end of a long day, and just after negotiating a stiff obstacle race, he made light of 5 ft. 3 ins. Nor is 19 ft. 9 ins., his long jump distance, the best of which he is capable.

Plenty of diversion was created by such events as the sack race, pillow fight, blind fold boxing, obstacle race etc., the latter especially making considerable demands upon the competitors. The general arrangements for the meeting were in the capable hands of B.S.M. Russell, and the following officials ably carried out their duties:—Umpires, Major C.V.S. Skrimshire, M.C.; Lt. Booth, A.S.C.; Timekeeper, Lieut. Hodge, Assistant timekeeper, Lt. Watts; judges, Lt. Mackenzie and Lt. Rathbone,; Starter, Capt. Bingham; stewards, S/Sergt. Shaw, Sergt. Jezard, Bmdr. Yardley, and Gunner Meakin.

EVENTS AND WINNERS.

Appended are the results:—

Marathon Race (about 13½ kilos.):—1. Bdr. Jones; 2. Gnr. Clegg; 3. Bdr. Robinson. Time 1 hour. 100 yards flat Race.—1. Gnr. Burrows; 2. Gnr. Smith; 3. Sig. Ormiston; 4. Gnr. Wilde. Time 11 1/5 secs. Putting the Weight:—1. Gnr. Burrows; Gnr. Power; 3. Sig. Ormiston; 4. Pte Julian (A.S.C.) Distance 30 ft. 2 ins. Long Jump:—1. Gnr. Burrows; 2. Gnr. Meakin; 3. Gnr. Cross Distance 19 ft. 9 ins. 60,000 MARKS.

SUCCESS OF VICTORY BOND SWEEP ASSURED.

The great Victory Bond Sweep, organised by the British Empire Leave Club, Cologne, is progressing satisfactorily. Although the scheme is but a couple of days old, roughly six thousand tickets had been sold up to yesterday, representing 60,000 marks. In case there should be any doubt on the point, the purchase of tickets is open to all ranks and there is no limit placed upon the number of shares that may be held by any one person.

Every officer, N.C.O. and man in the Rhine Army should make it his business to buy at least one ticket, in the first place to ensure the success of the Victory Loan, and incidentally to participate in the substantial prizes that will go to twentythree of the ticket holders.

No entries will be received after 9 p-m. on Friday next, so there is no time to waste. Applications for tickets should be made to Lieut. Col. J.A. Levey O.B.E., D.S.O. British Empire Club, Cologne.

"DOUGH BOYS" v. 113 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A.

A billiard match was played in the Y.M.C.A. at Kalk on Friday, when the "Dough Boys" upheld their reputation by defeating the R.G.A. by 74 points. The Bakers still invite friendly matches to be played at home or away.

PEACE CELEBRATIONS

2nd CORPS' SUCCESSFUL SPORTS AND CABARET ENTERTAINMENT.

2nd Corps H.Q. was "en fete" on Friday afternoon when peace celebrations took the form of sports (by kind permission of Lieutenant-General Sir C. W. Jacob, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., commanding 2nd Corps), followed by tea served in the Casino for men on 2nd Corps Headquarters and 2nd Corps Troops, the proceedings being wound up by a cabaret entertainment in the large central hall of the casino in the evening, which was organised by Lieut. M. Eldridge, 2nd Corps Amusements Officer. The whole proceedings passed off most successfully, and this in spite of a very short time for preparation, reflecting the greatest credit upon the hard working sub-committee of the 2nd Corps Games Club, which comprised:—Lt. Col. R. M. Powell, D.S.O., Capt. T. E. Murray, Lieut. T. R. Armstrong, C. S. M. Thane, A.G.S., and Cpl. H. Day, R.E. with, Lieut. H. T. S. King, R.E. (Hon. Sec.).

A SUMPTUOUS TEA.

Over 1,000 men sat down to a sumptuous tea at the Casino subsequently.

Prior to presenting the prizes the Corps Commander said the demobilization of a large army took a long time, and delay caused a great deal of discontent, but he was compelled to say that the men at the 2nd Corps waited their turn and "played the game" all through. He wanted to thank them for all they had done.

In conclusion he referred to the excellent work of the committee in organising the sports, so successfully held that afternoon.

A pleasing programme was contributed by:—Capt. Oxley, Lieut. M. Eldridge, Sgt. H. Story, Q.M.S. B. Welch-Smith (ventriloquist), Pte. Rothery and Pte. Benfield, with Cpl. A. Gray at the piano. Free drinks were served to the large audience as the concert was in progress.

TEAM-JAZZING.

51st ROYAL SUSSEX SPORTS AT NEUNKIRCHEN.

A successful sports meeting was held at Neunkirchen on Thursday, with some interesting innovations. One of these was team jazzing, in which six men per company, encased in sacks, were placed in a ring, two companies at a time, the object of each six being to compel the other six gently but firmly to leave the ring.

The orchestra throughout rendered graceful airs, conducted by R.S.M. Blake; and tea, served on the ground, put the finishing touch to an enjoyable afternoon.

MENACE TO SPORTS GROUNDS.

Sports grounds, public and private, are again endangered by the present constitution of the Land Settlement (Facilites) Bill, the report stage of which may be taken at an early date. The Bill as it at present stands, taken in conjunction with the proposed Government amendments, enables any local authority, with the consent of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, to appropriate and permanently alienate any cricket or recreation ground in the country.

QUEEN OF THE LAWN.

BY EUSTACE E. WHITE.

Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen is dark and twenty. She is a little under medium height and has a graceful, athletic figure. She affects very short skirts and sleeveless blouses, low in the neck, which show a brown skin of health and strength. She wears a bewitching little hat, sometimes yellow, crushed over her dark curls, and smiles on her opponent engagingly and often.

Quick-footed and supple, she can get to almost any ball and take it in any position.

To preserve her suppleness, she goes in for physical culture and all manner of games. During the season at Nice she swims a mile each day in the sea. She is a beautiful dancer. Her mascot is a little Belgian griffon which, owing to English law, must work its spell from distant Paris.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

A Backhaus Recital.

None will, nor even can, quarrel with music for being the link that brought together on one platform two artists, one British the other German. Happier still that one of the parties to the rapprochement was one of London's prime favourites, Wilhelm Backhaus. The storm of applause which greeted him at the Deutsches Theatre on Sunday evening was undeniable. It was as much a welcome as a tribute to his genius. Many of the audience had last heard him play, together with Kreisler, at the Albert Hall a few weeks before the war, and be it said that many are confidently hoping to hear him there again. Music is above politics and passions. England was represented by Alfred Barker who, before he donned khaki, (in which he appeared) created a furore in Russia. The neutral ground selected was a Grieg Sonata for Piano and Violin and it was played with all the delicacy, charm and perfect accord with which virtuosi alone can interpret great compositions.

"Lance-Jack" in the War.

We do not intend to criticise the playing of Backhaus, but merely record the fact that one can detect the searing effect of the war, especially in his playing of Beethoven. The wistful sadness in the Adagio movement of the "Moonlight" Sonata was undeniable. The remainder of his programme comprised four Schumann and Chopin excerpts and studies, Liszt's brilliant paraphrase of "Rigoletto" and Rachmaninoff's Prelude, while as an extra he gave Chopin's "Minuten" Valse. It will interest our home readers, for (as Mrs. Backhaus, speaking of art and artists, observed to us) "English audiences are so faithful," to know that Wilhelm Backhaus had to serve throughout the war as a cog in the war machine, his duties varying between office work in Berlin, transport duties in the second line and the ordinary life of an infantryman, his military efficiency winning for him the exalted rank of Lance-Corporal. The enterprise of the Powers that be, especially the Amusements Officer, was greatly appreciated by the audience.

Sergt. Herbert Short.

Sergt. Herbert Short, tenor and producer of the Pedlars concert party, is a native of Leeds, and is well known in Yorkshire. He has performed at over 700 concerts in France, Belgium, and Germany under some of the most trying conditions. He is now an established favourite at the Stadt Theatre, Bonn, and is much appreciated by the troops. He is shortly to be demobilized, and will be a great loss to "The Pedlars" when he goes. He has done much good work out here, and we all join in wishing him success in his future life.

A Division Dines.

I hear that the annual dinner of the 5th Division was held recently in London, on the anniversary of the Oppy Wood and Plaate Becque operations. There was a large attendance of old members of the division, between 150 and 200 being present, while nearly 100 more applied for tickets at the last moment. The toast of the 5th Division was proposed by Major-General Sir R. B. Stephens. After saying that any honours or advancements which had come to him personally were entirely due to the fighting spirit of the troops in the division, he spoke of the almost unvarying success which had attended the division in its many battles. He said that at this time it was impossible for them not to be thinking of the dead companions who had given up everything, and to whom the division and the country owed so much, and amongst them the memory of General Jones must ever stand out as one of the finest, and the most beloved of commanders. They had met together on the anniversary of two of the most marked successes which the division had achieved, nearly single-handed.

An Old Show Revived.

Hypnotism, as a form of entertainment in England has long since had its day. Familiar names of exponents of the art have one by one been removed from the popular variety programmes, so that now, unless he is occasionally included in the bill of a travelling booth show, he of the mystic signs is not seen in England. A correspondent stationed at Bruhl writes to say that he has several times, in that town, witnessed performances of one Herr Ignot who wields his hypnotic power over female subjects invited from the audience. After a few mysterious passes in front of her face, the "victim" is induced to perform the most absurd antics. She will sometimes awaken to find she is in the act of conducting an imaginary band, or she will eat raw potatoes in the belief that they are apples. Naturally, the troops form a fair percentage of the audience that witness these performances.

Echoes from Rhineland.

Asquithian Activity.

It is not often that the hum of a motor is heard in the outpost line. The other morning one was heard in the area occupied by a Hampshire battalion. The officer in charge of the post arrived in time to see a grey-haired old man, clad in a grey rainproof coat, step out of his car. His flowing grey locks and general build suggested our Prime Minister. But as he turned round no one could mistake the profile—it was Mr. Asquith. The one-time Pemier looked far older than anyone out here imagined but seemed delighted with everything round him and was apparently enjoying good health. He was introduced and men flocked round him from all directions. He asked how the sentries performed their duties, what kind of materials were smuggled and last but not least what the German beer was like. What seemed to interest him most was the barrier for the protection of the sentry. He was very interested to hear that this post had, the very night before, captured a smuggler. He then joined the group in a photograph which was taken by a member of the Corps Staff and finally departed radiating smiles and thanks for an interesting quarter of an hour.

When to Scrub a Floor.

The majority of German houses are scrubbed out last thing at night instead of in the early morning. This fact must have struck every observant Britisher, and the soundness of this practice is at once apparent. The floors are left the whole night long to dry, the maids work uninterrupted by people walking about, and last but not least, the owners of the house are spared "paddling" on wet floors and maid-dodging.

A Lovely Shave.

In a certain battalion of the Rhine Army the story is told of a rifleman who caused much amusement to his comrades while shaving for the morning inspection parade. He had previously been complaining that his razor was a failure and had bought a brand-new one of the "safety" variety, though, sad to relate, its birthplace was Solingen. After a liberal lathering he got to work on his chin, and, the operation of shaving over, he gazed admiringly at the result in the mirror. "Look, boys," he cried "What a ripping shave I've had this time; thi new razor is a treat!" His friends looked and agreed. Suddenly, while the satisfied rifleman was unscrewing the parts of the razor for cleaning, he exclaimed in amazement and horror: "Well, I'm—I never put a blade in the blinking thing!"

"Shine, Sir?"

The street boot polishing industry in Germany appears to be a concern of far greater importance than it is in either England or France. Enterprise in Coblenz is particularly emphasised in this respect, where, in the busy part of the town, one has rarely to proceed more than a couple of hundred yards before coming across a boot-black. Compared with the individuals who in London invite one to "Have a shine, Sir," the paraphernalia of his Teuton c counterpart is far more pretentious. An enterprising "shiner" has just opened up business opposite the railway station at Cologne with a brand-new stock in trade. This includes one of the familiar huge sunshades of alarming colours, and the customer climbs up to a comfortable chair six feet or so above ground level to rest his feet for the necessary operation upon a well upholstered foot rest.

Singing While At Work.

German women are admittedly hard workers. Everyone in Rhineland must have noticed how they almost invariably sing at work and the amount they accomplish may equally well be said to be the subject of comment.

Early morning singing, a spontaneous outburst as a result of happiness, can be heard in nearly every English home; but one must admit that the type of song selected for such an impromptu concert does not always call for much individuality in the rendering. But in this country good songs well sung are the rule. Where as in England the male is usually the songster at work, in Germany we find the female predominant in this respect. Often girls, usually house or kitchenmaids, can be heard singing as they work, and very creditable and harmonious are some of the duets one may hear.

Novel Souvenirs.

Many inventive brains in Germany are at present occupied in the concoction of original souvenirs. Iron Crosses, helmets and medal ribbons have already had their day, to say nothing of the elaborately decorated glass paper weights, in the composition of which mother-of-pearl plays an important part, and of which there must have been many a hundred sold. Among the latest novelties at present offered to the troops in the various large occupied towns as mementoes of the "watch on the Rhine" are cheap white metal rings each decorated with a miniature iron cross; bone cigarette tubes inlaid with rainbow-coloured portraits of German military "big-wigs," tiny replicas of the Prussian guard helmet and pocket-size reproductions of Cologne Cathedral. One of the best of these at present to be seen in the shops, however, is a neat little metal pencil case which resembles a German tank bullet and which is rendered ready for action by pressure on a small button.

Military Spirit in Boys.

Those who have found themselves billeted in a house overlooking a school yard, will have been struck by the military character of the boys' drill, under the instruction of the Schoolmaster. First, one can see them "Fall in", in two ranks, hear them "Number off", and on a command, make a movement similar to the "Form Fours". They then march off, bringing down the right foot with a "snap", which sounds well, and also helps in the keeping of the step. Outside school hours, these boys show this military keenness. A group of boys the other day, all came "to attention" on the approach of an officer, bringing their heels together, and saluting in real British fashion. To watch them at play, you will find that they are never so happy as when they are drilling, using broomsticks as rifles. Some of them bring off a perfect "slope", "order", and "present" and give the necessary words of command. To play "sentries" is the most popular game with the younger generation of the Rhineland.

Rhine Troops in Paris.

The troops who are to represent the British Army of the Rhine at the peace celebrations in Paris on the 14th will be representative of all branches of the service. With so many battalions claiming representatives it is obvious that the number from each will be very small. In the selection length of service will of course be taken into account, but whoever is fortunate enough to be selected to represent his fellows, he will not, of course, take it as a personal honour, but as one conferred upon his comrades as a whole. To take part in such a parade will, we feel sure, be an honour which will be eagerly sought after.

Large German Families.

Large families are the rule, particularly in the rural parts of Rhineland, a fact borne in upon any officer who has been entrusted with the billeting of a party of men. Hunger, however, holds the record pending further revelations. Here the billeting officer rapped sharply on the door and in response to his summons the "Hausfrau" appeared. His demand for billets for twenty men was received with hands upraised in supplication. There were already forty-one inmates, representatives of four families.

Water Power.

Anyone who goes out into the country of Rhineland must be impressed with the ingenuity of the natives in utilizing the mountain torrents and streams for their own purposes. By means of a series of locks and gates, they bring a wide meandering rivulet, into a narrow, rushing and poverful stream; with which they drive their machinery, generate their electricity, and provide water for domestic use. For the latter purpose, strong automatic pumps are used in addition to the locks. In wandering over the hills or through the woods, one can often come across concrete boxes, which, containing these pumps and the regular "gug-gug" one hears, clearly signifies their use.

Dangerous Tram Lines.

In a country where town-planning and road construction have reached such a high standard of efficiency, it is remarkable that the authorities in Cologne pay such little heed to the state of repair of the tram lines. There are, in places, curves in the lines of such acuteness as to cause frequent raising of eyebrows among British engineers who see them, and it is because of these curves that the outside metal of the rail becomes so badly worn. In many places, where bends are numerous, there is a gap of a couple of inches, and anything from an inch to two and half inches deep—just, in other words, about the size to grip the rear wheel of a Motor Bicycle as in a vice. It is also not unknown to come across a distance of an inch between the top of the metal and the road level; a very dangerous state of things for light cars and bicycles.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Major H. C. Westmorland D.S.O, 2/4 Hampshire Regt., Rhine Army.

ASKED AND ANSWERED.

When in Doubt Write to Us.

"W.P B.":—Men are drawing the bonus. It is quite open to you to make an allotment providing you have a credit.

"B.T." PORTSMOUTH:—The conveyance of German arms to England by soldiers going on leave is prohibited. Read the instructions attached to your leave warrant.

W. BRASSEY:—We take it you desire a course in motor lorry driving. Why not apply for a transfer to the M.T. section of the R.A.S.C.

G. NAYLOR:—Whether the ratification of Peace will be accompanied by free pardon for military offenders is a matter for H.M. The King. Wait and see.

"SAM":—The 1914 star was awarded to all who took part in the war from the beginning up to midnight Nov 22—23rd 1914.

A.R. STEWART:—In our opinion the bonus should not be made liable to income tax, but pay in the aggregate is liable, judging from a passbook examined quite recently.

"W.V.D.":—Quote the order and we will express an opinion.

GUNNER JOHN WATT.—We regard you as a Derby man. If a man enlisted voluntarily in April 1916, several months before attaining military age, we regard his as an independent enlistment, but on a par with a Derby man.

"TWO GROUSERS":—If you served in India then you were on foreign service.

PTE. A.P. CLIFFORD:—If you have read our recent issues you will see that the matter has been cleared up.

R.N.B. and A.E. RONEY:—We are obliged for your answers to the query put by F. Flinders.

"CONSCIOUS":—He is asking for trouble if he marries a German girl.

"MANCHESTER":—We agree that men who were rejected in 1914-15 are entitled to consideration.

"COMMISSIONAIRE":—The headquarters of the Corps of Commissionaires is at Exchange Court 419, Strand W.C. 0. The Commanding officer is Major F.E. Walter, M.V.C. Write to that address.

R.G.T.:—If you landed in France in March of this year why worry about chevrons? There is no special chevron for the Rhine Army.

"G.W.C.":—We realise the difficulty of your position and had the military police been aware of it they no doubt would have shared our view.

SAPPER HEPBURN:—The record crowd at a Cup final at Crystal Palace may be that of April 1913, when Aston Villa were tied with Sunderland, but as a record crowd it falls short of the figures published by us, in this column.

"R.E.":—The withdrawal from Anzac and Suvla Bay took place on December 19, 1915.

SIGNALLER A. HINGLEY:—The very fact that an entry was made by an officer in your pay book in February establishes your right to the bonus from that date. We presume you were marked as "retained." Had you not been and had not been demobilized on May 1st you automatically became entitled to half the rate from that date.

"FUSILIER," BONN:—You cannot expect more for your postal order than the equivalent in operation on the date of issue. The rate you mention was good exchange for May 1917.

"POMPY":—Re your enquiry as to a ribbon for the Army of Occupation, "The Buds" suggest if you feel cold that you should report to the nearest Q.M. Stores and ask for an extra blanket.

Other queries will be dealt with to-morrow. Demobilization questions cannot be replied to: we have not space.—Ed.

NARROW ESCAPE OF THE R. 34.

GALE SNAPS A MOORING ROPE AND TEARS THE GAS BAG. FIRST AERIAL STOWAWAY.

PLOT TO RESTORE THE KAISER.

R. 34's PERIL.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM BREAKING ADRIFT.

At Mincola aerodrome on Monday a violent wind unmoored the R. 34. A cross girder, to which one of the mooring ropes was attached, broke, ripping a hole twenty feet long in one of the gas ballonets. Three hundred guards and watchers saved the airship from being blown away by seizing the ropes hanging to the sides of the ship. Additional hawsers were attached and a force of four hundred men succeeded, with the aid of the mechanical moorings, in preventing a disaster. They had to be changed hourly on account of the enormous strain.

The repairs necessitated by the mishap were immediately put in hand. The damage is not sufficient to preclude an early start on the return flight and the War Department at Washington has been notified that the R. 34 will leave at eight o'clock on Wednesday morning for Washington.

TO FLY OVER LONDON.

It is officially announced that the R. 34 will pass over London on its return journey if the weather is good. The homeward route will be different from the outward cruise. From New York the airship will fly due East. Passing to the North of the Azores she will first touch England probably over Cornwall.

According to her set programme the airship was due to fly yesterday from Long Island over New York and Washington and back. Then she is to replenish her tanks and start for East Fortune where she is due late on Friday night or early on Saturday. A mail bag will be dropped by parachute over London containing letters and films of her arrival at Long Island.

A STOWAWAY ABOARD.

On the outward voyage of the great dirigible, when she was over Ireland, a stowaway was found on board. His name is Ballantine, an air mechanic at East Fortune, who, disappointed at not being included in the crew, hid himself aboard. He was made to work his passage and when he returns he will be dealt with by the naval authorities.

PEACE CONFERENCE.

The attention of the Peace Conference at Paris is at present directed more particularly to two urgent questions. The first has reference to Turkish affairs, it being generally agreed that a serious situation arises out of the violation of earlier decisions of the conference by the continuation of the Turkish offensive in Asia Minor.

The second question has reference to the first sitting at Versailles of the Allied Commission on reparations, in which the German delegates will take part. It would appear that the question of the occupation of the left bank of the Rhine may be raised.

The French view is that no discussion can be admitted regarding the occupation. It constitutes a guarantee which cannot be modified as it is already insufficient.

BRITISH GOVERNOR FOR RIGA.

The Lettish Press Agency says that the Allied Mission has appointed Colonel Tallents, a British officer, as provisional Governor of Riga pending the arrival of Ulmanis, the Premier.

Major Dawley, an American officer, has been appointed military commandant of the town, where order is being maintained by Lettish troops.

NAPOLEONIC GENERAL DISINTERRED.

The bones of the French General Hoche, who died in 1797 were to-day pompously removed from the fortress of Franz, near Coblenz, to Weissenturm, and placed in the interior of the monument to the general.

An entire regiment gave the military salute. British and American troops were also represented. A large number of French officers, including General Mangin and General Goureau, travelled by boat from Mayence.

Honours were also rendered at the tomb of General Marseau, who is buried at Coblenz.

CHINESE DELEGATES ORDERED TO SIGN THE TREATY.

The Chinese delegation to the Peace Conference has been ordered by telegram from Pekin to sign the Peace Treaty. This will be followed by China's immediate admission to the League of Nations.

VOLUNTEERS FOR INDIA.

Mr. Churchill states that special arrangements have been made to send volunteer troops to India at once, in spite of the hot weather, to relieve the battalions serving there, but whether the battalions to be relieved could be brought home immediately, must depend on the military situation there. The first troops to be brought back would be those from Mesopotamia.

General Mangin is about to transfer his Headquarters from Mayence to Königstein, where he will occupy the villa of Baroness Rothschild.

EXTRADITION.

NO FORMAL ARRANGEMENTS WITH HOLLAND.

In the House of Commons, yesterday, Sir Henry Dalziel asked whether any communication had yet taken place between the Allies and the Dutch Government regarding the extradition of the ex-Kaiser. Mr. Bonar Law, in reply, said that no formal representation had yet been made, but the necessary steps were being taken in the matter.

Sir Henry Dalziel: Have any unofficial communications passed?

Mr. Bonar Law: I would rather not say.

Colonel Murray: May I ask whether anyone particularly wishes the ex-Kaiser to be brought over here? (Cheers)

ON THE WAITING LIST.

According to the Düsseldorfer Zeitung the list of 167 persons whose extradition is demanded includes the following: Field Marshals Hindenburg, Ludendorff and Falkenhayn; Generals von Einem, Heringen, von Kluck, Mackensen, Beseler, Liman von Sanders, Falkenhausen, von Heinrich; Tirpitz, Capelle, Hipper, Scheer, Mücke, Dohna, Betamann-Hollweg, von Jagow, Zimmermann, Helfferich, Nérnst (who introduced poison gas warfare), and fifty-three U-boat commanders.

HOHENZOLLERN DYNASTY.

CONSPIRACY TO RESTORE EX-KAISER TO THE THRONE.

It has been discovered that an active organisation has been formed in Germany comprising the leaders of the reactionary conservatives and the royalists with the object of setting the ex-Kaiser again on the Throne. The "Leipziger Volkszeitung," among other papers, asserts that German Ministry at the Hague is the intermediary between the Royalists and Amerongen castle.

In connection with the signing of peace special prayers for restoration of the German Empire were offered on Sunday in some churches in Germany and in many of these cases the pastors added prayers for the ex-Kaiser.

MARTIAL LAW FOR STRIKERS.

The transport strike in Germany continues to spread. The Government announces that if the men fail to return to work by Monday next martial law will be proclaimed. At Berlin the authorities seem disposed to take drastic measures to break the strike. The railway companies, however, declare that an early resumption of work is improbable.

Much pillaging is reported and heavy food losses have been sustained, owing to the deterioration of truck loads of perishable foodstuffs.

ANARCHIST PLOT IN ROME.

The Italian police have discovered the existence in Rome of an anarchist plot to take possession by force of the markets and principal points. Police raided a shop where the leaders of the conspiracy were holding a meeting and placed them under arrest.

In spite of this setback, a number of other conspirators endeavoured to persuade a battalion of Arditi to join them and bring bombs. The Arditi, however, opened fire on them. In all twenty-nine plotters were arrested.

BOMBS AT FIUME.

The Fiume correspondent of the "Giornale d'Italia" telegraphs that there has been more fighting between French and Italian soldiers. An Italian officer, two French soldiers and two civilians were injured by the explosions of two bombs thrown by an unknown person. Fortunately there were no fatalities. The mob attacked and completely wrecked a café frequented by French soldiers.

SUCCESSFUL ARCHANGEL RAID.

The officer commanding at Archangel, in a wire dated July 4th, reports that our position on the left bank of the Dvina has been slightly advanced to the South of Jakovlevskoe.

Early on the morning of July 3rd, the enemy attacked our position, but was repulsed with heavy loss. On the night of July 2/3 a party of Oxford and Bucks Light Infantry raided an enemy position on the Vaga, killing eight and capturing a machine gun.

AVIATORS SINK BOLSHEVIST SHIP.

A Helsingfors message states that the retreat of the Russian volunteers from East Kurelin continues towards the Finnish frontier.

British forces have sunk two Bolshevist ships on Lake Onega, one of them by aeroplane attack. The crew of one ship were taken prisoner but in the other vessel everyone perished.

Contrary to earlier statements it is now improbable that the complementary clauses of the Austrian treaty will be ready to hand over before the end of the week.

EX-OFFICERS.

DECIDE TO FORM A PROTECTION SOCIETY.

A meeting of ex-officers was held at Cannon-street hotel on Monday to consider what steps shall be taken to bring to the notice of the country the claim that something should be done to find suitable employment for those who have been unable to secure positions since leaving the army.

It was decided to form an association of ex-officers on lines similar to that of the Discharged Soldiers and Sailors Association, and a committee was appointed to formulate the arrangements.

In supporting the proposal that a deputation should wait upon the Premier and that a mass demonstration should be held in London, one of the speakers asked the meeting to express its loyalty to the King. He said that if any two men had saved the country from revolution during the war it was his Majesty the King and the Prince of Wales. He was sure both King and Prince had every sympathy with the plight of all ex-officers who are without employment and would receive them if it became necessary to ask for their support.

MARCH THROUGH PARIS.

RHINE ARMY CONTINGENT'S DEPARTURE.

The contingent of troops representing the Army of the Rhine who are to take part in the great triumphal march of the Allies through Paris on Monday, left Cologne late last night amid much bustle and enthusiasm. Eighty-three officers and 920 other ranks comprised the contingent, and 19 sets of colours were carried by officers.

There were three bands and three cavalry standards. Brig.-Gen. T. S. Lambert, C.B.C.M.G., who is commanding the party, inspected the troops at Riehl Barracks.

Every branch of the service was represented, and a smarter and better developed body of men than that presented by the parade prior to moving off, it would be difficult to equal.

On arrival at Paris, the contingent will be joined by detachments from France and England and on the appointed day, the spectacle of thousands of men marching twelve abreast through the principal thoroughfares of the gay French capital should be one to remember for many a year by those privileged to witness it.

SICK OF THE STRIKE.

LANCASHIRE COTTON WORKERS WISH TO RESUME.

The operatives employed at many mills in Manchester and the surrounding localities have announced their intention of returning to work, saying they are sick of the strike. Over 20,000 operatives are affected in Manchester, Salford, Pendleton, Eccles, Patricroft, Swinton, and Pendlebury districts.

Trade union strike pay, they declare, does not come up to the wages they have been earning.

Fifty thousand Bolton and district operatives should have started work yesterday after a week's holiday, but their holiday will have to be prolonged owing to the continuation of the strike. It was announced yesterday that, apart from results to cotton stoppage, there are now, roughly, eight thousand persons unemployed in Bolton, a decrease of 50 per cent. compared with six or eight weeks ago.

RAVAGED FRANCE.

REPLACEMENT OF PRISONERS' LABOUR.

Speaking at St. Quentin yesterday at the conclusion of a visit to the devastated areas, M. Clemenceau said it must not be thought that the Peace Treaty is a contract putting an end to all difficulties. No country can escape the law of work, although Germany will pay the whole bill for the reparation of the ruined areas—three thousand million pounds.

He also indicated that on Monday next the Allies will begin negotiating with Germany regarding the supply of materials and of labour to replace that of the prisoners when the latter are authorised to return to Germany.

It is stated that a committee will be appointed in every commune to determine what money advances shall be made to inhabitants to purchase indispensable furniture. These advances will be distributed without any formalities by officials to be appointed by the Prefects.

NEW ZEALAND PREMIER IN TRAIN ACCIDENT.

Returning to the Antipodes via Canada after the signature of the Peace terms, Mr. Massey, Premier of New Zealand was involved in a train accident. Having disembarked from the Mauretania, he was travelling from Halifax to Montreal when the train was derailed owing to the breakaway of a bogey truck. Fortunately nobody was seriously hurt.

VICKERS' WAR RECORD.

Yesterday Messrs. Vickers handed over to the Admiralty the light cruiser Calcutta, she being the sixty-seventh warship delivered from Vickers Yard at Barrow since the outbreak of the war. The list includes every type of vessel in the fighting Navy.

Other war work of this famous yard included nearly seventeen million shells, seventeen thousand field guns and many gun carriages.

Lord Rochdale, who was fined £5 and £10 10s costs, at Middleton, Lancs, for cruelty to his dog on the golf links, has given notice of appeal against the decision.

SLOUGH DEPOT.

COMMITTEE REPORT ON SCANDALOUS PUBLIC WASTE.

The report of the committee appointed to enquire into the administration of the Slough Motor Depot was issued yesterday. It strongly denounces the delay which occurred in developing the Slough depot as a repair works during the war.

The report states that thousands of vehicles were left to rot at Kempton Park and other places while waiting for the repair shop which never came into being. The committee are satisfied that the delays which occurred are mainly responsible for the lamentable waste of public money and for the failure to have the works available during the war.

The decision to continue the works after the signature of the armistice was taken without sufficient consideration of the altered conditions and without any trustworthy estimate of the financial side. There appears to be no good reason why the procedure in the War Office should not have been expedited.

At present it is obviously too late to turn back, says the committee, which recommends the payment of a general manager for the works and that he be given a free hand. At the end of two or three years the Government should again go into the question of the future of such depots as it is considered impossible to make a right decision until fuller knowledge of the requirements of the public services is available.

THEIR LAST SHOT.

CANADIANS HAVE FINISHED WITH ACTIVE SERVICE.

There has just arrived at the Canadian Camp at Ripon, en route for Canada, the last unit of Canadian troops actually to be engaged in fighting. This body comprises the 16th Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery, which for the last six months has been assisting General Ironside's force fighting against the Bolshevists in Northern Russia, and the only troops from any of the British Dominions to be serving in this expedition. They will sail for Canada in a very few days, and will carry with them the shell-case of the last shot to be fired on behalf of Canada in the great war.

This brigade was mobilized at Witley last autumn, its members all volunteering for this service, 75 per cent. of them having been wounded while previously serving with the Canadian Artillery in France, and about 10 per cent. of them having come over with the First Canadian Division in the autumn of 1914. The brigade arrived at Archangel on October 1, and within three days was engaged against the Bolshevists.

CASUALTIES AND HONOURS.

The brigade numbered twenty-two officers and 500 men, and their casualties during the whole period of their service were one officer and six other ranks killed, and twenty wounded.

Colonel Sharman has received the C.M.G. for his services, and Major Arnoldi has been awarded the bar to the D.S.O. Seven officers received the Military Cross, and nearly sixty decorations were given to members of other ranks.

OFFICERS' PENSIONS.

PENSIONS MINISTER AND SIR DOUGLAS HAIG.

Sir L. Worthington Evans, the Pensions Minister, has issued a statement dealing with Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig's evidence before the Select Committee on Pensions, in the course of which he says:—

"Sir Douglas Haig stated the case of a married second lieutenant in a sanatorium, that the officer was entitled to £175 a year minus 4s. 6d. a day, and that therefore he had only £93 left for his wife and family.

"The facts are that a second lieutenant is entitled to £210 a year, not £175 (the difference, £35, is the 20 per cent. bonus I announced in March last); moreover, his wife is entitled to a separation allowance of £50, so that instead of a balance of £93, there is now a balance of £178 a year.

"In special cases of necessity there is a maintenance allowance of £24 for each child, and if the children are over nine a special grant for education is available, up to £50 for each child.

"The officer also receives maintenance and treatment in a sanatorium costing the State over £234 per annum, for which he is charged 4s. 6d. a day, say, £82 a year. So that the total compensation payable to this officer costs the State £412 a year without counting the children's benefits."

RECORD IN SCOTTISH DIVORCE.

During the latter years of the war, divorce actions in Scottish courts increased very considerably, and there is no sign of diminution to-day. A record was established when thirty-three cases came before the courts during last week. About fifty cases have been heard, and with one or two exceptions these actions were all undefended, and each occupied but a few minutes. In many cases husbands who had been on service were the petitioners.

OFFICER'S TRAGIC END.

The body of an officer was recovered from Langston Harbour, Portsmouth, yesterday. On being removed to the mortuary his identification disc was found to be stamped: "Lieut. Naturin, R.F.A., Church of England." A revolver was also found. The body had evidently been in the water some days.

Some sailors discharged from the German Navy at Hamburg tried on Sunday to sink two mine-sweepers at Wilhelmshaven. The failed in their attempt, however, and have been placed under arrest.

COLONIALS AGAIN.

PRISONERS RELEASED TO PACIFY RIOTOUS MOB.

It looks as though it will soon be necessary for police stations to be sandbagged and loopholed.

An ugly incident which developed into an attack on a police station (the fourth similar outrage) occurred at Salisbury on Sunday night. A soldier had been arrested and taken to the station pending the arrival of a car to take him back to camp. One of his friends went inside and demanded his release, the crowd backing him up. When the military police arrived in a car, they tried to persuade the crowd to be reasonable, but a large number of soldiers, led by Colonials, would not allow the prisoners to be put in the vehicle, which suffered much damage at the hands of the rioters.

Australian soldiers took a prominent part in the disturbance and pickaxes were used to break into the station, the doors and windows of which were smashed. One constable was hit by a broken bottle.

The authorities, in order to avoid further trouble, released the prisoners and later the whole available force of "redcaps" from the Southern Command Headquarters came on the scene and cleared away the crowd.

FRAUD ON COX'S.

EX-OFFICIAL AND HIS BROTHER'S ACCOUNT.

"There is no doubt he suffers from religious mania and alcoholic poisoning," said counsel at Bow-street, on Saturday, when Arthur William Brazel, 32, traveller, of Hearson-street, Swansea, was sentenced to six months' in the second division for obtaining money by false pretences from Messrs. Cox and Co., the bankers.

It was stated that accused applied to the bankers in the name of his brother, Major Claud Hamilton Brazel, R.E., for money to be telegraphed to him, with the result that sums of £30, £40, and £50 were sent.

Next he asked for £100 to be wired to Dorchester. After Major Brazel's account had been debited with the previous amounts it was found to be overdrawn, and inquiries were made, resulting in prisoner's arrest.

Major Brazel had since written informing Messrs. Cox and Co. that his brother had held a responsible position at the Ministry of Labour and gained a very high reputation for his organising and administrative ability. But for three or four years he had been drinking heavily, and ultimately he returned to his father's house a moral and physical wreck, quite irresponsible concerning money and drink.

It was added that he corresponded with several persons on religious subjects. He had a wife and three children.

NO ARREST IN HENDON MURDER MYSTERY.

Although detectives are diligently investigating the Hendon wineshop murder they have not yet made any arrest. Important new evidence has been gathered, however, and yesterday the police were hoping that by the evening the enquiries they had in hand would lead to an early arrest.

It is believed that Mr. Gregory, who was so brutally done to death, succeeded in marking his assailant in the course of the struggle.

PEDLAR PALMER STABBED.

The story of how Pedlar Palmer, a former boxing champion, was stabbed on Saturday night was told at Thames Court yesterday when Harry Saunders, another old boxer, was charged with malicious wounding.

Palmer's daughter Rose said that while her father and mother were standing outside a public house in Bow Road the prisoner rushed out with a knife in his hand. A struggle took place and Palmer fell down. He was taken home and collapsed in the kitchen. It was then found that he had a wound in his thigh. He was taken to the hospital at Bromley by Bow, where he will be detained for at least a week. Saunders was remanded until Palmer is well enough to give evidence.

RECEIVING FROM OFFICERS.

Four months' imprisonment in the second division was passed at Middlesex Sessions on William John Twigg and Thomas Oswin, motor engineers, of Hampton, for receiving property stolen from Hurst Park by two R.A.F. officers who are now undergoing imprisonment for the thefts.

One of the officers was left in charge of Hurst Park to superintend the transfer of surplus stores to other depots, and he sold a quantity of Government property to Twigg and Oswin. The prisoners declared the officers told them that they had full authority to sell the property.

FINEST ARMY IN THE WORLD.

Addressing the Marlborough College Officers Training Corps yesterday, General Wilson, chief of the General Staff, said that although it was not his business to say there would be no more war, it was good for young fellows to know how to defend themselves, their country and their honour. We had passed through the bloodiest war the world had ever known and emerged from it with the finest army in the world.

EX-GERMAN COLONIES.

The Commission of Colonial Mandates held its first sitting in London on Monday, Lord Milner presiding. Mr. Henry Simon, Minister of Colonies, represented France and Senator Marconi, Italy. The two latter went from Boulogne to London by aeroplane.

Beware of imitations.

The name which the PUMA-Razor has secured for itself in the world is only due to its merits as regards elegancy, neatness, fineness and durability. The continually increasing demand for PUMA-Razors has tempted other razor-manufacturing firms to insign their razors with similar marks with the intention of deceiving the purchaser.

Every Genuine PUMA-Razor bears on its hilt the

Trade PUMA Mark

He who shaves with PUMA knows that it is the

When purchasing a razor ask for PUMA with the above trade mark inscribed on the hilt and take care of your own interest in refusing any kind of imitation.

THE NEW WEAPON.

We must not look for political and industrial peace at home for many a long day. It was clearly foreseen that with the close of fighting in the field, the scene of conflict would be transferred to the workshops, the market places and the council chambers of England.

And so it has happened. War has changed the whole perspective of the nation.

The strike has come to be regarded as the one effective offensive weapon. It has been used with substantial and almost consistent success during the years of war.

It is realised that huge combinations of interests can rapidly bring about desired industrial changes, that years of discussion never seem to produce. The organised workers, seeing such tangible results from the power of combination are bent on extending the principle so that it covers the political field.

They seem determined to take action with the powerful weapon of the strike to combat any political measure they are opposed to or to support any movement they favour.

Government by strike is undoubtedly the danger ahead and there will be a big fight over the principle in the very near future. It is only in its initial stages but it may be expected to develop speedily.

There is at present a "triple alliance" of three of the largest and most influential trades unions, pledged by a majority of votes to use the power of their numbers in the political arena. It is not unlikely that an attempt will soon be made by the movement to embrace all the great unions of labour throughout the country.

The first great fight, will of course, be over the nationalisation of the mines, but there are other issues of scarcely less importance mapped out for direct action.

The whole political atmosphere at home is charged with electricity. These new forces which are coming into play are transforming the whole political outlook.

Weapons are coming into use which hitherto have been limited in their action but may now alter our whole social fabric.

The situation is fraught with immense possibilities and many dangers. Its careful study is encumbent on all who have the future of Britain at heart.

THE SOLDIERS' FRIEND.

Not content with his great services in leading the forces of the Empire to victory, Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig is every day earning fresh gratitude from the men who served under him by his unswerving advocacy of their cause. We have already referred to his unselfish attitude and his great solicitude in regard to the pension of the ex-soldier.

Now, Sir Douglas Haig has come forward as the advocate of one all-powerful organisation for all ex-service men. To weld all existing organisations together and thus assist them on their return to civil life, is an object he has closely at heart, and it is of such vital national importance that he considers the efforts of the two or three organisations now working separately should be welded into one powerful whole.

Up to now these have not agreed to fusion, but it is to be hoped that they will without delay see the necessity for uniting.

There must be no rivalry or antagonism in such a work as the welfare of everyone who served in the great war.

Comradeship and mutual help are essential to success. We hope the great general's views will prevail. We know he will have the loyal support of the majority of service men, both in the army or out of it. With their backing, Sir Douglas Haig can do much as "the soldiers' friend".

"WE ARE STICKING IT."

A message that will become historic was sent by the crew of the British airship when there was some doubt, owing to petrol shortage, whether she would be able to reach her goal without a descent en route — "We are sticking it!"

"Sticking it" is a British characteristic which has pulled our country out of many a desperate fight, and will, we have no doubt, extricate us from many more in the days to come.

When not much more than a year ago everything looked as black as could be on the British front in France and Flanders, it was this quality of "sticking it" that eventually helped us to turn the tables on our adversary and sees us on the Rhine to-day.

As a nation we have the reputation of lacking foresight and organisation, and this is notoriously true, we fear. We attain our ends generally at enormous cost and by a singular lack of method not because of skilful, scientific planning but just perhaps because of our inherent lack of imagination we fail to realise the risks we run.

We compensate for all this, however, by our natural aptitude for "sticking it."

SOUVENIRS TO TAKE HOME.

Collecting souvenirs has been a most interesting pastime with most of us since we have been in the war. We have sent home or intend to take home something we value very highly. The intrinsic value of our keepsakes is not very much, but because of association we greatly treasure them.

In the mind of some, the question arises, when I go home, what can I get to take to the one I love?

No matter what we take home, unless we go with a consciousness of a task well done, we shall not enjoy what we take, knowing that we have not done our best on the job that was assigned us.

The remaining days may be tedious in some respects, but let us keep our records clean.

Very few men realize what a large part we are playing while making history as the Army of Occupation.

But the older we grow the more thankful we shall be that we were in the A of O, and that we were among those who moved up to the edge of the Neutral Zone and helped make Germany sign.

Hardships we have undergone will be a subject for boasting.

For the sake of our own comfort and self-respect, for the sake of our loved ones, for the sake of our Regiment, our Army and our country, let the last days of our service be days full of faithful work.

The best things we can take home are the clean bodies and pure minds of soldiers faithful to their trust.

We have adapted the above sound sense from a recent issue of the "9th Infantry Cootie" published in Coblenz by the A.E.F. and hope members of the British Rhine Army will take the advice to heart.

WITHIN THE LIMIT.

"Don't forget," I said, "We do this act by numbers. Five hundred words, and not a comma over, so reads the dictum from the Editor of the "Cologne Post." Two-fifty words each. So let's have the Blue-black in the middle, and no cheating! Your move."

The Ink Prodigal commenced: "It was in the year of our Lord 1918"— —

"Pass to me for necessary action, please" I interrupted peremptorily. "You're simply chucking words away; eight of the very best gone to the very west" I groaned rhythmically.

"My words, aren't they?" complained my collaborator—I can do as I like with my own, I suppose. Besides, I've still 242 left.

"No, my poor foolish word-waster. They're not yours: they're ours, each with a duty to perform, which is, to tell a story of surpassing interest, and to persuade the Editor that we are the goods. What the readers want is a good thrilling "hair raiser," and the Editor a good "circulation raiser", and if only I can persuade you to ink economy, between us, we can provide both these requirements. My move now. In this style — guaranteed to tell the longest story in the fewest words. Listen!

"Jones jumped out of bed. Fire! Fire!" —

"My turn again" interrupted the Ink Prodigal.

"What do you mean?" I remonstrated, "interrupting in that fashion. I give you a dramatic situation at the very start. Whilst you are hanging on by your ink-drops to the Year of your Lord 1918, I've got poor old Jones up at the window shouting "Fire! Fire! My story moves in 7 words — yours stands to attention over 8. Ink pot, again, please!"

"Tell me," the Ink Prodigal pleaded, "Was there one fire or two?"

"Why, one, of course, silly."

"Then why did you make Jones shout "Fire!" twice?"

I began to fear that my collaborator was going to prove useless. However, it was something that my lesson had apparently gone home. So, with a surly "Carry on, then" I subsided.

"The clock struck a quarter past eight—" he commenced.

"There you go again," I thundered, "why can't the clock strike eight—and save us three words, which we shall badly need before we're through. Besides a clock can't strike a quarter past eight. It can strike the quarters between every hour, but nothing to show the hour."

At this stage, the Ink Prodigal brought our collaboration to an end, without giving the notice usual between gentlemen in such partnerships. He did so in a particularly mean manner, overturning the ink (of which he had already imbibed far too freely) laughing as it trickled down my trousers, leaving them in a condition suggesting that I had recently emerged from a cook-house fatigue.

"Didn't waste any words that time. You've a fine situation for a story now. Make the best of it yourself—I've finished. Cheerio."

"Blackguard!" I answered: "I'll tell the whole story in "The Cologne Post" as a warning to others. And I'll do it in 499 words, too, you profligate.

But he was out of earshot.

OUR FUTURE CIVIL LIFE.

BY AN EX-SOLDIER.

One of the most urgent and important problems that must be faced at the present time is that of employment for the ex-soldier. This question of a future career in civil life is of equal concern for both officers and other ranks, and, if it is to be solved in a satisfactory manner, the whole British Empire must be prepared to devote itself to a close and careful study of facts.

It need hardly be stated that facts are frequently extremely unpleasant to acknowledge, but if the war has done any good whatsoever, it has at least succeeded in teaching us to look things squarely in the face.

Most of us, who have already been demobilized, have discovered that, no matter how brilliant our military career may have been, we are up against a proposition, fraught with difficulties and anxious moments.

We have experienced, some of us at any rate, that it is not easy to secure a billet in the world of civil competition; and it may have proved a hard awakening to the fact that we have still to strive in order to win our spurs.

Let those, therefore, who yet await the formal intimation in the Gazette that their military work has now come to a close, consider for a moment, how they may best equip themselves for the struggle that is to come, not upon the field of battle, but in the arena of commerce and civil employment in general.

It should, above all, be realised that, although a solder has completed a distinguished career, he must not assume that a plum is going to fall to him, without a struggle. The airing of a just grievance, that of unemployment, may be a natural outcome of bitter experience, but it must be carried out in such a fashion as not to prejudice the chance of him who airs it. Every man who has or has not a billet awaiting him on his return to England must learn to see both sides of the question.

The employer, who is taking back an employee, can rightly say that four years of war has not furthered one tittle, that employee's experience in his pre-war profession. He may go so far as to say that the ex-soldier has forgotten what he had already learned.

Again, the employer, when considering a new man who, when war broke out, was but a school boy, can stipulate that a year or more must elapse before his new employee is able to earn a salary commensurate with his army pay at the time of demobilization. All these and similar facts must be faced.

Then there is the undoubted prejudice in the eyes of business men, which exists where the army, as a profession, is concerned. This prejudice must be overcome, and this rests largely with the ex-soldier. The business man may be inclined to overlook the fact that a very large proportion of our army is composed of business men, and we, who are ex-soldiers, either with or without pre-war business experience, must be reasonable when we take up our stand to defend ourselves.

The employer on a large scale must assimilate the fact that a year or two spent in teaching a man his work at a possible loss from a financial viewpoint, is going to repay him in the long run.

There must be "give and take" on both sides in order that we, as members of a great empire, may avoid a menace which is seriously threatening the very foundations of human progress and civilisation.

It is up to the soldier to earn the esteem of his employer, and it is likewise up to the employer to place every facility in the way of the ex-soldier to accomplish this end.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

THE CROWDED-OUT SUBALTERN.

Sir,—No one holds in higher esteem the ladies who have come from England to help in the work of our Rhine Army. They have helped us greatly, for they have brought out to us a bit of home-life.

But it is becoming somewhat difficult for the ordinary person to see much of England's fair damsels.

The other night I tried hard to get my initials — quite ordinary initials — on the dance programmes of a few ladies, but I failed.

What is the ordinary fellow to do, Sir, when he is not a Brigadier, or a "redtab" but just a

SUBALTERN.

OUR NATIONAL ANTHEM.

Sir,—Your correspondent "Rhino" is mistaken. "God save the King" is an entirely British effort, though not a particularl happy one.

It is generally supposed to have been written by Henry Carey, and first performed in a tavern in Cornhill in 1740. Some historians, however, attribute it to John Bull. The tune was appropriated by the Germans years ago, and adapted to the words "Hail to thee in Thy crown of Victory."

A.F.Y.

A CALL FOR ART CLASSES.

Sir,—Before joining the Army I used to study art in my spare time. I have since had no opportunity to continue this work.

I am told that there is no art staff at the Rhine University, If this is so, it would help many like myself if something could be arranged in this direction. I am sure it would be popular as well as very useful.

Another class I have heard Lancashire men express a wish to join if there were one of technical instruction is the Cotton industry.

"QUEENS."

R.A.F. COMMISSIONS.

Sir,—I read that there are only a small number of permanent commissions for about twenty thousand temporary R.A.F. officers.

The Air Force authorities rightly insist on a high standard for all candidates, but are they not carrying their exclusiveness to an alarming degree?

We learn that only officers holding regular pre-war commissions in the Army or Navy, or who have been educated at recognised public schools, or who hold war decorations, are likely to be considered.

One can sympathise with them in a desire to weed out the twenty thousand, but what of the individual who is capable and qualified in every way except that he cannot claim a public school education. Again are war decorations a proof of ability or fitness in the case of every wearer.

"DEMOCRAT."

MORE TIME FOR STUDY.

Sir,—I beg to emphasise my opinion that the opportunities given to men who earnestly desire to take advantage of whatever the Rhine Army can offer in the shape of educational facilities beyond the mere elementary stage, are not sufficient at present.

What militates against the full success of any Army educational scheme so far is that at every turn, scholars are confronted by interruption to their studies caused by military duties, so that the daily hour or so devoted to "Education" loses its value and makes progress slow.

There are many of us who desire to catch up some of the ground we have lost during the past five years but with military duties constantly interfering, find it impossible to settle down to study properly.

"SCRIBBLER."

MILITARY OCCASIONS.

Sir,—What are "military occasions" within the meaning of King's Regulations and the Dress regulations laid down by the powers that be?

Many of us are faced with the prospect of demobilization, and are hard put to it to know when we may wear the old uniform without running the risk of fine.

There are many occasions in the life of the man when he should be allowed to wear the dress which he has worn with distinction in the interests of his countrymen.

Outstanding amongst these are the peace celebrations. Thousands have passed out of the service without a distinguishing mark, badge or medallion which would distinguish them from the most blatant conscientious objector.

Not every man is prepared to wear his service chevrons on the sleeves of his lounge suits. The wearing of a decoration on the lapel after the continental fashion is not officially countenanced, then why not permit the wearing of the uniform, incidentally making a public example of those individuals who may be tempted to masquerade in it.

"FORESTER."

DRAMA AND EDUCATION.

Sir,—Your paragraph headed "Drama and Education" has brought down on me the thunderbolt of some stern educationalists, who state that I can hardly claim on behalf of the British Rhine Army Dramatic Company the honour of combining Education with entertainments, since up to now I have produced none of the greatest dramatic master pieces of the world.

I do not consider that I need in any way be on my defence since those plays which have been produced can justly claim to be masterpieces of their particular kind and are certainly examples of the best dramatic literature of the modern British drama.

As soon as possible I hope to struggle with such giants as Shakespeare and Euripides, but I should like to point out that our choice of plays is greatly determined by the number of people, the local scenery and the available time that such works demand. Now that the Army of Occupation has a School of Art the help of this institution would be of the greatest value in the production of decorative as well as literary plays.

In the meanwhile I truly think that a company who in less than two months has offered to the troops in Cologne, plays by: Bernard Shaw, Macdonald Hastings, Oscar Wilde, Henry Davies, and Arnold Bennett is entitled to the honour bestowed on us in the column of to-day's "Cologne Post."

Julius Caesar will be produced as soon as possible.

S. E. PERCY,
Lieut., Asst. Amusements Officer.

MEETING AT NIGHT.

The gray sea and the long black land;
And the yellow half-moon large and low;
And the startled little waves that leap
In fiery ringlets from their sleep,
As I gain the cove with pushing prow,
And quench its speed i' the slushy sand.

Then a mile of warm sea-scented beach;
Three fields to cross till a farm appears;
A tap at the pane, the quick sharp scratch
And blue spurt of a lighted match,
And a voice less loud, thro' its joy and fears,
Than the two hearts beating each to each!

ROBERT BROWNING.

Norman Brookes Dethroned.

G. L. PATTERSON VICTORIOUS.

WORLD'S TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP WON IN BRILLIANT STYLE.

Mr. Gerald Patterson, Australia, Norman Brookes's youthful challenger, has won the title of the world's tennis champion.

He defeated the holder at Wimbledon on Monday in brilliant style, thus firmly establishing himself as one of the greatest players the game has produced.

DEADLY SERVICE.

At Wimbledon on Monday in the challenge round of the men's singles, Norman Brookes, the holder, was beaten by Patterson 6—3, 7—5, 6—2. Patterson, played a brilliant game, his service being particularly deadly, and the pace of his play had the champion in trouble all the time.

Brookes did not display nearly such good form as when he won the title in 1914 by defeating the late Anthony Wilding, while in the matter of age he was giving away close on ten years.

Doust, A.H.Gobert, M.J.G. Ritchie, and Lieut.-Col. A.R.F. Kingscote, M.C. In the process he only lost one set, to the veteran Ritchie. Like Brookes, Patterson is an Australian.

"THE ORDER OF THE BATH."

1st SIGNAL SQUADRON'S SUCCESSFUL SPORTS AT QUADRATH.

As was predicted, the 1st Signal Squadron sports meeting on Saturday last at Quadrath was a marked success. The sports field, decorated with the blue and white bunting, reminded one of the meetings at home before the war. The officials were as follows: — Judges: Major J. B. Wheeler, M.C.; Lieut. J. Crowley, M.C.; Capt. J. H. Hewes; Capt. J. N. Fox, M.C., R.E.; Lieut. J. N. Dart; Lieut. Batten. Starter:—Lieut. J. C. W. Jennings, D.C.M., R.E. M.C.: S.S.M. W. J. Lambourne.

By kind permission of Major P. H. Compton, M.C., the band of the "Carabiniers" under the conductorship of Bandmaster H. W. Simpson, played during the afternoon and rendered some excellent musical items. Tilting the bucket with the coloured wash caused plenty of amusement, and also wet shirts and "baths" for several of the competitors. Dvrs. Kennard and Little received the most of the water, Dvr. Kennard thoroughly "doing the dirty" on his comrade, and turning him into a "blue boy" from head to foot and very quickly too.

In the high jump, Pnr. K. Ross won, clearing 4 ft. 7ins. In settling for the second and third positions, Spr. C. Stuart cleared 4 ft 9 ins., and Spr. Babbage, 4 ft 8 ins, although they had previously failed below that, when giving Pnr. Ross the victory.

There is no limit to the numbers of tickets that can be taken. The whole of the prizes will be given in War Savings Certificates. By the number of applications that have been received for tickets, it is evident the sweepstake is going to be a gigantic success and early application to Lieut. E. S. Morgan, Mechanical Transport Depot is advised. Tickets can either be purchased singly — at 5 marks — or in books of 25. Books of tickets will be sent to anyone undertaking the sale, but cash and counterfoils must be returned by July 26th.

GALA DAY AT WESTHAUSEN.

"B" Coy., 5th (P.O.W.) Battalion, Devon Regt., had a "day out" on Friday. In the morning a "footer" match was arranged by Lieut. Gillmore, 5 Platoon v. 7 Platoon, which ended in a runaway victory for the latter by 5 goals to 2—Biggs (2), Ford and Thomas putting through for the victors, and Brookes and Brown for the losers. The most prominent player on the losers' side was Lieut. Brooks.

Following the football match, a company athletic sports meeting was held, and most of the prizes fell to No. 8 Platoon, who won 4 firsts, 3 seconds, 4 thirds, and one fourth. Following are the results:—

100 yards:— Ptes. Attril, Trerise and Ford. 220 yards:— Ptes. Attril, Sparkes, and Brown. Boot Race:— Ptes. Shrapnell, Young and Vicarage. Relay Race.— No. 7 Platoon and No. 8 Platoon. Sylvester, Brooks, and Edmunds.

Look out for another inter-sex match between some famous lady and professional golfers. I am not allowed to give names or place, (writes Eustace E. White) and cannot, if I would, give date. All I can say is, that the match, nothing more than prospective at present, is of the kind to make an irresistible appeal to the public.

THE BISLEY MEETING.

CRACK SHOTS FROM THE RHINE ARMY.

This year's Bisley meeting should prove to be even more interesting than ever. It is safe to predict that some hitherto unknown marksmen will come into prominence as a result of military training during the war. At least one competitor for the King's Cup in 1915 had not the remotest idea that he possessed the keenness of vision and the steadiness of nerve to place him in the front rank of rifle shots. Then he joined the Army, and his extraordinary prowess quite startled the musketry instructors.

As already announced, the Rhine Army will be fully represented this year. A large number of battalions have sent teams across the water, and among those who are to compete in the individual competitions, are:—

Capt. E. B. King, M.G.C.; Capt. A. M. McVay, M.G.C.; R.S.M. A.E. Sabine, R.E.; S.Q.M.S. G.H. Butler, 17th Lancers; Lieut. J. Russell, 4th Seaforths; Lieut. McD. Sturton, 4th Seaforths; C.S.M. Morren, IV Corps; 2nd Lieut. D. Bissett, 5th R.I. Regt.; 2nd Lieut. F. J. S. Rybot, R.G.A.; 5th R.I. Regt.; Lieut. E. J. James, 52nd Welsh; Lieut. K. Anderson, R.G.A.; Signaller G. May, R.G.A., Capt. H. N. Fryer, 4th Lancs Fus., Capt. D. H. Bond, R.A.S.C., and 2nd Lieut. E. D. Kimber, 6th London.

Captain Fryer is a well known Bisley shot, and much is expected of him in the various events for which he has entered.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

A WORD TO SECRETARIES.

Now that units have settled down to normal routine once more, "The Cologne Post" Cricket Cup Competition progresses again. Fixture lists for the season have been sent to all clubs and secretaries are now able to arrange to wipe off the arrears which accrued during the moves. Already quite an appreciable number of back matches have been played and this week's league tables will show a marked increase in games decided.

The keenness of the teams is very apparent and in the case of one club arrears were cleared off at the rate of four matches in four days.

The location difficulty has made itself felt again owing to some units not having moved back to their previous positions and secretaries are requested to let us know of their present whereabouts, so that our location list may be amended.

RIOT AT BERLIN "DERBY."

According to a telegram received from Berlin a riot occurred at Sunday's "Derby" at the "Grunewald" racecourse, Berlin, owing to some riders missing the steeplechase after the "Old Hamburg Hunting Race" had taken place. Some of the spectators rioted, possibly hoping to get back the money they had lost. But this being without success, some especially daring people made an attempt to assail the weighing-house with the result that the soldiers who were present to maintain order were obliged to fire a few shots into the open air, thus making the rioters take to flight.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Carpenter v. Tothill.

The third heat of the second-class American tournament at Thurston's resulted in an easy victory for Carpenter, who defeated Tothill by 1,583 points.

"Up Apple!"

Since the holding of the previous A.A. championships W. R. Applegarth, who used to raise the thrilling cries of "Up, Apple!; up, Apple!" in the sprint and furlong, has joined the professional ranks.

Wilde and the "Movies."

In the event of Wilde winning the contest with Moore at Olympia on Thursday, July 17, Mr. Charles B. Cochran will feature Jimmy in a film, a scenario for which is being prepared by a most famous novelist with a love of the ring.

Some "Sport."

The ungenerous fallacy about women not being good sportsmen ought to be finally buried, never to be disinterred. Mrs. Lambert Chambers at the most crucial point in the championship final insisted that a serve of the French girl was "good" after it had been given "fault.

Thames Race For Ladies.

No event in the history of swimming has aroused such keen interest as the river swim for ladies, which is being promoted by the Hammersmith Ladies' S.C., to take place Saturday afternoon over the A.S.A. Championship Course from Kew to Putney, a distance of 5 miles 60 yards.

Cyclists Memorial.

It is suggested that the memorial to cyclists who fell in the war should be erected on the village green at Meriden, which claims to be the centre of England.

Not at Home.

Dempsey went about unmarked on Saturday as the result of the previous day's fight, but Willard, who was badly battered, remained indoors and saw no visitors. It is reported his jaw has been broken.

Newcomer to the Turf.

Mr. G. Watkin Williams, an extensive purchaser of bloodstock at the sales last week, is a newcomer to the Turf, and hails from Cardiff, and is a well-known shipowner. One of his purchases is the Chester Cup winner, Tom Pepper.

A Royal Sturgeon.

A Royal sturgeon, an extremely rare fish, which was caught off Barra Head, has been sent by Mr. Hunter, fishmonger, of Oban, to the King in accordance with ancient custom. The last Royal sturgeon was caught off Stornoway about thirty years ago.

£100 Wrestling Match.

A wrestling match for £100 and the welterweight championship in the Lancashire style was decided at Wigan on Saturday, when Joe Daley (Wigan) beat Tom Rose (Bolton) in two straight falls. He won the first in 20 min., and the second in 13 min.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Wednesday, July 9, 1919.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

British Empire Leave Club.

The Pipers of the 11th Bn. Royal Scots will play in the garden at 5 p.m. on Thursday, July 10th and a whist drive will be held at 6.30 p.m. also in the garden, if fine.

On Friday, July 11th the Ladies Club orchestra will give a concert at 7 p.m. following a dancing class at 5 p.m. The concert will be held in the theatre and will include violin solos, songs, quartettes and two plays, "Between the Soup and the Savoury" and "Miss Honey's Treasure."

There will be another popular dance on Saturday, July 12th in the theatre at 6.30 p.m.

Another Leave Club Success.

A splendid concert was given on Sunday evening at the B.E.L.C. by the Band of the 17th Lancers (by kind permission of Lt. Col. T. P. Melville. D.S.O.) The Hall has never been so crowded. At the beginning of the concert there was only standing room, and the audience increased as the concert proceeded. Miss Hanbury Williams sang "O lovely night" and as an encore she gave "My Desert Flower". A selection by the Band from "H.M.S. Pinafore" followed and then two transcriptions of well known part songs, "Sweet and Low" and "When evening twilight". Pte. Albert Buckley played Violin Solos, accompanied by Pte. Shackleton, two Spanish Dances by Moskowski being the gems. The Band then played a "Hungarian Overtüre" by Kela Bell and a "Bohemian Suite" by Orde Hume. Pte. Alfred Moyse sang, "For ever and for ever" and for an encore "Vale". The programme concluded by the "Outpost" by Mackenzie and a Popular Fantasia, "The Dawn of Victory" by Pether.

A. Perfect Day.

By the kind permission and organization of Col. Kinnear, D.S.O., over 130 officers, N.C.O. s., and men of C/152 Bde. R.F.A. held a joyday in celebration of peace. After an appetising breakfast the men proceeded to Bonn and embarked for a trip on the Rhine to Coblenz. Light refreshments were provided on board and music was rendered by a well-known Siegburg orchestra. Returning to Siegburg at 7.30, the men proceeded "au grand salon," where after an eloquent speech by Major Fraser M.C. commanding C/152, the men sat down to a magnificent dinner, the officers and N.C.O.,s acting as waiters. Music was again provided by a German civilian orchestra for the whole of the evening. Great credit is due to Capt Ibbetson M.C. for the elaborate decorations and successful catering arrangements. Some very humorous items were rendered by Lts. Harris, Swallow, and Williams, and dancing was kept up from midnight to 2 a.m.

A Popular Comedian.

This little picture is an impression of "Erb", Fred Weedon or Sergt. Trim (whichever name you like) who, with "The Pedlars" is nightly provoking considerable laughter at Bonn. "Erb" has recently returned from leave after having undergone an operation and when he made his reappearance at the Stadt Theatre last week. As the Manager in that farcial absurdity "Would Be Actors" I thought him a positive scream. "The Pedlars" are to be congratulated upon having such an acquisition in their party.

Farewell to Popular C.S.M.

The Warrant Officers and Sergeants of the 1st Manchester Regt. will long remember the Peace holiday accorded to the troops on Thursday by reason of the jolly little gathering by which the occasion was marked. The event had a two-fold object. The signing of Peace was celebrated in right royal manner and, in addition, the opportunity was taken to wish future success to C.S.M. Birdwhistle, who is shortly to be demobilized. R.S.M. T. Moore presided over the gathering and referred in eulogistic terms to C.S.M Birdwistle's personal qualities. During the evening, excellent songs were rendered by Capt. and Adjutant Twigg, C.S.M. Ellis, C.Q.M.S. Clegg, C.S.M. Morgan, and a recitation by C.S.M. Birdwhistle. Sergts. Butler and Bore were the accompanists.

Rhine Trips and Excursions.

Vast improvements have been made in the organisation of the Rhine Trips. The available steamers have been re-organised, canteens are provided by the N.A.C.B. on each of them, and in the majority of cases an orchestra will add to the enjoyment of the cruises. Another innovation is the arrangement of excursion trains to all parts of Germany. There are sixteen distinct routes and accommodation on the trains is sufficient to provide for large parties "doing" the many places of interest included in the tours.

The New Bing Boys.

The "New Bing Boys," at the 25th General Hospital in Wiessdorff, on Thursday evening, completely captivated their audience. Uniquely attired in hospital blues, relieved with red sashes and head covers, the party followed up their opening chorus with "Indian Rag" by Pte. Taylor and then Pte. Grines rendered in his fine baritone voice "Will 'o the Wisp" Pte. Hunt made an ideal London "cabby" and Sergts. Nott and Carlisle kept the large audience in high spirits with their clever patter and songs "We are, yes, we are" written by the latter. Clever chorus work was quite a feature of Pte. Phiff's "Joan of Arc", and then shrieks of laughter marked the appearance of Donn, the sad comedian, while the conjurer, Gunner Smith, gave a baffling exhibition of "spoofism" assisted by Donn. The features of the second half were "On the Staff," done in good style by Pte. Robinson, and a pleasant, little interlude by Sergt. Carlisle and his harp. The entertainment concluded with a sketch "The Poisoned Milk", in which all the characters won much praise. Mention must be made of Pte. Bianchi and his orchestra, Capt. thet Rev. C. P. Thomas, Sergt. Astill, the producer, and 2nd Lieut. A. V. Priston, the stage manager.

High Jinks at Seiglar.

Full advantage was taken by "C" Coy, of the 32nd Battalion Machine Gun Corps of the holiday given to the troops on July 3rd, to celebrate the signing of Peace.

The celebrations commenced with an excellent dinner, a German orchestra providing music. The whole company then retired to the village hall, where the dancing enthusiasts quickly fell victims to the dreamy music of the sons of Germania.

The dancing was followed by an impromptu concert, arranged by Lieut. C. K. Moseley. Songs of all descriptions were rendered, and the programme wound up with a sketch "The Disorderly Room".

Dancing was again indulged in after the concert, and the company broke up about midnight.

Echoes from Rhineland.

War Savings Record.

What can be done in the matter of War Savings Certificates, when the matter is approached with enthusiasm is well illustrated in the case of the 12th R.I.R. On Thursday the men of the battalion were practically ignorant of the certificates. On Friday morning they were lectured on the subject and the advantages explained and at 22.00 hours on Friday 51,420 marks had been subscribed for their purchase. Surely a record, and one which reflects great credit upon officers and men.

Unfortunate and Untrue.

This is no criticism of the Army cinemas, which are the brightest halls in Cologne and show some really excellent, pictures. Sometimes, however, in displaying the title and ownership of the film put on the screen, the effect is apt to be peculiar. For example, quite recently an appreciative audience of Tommies waiting for the star picture were somewhat astonished when the following was flashed on the screen: "The Great Impostor; Expeditionary Force Canteen."

A Pictorial Record.

Mr. F. L. Wilson was an official cinematographer during the war and did excellent and untiring work, the result of which has been seen in many exhibitions of war pictures, at the front and in the hinterland for Kineto Limited, of London. This firm, it is understood, will give an opportunity to the troops of the occupied area, who have supplied the material and the army which has given the facilities for Mr. Wilson's work of seeing what they look like in the films. These will include pictures of the R.A.F., the Tanks, the artillery and the infantry, scenes on the banks, among the flotilla and in the waters of the Rhine, parades and sports. They will not only be of immense interest to the Army of Occupation of to-day, but will form an historic record which cannot be surpassed.

No "Housemaid's Knee."

"Housemaid's Knee", so prevalent in England is practically unknown in Germany for the very fact that while all cleaning is done in a kneeling position at home, the German hausfrau avoids the complaint and incidentally back-ache by the use of a broom handle and floor cloth. Another practice is to take a big floor cloth and thoroughly souse the stone floor and then having cinsed the cloth to pass it over the surface; a matter of a few moments, saving the hands and causing less fatigue. The gardener works on similar lines. He uses a shovel with a long handle thus doing away with that bending of the back which is so painful to the amateur gardener. The long shovel, by the way, is not a German idea, for it is in use in France and Belgium.

Fruit Sellers in Cologne.

The army of men, women, and children who stand about the streets in Cologne, with barrows and stalls, retailing fruit and flowers, seem to be ever increasing. We wonder how long they will be before they adopt that persistent and obstructive attitude which is so typical of the Brussels street seller. Probably never, unless the competition between them becomes much more keen. One, however, must give these people credit for being straightforward and honest in their dealings with the soldier. Whether it is from fear, or respect of him, we do not know but the fruit sold seems cheap and of good sound quality. Some of the fruit stalls at home would do well to copy their example and show what they intend to sell. Many of them are guilty of showing fine picked fruit on the stall and palming inferior quality stuff on to unwary purchasers.

Hardly English.

He was old, but not too old to acquire knowledge. Troops had been billeted in his house and he was proud of the smattering of English he had obtained thereby. No opportunity to exercise it passed unheeded. He wanted to tell his new visitors that it was a matter of indifference to him whether the German delegates signed the Peace Terms or not. He said so several times in German and he was understood perfectly. He was told so, but to his mind it was not sufficient. Here was too good an opportunity to lose. In a dramatic voice and with a sweeping movement of the hand he cried, "In English, san fairy ann!"

Egg and Beer.

A common drink in Germany and one which could be obtained at the rate of 15 pfg. per glass in any restaurant before the war was "egg and beer." The prevailing scarcity of eggs prohibits for the present any great indulgence in this somewhat queer mixture which, we are told, is in the same class as "stout and oysters." While on the subject of beer, we wonder how many endorse the opinion of a certain member of the R.A.S.C. who, after several unsuccessful attempts to obtain a meal in Cologne, volunteered to supply a party with food within five minutes. With his four friends he marched into the nearest restaurant and uttered two words — "Fünf Bier."

Reduction in Billeting Rates.

It would be difficult to reduce the rate nominally payable to householders for the privilege of housing officers and men, for so far as we can ascertain, no payment has been made by the German authorities, but a reduction is to be made and our official announcement may be expected shortly. In some cases local authorities have shouldered the responsibilities of the Imperial exchequer and have paid at the rate of three marks a day for one officer and one mark for a private with 75 Pfg. for a second man and 50 Pfg. for additional men. The rate for horses is 25 Pfg. a day. These payments are subject to a reduction of 30 per cent from May 15 to Sept. 30.

No Hedges in Rhineland.

A feature of the countryside which is very noticeable when comparing the Rhineland with "Blighty", is the absence of hedges or fences. One can go for miles and never see hedges or fences of any description, either along the roadway or as divisions of land or estates. It may be on account of all the land being used for the production of crops, with very little grazing ground, that fences are not used, but it is usual to have boundaries fenced off. With regard to the hedges, which are usually used for dividing land, these may be left out on economic grounds, as taking up much valuable land which can be more profitably utilised. When you consider that a farm of say 300 acres has something like eight miles of hedges, varying in width from six to ten feet, the farmer loses the use of land half a mile long and from forty to fifty yards wide, a considerable item.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Cpl. E. Fisher, D. of S. and T. G.H.Q. Rhine Army.

CAUSES OF THE GREAT WAR.—V.

SIR E. GREY PROPOSES MEDIATION.

In our last article we saw how Austria forced the pace and insisted upon the acceptance by Serbia of impossible terms within 48 hours.

The Kerchenfeld revelations published by the Bavarian Government of Kurt Eisner in November 1918, fully and finally confirm the guilty complicity of the Berlin Court. Count Lerchenfeld, Bavarian Minister at Berlin, wrote to his Chief, Count Hertling as follows:—"The step which the cabinet in Vienna has resolved to take in Belgrade viz:—the delivery of the note, will take place on 25th July. Action has been postponed until this juncture because of the desire to await M. Poincare's and M. Viviani's departure from St. Petersburg in order to make it difficult for the Entente to arrive at an understanding and to counteract. In Vienna, until then, a show of peaceful disposition is to be made, and the Minister of War and the Chief of the General Staff are to have furlough for some time."

After giving his Government some account of the general contents of the note, Count von Lerchenfeld went on to say that it was obvious that Serbia could not accept such conditions which were inconsistent with her dignity as an independent State. The consequence must therefore be war.

The general opinion in Berlin was that this was Austria's hour of fate. For this reason, in reply to enquiry from Vienna, the declaration was immediately made at the former capital, that any line of action which Austria might resolve upon, would be agreed to, even at the risk of war with Russia. Action should not be postponed so long that the Serbian Government should have time to offer satisfaction on its own account, under pressure from the Franco-Russian side.

Sir E. Grey now turned to the Austrian and German Ambassadors with proposals for mediation. The only chance he could see of improving the situation was that the four other great Powers—Germany, Italy, France and Great Britain—should bring influence to bear simultaneously at Vienna and St. Petersburg in favour of moderation.

It would be very desirable to get Austria not to precipitate military action; but this could only be done, if Germany would propose, and participate in, such advice to the Cabinet of Vienna. To this, Prince Lichnowsky replied that Austria would no doubt take military measures if Serbia refused to accept the ultimatum; but that as a piece of private advice he would suggest that Serbia should be told to send in a reply containing enough concessions to give Austria an excuse for not taking action at once.

This eminently wise and reasonable suggestion, which did not find favour with the Berlin Foreign Office only strengthens the conviction that the Prince, who, throughout acted the part of an honest diplomat who wished to avert war, was merely used as a cat's paw by the Military party at Berlin who were intent on war at all costs.

Serbia having practically yielded to all the Austrian demands, and being told that the reply was unsatisfactory, Baron Giesl and the Austrian Staff left the Legation. On July 25th war between Austria and Serbia was merely a matter of hours, unless Sir E. Grey succeeded in his plan for international mediation. In the next article we shall see how this plan was received by the Central Powers.

WITH A PREFACE BY MARÉCHAL FOCH.

". . . . . The bulk of the old Regular Army long ago made the last sacrifice. Those who survive will, we are convinced, feel nothing but pride in this simple and moving record of supreme phase in British military annals when the old order passed away for ever, and in passing saved the Empire. . . . Lord French writes tersely and clearly. . . . When he pauses in his narrative, it is either to give a little picture of one or other of his distinguished comrades and friends, or to explain the trend of his own thought at a particular phase in the campaign. The chief value of the book is, of course, the flood of light it throws on the first five months of the British campaign in France and Flanders. It teems with new information."—The Times.

RETURN JOURNEY OF THE R. 34.

SOUTHERLY COURSE TO BE TAKEN.

STOWAWAY PRIZEFIGHTER TELLS HIS OWN STORY.

GERMANY RATIFIES PEACE TREATY.

R. 34'S RETURN.

SOUTHERN ROUTE FOR THE HOMEWARD TRIP.

After their very brief stay in America, crowded with preparations for the return flight, anxiety for the safety of their charge and functions in which due honour was done both to the wonderful skill and doggedness of Major Scott and his crews and to the prestige of Great Britain, the band of adventurers have again taken the air in R. 34.

Its mooring place at Mineola, has been thronged by thousands of interested and curious people and, but for the stern necessities of work the personnel of the ship would have been overwhelmed with hospitality and laudatory speches.

Major Scott hopes to make the return journey on the Southern circle sweep via the Azores and with the usually favourable winds on this route expects to complete the trip in about seventy hours.

Some idea of the anxiety caused by the eppenditure of petrol, necessitated by the detours made to avoid storms, and the constant pressure of headwinds is revealed by the last few entries in the log.

GENERAL MAITLAND'S LOG.

The following extracts from the log kept by General Maitland reveal the tense anxiety which prevailed when the petrol began to run short.

July 5, 12.30 p.m. — Lunch. The petrol question has become distinctly serious. Shotter has been totalling up the available petrol resources with anxious care. We have 500 miles to go to New York, and, if we do not get any wind or bad weather against us, we will do it all right with two engines, assisted occasionally by the third engine. We can't afford to run all five at once owing to the petrol consumption. Lieut.-Commander Lansdowne, of the United States Naval Airship Service, sends a signal on behalf of R. 34 to the United States authorities at Washington and Boston to send destroyer to take us in tow in case we should run out of petrol during the night.

The idea is that we could then be towed by a destroyer during the hours of darkness and at dawn cast off and fly to Long Island under our own power. Let us hope that this won't be necessary. It is now rainy and foggy, which is the kind of weather that suits us now, as rain generally means no wind.

3.0 p.m. — Passed Haute Island in the Bay of Fundy.

STORM DODGING.

3.30 p.m. — For some little while past there have been distinct evidences of electrical disturbances. Atmospherics are very bad. A severe thunderstorm was seen over the Canadian coast moving south down the coast. Major Scott turned east off his course to dodge the storm, putting on all engines. In this, fortunately for us, he was successful, and we passed through the outer edge of the storm. We had a very bad time indeed, and it is quite the worst experience from the weather point of view that any of us has yet experienced in the air. During the storm some wonderful specimens of cumulostratus were seen and photographed. These clouds always indicate a very highly perturbed state of the atmosphere, and look rather like a bunch of grapes.

7.30 p.m. — We are now in clear weather again, and have left Nova Scotia well behind, heading straight for New York. A particularly fine electrical disturbance at time of sunset.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

9.30 p.m. — Another thunderstorm. Again we have to change our course to avoid it, and every gallon of petrol worth its weight in gold. It almost breaks our hearts to have to lengthen the distance to get clear of these storms.

July 6, 4 a.m. — Sighted American coast at Chatham.

4.25 a.m. — Are over the south end of Mahoney Island. Scott wondering whether petrol will allow him to go to New York or whether it would not be more prudent to land at Montauk.

5.30 a.m. — Passing Martha's Vineyard, a lovely island, beautifully wooded. Scott decided he could just get through to the landing a Hazelhurst Field, but that there would not be enough petrol to fly over New York. Very sad, but there is no alternative. We will fly over New York on the start of our return journey on Tuesday night, weather and circumstances permitting.

Landing 1.54 p.m., Greenwich mean time, or 9.54 a.m. United States summer time, at Hazelhurst Field, Long Island.

Total time entire voyage 108 hours 12 minutes.

THE STOWAWAY'S STORY.

Ballantine, the stowaway, who was a prize fighter before he enlisted, is a rigger by trade, and says he was once numbered amongst the crew of the R 34, but was told a few days before the dirigible hopped off that he would not be taken on the flight. He went to the head coxswain and learned that it was necessary to lighten the crew by three men, and he was one of the unlucky ones. The way he changed his luck was told in this way by the stowaway to a special correspondent of the "Daily Telegraph."

I'd worked hard, I had, —hard, on the bally blimp, but that didn't matter so much. You see, I'd never been in America, and I had my heart placed on it, and mind, too, so I sneaks out a bit before midnight, and about two hours before the R 34 left Scotland I hides in the rigging. No one saw me, and we were off. When the balloon was about 200ft up I changes my position to a more comfortable one. I hid between the gas-bags 6 and 7 at the stern of the ship. I foraged for some food and water, and intended to remain there until the end of the trip unobserved, but I was out of luck, and I took sick. I guess I was the only man on board who was sick on the trip.

I remained stowed away until I was on the point of becoming delirious from fever, and when we were about sixty miles out Sergeant Watson stumbles over my head, and, of course, he takes me to the head coxswain. The officers couldn't do nothing then, and I saw one of 'em smile, so I knowed I'd see the land where they pay 100,000 dollars for a man to get in the ring for three rounds. I wish you'd tell the American Press that I'd like to take on someone at 126lb. There is a little house in England what could use the winning end of a purse. I'm only going to be here a day or two, but maybe some American could fix it for me.

"IT'S COMING, I KNOW".

Ballantine lay for twenty hours in his hammock with a high fever. After being treated by the doctor he took his place and worked his way across. He added:

I certainly did more work than any other two, but that was nothing. I made the trip and here I am. I don't know what they intend to do with me. That's up to Major Scott, and he hasn't said a word to me as yet, but it's coming, I know. I am not worrying about the punishment they are planning for me. The big thing for me is I made that trip, and here I am.

His wish to "take on someone" was soon gratified, a three round "no decision" contest was fixed up in the aerodrome, much to Ballantine's financial benefit.

RATIFIED.

GERMAN ASSEMBLY SIGNS THE PEACE TREATY.

Germany has ratified the Peace Treaty and the war is thus definitely and finally finished.

At Weimar yesterday the National Assembly decided by 208 votes to 105 to honour the signatures of Herr Müller and Herr Bell which were appended in their names.

An unpleasant note was sounded, however, the National party again putting forward a proposal to attach reservations to the ratification.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs replied that the time for reservations had passed and the only possible decision was "yes" or "no".

Excited arguments and recriminations took place but the proposal of the Nationalists was refused by a big majority and the deciding vote resulted as above stated.

The document of ratification will be signed by Herr Ebert, President of the National Assembly, who will apprise Herr Lersner at Versailles of the fact by telegram for the information of M. Clemenceau. At the same time the document itself will be despatched by special courier.

EXTRADITING THE EX-KAISER.

The statement that a small committee of Ministers has been set up to report to the Government on the arrangements which should be made for the extradition and trial of the ex-Kaiser is emphatically denied in official quarters.

Various matters calling for decision are, however, engaging the close attention of the Attorney General and Solicitor General. It can be stated on the highest authority that while the Government is not yet in a position to make a public announcement, the steps necessary to give effect to the decision of the Allied Governments are being carefully thought out and there is reason to believe that at no distant date the Premier will be in a position to make a further interesting communication to Parliament.

FOOD RIOTS IN ITALY.

PROFITEERS TO BE HEAVILY PUNISHED.

The continued rise in the price of food, and clothing, is creating much public feeling and disorders in Italy, where the disturbances show no sign of abating. The people, suffering under the burden of excessive and unwarrantable charges, have lent a ready ear to agitators and looting is general. In all large towns both in Italy and France measures are now being taken to protect the consumers. Two persons were killed and seventy injured during food riots at Genoa. The reduction of prices not appearing sufficient they made another attack on the shops and pillaged all kinds of food and wearing apparel.

A Royal decree issued at Rome last night contains new penalties. Profiteers caught selling goods at prices other than those fixed are to be punished with a fine of £400 or from three months to three years imprisonment and confiscation of their goods.

Measures are also being considered by the French Government, which proposes to draft a bill providing severe penalties against speculation and profiteering.

President Wilson landed at New York on Tuesday afternoon. Foreign Secretary Lansing has been recalled from Paris to give the Senate details regarding the Peace Treaty and other matters discussed at Paris.

PRINCE OF WALES ILL.

CHILL PREVENTS FULFILMENT OF ENGAGEMENTS.

In consequence of a severe chill contracted on Sunday the Prince of Wales has been obliged to cancel all his public engagements for this week.

It is added on official authority that there is nothing in the Prince's indisposition to justify alarm. The trouble is nothing more than a chill, which in the opinion of his medical attendant makes it desirable that he should keep quiet.

There are no signs of any complications, and if the chill continues to respond to treatment there is no intention, as there is no need, to issue anything in the way of official bulletin. There is little doubt that the Prince has been attempting too much, and was a little run down and susceptible to chill in consequence.

ROYAL MOTOR ACCIDENT.

While motoring through Mitcham yesterday Prince Albert's car knocked down and seriously injured a boy named John Emmott who ran out in front of the car. The Prince conveyed the boy to the hospital where he lies in a critical condition.

DESPERATE CRIMINALS.

ALIENS CHARGED WITH ROBBERY AND VIOLENCE.

Alleged to have been concerned in two sensational crimes—the masked robbery at the Elysée Restaurant, Coventry-street, and the attack on Mr. Curry, at Guy's Hospital—and also in a highway robbery at Hampstead, two men were taken before Mr. Garrett, at Bow-street Police-court yesterday, and remanded until this morning. The prisoners were described as Peter Albert Vincent, 20, motor mechanic, of Ellingham-road, Shepherd's-bush, and Natale Anda, 18, waiter, of Drury-lane. Both were well dressed, particularly Vincent who is a man of powerful build. The charges formally preferred against them were: Stealing on May 18 from the Elysee Restaurant, Coventry-street, £435, in notes and silver, and stealing on June 24 a watch and a portion of a chain from the person of Horace Byard, a clerk of Constantine-road, Hampstead.

Both the prisoners are apparently Italians, Vincent's proper name being Gaida.

The circumstances of the Elysée and Guy's Hospital outrages have been fully reported in these columns. The third charge to be preferred is one of highway robbery with violence at Hampstead.

A remand was ordered.

INFIRMARY RAG.

NURSE'S SUCCESSFUL APPEAL.

There was a sequel yesterday to the recent "ragging" of a nurse at Bermondsey Infirmary, at London Sessions, where Mabel Bootman, a probationary nurse, successfully appealed against a fine of 40s, and 10s costs, inflicted by Mr. A. E. Gill, at Tower Bridge Police-court, for having assaulted Emily Russell, a probationary nurse at the same institution.

Miss Russell explained that she had occasion to report two of the nurses, and this led to the "ragging" incident. On the morning of April 29, without any warning, some six nurses burst into her bedroom, dragged her from her bed, and carried her to the bathroom, where, after being put on the floor, she was placed into the bath and ducked, her head being held under water.

Apellant went into the witness-box and denied on oath that she took any part in the "ragging," for which the nurses responsible had been fined. They had not appealed, and she was the only one to do so. She had had no quarrel with Miss Russell. His worship, Mr. Lawrie, remarking that the bench had heard quite enough of the matter, allowed the appeal, but made no order as to costs.

FIGHTING AT HANOVER.

Serious fighting occurred at Hanover on Monday night. Before the arrival of Government troops the Spartacists stormed the military prisons and police station and released all the prisoners. When the troops reached the scene the Spartacists were trying to rush the civil prison. They were driven off after hard fighting in which many persons were wounded. Railway employés at Hanover have decided to resume work.

ARCHANGEL STRATEGY.

General Maynard reports that at midnight on July 6th, our troops captured the village of Kapeselga on the railway eighteen miles South West of Medvyejyagora. The position was one of considerable strength and the enemy were supported by five guns.

In order to allow our guns to register the position a feint attack was carried out on July 5th. This was entirely successful and when the main attack started our guns brought such a heavy and accurate fire to bear on the main point of attack as enabled us, with threats from both flanks, to capture the village without a single casualty.

O.T.C. ANNUAL CAMPS.

Army Council Instructions state that there will be no volunteer training for officers of the Special Reserve of Officers during the present year. Annual camps will be held on a compulsory basis for contingents of the Junior Division, O.T.C., from July 29 to August 8.

WINE SHOP MURDER.

SUSPECT ARRESTED IN NORTH LONDON.

Yesterday morning Mr. George Cohen, Coroner for Central Middlesex, opened at the Hendon Town Hall an inquiry into the circumstances attending the death of Mr. John Thomas Gregory, the aged manager of a wine store in Colindale-avenue, Hendon, who on Friday evening was beaten to death with fireirons in a room at the rear of the shop.

In the early hours of yesterday morning detective officers engaged in the case called at a house off King's-cross-road, and took a man found there to Albany-street Police Station. It is understood that the police have strong grounds for suspecting that he had been engaged in a crime of violence. At present he is being detained pending inquiries, although he does not answer the description of the man circulated by the police in connection with the Hendon murder.

TWELVE HOURS START.

A man, presumably the man guilty of the dastardly attack, was seen by a neighbour leaving the scene of the crime, but unfortunately he was unaware that anything unusual had happened, and made no attempt to intercept him. Despite this narrow escape and the fact that the police were very quickly on his trail, the murderer got clear away.

After he left the wine shop the only indication as to the direction of the wanted man's flight was provided by a 'bus conductor, who reported that a man answering the police description, dishevelled and with torn, blood-stained clothing, boarded his 'bus, which was bound for Golders-green Station, in Station-road, Hendon, on Friday evening. At the time no particular attention was paid. It was only when the accounts of the crime appeared in the newspapers that this important clue was communicated, with the result that the man had a clear start of over twelve hours.

INQUEST ON VICTIM.

There were many dramatic incidents yesterday at the inquest at Hendon on the body of the victim, and the jury, after a lengthy hearing, returned a verdict of wilful murder against some person unknown.

Women who passed almost at the moment of the crime told how, after hearing the smashing of glass, they saw blood splashes on the window and saw a man whom they would not be able to identify draw a curtain across the window, which he first wiped.

Another witness described how on looking through the letterbox he saw a foot disappearing along the passage, and a neighbouring lodger recalled that at the time of the murder he saw a man hurriedly cross the lawn, open the gate and hasten towards the passage.

There was also grim and silent evidence in the shape of photographs of the room where the crime was committed showing the dead man lying where he had fallen amid the disordered surroundings.

A sensational development occurred late in the hearing when the coroner, in order not to hamper the work of the police, cleared the court and heard some evidence in camera.

THE SIXTH CORPS DANCE.

Wonderful scenes of gaiety and animation were witnessed in the precincts of the 6th Corps club, Cologne, on Wednesday night when a ball, on thorough British lines was held. Six hundred lancers, or thereabouts, swayed and glided about the huge hall to the strains of irresistible music dispensed by two orchestras. The cheery gathering included the Commander-in-Chief and Lady Robertson, Lady Gatacre and a large number of other distinguished British visitors as well as many American, French and Belgian Officers. The organisation of the function was admirable and in this connection the results achieved reflected the untiring energy which the genial secretary of the club, Major F. W. Frayles and the Committee must have bestowed upon the work.

In point of brilliance, it is doubtful whether any function has ever equalled the ball in Cologne.

Red flowers, palms and fairy lights formed the basis of the interior decorations and these were utilized in sufficient profusion and with a taste that produced an effect particularly agreeable to the eye. In the whirl of frivolity and the atmosphere of romance that permeated the whole proceedings, the more mundane matter of food was not overlooked. On the contrary, the repast provided on the supper table was, by reason of its variety and substance, of a kind "fit to set before a king" while the light refreshments were sufficiently cool and refreshing to appeal even to the most fastidious palate. French confections and chocolates specially prepared in England were imported to this cheery rendezvous in liberal quantities.

"Sitting out" facilities took various forms but most patronized was a large marquee, transformed by the skill of the decorator, in the Club garden. The whole affair was well conceived and admirably carried out so that the enjoyment of all present was absolutely complete.

BRITISH RENEGADES.

In the House of Commons yesterday Brigadier-General Colvin (C.U., Epping) asked the Home Secretary whether naturalised British subjects who were known to have served with the enemy's forces were freely readmitted into Great Britain and why they should not be interned pending the investigation of their cases.

Mr. Dudley Ward replied that there was no power to exclude British subjects whatever their past history, but in all other such cases all appropriate measures would be taken.

BOGUS V.C.

Fred K. Miller, (an ex-soldier) clerk in the Nottingham Record Office, was sentenced to six months imprisonment for defrauding a draughtsman of £100. Prisoner, who posed as a V.C. and as the son of a wealthy Nottingham magistrate, told the prosecutor an amazing story of university and musical successes.

CAPTAIN FRYATT.

IMPRESSIVE MEMORIAL SERVICE AT ST. PAUL'S.

The body of Captain Fryatt was brought to Dover on Monday afternoon on board the destroyer Orpheus, two other destroyers acting as escort. The Orpheus flew the Red Ensign half-mast at the main mast and the White Ensign at the stern. Those accompanying the body included Major-General Sir Henry Thornton, manager of the Great Eastern Railway; Mr. Fryatt, brother of the dead captain; and Mr. Hartnell, the chief officer of the Brussels, who was taken prisoner with Captain Fryatt, Rear-Admiral Dampier, Major-General Sir Colin Mackenzie, and their staffs, received the coffin at the naval pier.

On Tuesday London paid its tribute to the memory of the gallant master of the ss. Brussels, who was shot by the Germans at Bruges after the capture of his vessel. At noon a memorial service was held in St. Paul's Cathedral, the body being conveyed thither with naval honours. His Majesty was represented by a naval aide-de-camp, and there were also present representatives of the Admiralty, War Office, the Great Eastern Railway, the Seafarers' Joint Council, the Board of Trade, Anglo-Belgian Union, Imperial Merchant Service Guild, and the London Society of East Anglians. The orchestra of the G.E.R. Musical Society played appropriate music in the Cathedral before the commencement of the service. The gun-carriage bearing the coffin was drawn from Charing-cross by bluejackets. A naval escort will form part of the procession.

The body was subsequently taken to its last resting place in Old Dovercourt Churchyard.

CRIME IN IRELAND.

APPALLING STATE OF TERRORISM.

Three savage and unprovoked assaults were made on members of the police force at Kilfenora, County Clare, on Monday. Two constables were shot from an ambush and another was so terribly beaten by a crowd of football spectators that his life is in danger.

An official memorandum issued by the Chief Secretary for Ireland regarding crime in Tipperary, and the operations of Sinn Fein in the island generally, reveals an appalling state of affairs.

Owing to the number of serious crimes—murders, violent assaults, injuries to property, attacks on dwelling-houses at night, and many other grave offences, and the impossibility of getting jurors to act fearlessly in some parts of the country, it became necessary, in June 1918, to proclaim fourteen counties and two county boroughs under the Criminal Law and Procedure (Ireland) Act, 1887, in order in some measure to meet the situation.

It is impossible to resist the conclusion, says the memorandum, that Sinn Fein, with its kindred associations, is an organization formed for the overthrow of constitutional government in Ireland, and for carrying out acts of terrorism and violence against the officers and servants of the Executive Government.

WOOLWICH ARSENAL.

WILL IT BE EMPLOYED IN CIVIL MANUFACTURE?

The Committee of Inquiry into the functions and administration of the Royal Ordnance factories at Woolwich, has issued its final report. The arguments in favour of retention of this Government arsenal for munition manufacture in peace time are overwhelming, states the report, which urges that the best location is at Woolwich.

Mr. Adamson and Mr. Will Thorne signed the report subject to reservations in which they explain that they are strongly of opinion that the machinery at Woolwich is not only capable of being used for production and repair of army and navy requirements but should also be used for the production and repair of railway rolling stock, transport requisites, articles and appliances required in connection with municipal and electrical undertakings.

WAR GRAVES MEMORIALS.

Mr. Winston Churchill has consented to receive at the War Office at 3.30 on Wednesday representatives of the petitions signed by members of both Houses of Parliament and by a large number of all classes of the general public in favour of a right of choice in the memorial to be placed over the graves of the fallen abroad. He will also receive representatives of the Trades Union Congress petition in favour of the Graves Commissions proposals. The Commissioners will be present to meet these deputations, under Mr. Churchill's chairmanship.

FREE EMIGRATION PASSAGES.

The intention of the Government is to grant free passages to all honourably discharged Service men and women and their dependents, who wish to migrate to any part of the Empire, provided they are approved under one or other of the Dominion agricultural settlement schemes, or have definite work to go to. A leaflet setting out the full details of the scheme has now been prepared by the Oversea Settlement Office, and may be obtained on application there, or at any Employment Exchange or District Office of the Appointments Department.

ARMY POSTERS.

The Army has adopted an entirely new style of poster for the purpose of influencing recruiting. Posters exhibited on hoardings in London yesterday, set out in one column the advantages of life in the Army and in the other the "disadvantages" of civil life. The coloured poster depicts a mounted cavalryman in a sylvan glade with the caption, "Not a care in the world."

Lieut. Bider, the first aviator to cross the Alps and the Pyrenees, was killed on Monday as the result of a crash.

THE RHINE ARMY'S SHARE.

In the national interest we are obliged to refer again to the Victory Loan. There is a feeling that it is already an assured success, and that being the case, the individual investment in it, which in many instances can neccessarily be only a small one, makes no difference one way or the other, and therefore can be passed over.

There never was a greater mistake. If everyone thought in that way, it would be only those with full pockets who would become owners of Victory Bonds.

That was so in the old days of Government loans when they were accessible only to the rich, but to-day when the opportunity to finance one's country is brought within the reach of even the schoolboy or girl and every facility is given for everybody to subscribe, it should be borne in mind that each individual's share, however small, counts.

Although there is little doubt that the Victory Loan is being taken up well, nobody can pronounce it as a great success until every possible subscriber, large and small, has been roped in.

It was a common practice in the old Army, we know, for a soldier to give a day's pay occasionally towards any deserving cause, such as to benefit the widow of a deceased comrade, and the suggestion has been put forward, which we support, that every officer and man of the British Army of the Rhine should voluntarily contribute one day's pay to the Victory Loan, and the certificates be handed over to the nation. It would mean very little sacrifice to the individual and would contribute a great deal towards the building up of this big loan and the credit of the country.

As the majority of the men now serving will be in civil life in the course of a year or less, the contribution would only be an instalment towards the rapid reconstruction of the country, and would ensure their being more quickly absorbed in the industrial life of the nation on being demobilized.

It would be necessary to take the opinion of all ranks as to the advisability of taking such a step, and when this had been done a conference of senior officers might be convened to arrange the necessary details.

We think, that there is a great deal to be said for such a scheme and we do not see any serious obstacle to its being carried out.

THE SOLDIER'S EDUCATION.

It is a matter of much satisfaction that the break in the education of thousands of men is being repaired by the educational effort which is being made throughout the British Army of the Rhine.

The authorities early awoke to their obligations and the value of education in the work of reconstruction found a real need for instruction on the part of the men so that last month 75,000 officers and other ranks of the army were undergoing courses of instruction, while there is a large waiting list.

The scheme could have no better tribute than the strong desire of the men to take advantage of the benefits it affords, both from a professional and manual point of view. They include excellent classical, scientific, commercial and technical education,

The education is graded to suit varying intellects. In each unit there is a daily school. Nothing is done to suggest that a man's early education has been neglected, but, instead there is put before him the one idea of the benefit such instruction will be to him when he returns to civil employment. The students are quick to see this and the teachers find a ready response. This instruction paves the way to the army school certificate and the jump to the brigade divisional and corps schools and the army colleges.

The latter provide training of a professional nature in collegiate classes, and of a skilled trades nature through a trades refresher school and polytechnic. Engineering in all its branches, naval architecture, surveying, architecture, cabinet-making, bulding construction are among the subjects in the syllabus and the tuition is essentially practical. The students handle actual apparatus, much of it installed by themselves, as part of their training, and there is in the air a real confidence that the experience they are gaining will be of the highest value on demobilization. The preparations are thorough, and we look for great results from the scheme.

MORE FRUIT WARNINGS.

The warning we gave the other day, not to indulge too freely in unripe fruit was intended for the benefit of the corporeal organs interested in its assimilation. Perhaps a word of admonition should be addressed also to the prehensile capabilities which come into play first.

Because there is no "verboten" on each tree it does not follow that anyone can pick at will, subject only to the pains and penalties which grip the greedy.

The fruit trees have owners — either individuals or the commune — and they are the persons entitled to the crop.

If every wayfarer in a populous district took his toll, it is obvious that the owners would not have much look in at dysentery or profit, according to their taste, from the fruit.

The law is of course on the side of the owner, but on the open road-side that is of little avail.

Custom, however, often will, and in this case has implanted a sense of honour in a particular direction, so that in countries where fruit is grown by the wayside, it is rarely that it suffers from depredations.

Scrounging in emergency is one thing, but robbing a tree and its owner who trust to your honour is another.

SHAKESPEARE IN GERMANY.

It is a wonderful thing to see how firmly established in Germany is the reputation of England's greatest poet—Shakespeare. We would not venture to say that his works are more appreciated here than at home, but it is a fact that he is largely studied and his works played very often indeed. For instance, in the first six months of this year we find that Hamlet has been played in Germany 183 times; Othello 121; The Merchant of Venice, 117; The Twelfth Night, 110; A Midsummer Night's Dream, 89; Romeo and Juliet, 78; As You Like It, 77; Measure for Measure, 56; The Taming of the Shrew, 35; King Lear, 34; A Winter's Tale, 44; Much Ado About Nothing, 21; Macbeth 16; Coriolan, 6; King Richard III, 3; King Richard II and Julius Ceasar twice each. Berlin heads the list with 177 Shakespeare performances, and Hamburg is next with 83, but strangely enough there have been none in Cologne since its occupation by the British Army. It would be interesting to know why.

TORN SHIRTS.

It was changing day at the Quarter's. My nerves were edged, I being the next supplicant for exchanges. How was I to face the ordeal? . . .

"Next!" and in walked my preceding prospector with an armful of miscellaneous garments. Here I moved right up to the door which, being open, gave me the opportunity of examining the interior. Surrounding the Quarter was the weirdest miscellaneous collection of everything that is useless that ever I had seen; shelves stocked with every necessity of clothing, shirts, neatly piled, coils of wire, rows of old boots, plates, tin mugs, pieces of candle, scores of matchstalks, a tobacco factory of fag ends, and dozens of empty bottles.

During this interval the over-worked judge (all Quarters are fearfully overworked), had been very carefully filling his pipe with that air of Sherlock Holmes in deep thought which, as every private knows, only quartermasters dare assume.

"Had these socks two years?" he slyly enquired of the mendicant before him. Thoughts of furnaces, toasting forks and devils chased through my brain. I could feel my heart's pulsations; my courage was rapidly ebbing.

"Mick, let him see your socks," and the ever obedient atom of activity quickly removed a pair of canvas shoes revealing two dirty feet covered with what rather resembled pieces of sandbags.

"How long have you had those, Mick?"

"Three years, sir," was the ready reply.

"D'you see that, me lad, I cannot even give my assistant a new pair. Another thing, I've seen your face too often round about these stores." (All Quarters try to find shelter under a deviation from the true point at issue.)

These were the last words I remembered, the sweat poured from my brow. I imagined the pleading victim slowly sizzling on a prong before a mighty furnace. The blast of bugles reached my ears and I remembered that I was due on stick picquet.

Pulling myself together I reached the parade, feeling like an escaped fugitive from a Spanish Inquisition, with a gnawing hunger in my lower regions which I knew would remain unappeased this side of reveille.

Five minutes later, whilst lined up for inspection, the reason why Mick, the Quarter's assistant was so disreputably clad, flashed across my mind. Mick's function in the Stores was to act as a sort of tailor's dummy, on which the quarter could hang, not clothes, but excuses for his failure to provide them for the troops. He stood, giving silent testimony to the difficulties under which the quartermaster worked. This once apparent, I realised the futility of hope so far as the Q.M. stores was concerned, and concluded that a quicker and more direct route to the acquisition of a new shirt was by getting my ticket—an easier task than would be involved in trying to extract an article of clothing apparently regarded as pivotal to the Q.M. stores.

I once heard of a man who succeeded by some miracle in obtaining a shirt from a quartermaster, but before I had an opportunity of making enquiries as to how he succeeded where all others had failed, he mysteriously disappeared. Probably by now, he is a quartermaster himself with some strange unit, dealing death and destruction.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

CROWDED OUT SUBALTERNS.

Sir,—I suppose I'm one of the girls that "Subaltern" is trying to have a hit at. I go to most of the dances in Cologne but don't intend to be dictated to as to the partners I choose, nor will any girl in Rhineland I'm sure.

Those who are nice men and good dancers whether they are generals or privates will always get plenty of dances.

The fact is the older men who probably have earned higher rank than "Subaltern," mostly can dance well and have good courteous manners, and that is why they get the lion's share.

If a man can't dance properly and doesn't know how to treat a girl nicely—and I expect these are "Subaltern's" failings, he is likely to remain a "wallflower."

AGNES.

SERVICE MEN AT HENLEY.

Sir,—Your correspondent A.G. Vere has probably read only one side of the case. The other side is given in a letter to the "Times" by W. Pi man, from which it would appear that the stewards did not "debar the ex-service men's eight from competing at Henley," but rather that it debarred itself, by wilfully refusing to comply with one of the rules framed months in advance for the King's Cup, although it could perfectly well have done so.

In no sports meeting of any sort can the stewards alter the rules after the entries have come in.

This puts rather a different complexion on the case and probably explains why the King, who has never been accused of snobbery, declined to intervene.

"FAIR PLAY FOR THE STEWARDS."

THE SCENTLESS COUNTRYSIDE.

Sir,— I have been in Rhineland since the middle of December and have listened to the Germans expatiating on its beauties, and agree that certainly it is beautiful in many respects. But England and more especially the north of England, has it "beat to a frazzle" in one way and that is, in the sweet scent of the countryside.

No part of Rhineland has such a delicious smell as a Lancashire or Cheshire lane. Even when passing a garden filled with roses the North country man can tell at once that he is far from home, just by this fact I wonder if others of your readers have noticed this lack of the "scents of summer."

GUNNER M.

OUR NATIONAL ANTHEM.

Sir,— I should like to say something about our National Anthem, if space in your excellent paper permits.

I venture to say that there is not a single man serving in the British Rhine Army who is not a staunch royalist. In our present National Anthem, we have a specimen of bad German music and some extravagant but meaningless doggerel for the words.

We have proved that England can turn out goods of a better quality than Germany; why then, I ask, is it necessary to go to Germany, for the national anthem? There are plenty of good composers in England who would feel honoured and would do their best if the music for a new national anthem was required.

Then, where is the Poet Laureate? Let him write us a new antnem, one that is all British and one of which we shall not be ashamed.

LOYAL A. IV.

A CRY FROM HOLLAND.

Sir,—Could anything be arranged for the amusement of the troops in Rotterdam? We hear a great deal about the excellent concert parties in Cologne, but I am sorry to say that Rotterdam seems to be overlooked in matters of similar interest.

Could not the Amusements Officer arrange to let one of his many parties give us a visit. I am sure the troops here would appreciate a move in this direction as there is nothing to do here only lie dormant and hear of your happy times at Cologne.

There is ample accommodation here for entertainments, and the Y.M.C.A. has a suitable stage for concert work.

I am sure that our comrades in Cologne could spare a party, say, for a week's duration.

"LAMPS OPEN."

CLASS DISTINCTION.

Sir,—Your correspondent "Lyric" appears to have missed my point.

There are only two main classes in the world, those who work and those who don't. Who are these "middle classes"? If they form, as he states, the principal foundation of the country," then surely they must be workers.

My object in writing was to challenge narrow-minded custom, so prevalent, that the a person described as of the "working class," down in the social scale. I fail to see any argument in "Lyric's" letter to support this absurd idea.

If all those who could do so claimed the honour of belonging to this class they would raise it to its proper level.

Instead of that society tells them that to belong to the "working classes," isn't "the thing," so they dub them selves "middle class," "better class," or if they have enough money, the "upper class."

The more money they have the higher they are "up." It is only their snobbishness which makes them fail to see the ludicrous humour of it.

DREAM-PEDLARY.

If there were dreams to sell,
What would you buy?
Some cost a passing bell;
Some a light sigh,
That shakes from Life's fresh crown
Only a rose-leaf down.

If there were dreams to sell,
Merry and sad to tell,
And the crier rang the bell,
What would you buy?

A cottage lone and still,
With bowers nigh,
Shadowy, my woes to still,
Until I die.
Such pearl from Life's fresh crown
Fain would I shake me down.
Were dreams to have at will,
This would best heal my ill,
This would I buy.

Three "Hat Trick" Exponents.

FINE BOWLING DISPLAYS.

LATEST MATCHES IN "COLOGNE POST" CUP COMPETITION.

The feature of the "Cologne Post" matches reported to-day is the accomplishment of the "hat trick" in three different games.

Previous fixtures have produced some very fine bowling displays, the record for the Cup Competition being held by Lieut. Smeeton of the 5th Border Regt. with 7 wickets for 6 runs, while honours for second place are shared by Gnr. Willow, 488 Siege Bty. R.G.A., and Sgt. Banks, 121 Heavy Bty. R.G.A. who have each taken 7 wickets for one run.

The best performance recorded below was by L/C Hodgetts, of "Maps," who took 5 wickets in 7 balls, and 7 wickets for 5 runs, and the other "hat trick" exponents were Gunner Lemons, 145 Siege Bty., and Pte. Greaves, "D" Corps Siege Park.

M.G.C. (59) v. VI CORPS HEADQUARTERS (44) at Lindenthal on Monday. The VI Corps H.Q. went in first but only Ellis (41) and Wordsmanee (10) were able to do any thing with the bowling of Barr and Eede, the former taking 8 wickets for 19. For the Gunners L/Cpl. Wilkinson made 10, but other wickets were falling rapidly, and when only three wickets were left 15 runs were still required to avert defeat. However, Barr, the bowler, again came to the rescue, and with Barr hitting out victory was achieved, these two batsmen making 12 each. Airey and Gricomelli took 4 wickets for 19 and 25 respectively.

VI CORPS SIG. COY (30) v. 180 LABOUR COY (70) L/Cpl. Hoppe 24 not out, and Cpl. Stevenson 12) at Zollstock, Cologne, on Tuesday. Things did not look very bright for 180 at the start of their batting, for the first four wickets fell for 16, but the tail wagged vigorously. The performance of L/Cpl Hoppe was all the more creditable, because when he had made 6 he received a rising ball in the face, and he carried his bat with blood flowing freely from his nose and his eye rapidly swelling. "Sigs" best bowler was Houghton with 6 wickets for 26. For 180 Labour Coy, Smart had again the best average with 4 wickets for 9 runs.

E. CORPS SIGS (89) v. 18th FIELD AMBULANCE COY (31) at Blissim on Sunday. For the Signals Spr. Mc Donald scored 34 (not out) and Lieut. Kemplin 15. On going in to bat the Field Ambulance men could do nothing against Spr. McDonald and Dvr Boddy and only totalled 31 runs, Pte. Exton (13) being top scorer.

E. CORPS SIGS (115) v. 269 AREA EMPLOYMENT COY (49) on the former's ground on Monday. Winning the toss 269 Area Empt. Coy elected to bat and totalled 49 runs, Pte. Glover (20) being the only man to reach double figures. Spr. McDonald and Dvr Boddy were again at their best with the ball. For the Sigs Cpl. Hills was top scorer with 46, Sgnr. Tinney scored 12, and Spr. Hicks 11 (not out). Spr. McDonald has in six "Cologne Post" matches bowled unchanged with Dvr. Boddy, the former having taken 33 wickets for 114 runs, and Boddy 21 for 101 runs.

No. 70 SQUADRON R.A.F. (69) 51st AUX. BUS COMPANY (63) at Bickendorf on Monday. The Bus. Coy batted first and owing to the bright batting of Tudor (22) and Driskell (23 not out) they secured the useful total of 63. Milnes bowled well for the R.A.F. taking 5 wickets for 15 runs. With the exception of Orris, who compiled a breezy 19, the R.A.F. put up a very poor show, 5 wickets being down for 48.

At this juncture, however, Milnes and Wood made a stand and increased the score to 63 when the latter was well held in the slips. The last wicket fell with the total at 69, Milnes being caught when he had scored 11. Tudor bowled consistently for the Bus. Coy., and secured 5 wickets for 13 runs.

D/190 BDE. R.F.A. (56) v. G. A.A. BTY. (23) on the former's ground. G Battery A.A. batted first, on a greasy wicket. The bowling of D Battery was so deadly, however, that at one time 9 wickets fell for 12 runs. D Battery 190 Bde. then went in, and started off even more disastrously, four wickets falling for one run. Sgt. Downes and Sgt. Tams, however, having determined to die bravely, hit out at the fall of the sixth wicket, and the opposing score was passed with three wickets in hand. With the aid of Dvr. Morphew, the score was carried to 56, Sgt. Downes scored 25, and Dvr. Morphew 16 not out. For the winners, Lieut. Baines took seven wickets for seven runs, Dvr. Bingham 3 for 14. McGabe and Newbold bowled very well for the A. A. Battery.

488 SIEGE BATTERY (36) v. MID. D.A.C. (29) at Nieder-Elvenich on Monday. Bowling for Midland D.A.C., Lieut. Jeffreys took 7 for 1[illegible]. For 488 Siege Battery, Wilhan took 4 for 12 and Timms 4 for 14.

No. 5 RAILWAY TELEGRAPH COMPANY (119) v. 53rd SHERWOOD FORESTERS (38) at Mülheim on Saturday. Spr. Ainscow (21), the Bolton amateur, and L/Cpl. Newman (15), the Cambridge batsman, opened strongly for the Company and further useful scores were made by Lieut. T. Wheeler (21), Spr. E. Shaw (10) Pte. Morris (14), Pte. McDonell (12) and Sergt. F. B. Fysh (10). The Foresters collapsed before Pte. F. Blower who secured 7 wickets for 19 runs, 3 wickets falling in his first over. Lieut. Alcock (16) and Trafford (6 wickets for 38 runs) were the most prominent players for the Foresters.

5th BORDER REGT. (124 for 5 declared) v. No. 3 COY. WESTERN DIV. R.A.S.C. (39) at Bonn on Sunday. The home side batted first, and found runs easy to get. L/Cpl. Astin (63) and Capt. Rosser (23) were top scorers. The A.S.C. had 20 up for 1 wicket, but were all out for 39, Lieut. Smeeton taking 8 wickets for 20 runs. This bowler has now taken 35 wickets for 92 runs in league matches.

5th BORDER REGT. (86) v. EAST DIV. COY. (31) at Bonn on Monday. For the Borders, L/Cpl. Astin (26) and Lieut. Smeeton (20) were top scorers. Lieut. Slack was in great form and took 6 of the Sigs' wickets for 12 runs.

"D" CORPS SIEGE PARK (133) v. CORPS TROOPS M.T. COY. (83) on IV Corps Troops ground on Saturday. Corps troops batted first and had 8 wickets down for 56, but the last two wickets carried the total to 83, Cpl. Wildgroose (15), Pte. Whitehouse (10) taking seven boundary hits in two overs. Lieut. Warner (14) and Lieut. Witherall (12) played good and careful cricket. "D" Siege Park opened badly, losing 4 wickets for 32 runs, but on Pte. Lee (32) joining Sgt. Mumford (18), runs came freely, the partnership adding 32 runs. Sgt. Mumford and Cpl. Sawyer (17) carried the score to 86 before the former was bowled. Capt. Bowman (27) helped Cpl. Sawyer to carry the total to 125 for 8 wickets, the innings closing for 133. Pte. Greaves performed the "hat trick" and took 4 wickets for 12 runs, and Sgt. Mumford and Pte. Lee bowled consistently. For IV Corps troops Lieut. Witheral (5 for 29) gave the batsman much trouble. Scaife and Watson also bowled well.

93rd BRIGADE R.G.A. (183 for 6) v. 3rd NORTHERN BRIGADE (46) at Kalk, on Monday. Ashworth and Waters opened for the visitors and played steadily, putting on 14 before Wright bowled Ashworth. No batsman played with confidence and the innings closed for 46. It took Palliser and Ellis 25 minutes to pass this total. On restarting, after tea, the score was carried to 88, before Palliser was bowled for 46. Runs came at a fast rate, until 6 o'clock, when stumps were drawn with the score 183 (for 1), Ellis and Weight both made 49 and Major Phillips carried out his bat for 17.

62nd BATTALION M.G.C. (139 for 6 wickets) v. 15th HUSSARS (69) at Arnoldsweiler on Saturday. For the Machine Gunners, Major McKelvey and Lieut. Vernon batted well for 33 and 41 respectively. For the Hussars, Sgt. Danot took 3 wickets for 16 runs and Lieut. Stracey 2 for 21. Sgt. Danobkt (23) and Lieut. Pegram (15) were the top-scorers in the Hussars innings. Colonel Birkett and Sgt. 29th MACHINE GUN BATTALION (254 for 8 wickets) v. 61st BRIGADE R.F.A. (69) at Dabringhausen. The R.F.A. batted first, and the wickets quickly fell for 5 runs. Bdr. Hughes (17) and Major Mayne (12) attempted a stand, but the bowling of the machine gunners proved too good, Lieut. Astill taking 6 wickets for 14 runs and Cpl. Sadler disposing of the remainder for 43. A storm prevented play until the evening, when the machine gunners went to the wicket, scoring 254 for 8 wickets before stumps were drawn. Lieut. Astill made some brilliant stroke in amassing his 71. Capt. Morris (54 no out), Cpl. Sadler (53), and Pte. Durant (25) played splendidly.

4th SUFFOLK REGT. (65) v 121 HEAVY BTY. R.G.A. (42) at Troisdorf on Saturday. The 121st Batt. batted first and thanks to the bowling of Lieut. Bailey (5 for 15) and Pte. Pither (3 for 21) were soon out for 42. The Suffolks started badly, losing 3 wickets for 12. The 4th wicket however, put on 33, and the Suffolks eventually ran out winners by 23 runs. Lieut. Bailey scored 19 and Lieut. Kirby 12. Hardield and Sergt. Banks bowled extremely well, the former taking 6 wickets for 21, and the latter 4 for 25.

YOUR LAST CHANCE.

GREAT SUCCESS OF VICTORY BOND SWEEP.

To-morrow at 9 p.m., the British Empire Leave Club will close the doors of its sweepstake department. Those who at that time, have failed to buy a ticket, will have no further opportunity of participating in the great scheme that is to make a few lucky ones rich, and add considerably to Britain's financial resources.

No time should be wasted therefore in paying a visit to No. 6 Langgasse, Cologne, to part with your spare cash, or, at all events, ten marks of it, in the purchase of Victory Bond sweep tickets. The thrill of anticipation is alone worth the trifle expended, even supposing you draw nothing more exciting than a blank.

All applications for tickets should be made to Lt.-Col. J. A. Levey, O.B.E., D.S.O., British Empire Leave Club, Cologne. Yesterday there was a steady influx of purchasers and the mail bag was much greater than normal, as a result of postal applications.

THE LOYALS.

GALAXY OF TALENT AT SPORTS MEETING ON EXERCIERPLATZ, BONN.

A most successful impromptu sports meeting to commemorate the presentation of the colours to the 12th Battalion, the Loyal North Lancashire Regiment was held on the Exercierplatz, Bonn, on Monday. The highest points were won by 'B' Company with 36 points; 'A' Company followed with 19 points; 'C' Company with 17 points, and Headquarters 2 points.

Bretton made a splendid marshal of the course.

MOUNTED SPORTS.

245 (W.R.) BRIGADE ROYAL FIELD ARTILLERY, LIGHT DIVISION.

These sports were held on Saturday at Klein Troisdorf, when the keenest interest was displayed in the events. In the Alarm Stakes an unlimbered gun with horses unharnessed and tethered, the gunners and drivers partially undressed and in a position of sleep, is, on the alarm being given, limbered up; team harnessed and hooked in, men properly dressed, and then galloped to the place of action, the whole being done against time. About this there is all the glamour of old fashioned war, and naturally the most fervent interest was evinced.

EVENTS AND WINNERS.

The following were the results:—

Section-Driving:— 1, C Bty. team; 2, O. Bty. team.

Section-driving-(Officers):— 1, C Bty. team; 2, H.Q. R.A. team.

Alarm stakes:— 1, B. Bty., A. sub team 1min 35secs, 2, D. Bty. C. sub team.

The proceedings were greatly enlivened by the attendance of the band of the 12th Lancers, who produced excellent music, and the catering for officers and men was of marked excellence, the only thing lacking to a most enjoyable and attractive sports meeting was the presence of more members of the Nursing Service, the Waac's, the Wrafs, and any of the Women's Auxiliary Services.

WESTERN DIVISIONAL CUP.

CLOSE AND EXCITING FINISH AT HERSEL.

The cricketing powers that be in the 1/4th Bn. Cheshire Regt. received a rude shock on Sunday when they played the first round in the Western Divisional Cup Competition, their opponents being the 1st Western T.M.B. The latter batted first on a wicket certainly not adapted for tall scoring, and could only muster a total of 27. Naturally the Battalion went to the wickets with confidence. However, it was soon apparent that the struggle was to be a keen one. Wickets fell rapidly, an occasional single helping on the score. One batter raised the hopes of his side by hitting three (all run). The T.M.B.'s, however, fought gamely on, with the result that when the last batsmen came to the wickets 4 run were still required to win. A single was obtained and in attempting a second the last wickets fell—run out—leaving the T.M.'s victors by three runs.

MONEY IN SPORT.

HUGE SUMS RECEIVED BY FRENCH AIRMEN AND TURFITES.

In the years 1909 and 1910 Paulham and Bleriot earned more than half a million francs. Beaumont earned in 3 months in 1911 500,000 francs.

Garros received 75,000 f. for flying 6 times at Angers. Bleriot asked for and received 90,000 francs for a short flight at Constantinople. Johnson, the boxer, received 1 million francs at Reno, while Carpentier was paid 50,000 for a match at Dieppe.

A first class French jockey never signs a contract under 125,000 francs a year, in addition to which he receives a special sum each time he runs. It is in France that horses get the greatest sums — the horse "Maintenon" brought to its proprietor the sum of 908,000 francs, Samorgo 877,000 francs, and Sea Sick 610,000 francs. The stables of C. Blanc won in 1905 1,469,000 francs, and Vanderbilt's stables in 1906 1,349,000 francs.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

The "Tonics."

An exceptionally good performance was given by the "Tonics" concert party (by kind permission of the G.O.C. 3rd. Northern Brigade) at the British Empire Leave Club on Tuesday evening. Lt. Hodgson, 51st. D.L.I., is to be warmly congratulated on the fine party which he has organized. It is undoubtedly one of the best concert parties of the Army of the Rhine. Quite a new feature on the programme was the excellent dancing of Finlay and Sangar, who were loudly encored and called back again and again. The general appearance of the dancing was greatly aided by the excellent lighting effects. Lieut. Ramsay, N. T. Dodds, Fred Holmans, E. Messmer and W. Ryder were the chief performers. Sergeant Hadmark, with his "Riehl" jazz band gave the very greatest pleasure by their excellent selections, and everyone voted the evening one of the very best, yet held.

"San Fairy Ann".

"The Maxims" a capable party of 29th M.G.C. entertainers, appeared before a large audience at Duoringhausen on Friday, when a musical revue "San Fairy Ann" was presented. Among the artistes who contributed to the success of the performance were A. W. Warner, A. Coombies, K. Methan, R. Drew and J. Cross. The Maxims are shortly to go on tour.

An accomplished Artiste.

L/Cpl. A. J. Weeks the accomplished entertainer appearing with the "Merry Micks", (who are shortly going on tour) is well known in West of England musical circles. At 15 years of age he was the youngest official organist in the United Kingdom. He held this responsible position at the Wesley Memorial church, Bristol, and his musical services were even then in great demand. He has a splendid voice and as a pianist has few equals this side of the Rhine.

The Indian Rope Trick.

Judging by recent introductions into their programmes, concert parties are all on the lookout for originality. Many of them have succeeded in freshening up their shows in consequence, but credit must be given to the Eastern Division D.A.C. for striking the unbeaten track. At a recent concert the programme included an exhibition of oriental magic given by two members of the Indian section. In a series of remarkably clever illusions, the famous rope trick thoroughly bewildered the audience.

Entertainment at Lulsdorf.

All ranks stationed in and about Lulsdorf hied them to Broni Hall on Saturday to listen to an excellent concert provided by a party of No. 1 Section, D.A.C. Eastern Division. The opening item was orignal and enjoyable, a setting entitled "Round the Camp Fire" forming a capital background for the rendering of various songs.

A well varied programme was contributed to by Gnr. Hughes, Lieut. Chaldicott, Dvr. Hughes, Gnr. Tann, Dvrs. Petro and George; Lieut. Couchman and others.

At the conclusion Capt. G. McEwen, D.C.M., R.F.A. congratulated the party on the excellence of their performance and expressed the hope that it would be the forerunner of many similar future events.

In few words.

"The Merry Micks" are due to appear at the Central Y.M.C.A., Cologne, to-morrow evening.

British Rhine Army Musical Society rehearsals are going strong.

"The Tabs," at the conclusion of their present run, are to go on leave. JACQUES.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

A Great Match Suggested.

A little bird whispers that the opening match for Holland Park Rink will be Jim Driscoll v. Charles Ledoux. The Rink is under the control of the N.S.C. authorities.

Royalty and Tennis.

The King and Queen, accompanied by Princess Mary, were at Wimbledon on Saturday witnessing the tennis. Play was stopped for a few minutes, while the spectators rose and heartily cheered the royal party.

Holing in One.

James Braid is evidently recovering his short game again. He did the second hole on the new course at Walton Heath this week in one. This is the eleventh occasion on which the ex-champion has holed out in one.

£80,000 Gift.

£80,000 has been presented to the French Aero Club as a gift to put it on a sound financial basis by M. Henry Deutsch de la Meurthe, whose interest from the first in aviation has been continuously maintained.

Kissed the Winner.

An American general dispensing medals to pretty nurses recently regretted that all armies did not adopt the French custom. A lot of people felt like this on Saturday when Max Decugis kissed the winner of the ladies' final.

English v. Scots.

The revival of the English v. Scots bowling match of the London and Southern Counties B.A. at Westcliff produced a victory for the former by 252 to 219.

Familiar Faces Missing.

Many familiar faces, such as those of Ommundsen and Tippings, are missing at Bisley this week, for they have made the great sacrifice.

Ball-Punching Stunt.

Sergt. R. Pernott, 3rd City of London Royal Fusiliers, at ten o'clock on Monday morning, at the London Scottish Drill Hall, Buckingham Gate, began a fifty hour non-stop ball-punching stunt.

Racing Pigeons.

It was in 1899 that the Sandringham lofts first made a fine reputation, racing the North route, the Prince of Wales (afterwards King Edward), on the 27th June, 1899, winning first prize Lerwick, 510 miles,

Echoes from Rhineland.

Arrival of the G. S. Ribbon.

Yesterday afternoon when the S. S. Barbarossa steamed up the Rhine it included in its cargo eighteen thousand yards of the much discussed active service medal ribbon. When this will be issued, it is difficult to say, but in the meantime it reposes in the Cologne Ordnance store. Assuming that the issue will be two inches per man, there will be sufficient ribbon to provide for 324,000 troops.

More Cinema "Screams."

It is not to be supposed that the firm responsible for a certain war film, now showing not a hundred miles from Cologne, knew that it would be screened before a hypercritical audience of "Tommies," or they would have paid more attention to detail. As it is, a would-be pathetic two-part film becomes a screaming farce. "For example the officer-hero departs to fight his country's battles amidst tears, and we next see him at Mons single handedly holding up the German hordes, and sporting the badge of a non-combatant battalion. Wounded and left behind, he gets through the German lines by "doing in" a sentry with a small pen-knife and arrives home in England in a peasant's disguise and with a healthy growth of whiskers. This mirth-provoking picture ends by the officer donning his uniform which the Germans have apparently forwarded, and his wife stating that as he has been badly wounded he won't have to go back. Needless to say, all the while this picture was being shown the house echoed with the laughter of a military audience.

New Field of Activity.

Comment has already been made upon the large number and quaint wording of matrimonial advertisements which appear in the German daily press, but the following from a Hanover newspaper is nothing if not original:—"Engineer of the Navy whose future has been destroyed by the end of the war, wishes to create a new one, if possible by marriage. He was lately U boat engineer, up to now single; he hopes in this manner to get a new field of activity."

Replacing the Brass.

Many will have noticed what may be termed the standardization of door handles and window fasteners in Germany. These are practically indentical in every household. They are straight and about 5 inches long, the door being opened by downward pressure on the handle. The use of these handles is, we believe, due to the almost entire disappearance of brass handles, a war exigency.

An Array of Lectures.

The troops in Rhineland will be well off for lectures during this month and next, a splendid programme having been arranged for them. Particulars as to dates, times, and places can be had from Major K. L. Bowen, Room 125, Excelsior Hotel. The Rev. James Burns will lecture on "Great Pictures" and "The work of G. F. Watts," Mr. H. S. Keighwin on "Rhodesia," Capt. Cherry Kearton on "Photographing Wild Life" and "Across Central Africa." Mr. N. Dubery's subject will be "Industrial Reconstruction," Col. Lynden-Bell will speak of "Russia and the Caucasus," Mr. E. B. Denham taking the "The Far East," "India," "British possessions in Asia" and "Sport in Asia" as his topics. The Rev. Dr. Rosedale will talk on "Bohemia," "Turkey" and "Trade guilds," Prof. A. Findlay on "Nitric Acid and Fertilizers from the Air" as well as "The Romance of Cellulose." Capt. H. de Windt will describe a journey "Through the Balkans" and "From Paris to New York by land;" the Rev. W. R. Harvey will tell "How a modern newspaper is made" and talk of "The wonders of modern Science;" while Mr. Allen Upward is to lecture on his "Adventures in Nigeria" and "Self-Determination." This is decidedly an attractive list about which we shall have more to say.

Disparity in Ages.

A correspondent comments upon the disparity of ages between the sexes in Germany and asks whether it may be regarded as the rule that the male should be older than the fräulein. This is explained in part by the fact that the man does not entertain serious courtship until he has a "settled" position. This is opposed to our English custom. There in the mating of the sexes, equality of age is more or less aimed at and generally approved, while the settlement of position is treated as of secondary importance.

To Counteract Temperature.

Many people will wonder how it is, in view of the principle "that heat expands and cold contracts," that bridges such as the Hohenzollern Bridge, with its huge masses of steel, are not severely damaged by frost. An examination of the bridge will show how this difficulty is overcome. Each span of the bridge is totally distinct from the other, and the ends are merely laid on the stone piers, not being fixed to the masonry in any way. Between each span is left a space, thus giving room for expansion. Coinciding with the ends of the spans on the mid-stream piers, will be seen an arrangement similar to a set of points.

How The Points Work.

The ends of the rails coming from the river bank are prolonged and taper off to a point. The rails approaching from the centre span turn gradually outwards as the pointed ends become thicker, and where the latter again become the full-sized rail, the ends are turned abruptly. The two rail ends therefore slide to and from, while providing for continuity in all weathers of the line. The junction of the sections of roadway is effected by means of comb-like gratings projecting from each span, which fit into each other, minutely enough to allow any vehicle to pass across in safety but at the same time providing several inches of "elbow room" for the expansion and contraction of each section of the bridge.

Billeting Rates.

The rates paid by the German authorities for billeting are now available and provide for a payment of six marks a day in the case of a General, four marks for a staff officer and three marks for an officer. For other ranks 1.50 marks is payable; three marks for a motor-car and 25 pfg. for a horse. The expenses for heating and light are not included, but the rate for the winter is increased a mark in every case. Payments for casinos, messes and guards rooms have yet to be fixed.

Remarkable Achievement.

During the month of June, the 2nd Northern Light Trench Mortar Battery claim to have beaten all records for membership in the Army branch of the National War Savings Association. There have been only 61 all ranks in the Battery at different times during the month, and of these 52 have become members of the Association. The total subscribed was £83-3-3. The average daily ration strength of the Battery was 50.68 so that they shew the extraordinary figure of 102.6 per cent. of the average ration strength! Can any unit beat this?

Well Meant.

A few examples have appeared of German flounderings in English when advertising wares and services, but some choice plums of humour as below will yet be of good digestion. Starting with the cafés there is a shop near this office which offers "2 Coiled eggs etc" for 5.50 mks. Elsewhere in the town the tariff is shown thus-wise: "Coffee: dish 30 pfg; chokolate, a cup 1 mk., tea, 1mk black tea —,50 pfg." A jewellery shop has at least three amusing items: "Gents' watch-chains, latest and nobel patterns," etc. "cigarette cases in large sortments" and "safety razors with 1a quality." A certain barber's shop offers "Hair-cutting and singing." Close to the jeweller's is a fancy-goods shop advertising "leatherstropp for watch." Another barber's shop declares its bayrum to be excellent against heatache. A boot-shop two doors farther up displays "first-class booth polishes—brown and black."

A Good Plan.

A capital plan is in vogue at a cinema in the Brühl district. In between each act those who have seen the performance leave their seats and pass down the right side of the hall to the exits. Their seats are taken by those who were sitting next to them, each one passing along the row. This plan does away with the uncomfortable experience of people either making one stand up, or else squeezing their way past and incidentally stepping on the toes of those who are seated. A first aid box hangs on the wall, a useful thing in cases of faintness which very often occur in such places of amusement.

Monuments of the War.

Amid all the controversy associated with war memorials, their structure and character, we welcome the decision of the French Government to preserve in their present condition selected sites along the Western front. Already a decree prohibiting any alteration has gone forth. It is not difficult to imagine what would be the effect if these sites sacred to many of us, passed into the disfiguring and mercenary hands of the café proprietors, the souvenir sellers, the restaurateurs, and the hotel keepers. Historical spots would be obliterated in their effort to provide attractions for the coming throngs of tourists who will shortly be let loose over areas which to many of us are best forgotten. Among the places already to be preserved are the forts of Verdun, the trenches of Soissons, the underground mazes at Mouquet Farm, the ruins of Bapaume, and the mangled remains of Pozieres.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Sergt. G. Mc. Wille, 3rd Coy., 4th. Seaforth Highlanders, Rhine Army.

GIANT RHINE BARGES.

The Rhine barges are mammoths of their type. They combine the breadth of the Thames barge with the length of those used on the English canals. Multiply by five, and add the accommodation of a decent cottage to the stern. Roughly 250 feet long and a beam of 25 feet, they have a carrying capacity up to more than 1,500 tons.

Nevertheless these monsters would come under Hilaire Belloc's classification of "little ships." Four or five linked together, and towed by a tug to the work which in more commodious waters would be undertaken by a fair sized tramp. As many as a dozen "empties" are pulled up stream by one tug. About 90 per cent. of the cargo trade of Germany's great river is done by barge.

Wood, potatoes and land produce generally are floated from the upper Rhine to the great industrial towns around Dusseldorf. Sheet iron, chemical salts and Westphalian coals are shipped from the towns to the agricultural districts up stream.

These lands and towns bordering the Rhine are interdependent and in the river have a wonderfully handy and cheap highway of commerce. No wonder the Rhinelanders wished to form a republic of their own!

The immense barges we see to-day have been evolved as the system of transport most suited to the river and class of cargo.

Some of us remember the squat, tubby, screw-driven barges of the Somme. But they were in keeping with the size and trade of the river. They were invaluable to us during the Somme struggle, tranquilly bearing their thirty "neat" or "spine" cases from Corbie and Amiens to Abbeville.

Amiens recalls another boat peculiar to its environment, the bateau d'hortillon, that picturesque gondola-shaped boat of the water gardens.

How easily and gracefully the old dames of the "hortillonage" piloted their salad-laden barques to the waterside market on the quay, their only means of propulsion a short shovel-like paddle worked from the stern.

Contrast this with the panting tug of the Rhine, pulling a bunch of bull-nosed leviathans against the stream at less than walking pace. Yet the ponderous boats have their pleasing aspects. Massed at their moorings by the wharves, they give a picture of tranquility. Caught in the right smoky haze of indistinctness, they present a fine study for some budding Turner. Only the racing river washing their prows mars the peaceful inertia which we associate with the Norfolk wherry.

Some of the barges have masts, but sails are a minus quantity. One is surprised at the singular absence of sails on so great a river. Even the pleasure sail in this reach is limited to some half dozen small yachts at Rodenkirchen.

". . . . The bulk of the old Regular Army long ago made the last sacrifice. Those who survive will, we are convinced, feel nothing but pride in this simple and moving record of supreme phase in British military annals when the old order passed away for ever, and in passing saved the Empire. . . . Lord French writes tersely and clearly. . . . When he pauses in his narrative, it is either to give a little picture of one or other of his distinguished comrades and friends, or to explain the trend of his own thought at a particular phase in the campaign. OFFICIAL PEACE REJOICINGS.

GREAT ALLIED MILITARY PAGEANT IN LONDON. ILLUMINATIONS, SONGS AND FIREWORKS.

CHAMPION FOR EX-CROWN PRINCE.

PEACE DAY.

GREAT LONDON PAGEANT OF ALLIED TROOPS.

Plans have been practically completed for London's peace celebrations on Saturday 19th July.

The principal feature will be a great military pageant, which will include representatives of the various British fighting services, and detachments from our Dominion forces and the armies of our Allies. It is expected that the men and women participating in the march will total approximately 18,700.

The King, with other members of the Royal family, and representatives of the Army, Navy, and both Houses of Parliament, will stand on the steps of the Victoria Memorial, in front of Buckingham Palace, and his Majesty will take the salute.

In honour of the gallant dead, a temporary memorial is to be erected in Whitehall, almost exactly opposite Downing-street. As they approach the memorial, the troops will open out, and will march on either side of it, giving the salute as they pass.

WARSHIPS ON THE RIVER.

A large number of warships and small craft will be assembled in the Thames, between the mouth of the river at Southend and the Houses of Parliament at Westminster. They will remain for about a week, and be open to the inspection of visitors during the entire period.

Special celebrations for school children are to be held in the London parks. It is hoped that the King and Queen will be able to visit Greenwich Park on July 22, when 22,000 Deptford children are to be entertained.

Mr. Bonar Law announced in the House of Commons yesterday that it is proposed to declare Saturday, July 19, a Bank Holiday.

NATIONS PARTICIPATING.

The committee, which, under the presidency of Earl Curzon, is responsible for the official side of the celebration of peace on Saturday, July 19, has now completed its arrangements and although slight modifications may be necessary, the following statement can be taken as substantially correct:

The pricipal item will be a great military pageant, which will include representatives of the various British fighting services and detachments from our Dominion forces and the armies of our Allies.

Detachments representing the military forces of the Powers associated with England in the war will be in Paris for the great march of the Allied armies on July 14, and they have been invited to cross to England for our march on the 19th.

The Government of India has agreed to send a force, but owing to the fact that the chosen date has been altered from Aug. 4 to July 19, it is doubtful whether all of them will arrive in time. It is certain, however, that a considerable detachment will be seen in the procession.

The total of 18,700 will be made up as follows:—Representatives of the British and Dominion Military Forces, including the Army, Air Force, and the various women's corps associated with them 5,000; naval ratings, 4,000; officers and men of Mercantile Marine, 1,000; American Army, 3,000; Belgian, 1,000; Italian, 1,000; French, 1,000; Japanese, 1,000; Serbian, 150; Roumanian, 150; Czecho-Slovakian, 150; Portuguese, 150; Polish, 150; Greek, 150; Siamese, 150; Chinese, 150.

Kensington Gardens have been selected as the assembly ground for this huge force, and the majority of the units composing it will camp on the ground the previous night. The remainder will be accommodated in huts and hostels as near to the gardens as possible, and will march down early in the morning. The march is timed to start at eleven o'clock, and will probably occupy about two hours.

CHILDREN'S FESTIVALS.

In the afternoon the general public will be left to amuse itself in any way it sees fit, but the children will be the special care of the Committee. Arrangements have been made in every available part of the metropolitan area to organize children's festivals, games, and general rejoicing.

Features of the evening will be general illuminations, a grand firework display in Hyde Park, and singing by the Imperial Choir of 10,000 voices. Many other festivities, such as gala theatrical performances and the great procession of boats on the Thames will be held on subsequent dates owing to the impossibility of crowding everything into one day.

SIGNIFICANT MONUMENT.

The memorial to the gallant dead which is to be erected in Whitehall, and on either side of which the saluting troops will pass, is not to be a tribute of sorrow but of glory. Architecturally the structure will be a simple pylon consisting of a shell of stone substitute. It will be 30ft high, and the other dimensions, which have not yet been decided upon, will be proportionately great.

The top will be covered with a great Union Jack, surmounted by a laurel wreath. Two laurel wreaths will adorn each of the longer sides of the oblong, and one will be hung at each end. There will be floral decoration, but along the sides will be draped three flags—the Red Ensign, for the Mercantile Marine; the White Ensign, for the Navy; and the Union Jack, for the Army.

No special medal will be struck for officers and men who have been mentioned in despatches, but a certificate will be issued.

EXTRADITIONS.

EX-KAISER'S BROTHER OFFERS TO EXPLAIN.

Every possible step is being taken, stated Mr. Bonar Law in Parliament yesterday, to prevent the escape of the ex-Kaiser from Holland, but he could add nothing to the Premier's statement regarding the trial.

In Paris it is announced that the conference will shortly discuss two solutions regarding the extradition. Either the powers represented at the conference will send a collective note to the Dutch Government, or Great Britain will receive a mandate in the name of the Allies to demand the extradition of the ex-Kaiser.

Prince Henry of Prussia (the ex-Kaiser's brother) has telegraphed to King George asking him to desist from extradition proceedings. He says he is ready to refute the calumnies regarding the Kaiser which have been spread about for years in contradiction of all truth.

Berlin papers publish declarations of German military and naval officers stating that they will all formally refuse to appear before an Allied Tribunal should they be called upon to do so, nor will any submarine commander present himself. Several have taken refuge in neutral countries and others say that they will commit suicide rather than surrender.

CROWN PRINCE'S CHAMPION.

Capt. Arnhold Rechberg, the former adjutant to the ex-Crown Prince, has written to M. Clemenceau declaring that the Crown-Prince supported all efforts to prevent a war; that in the autumn of 1914 he advocated negotiations with France and in 1917 formulated plans of a general peace through the intermediacy of Great Britain.

ON THE LIST.

The offences for which some of the officers will be brought to trial are as follows:—

Albrecht von Württemberg: Massacres on the Somme and at Ypres.

General von Kluck: Forced women and children to go before his army.

Liman von Sanders: Massacres in Armenia.

General Stenger: Gave the order on the 26th August 1914 not to make any prisoners.

General von Ostrowsky: Looting of Deinze, 103 civilians shot.

General von Teny: 111 civilians shot.

General von Oltzen: Commandant of Döberitz Camp.

Lieut. Rydiges: Commandant of the Ruhleben Internment Camp.

Major von Goertz: Commandant of Magdeburg Camp.

Niemeyer (two brothers): Commandants of Minden and Klausthal Camps.

Crown-Prince of Bavaria: Deportations in Northern France.

General von Mackensen: Burning and looting in Roumania.

General von Bülow: Burning of Andenne.

Baron von Laucken: Nurse Cavell.

Admiral von Capelle: U boat warfare.

Lieut. Werner, Lieut. Valentiner, and Lieut. Forstner: Sinking of hospital ships.

von Manteuffel: Burning of Louvain.

Major von Bülow: Destruction of Aershot, execution of 150 prisoners.

PREPARING TO PAY.

GERMANY'S FORTHCOMING HEAVY TAXATION.

At Wednesday's meeting of the German National Assembly, Herr Erzberger, in submitting the Government's financial programme, said that bankruptcy would not save Germany, but would deprive them of the credit which they wanted and must have. The drafting of two important new taxes was almost completed. One was a large single levy on property and the other a large tax on business turnover. Even if these are passed, he said, it will not be sufficient for the payment of the instalment of the indemnity due in the autumn. New bills will be introduced with the object of covering the deficit and the burdens of taxation will reach a terrible height.

He declared it to be the duty of propertied people not only to bow to state compulsion but to achieve the inward conviction of the necessity for giving up all superfluous riches. Erzberger accused his predecessor Helfferich of having carried on a most wanton financial policy. A just taxation he maintained, would mean a quickly acting and excellent socialisation and would save Germany from collapse.

BERLIN TRAFFIC TROUBLES.

In Berlin the strike situation is unchanged. The railway authorities refuse to enter into negotiations until traffic is resumed and the railwaymen admit a breach of contract.

At Dortmund there have been many arrests on account of disturbances and the Communists are agitating for a general strike if the Government troops are not withdrawn.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is making good progress.

MASKED BURGLARS.

ONE GUARDS VICTIMS WHILE THE OTHER RIFLES SAFE.

At Bow-street Police Court yesterday the hearing was resumed of the case in which two young Italians, Peter Albert Gaida, otherwise Vincent, motor mechanic, and Natale Auda, waiter, are charged with robbery and assault at the Elisée Restaurant, Coventry-street; with wounding Mr. Curry, clerk to the governors of Guy's Hospital; and with stealing a watch from Mr. Horace Byard, clerk, in Belsize-lane, Hampstead.

Mr. Muskett said the prosecution proposed to proceed first with the Elisée Restaurant case, in regard to which there was no direct evidence identifying Auda as one of the robbers, although there were various circumstances pointing in that direction. Up to within two days of the robbery he had, for a period of nearly four years, been employed at the restaurant. On Sunday, May 18, the regular manager of the restaurant was away, and Mr. O'Flaherty, assistant manager, was in charge. After the place had been closed and the staff had left, he locked up £435 in the safe, and was about to leave the premises when he was seized by a man, alleged to be Gaida, who said: "I am a policeman. Not a word! There is a man in the cellar." At that moment Mr. O'Flaherty was joined by the porter, and they suddenly had a torchlight turned on to them, and found themselves faced by two masked men, each pointing a revolver at them. These men demanded the keys from Mr. O'Flaherty.

When he first realised that there was danger, Mr. O'Flaherty had thrown the keys among a pile of empty bottles. Owing to the persistent threats of violence on the part of the masked men he revealed where the keys were, and Vincent, taking possession of them, proceeded to the office. Mr. O'Flaherty and the porter meanwhile had been forced down into the dark stokehole, where the second robber kept guard over them. Gaida returned with the securities from the safe. The robbers had some dispute, seemingly about the division of the spoil, but they eventually arranged matters. Then they made Mr. O'Flaherty and the porter stand back to back and tied them up with cords. Very soon after the robbers had departed the victims were able to release themselves and give the alarm. The prisoners had been associating for some time.

The hearing was adjourned.

AFGHANISTAN.

OUR CASUALTIES ON THE FRONTIER.

In the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Montague, replying to Capt. Brown, stated that the total casualties to the end of June among British Units along the Afghan frontier were: killed and died of wounds, three officers and forty-three other ranks; wounded, nine officers and one hundred and nine other ranks. The Government of India, for military reasons, considered it undesirable at present to publish the names of units engaged.

OFFICIAL DOG STORY.

In the House of Commons the following story of a motor car and two dogs was told on Wednesday. It will appeal to those who believe that "speech was given us to conceal our thoughts." The story opens with a question by Commander Viscount Curzon, who inquired upon what duties was a certain Government motor-car being employed at 1.12 p.m. in Pall-mall, on Wednesday, July 2; whether or no two large dogs were in occupation of the car, and for what purposes they were there.

The answer was that the motor-car was detailed for duty with headquarters of the Women's Legion (laughter,—on the occasion referred to. The headquarters are at 15, Pall-mall East. The commandant ordinarily uses a motor-cycle and side-car, and invariably takes her dogs with her for the purpose of guarding the machine—(laughter)—which would otherwise be left unattended. On this occasion the motor-cycle was under repair and a car had to be used. There is no regulation forbidding the presence of dogs in military motor-cars. Nor any reason why this woman officer, if she is accustomed, in the discharge of her duties, to use a motor-cycle, should not, in emergency, be granted the use of a motor-car; and as to whether the dogs were or were not in the car it was surprising that the House of Commons troubles about it.

Mr. Jerry McVeagh's pertinent comment on the last point was that if the dogs were unmuzzled they were breaking the regulations, and if they were muzzled how could they guard the car?

BUYING GERMAN BUSINESSES.

In reply to Mr. Arnold, who asked the President of the Board of Trade in the House of Commons whether he has any official information that American firms are acquiring German businesses, Sir Auckland Geddes replied: "I have no official information, but I am inclined to regard the action suggested as by no means improbable, not only as regards American, but also British firms, and, indeed, firms of all Allied nationalities."

SLOUGH DEPOT.

How the Committee of Inquiry were handicapped in their investigations into the Slough Motor Depot, is illustrated by the following extract from their report.

"The Committee have not been supplied with the War Office files carrying the history beyond the summer of 1917. It is stated that these files cannot be found. It has therefore been impossible to follow up responsibility for delay in that department."

RAILWAY STRIKE.

ULTIMATUM TO THE GREAT NORTHERN COMPANY.

Serious developments have taken place in the trouble on the Great Northern and Caledonian Railways. The executive of the National Union of Railwaymen decided on Tuesday night that unless their demands regarding hours and the working of the latest agreement were met by three o'clock on Thursday, a strike on both systems would be authorised.

The reply from the Great Northern Company to the Executive's request, that men who voluntarily joined the colours shall be treated in the same way as men released by the Company, is regarded by the Railwaymen's executive as a direct refusal.

The dispute on the Caledonian Railway relates to the surfacemen's hours of labour, and the Railway Company's Executive Committee is asked to give a definite ruling.

CAFÉ CASHIER.

AWARDED DAMAGES AGAINST R.A.F. OFFICER.

Miss Dorothy Gent, formerly a cashier in a café at Chester, was awarded £300 damages at Chester Assizes in a breach of promise action against Captain Bertram Ankers, D.C.M., R.A.F. of Tattenham, near Chester.

Miss Gent stated that she met Captain Ankers when she was a cashier in the café, and became engaged to him in February 1915, after he had joined the Air Force as a mechanic, the arrangement being that the marriage should take place when the war was over. They were on most affectionate terms till July 1918, when suddenly he failed to answer her letters. The next she heard or saw of him was when he visited his home last September, and he then told her she could consider the engagement broken off.

"In one of his letters to me," Miss Gent said, "he wrote: 'You are absolutely all I have and want in this world, and goodness knows what I would do without you.'"

Captain Ankers said that he considered the engagement was mutually broken of at the interview, and a month afterwards he married a woman in the South of England.

WILSON ON THE MAINTENANCE OF PEACE.

Major Scott and General Maitland of the R. 34 were presented to President Wilson just before he began his speech at Carnegie Hall on Tuesday. He heartily congratulated them and they were enthusiastically cheered by the audience.

The President, in the course of his speech, said that the peace was a just one, which, if it can be preserved, will save the world from bloodshed in the future. The great task now was to preserve. He had come back with a heart full of enthusiasm and he intended throwing everything he could by way of influence or action into the preservation of peace, so that men looking back on this generation of Americans could say it was true to the vision which it saw at the birth of the League of Nations.

DEMOBILIZED OFFICERS' UNIFORMS.

An Army Order issued yesterday decided that officers who have relinquished their commissions, and who have been permitted to retain rank, and also officers who have been demobilized, may wear uniform on special occasions when attending ceremonials and entertainments of a military nature, and on other appropriate occasions.

It is expressly stated that uniforms may not be worn at political meetings, and that the order is not to be interpreted as granting permission for the wearing of uniform generally.

SOUTHEND ON STRIKE.

The whole of the Corporation employees at Southend struck work on Wednesday, the men asking for the same rates of pay as received by London municipal workers.

This demand if granted would cost Southend something like £60,000 yearly. The strike has caused a complete stoppage of lighting, tramways, sewage works, swimming baths and piers.

BRITISH GRAVES IN GERMANY.

Under Article 225 of the Treaty of Peace the German Government has agreed to respect and maintain the graves of our soldiers and sailors who died as prisoners of war and were buried in Germany. Also in order to meet the wishes of those who did not wish that the bodies of their relatives should rest in German soil, it had further been agreed that in such cases every reasonable facility should be afforded for the removal of the bodies to their own country. Detailed arrangements, which must in any case take some time to complete, apply to men in Germany and on German soil.

"TO BUCK THEM UP."

Sir Douglas Haig, speaking at Newcastle said that people talk a great deal about our Allies and it was necessary and right that we should do so "to buck them up" during the fighting.

"But don't forget", he said, "that it was the British Empire which won the war. One doesn't want to particularise but you know. Russia let us down and the Italians didn't do a great deal. For the last two years Old England bore the brunt of the fighting and I hope everyone will realise that and stick to the fellows who fought and suffered and to their dependents.

The National War Savings Committee state that the number of War Savings Certificates sold during the week ended June 28 was 1,974,756 bringing the total to that date up to 332,086,149

MAYFAIR TRAGEDY.

SUICIDE OF WELL-KNOWN SOCIETY WOMAN.

A tragedy in high life occurred in the West End of London on Wednesday. Mrs. Arthur Eliot, better known as Mrs. Atherton, the society celebrity, being found shot at her house in Curzon-street, Mayfair at an early hour of the morning. Shots had entered her head from a gun lying by her side. The circumstances are said to support the theory of suicide and it is stated that the deceased left one letter adressed to the Coroner and another to a personal friend.

Deceased was living alone in the house with a maid. The latter heard shots and rushed to Mrs. Eliot's room, into which she had to force an entry. She discovered deceased sitting in a chair with terrible injuries to the head having evidently pressed the trigger of the gun with her foot.

The motive for the desperate act is at present unknown but will probably be disclosed at the inquest.

Mrs. Eliot was married last April to Capt. Eliot, the well-known dramatist and grandson of the late Earl of St. Germans. As Mrs. Atherton she figured in several notable lawsuits and her tragic end has created a great sensation in London.

PRICE OF COAL.

GOVERNMENT RAISE COST TO CONSUMER.

Sir Eric Geddes announced in the House of Commons yesterday that the Government concede that the price of coal to the consumer must be raised by six shillings a ton from July 16th, and stated that this step must be taken in order to meet the increased cost due to the recommendations of the Sankey report. He regarded the probable effect as very serious.

Mr. Stanton accused the Government of pandering to the miners against the best interest of the miners themselves and said that an enquiry should be made immediately into the causes of the serious deficiency of output.

Mr. Bonar Law said this was not a hasty decision but agreed to a debate on the question. This will take place on Monday next.

IRISH PEACE NIGHT.

W.R.A.F.'S COMPENSATION CLAIM.

The scenes in Dublin on peace night were recalled yesterday by a prosecution in the Police Courts and by numerous applications to the North Dublin Rural Council for compensation for malicious injury. It will be remembered that crowds of men attacked soldiers and others who celebrating the signing of the peace treaty, overturned and burnt a military motor lorry in Sackville-street, and assaulted several members of the Women's Royal Air Force.

Eleven members of the Women's Royal Air Force stationed at Gormanstown notified their intention to apply for £20 compensation apiece for malicious injuries received in Sackville-street on peace night, while in the execution of their duty. The applications are made under the new Criminal Injuries Act, and will be heard before the Recorder of Dublin.

A preliminary notice was served from the President of the Royal Air Council claiming £167 for damage to the motor lorry which was set on fire.

A VIOLENT AMERICAN.

At North London Police Court yesterday, before Mr. Rooth, Daniel Hupp, 26, a sapper in the Royal Engineers, was charged on remand with a series of assaults. Hupp, who was said to be an American who had joined the British Army soon after the outbreak of war, attempted to leave a tramway car by the driver's end. He was told to go the other way, but he said he was a "Yank" and did not take orders from an Englishman. He struck the driver and the conductor, and also assaulted a policeman.

Mr. Rooth said that soldiers must be taught that they must not act with violence towards police-constables. He sentenced Hupp to six weeks' imprisonment with hard labour.

STATE INSURANCE PROFIT.

Mr. Houston asked the President of the Board of Trade yesterday, if it was not a fact that the British Government had made a profit of over £16,000,000 out of the premiums paid by British shipowners, and if losses had been incurred upon the insurance of cargoes and neutral vessels.

Sir A. Geddes replied, that so far as the preliminary figures were available, they showed a state of affairs closely approximating to those stated.

He added, in reply to Mr. A. Shaw, that the fact that the Government has made a profit would disabuse the public mind of the idea that sea insurance was granted free of charge.

SEAMAN AVENGES INSULT.

To avenge insolent remarks made concerning his naval uniform, a young seaman, John Morgan, knocked down David Thomas Price, a Welsh miner, and fractured his jaw.

Price sued the seaman for assault at Merthyr but the magistrate, refusing to convict, told the miner: "You got what you asked for, and thoroughly well deserved."

"This seaman," he added, "belongs to a fighting Service, and, like his race, he is proud of the uniform he wears."

The Home Secretary having carefully considered all circumstances and having caused special medical enquiry as to the mental condition of Beckett, the Forest Gate murderer, regrets that he has failed to find any reasons which would justify him in advising the King to interfere with the due course of the law.

THE POWER OF MUSIC.

The other evening we sat enjoying a perfect banquet of melody produced at the magic command of two great artistes, Wilhelm Backhaus and Alfred Barker, the former being the world-famed pianist and erstwhile lance-corporal in the German army, the other an English artilleryman and late Russian Court violinist.

We could not help marvelling at the wondrous power of music which had brought these two together, and we reflected on its influence on the lives of men.

Music, as we know, is one of the grandest elements in religion, and is as necessary to the soul as is food to the body. It is the medium through which every human emotion may be expressed, and a ladder to a higher sphere.

It constitutes the most perfect language for the exchange of thoughts in an ideal League of Nations, and, as a weapon for peace, can never be excelled.

What a melancholy world it would be without music! How drab and dreary it would seem if Nature withdrew her melody and the song-birds lost their trill and the waterbrooks meandered dumbly on their course!

Then, as we noted the rapt attention of the large audience of British soldiers held in the spell created by two men, who, a few short months before, were soldiers in the opposing armies of nations engaged in deadly combat, we wondered how the British people could be accused of being unmusical.

As a race we are proverbially shy of exhibiting any form of emotion, and it may be due to this fact that we are considered incapable of expressing our feelings musically and that the native born musician has not been encouraged to the extent that foreign talent has.

Actually, Britain is one of the most musical of nations.

We remember in the dark days of war, how the heart of the British Tommy hungered for music! "Curse the noise of those infernal guns" we heard one say, "what would I give to hear some decent music!"

The war has altered many things, and a full realization of the necessity of music in the life of the nation is bound to produce such a revival as has never before been witnessed.

Now that peace is again with us, perhaps Old England will astonish the world, for we are musically awake, and who shall gainsay us the right of musical expression and appreciation?

WHAT IS WRONG?

One of the things that has to be got going with the utmost speed possible is the revival and expansion of Britain's overseas trade.

It is on this, that our commercial future mainly depends. It is vital. Yet progress seems to be very slow, and the resignation of Sir Arthur Steel Maitland, who has been head of the Department of Overseas Trade, which was specially formed to foster business abroad is significant.

He claims that he is unable to continue the work of re-establishing international trade, finding it impossible to make headway against the apathy of the Government. He states that his efforts have been constantly hung up by official obstruction and the delays in re-organizing our consular services overseas.

This is a lamentable condition of affairs. Now that the war has been won on the field, the war of commerce has begun and organization that should have been ready to face the new conditions is non-existent, while efforts to bring it into being, are thwarted in the way Sir Arthur Steel Maitland describes.

British trade abroad has not only to regain its old position, but to increase by leaps and bounds, now that as the result of war, we are no longer a wealthy nation.

Our house should have been set in order long before this. A definite trade policy ought already to have been formulated, otherwise we risk drifting back into the old fatal grooves.

The importance of our foreign trade is supreme and no halting methods should be tolerated by a business people.

THE APPEAL OF RACING.

Wherever the Englishman finds himself, the race course makes its appeal, and never was this better exemplified than at what we may regard as the peace meeting on the Cologne course. All roads led in the direction of Merheim; from midday onwards] there was a procession of vehicles of every description.

Staff officers turned their cars to good purpose, junior officers competed for places on hired conveyances, while Tommy, intent upon a taste of the fun to be had, reached the course by the more democratic tramcar.

The meeting might have been run off on an English course, for there were most of the reminders and features of one at home.

The action of the authorities in throwing open the gates to residents led to a curious blending of nationalities. English officers and men rubbed shoulders in the crowd with Germans, a fact which led one to speculate between the task of spotting winners, upon the change which peace has brought in its train. The sport was good. There were large fields and some close finishes and we join heartily in the congratulations which will be showered upon those responsible.

Such attractions bring us a taste of home just at a time when routine begins to pall, and incidentally help to bring about a better understanding between military and residents, if that is possible.

INTO OCCUPIED COUNTRY.

By CICELY HAMILTON.
(Author of "Diana of Dobsons.")

From the Gare du Nord, Brussels, at seven in the morning; passing prosaically and comfortably by Louvain and Liege with their memories of five years ago — but with an odd conviction at back of your mind that in spite of the assurance of the railway time-table, in spite of the permit tucked away in your pocket-book, you cannot be travelling into Germany.

For four years and more the thing was impossible — and it is difficult to forget those four years. This time a twelvemonth the German borders were in Picardy; you saw them at night as a flare in the sky and heard them—a never-ceasing thunder ... and now at Brussels the clerk gives a glance at your permit and hands you out change for the price of a ticket to the frontier.

You take your seat without ceremony, as if travelling to Birmingham or Bournemouth; but, for all the long months since the armistice was signed, there is a sense of adventure in your soul.

At the last Belgian station, without leaving the train, you give up your ticket to the collector — who inquires politely if you are travelling further, and, receiving an answer in the affirmative, leaves you ticketless and bound for the frontier.

Nearing Germany.

Ten minutes wait or so and the train starts to crawl out of Belgium; the distance to the next halt is too short to justify the getting up of speed and we had barely left Wolkenraedt when we steam into Herbesthal and stop. Herbesthal where we change — and which is Germany. Less than four hours from Brussels — and last year a million miles away. Many thousands of men have died in the attempt to set foot where I set it this morning.

There are swarming soldiers on the platforms where once you descended for the customs. British soldiers and Belgian in fairly equal numbers; upon whom the civilians in a local train look down from their windows — with what thoughts?

Gone are the customs officials with their uniforms and pieces of chalk; the doors where you passed them in procession are closed and in their place is established the R.T.O. — who, after the usual glance at your permit, provides the necessary slip of paper that entitles you to travel further.

Armed with this, but still ticketless, you board the incoming express from Paris to Cologne; which sometaing over two hours later will land you on the banks of the Rhine.

The German porters bestow your baggage in the crowded corridor and receive the reward of their assistance as cheerfully as in days gone by; and, civilian travellers being fewer than of yore, there is a willingness to handle your traps that contrasts not unpleasantly with the state of things at Euston or Victoria.

For all I know there may be Germans travelling somewhere on the lengthy train; but if so there is no sign of them in the restaurant car where a couple of French civilians strike a note of contrast to the uniforms, khaki and blue.

Once Forbidden Ground.

We of this Paris-Cologne express are an alien community bound for the banks of the Rhine; a fact which does not deter a group of tow-headed children from waving their hands and shouting from a gate at the side of the track.

Some of us, it may be, are thinking strange thoughts, but outwardly we concern ourselves only with the lunch and the landscape. The land we are travelling through is Germany, which yesterday no man might enter; but the waiter is handing round the vegetables and my neighbour on the opposite side of the table is contemplating the towers of Aix-la-Chapelle with as great an indifference as the chimneys of Brixton or Camberwell.

Here and there along the route is a reminder that the Rhineland is held by an army; at every railway arch a couple of sentries in khaki — near Düren the sentries in kilts. And on every station directions writ largely in English and a sight of the familiar British soldier, on duty or taking his ease.

Of German uniform no trace save on railway officials; in the streets you look down on as the train slides by there is nothing but civilian attire. If Prussian militarism still exists here, it is hidden in the hearts of men; so far as its outward tokens are concerned it has vanished from the face of the earth.

SLEEPING OUT.

Second Lieutenant "Jock" has to put up with a good deal. He alone in the Battalion wears the kilt, and the inhabitants — especially the Frauen, are surprised and amused! Crowds assemble when Jock is on parade. The good news circulates and children come running, dragging baby brothers to see the glad sight. All this is now accepted as part of the daily routine and Jock flatters himself justly that he is of far more interest than the R.S.M., the C.O., or the Adjutant.

But popularity can be overdone, and Jock considers the limit was reached and more. Just before peace was signed, we were extremely hot and halted in a clean little German village where we got into billets, and sat down to recuperate.

The weather was glorious, but perhaps a trifle too sultry, so Jock looked askance at his stuffy little room and had his bed made up in the garden.

The startled hausfrau, already upset by the kilt, whispered the news to her neighbours and in five minutes a select party was in the garden inspecting the bed and appointments. Jock is a precise and orderly person and has his alarm clock on a table by the head of his bed.

During the evening two-thirds of the village passed through the garden and we saw the local policeman, glorious in blue and gold, being bowed in obsequiously.

Jock delights in the "early to bed and early to rise" stunt and retired, as usual, at 9.15 pip-emma. — beg pardon 21.15 hrs.

He returned swearing distressingly at 21.16 hrs.; his appearance had been received with general rejoicings and a large crowd had assembled in the garden, front seats at a premium.

At 22.00 hrs. the local inhabitants must be indoors; until one minute to the hour those persistent theatre-goers waited for the rise of the curtain, and every ten minutes Jock ventures forth hopefully, returning in haste and profanity to an unsympathetic and delighted Mess.

At last the fatal hour struck and the disappointed audience fled. Jock sought his downy couch and the more serious-minded members of the Mess settled down to bridge.

SNUFFY.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

THE CROWDED-OUT SUBALTERN.

Sir,—The only remedy for the state of affairs to which "Subaltern" gives publicity is to promote a series of dances for subalterns exclusively.

We can quite understand the inability of the fair sex to resist the charm of the wearer of tabs and brassards in the dance room, or the field boots and spurs which are essential to office work, but, after all, these do not make the expert dancer.

I am sure that many of our charming V.A.D.'s would rally to the support of a dance club for junior officers, and if after all we cannot place a staff car at their disposal, we could promise a good breezy evening.

"JAZZ."

Sir,—I add to "Subaltern" my appreciation of the ladies from England, who are so splendid in their work for men of the Rhine Army.

Socially, however, it is difficult, as he intimates, to meet them. As a field officer of six years' standing (16 years commissioned service) I had the temerity to ask a dance of a lady who at the moment had no partner.

In the ordinary way I should have expected perhaps a polite refusal, but the terse negative and icy look sent me home.

The Hon. Secretary had intimated that officers might ask for dances without an introduction, so I am forced to think that the lady I asked only danced with very senior officers. I can dance.

"MAJORITY."

THE NATIONAL ANTHEM.

Sir,—I am in accord with the suggestion of "Thoroughbred," viz, that our National Anthem should be "scrapped." Possibly it served its purpose in past generations, but it fails beyond doubt to serve the present, either in wording, music, or inspiration.

Who cannot but feel inspired when hearing the martial strains of the "Marseillaise," "Men of Harlech," "Land of Hope and Glory" and others. Alas, it is the contrary when our National Anthem is played.

The people of our Empire deserve a rousing, live national hymn, one that will be a source of much comfort, strength and true conviction.

Likewise his Majesty deserves an anthem more befitting to his exalted position, for no man has worked harder for, and loves his Empire and people more, than H.M. King George.

"LOYAL."

THE GIRLS AT HOME.

Sir,—"Musician" speaks the truth. I was home on leave during the period of the Armistice celebrations, and the preference the girls entertained for all but their own menfolk was painfully obvious to me.

I was home again a month ago, and fully expected to see less of this sort of thing, but, to my disgust, no!

Personally, I think, as "Musician" opines, that money is the chief attraction, and in some cases, possibly, the journey to a distant land.

I live in London, and now, of course, there is a considerably larger percentage of women than men, and a Tommy should have no difficulty in forming many fair friends, but they seem to have been all monopolised. I hope to see a change next time.

A.E.L.

AN ECHO OF THE WAR.

Sir,— Outside the door of the Church at Heimbach in the Eifel district there is to be seen a printed notice which may be regarded as a curio.

It is addressed to women and girls, and after a preamble about the serious times we live in and the heavy loss in life which the war has caused, the notice proceeds to condemn the modern fashions in feminine dress. Tightly fitting clothes, diaphanous stockings and open work blouses are singled out for special mention.

The notice was evidently published some time ago while the war was still on. One wonders how fiery the language of such a notice would have to be, if some of the latest fashions with which we are made familiar through our picture papers penetrated to that peaceful village amid the hills.

"MAC".

WHERE DID THEY GO?

Sir,—There have been plenty of "grouses" lately about cigarettes, but here is another.

Last night I joined the queue at the E.F.C. canteen, and, after patience, eventually obtained a single packet of Americans. Printed in gold was the legend "20 Cigarettes," and I spent the next few moments calculating how long 20 cigarettes would last me.

Having decided that I could afford to smoke one immediately, I opened the packet. Something was wrong. With my heart in my mouth I counted them several times.

There was no mistake, alas! My packet of "20 Cigarettes" contained sixteen only. Were they all like that I wonder, or was mine an exception.

The legend on the packet was in very truth a legend only, for there was no truth in it. I leave the matter with the E.F.C.

"H.A.D."

RHINELAND COINAGE.

Sir,— One often sees from time to time in battalion and other orders that money other than certain kinds will not be accepted at the regimental institutions.

Personally I am not in a unit which has had the good fortune to be billeted in a large town for longer than a week, and often, although in possession of money, find myself unable to purchase such things as may be necessary, either because it is not accepted in the canteen or for a district other than that in which the battalion is billeted.

Can any reader tell me why "Stadt-Geld" is in the least necessary or what good purpose it fulfils? The decimal system of coinage may be better than the English, but for the soldier or the civilian who has to travel any distance the system used in the occupied area, and I believe all over Germany, is, in military parlance, a "wash out".

The question is, does the one advantage outweigh the disadvantage?

HOW SLEEP THE BRAVE.

How sleep the brave, who sink to rest
By all their country's wishes blest!
When spring, with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallow'd mould,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod
Than Fancy's feet have ever trod.

By fairy hands their knell is rung;
By forms unseen their dirge is sung;
There Honour comes, a pilgrim grey,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay;
And Freedom shall awhile repair
To dwell, a weeping hermit, there!

Cologne Races: All the Winners.

EXCELLENT GOING AND HUGE CROWD ON OPENING DAY AT MERHEIM.

There was a huge crowd of spectators at the opening day of the Cologne Races yeste day afternoon, despite threatening weather. German civilians were strongly represented, but were, perhaps, not so numerous as might have been expected, considering the meagre facilities they have had for horse racing during the past few years.

The going was all that could be desired, entries, numerically, were satisfactory and in the majority of cases the racing was keen and exciting.

For some unexplained reason there was a delay of forty minutes in the start of the first race, and this naturally threw the whole programme back considerably.

The course on the whole is an admirable one and is laid out on thoroughly scientific lines. Unfortunately, however, the start of the five furlong race was quite hidden from the view of those on the grandstand or account of overhanging trees.

As usual, past performances of the horse engaged provided no assistance in spotting winners, although the fact that several of the winners were strongly fancied was indicated by the totalizator prices.

LIST OF OFFICIALS.

The officials were:—Stewards:— Major Gen. A. A. Kennedy, C.M.G.; Brig. Gen. N. W. Haig C.B., C.M.G.; Brig. Gen. J. G. Rolton C.B., C.M.G.; Lieut. Col. T. P. Melvill D.S.O.; Lieut. Col. J. W. AMUSEMENT NOTES.

A CONTEST OF WITS

I have been asked for humorous military anecdotes and quips that can be used by a producer of concert party "shows." Amusing things that have happened in the trenches, in billets or on parade, smart repartee and clever bon mots — funny mistakes, made by would-be linguists — all will be eligible. There are probably many of our readers who can contribute tit-bits that would help enliven any entertainments for the troops and I am authorised to offer money prizes of FIFTY, TWENTY-FIVE, FIFTEEN and TEN Marks respectively for the four best humorous gems sent in.

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" will be the judge and his decision will be final. The competition will be open to all readers and the closing date will be July 31st. Brevity and "snap" are the points to aim at. Envelopes must be marked "QUIPS."

Theatre Programmes.

The programme adopted by the Dramatic Company in connection with their performance of "The Importance of Being Earnest" last week contained bright little extracts from the dialogue of the play. The innovation was a happy one, and will be repeated in the programme of "The Title" which is to be given at the Deutsches Theatre on Monday. Here are a few samples of the extracts: "Examine the honours list and you will instantly tell how the government feels in its inside," "Until the nature of man is completely altered, good cooking is the chief thing a woman ought to understand," "Titles are supposed to be such a terrific honour and yet the people who deal them out scarcely ever keep any for themselves."

Stupid Interruptions.

It is impossible for the great majority of us to understand the state of mind of a man who goes out of his way to interrupt an entertainment provided for the general public. If such an individual finds himself present at a show which turns out to be distasteful to him, the easiest way to escape boredom is to leave the hall. A correspondent writes to say that the audience at the Apollo Theatre, Cologne, a few evenings ago were irritated beyond measure by the interruptions of one of its members. This went on until one of the comedians by means of a cutting comment, quietened the offender.

The Deutsches Theatre.

"The Duke Of Killicrankie" by Robert Marshall, a bright three act play, is entertaining large audiences nightly at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne. The presentation is by Miss Cicely Hamilton's Company, the members of which do full justice to the cleverly written book.

In a Few Lines.

The Agrippina Theatre, Cologne (No. 2 Cinema) will cease to be an Army Institution on Saturday, but the Modern Theatre, Breitestrasse, has been taken over in its place and will open on Monday.

The Rhine Army Choral Society will give a concert at the Y.M.C.A. Central, Cologne, towards the end of next week.

JACQUES.

OLD SCOUTS' CORNER.

As intimated last week, to-morrow (Saturday) is the day fixed for our Peace Celebration, which will take place in the Y.M.C.A. grounds at Lindenthal. From three to four o'clock a short whist drive will be held, for which handsome prizes are to be given. At four o'clock tea will be served, after which Captain H. Heydeman M.C. a former London Commissioner, has very kindly consented to give us a "scouty" talk.

* * *

Captain Heydeman has had considerable experience in London scouting circles, and it is to be hoped that all our members will make an extra special effort to be present in order to hear him. In the evening, we shall attend the performance to be given in the Star Theatre by a Lena Ashwell Concert Party—this by special arrangement. Given fine weather and a good muster of old scouts, we ought to have a great time.

* * *

Space is precious, so a brief note must suffice about our weekly doings. Last Saturday we had a delightful ramble to Godesburg, and on Wednesday, a glorious evening (splendid attendance) was spent—the chief features being an admirable demonstration of Elementary Electricity by Sapper B.C. Robinson, and a most enjoyable paper on the 8th Scout Law by Private T.F. Meall.

Once again, don't forget to-morrow—3 p. m. Prompt—Come.

BOXING TOURNAMENT.

KEENLY CONTESTED ROUNDS AT BORNHEIM.

The second of the series of tournaments which are to decide which is the best all-round sporting battalion, worthy of representing the 1st Western Infantry Brigade in the coming Divisional sports, took place at Bornheim on Monday. Boxing was the only feature of the programme and three two-minute rounds was the time allowed for each bout. The participants were:—The 1/4th, 52nd, and 9th Battalions of the Cheshire Regiment. Major Deloney of the Army Gymnastic School kindly officiated as judge.

Throughout the tournament, the fighting was as good as it was clean, and every round was fiercely contested. Particularly good was the fighting between Pte. Keegan of the 1/4th Cheshires, and Cpl. Ward of the 9th Cheshires. I was Keegan's beautifully clean fighting which subsequently earned him the verdict as winner. Sgt. Pooley, also of the 1/4th Cheshires, put up the kind of show one expects from such an exponent of the noble art.

EVENTS AND WINNERS.

The winners were:—Bantam weights:—Pte. Keegan, 1/4th Cheshires; Feather-weights:—Pte. Ryan, 52nd Cheshires.

Light-weights:—Sgt. Pooley, 1/4th Cheshires. Welter-weight (officers):—2/Lt. Huxum, 52nd Cheshires;

Welter-weight:—Pte. Pennell, 52nd Cheshires.

Middle-weight (officers):—2/Lt. Owen, 52nd Cheshires; Middle-weight:—Sgt. Cole, 1/4th Cheshires;

Heavy-weight:—Sgt. Ellis, 9th Cheshires.

Sgt. Barry of the 1/4th Cheshires was voted best loser.

The victory of the tournament was to go to the team which amassed the most points, and the 1/4th Cheshires having done this, were awarded the verdict.

This success, together with that in the Brigade tug-of-war, places the 1/4th Cheshires well ahead in the amassing of points. Considerable excitement prevails as to the subsequent result of the Brigade sports, which take place on July 14th.

LONDON D.A.C. SPORTS.

LARGELY ATTENDED MEETING AT WESTHOVEN.

By permission of Lieut.Col. J. D. P. Wheatley, the commanding officer, the London D.A.C. held their dismounted sports on Wednesday afternoon at Westhoven. These sports were in accordance with a programme that is being carried out by all units in the London Division, and it is intended that the most successful competitors in these events shall represent the Column in the Divisional Sports which will be held shortly.

There was a large attendance of spectators, including Major Gen. Sir S. T. B. Lawford, the Divisional Commander, and Brig.-Gen. L. C. L. Oldfield, the C.R.A. of the Division, many officers from other units, and a number of ladies representative of the various organisations of British women in Cologne.

A notable feature of the gathering was the excellent catering arrangements made, not only for officers, but for other ranks as well. The ground was gaily decorated with flags, and the sports were enlivened with musical selections by the band of the 9th E. Surrey Regt., by kind permission of the Commanding Officer of the Battalion. A highly successful meeting concluded with the distribution of prizes by Miss G. Mumby of Q.M.A.A.C.

Hurdle Race:— 1. Capt. Taylor (No 1); 2. Lt. Higham (No 3); 3. Sergt. Roberts (No 1).

Putting the Weight:—1. Dvr. Schofield (No 2); 2. Capt. Taylor (No 1); 3. Ftr. Garlick (No 1).

Three Miles Race:— 1. Gnr. Edwards (187th Bde); 2. Sergt. Othet (No 1); 3. Gnr. Steel (No 2). This was a magnificent three mile race, and Sergt Otnet by securing 2nd place, decided the contest for the Colonel's Cup for the most successful section in favour of No 1 Section.

"Cologne Post" Cup Centurions

TRIO OF GIFTED BATSMEN RUN UP THREE-FIGURE SCORES.

Following the striking bowling achievements in yesterday's Cup Competition eports, some rexcellent batting performances are recorded in the matches reported below. Gnr. Weight, of the 93rd Bde. R.G.A. has for the second time topped the century 138 not out, and 101 not out; Lieut. Col. Hartbey, D.S.O., 52nd N.F.'s scored a brilliant 102 not out; while Pte. Clegg of the 51st King's Liverpool Regt. had 107 to his credit in the match with X Corps Sig. Coy. Gnr. Weight is the well-known Durham County and Burnmoor professional. In seven "Cologne Post" Cup matches he has the excellent average of 77 runs per innings, while for bowling he has an average of 3 for a total of 29 wickets—without doubt a record in our Competition.

102 NOT OUT.

LIEUT.-COL. HARTLEY IN BRILLIANT FORM AT LINDENTHAL.

52nd BN. NORTHUMBERLAND FUSILIERS (189 for 6) v. 9th BN. DURHAM LIGHT INFANTRY (93), at Lindenthal on Tuesday. The outstanding feature of the match was a brilliant century by Lieut.-Colonel Hartley, D.S.O., who scored 102, (not out), including 15 fours. Other scores were Capt. Byrne (25). Major Thompson (17), Pte. Taylor (15), and Cpl. Chadwick (10 not out). The 9th D.L.I. replied with 93 of which Ptes. Kay and Glendinning and Sgt. Dickens were responsible for 28, 20, and 17 respectively. Col. Hartley followed up his fine century by taking 5 wickets for 38 runs, the remaining wickets falling to Lt. Emery for 52 runs.

4th ROYAL SUSSEX REGT. (222 for 7) v. 53rd NORTHUMBERLAND FUSILIERS (51) at Hennef on Monday. Batting first on a good wicket the Sussex declared at 222 for 7. Lieut. Kenderdine (75) and Sgt. Stamford (70 not out) were responsible for good free cricket. Against the bowling of L/Cpl. Bryant the Fusiliers could do little, and were dismissed for 51. Lieut. Worthington played soundly for his 30 and also bowled well.

MID. DIV. M.T. COY. (29) v. 509 FIELD COY., R.E. (33 for 2), at Weiterswist on Saturday. The R.E.'s bowled very deadly and averaged 6 wickets for 14 runs. North of the M.T.'s was the only batsman to make a stand for 15.

51st HANTS. (30) v. 15th H.L.I., (38). The victory of the 15th H.L.I. was largely due to the bowling efforts of Lieut. Whitfield, who took 9 wickets for 6 runs.

13th M.A.C. (46 for 1 wicket) v. 53 ROYAL WARWICK REGT., (38), at Mulheim. Capt. Thomas took 6 wickets for 13 runs and Sgt. Collingham 3 for 11. The home team soon wiped out their opponent for the loss of 1 wicket. The not outs were Hills, 30, and Sgt. Collingham, 7.

51st R. SUSSEX REGT. (48) v. 2nd LONDON INF. BRIGADE (25). Played at Neunkirchen on Monday, and constituted the eighth consecutive win for the Sussex team. For the winners, Captain Lawson scored 19 not out. The bowling of the Sussex was again excellent, Lieut.-Colonel Bond taking two wickets for eleven, and Pte. Edden performed the hat trick, and took 7 for 12.

16th LANCASHIRE FUSILIERS (59) v. 51st ROYAL SUSSEX REGT., (68), at Neunkirchen on Sunday. For the Fusiliers Pte. Bray knocked up 21. For the Sussex side, runs came slowly, and wickets fell fast, Lieut.-Col. Bond being the only one who obtained a grip of the bowling. When the last man, Pte. Edden, went in, there were still five runs wanted for a win, and excitement ran high. A single was sneaked, another single, and three overthrows brought the Sussex level, and Edden hit the winning three. The score was taken to 68 before Capt. Lawson was run out.

5th BORDER REGT. (108 for 9) v. LANCS. DIV. COY R.E. (95). Played at Bonn on Tuesday. After the visitors had compiled 95, the home side had a struggle to get runs, but with the last man in, the winning hit was made by Captain Dove. Chief scorers for the winners, Captain Dove, 36 not out, Lieut. Smeeton 26, L.-Cpl. Astin 24.

1/5th SOUTH STAFFS (47) v. 15th F.A. (25), at Blessem. The home team took the willow first and thanks to the bowling of Davies, who took 7 for 9, only totalled 25, 10 of which were credited to Mr. Extras The "knots" responded with 47, L.-Cpl. Barrett making 10. R.S.M. Green claimed 7 for 13.

"R" BATTERY A.A. (102) v. NO. 2 WATER TANK COY. (16). For the winners, Cpl. Bennet played an excellent innings of 48; Bmdr. Dewey 20, and Cpl. Slape 13. Bmdr. Whitehouse took 4 wickets for 4 runs, and Cpl. Slape 4 for 7. Mr. Extras was top scorer for the Tank Coy., with 5.

153 SIEGE BATTERY (54) v. 62nd BATTALION M.G.C. (25), at Hastenrath on Tuesday. For 153 S.B., Bmdr. Witty played a very useful innings of 13, not out, and Sig. Cockcroft was very deadly with the ball, capturing 8 wickets for 9 runs, (5 being clean bowled).

51st KINGS LIVERPOOL REGT. (184) v. 10th CORPS SIG. COY., R.E. (54), on former's ground on Tuesday. The Sig. Coy., batted first and made 54 (Lieut. E. Wiltshire, 5 wickets for 4 runs). The 51st K.L.R. ran up a total of 184 in 80 minutes. Pte. F. Clegg, going in first, was last man out, having made 107.

VI CORPS H.Q. (79) v. 180 LABOUR GROUP 90). At Lindenthal on Tuesday, the Labour Coy continued a successful run, pulling off their third win in three days, Smart knocking up 59. For H.Q. the best scorer was Griconell, 52. Bowling for the Labour Coy., Stevenson took 3 for 8.

A "NOT OUT" CENTURY.

93rd Bde. R.G.A. (202 for 3) v. 23rd Bde. R.A.S.C., M.T. (28).

The 93rd were in splendid form against 23d Bde. R.A.S.C., M.T. at Kalk on Tuesday. All the batsmen reached double figures. Of course, Gnr. Weight's century outshone the remainder. He was still undefeated with 101 to his credit. Palliser 20; Ellis 22; Rushton 25 (caught brilliantly at deep square leg by Frost), and Major Phillips 24 not out gave him good support. The R.A.S.C. made a sorry show against Weight and Bowden, the former following his batting performance with 6 wickets for 14. Bowden took 4 for 12. Mention must be made of Gnr. Norton's wicketkeeping. The manner in which he took Bowden's fast bowling was fine. The 93rd have the good record of played 8 won 8; their score being 177 for 9; 213 for 5; 256 for 4; 112 for 2; 89 for 7; 94; 183 for 6; 202 for 3.

23rd ROYAL FUSILIERS (115) v. LANCS DIV. M.T. COY. (51). For the winners Lieut. Abbott 28, not out, Lieut. McCormack 28, and Sgt. Howlett, 18, were the chief scorers. Bowling analysis: 2nd Lieut. Marrable, 16 overs, 27 runs, 6 wickets; Lieut. McCormack, 16 overs, 16 runs, 3 wickets.

II CORPS H.Q., (79), LONDON DIV. M.T.COY., (25) at Leverkusen on Monday. Chief scorers for the winners, Pte. Holmes, (15), Pte. Brian, (15) Captain Williams (13)

29th MACHINE GUN. BN. (134 for 7 wickets) v. 14th YORK AND LANC. (28), at Dabringhausen. The York and Lanc. team batted first and after Pte. Paine, (10) had been dismissed, the side collapsed. Lieut. Astill account'd for 5 wickets for 9 runs, and Cpl. Sadler 2 for 14. Three men being run out proves the keenness of the M.G's fielding. The Machine gunners passed their opponents score before the first wicket fell, and out of their total, Lieut. Astill again made top score with 54 before being caught out.

77 SIEGE BATTERY (95) v. 1st BATTALION M.G.C. (92) at Flerzheim. The M.G's chief scorers were Cpl. Colden 15; L. Cpl. Ashdon, 11; Pte. Haworth 19; Sgt. Lord 13. The S.B. looked like suffering their first defeat when they had lost 8 wickets for 65, but Bmdr. Harling 18 and Lieut. Graham, 10, pulled the game out of the fire, and provided a very exciting finish.

1/5th K.O.S.B. (59) v. 64th Field Coy. R.E. (48).
64th Field Coy. R.E. (48) v. 75 Bde R.F.A. (39).
52 Bedfords (96) v. 34 Bn. M.G.C. (69.)
"D" Corps Siege Park (37) v. 52 Cordons (49).

Cav. Div. A.G. (25 for 4) v. 51 D.L.I. (21).
51st Devon (61 for 4) v. VI Corps Sig. Coy. (31).
13th K. Liverpool (70 for 6) v. No. 3 Coy. Western Div. R.A.S.C. (25).

EASTERN DIVISION H.Q. (162) v. 52nd CHESHIRE REGT. (80 for 8). For the E. Div. H.Q. Major Tempest played another bright innings of 44, and was well supported by C/Sgt. Sandell 29, Pte. Walker 23, Spr. Thompson 20 and Capt Morgan 13 Bowling: Lt. Cannell 8 for 31 and Pte. Gould 2 for 44. The Cheshires score stood at 80 for 8, when stumps were drawn, Pte. Gould being top scorer with 33, Lt. Beard next with 13. Bowling: Lt. Col. Dobbie 5 for 37, Capt. Morgan 1 for 19 and Spr. Thompson 1 for 2. Result a draw.

Scotland, which always figured well in the prize list, is sending comparatively few of her shooting men, the sole reason being that instead of the facilities of travelling at the reduced rate formerly granted to competitors, no concession from the war-increased fares has been granted.

An exciting match took place at Euskirchen on Wednesday, the latter team winning by a narrow margin of 4 runs.

Scores:—78 Labour Coy..... 23,
49 Labour Coy..... 27.

5th v. 715th LABOUR COY.

The above teams met at Klettenberg on Wednesday in the Labour Group League. 715 had first knock and amassed the creditable score of 129 by the aid of Ptes Howard (57) and Haig (21). 5th started badly, but recovered and with contributions of (L/Cpl Eccles) 22 (Pte Mullins) 17 and (Lieut. Wilkinson) 15, overtopped their opponents' score by 3 runs, the last wicket falling immediately afterwards. Pte. Ewen for 5th took 3 wickets for 14, and Pte Turner for 715 had 4 for 46.

LAST FEW HOURS.

VICTORY LOAN SWEEP—FINAL OPPORTUNITY.

Over 80,000 marks had been subscribed to the British Empire Leave Club Victory Loan sweepstake up to yesterday morning and there are indications that there is going to be a great rush of "eleventh hour" ticket purchasers to-day. Only a few more hours remain in which to participate in the scheme, the conditions of which are perfectly simple.

Tickets may be purchased at the British Empire Leave Club, Cologne for 10 marks each. The total amount subscribed will be devoted to the purchase of War Bonds and the prizes will be allotted thus:— 50 % to the winner, 20 % to the holder of the second ticket drawn, 10 % to the third, and the remaining 20 % will be divided among the next 20 numbers drawn.

Letters should be addressed to Lieut.-Col. Levey, O.B.E., D.S.O., British Empire Leave Club, Cologne. No applications may be received after 9 p.m. to-night.

Echoes from Rhineland

NO MORE REPLIES.

The other day we had to explain why it had become absolutely necessary to abandon the idea of answering any queries on demobilisation. Now, with regret, we are forced to say that our feature of "Answers to Correspondents" has to go by the board altogether as well. We can neither afford the space nor the considerable time it takes to handle such a feature. In a daily newspaper such as ours, to attempt to reply to the overwhelming number of enquiries, many of them entailing close and long research among records, reference works, and Orrny Arders, has now become quite beyond the powers of our necessarily limited staff of officers and other ranks.

This we are sure will be understood by all. We would help every one if we could, but we cannot.

So in future it is hoped that nobody will expect "Answers to Correspondents.'

On Telephones.

Lord Joice has denounced the English system of telephones as the worst in the world; but it is doubtful if they are worse than those of Germany. Experience of the German system does not in any way endear one to it. You pick up the receiver and after the exercise of much patience hear a faint spasmodical, just-woke-up sort of voice, which volunteers the information that it is "Amt" in a long drawn-out sight like "Aa-am-t." On hearing this magic word, you ask in German for the required number, for example A 3537, and after an interval not exceeding fifteen minutes, you hear a voice asking "Wer ist dort?" (Who is there?)

Asking for "Amy."

You give the desired information and repeat the question. Then follows a spluttering at the other end apparently intended to convey some name to you, and you take it for granted it is the name you are wanting. You then ask if Amy, or whatever her name is, is at home, and you receive in a very suspicious tone the question "Wer ist dort." Again you give the required information, and then, growing uneasy, you ask them their telephone number, and find that you are connected with A 3730 instead of A 3537. You then politely request them to ring off and start all over again.

Hope Deferred.

After further argument with "Amt," whom you may manage to stir up within twenty minutes or so, you manage to convince her that it is really A 3537 you want, punctuating it with a rolling of "r's" which leaves your tongue in a state of torn and twisted collapse. After another wait you succeed in obtaining connection with the correct number, and again you ask for Amy. The voice at the other end asks you to wait a moment while she fetches Amy and again all is quiet. Time passes and you are just about to give up hope, when you hear Amy's voice and everything German goes up in your estimation. In the middle of your conversation the girl at "Amt" once more breaks in. Then once more comes silence and you throw down the receiver in disgust, wishing you had only had the chance to make the Peace terms all over again.

More Journals Soon.

Several Units in the Rhine Army are producing their own periodicals and one of these, the 3rd Battn. Machine Gun Corps Magazine, has recently issued its second number. It is a neat production, and the Hon. Editor, Lt. Col. Cranston D.S.O., has written an apt introductory on "playing the game." Perhaps the gem of the number is a poem on "Fear" contributed by "Rex." Rumours are afloat, that other journals are making their debut shortly. It is said that the literary and artistic talent of the Wrafs on the Rhine will soon possess an outlet for their energies.

Not so many V.C.s.

Apropos medal ribbons, we heard a story yesterday of an officer who called at the E.F.C. some months ago for a piece of the 1914 ribbon. The Ordnance corporal behind the counter politely told him the stock was sold out, but fresh supplies were expected daily. "We have hundreds of yards of V.C. ribbon now, however, if that would do," he was told. It wouldn't, so he returned a week later and made a similar request, only to be told once more, that the 1914 ribbon was sold out. "But, surely the demand hasn't been so great as that, has it?" the officer queried. "Well, you see we were only able to get ten inches of it, sir!" "Then, what about your V.C. ribbon?" "Oh, that's gone too!" The officer left in amazement. But when he learned afterwards that the V.C ribbon had been returned to the Base as unsaleable he began to see daylight.

Fireflies.

Returning to billets at about 21.30 to 22.00 hours during the recent hot weather, the writer recently saw fireflies. They appeared to like to be among the trees, and, given these, the constant presence of traffic did not seem to disconcert them at all. The greatest number seen at one time was five and these were under some trees in a street which is a tramway route, and where, during the evening, hundreds of people were passing up and down.

Form a Queue.

The old trouble of an absence of queues is as apparent in Cologne as in many places we wot of at home. So far we have been unable to discover a barrier on the lines of those to be seen in our busy northern cities, with the result that there is a wild scramble for seats and much pushing and shoving. Both sexes join in the scrimmage, and unless one is prepared to take a part there is a danger of being left behind. It is an old grievance and one for which only the shortsightedness of the tramway authorities is to blame. There are queues for theatres and other places of amusement and barriers to stem the way of the crowds at the railway termini. Why not queues for trams?

Turned Bolshevik.

A waggish contributor questions the accuracy of the statement that many German cats found their way into the stew pot during the war, in view of the number to be seen courting in the fields near his billet. "There are plenty of wild cats and a few tame ones," he writes. "Perhaps they are merely the latter variety turned Bolshevik."

Pointing.

Doubtless many resident for the first time in Germany will have remarked on the singular lack of finish about the walls of most German buildings, especially those in villages. What is known in builders, parlance as "pointing" seems to have been forgotten. The purpose of this is, of course, to drain off the wet from the outer walls in order to prevent permeation of the moisture to the inner face of the wall, and to give it a more finished appearance. Quite a large proportion of modern, well designed houses are lacking in this respect. One can easily imagine what an ill effect this omission would have on one's wallpaper during the wet winter months. In England, even a single wall is rarely seen unpointed. Where "pointing" has been attempted, and this but rarely, the mortar has a square front, leaving a recess between the bricks, where the wet may lodge, a method of finish practically unknown in England.

Black Diamonds.

There were five of them, laughing, jabbering and toiling as though life depended on it, each happy as a king, black as a coal-heaver fresh from the pit. Their hands, faces and bare legs showed signs of arduous toil, but they maintained an air of dignity, befitting their duty. Around and about, in piles, stood the results of those labours. One of the toilers, of smaller stature and with fewer years pertaining to him than had the other four, struggled from a sitting posture—that position so instinctively a part and parcel of the beings whose lives are spent in the bowels of the earth—and strained to place still one more piece upon the highest pile. But the effort was tragically unsuccessful, and, losing his equilibrium, he overbalanced against the structure. Pile and toiler toppled over. Disappointment and temper broke their bounds, then a scream. But a door opened near to hand, and five pairs of legs carried off five German youngsters as fast as they possibly could, leaving the cart load of briquettes strewn where they had fallen, ruined monuments of labour lost.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Signaller H. Frobwen, A.P.M's office, Cologne.

By William R. Patterson, F.R.G.S.

When one develops one's own plates and films one should be careful always to preserve the utmost cleanliness. This is not so important with porcelain dishes, as with those of celluloid and "papier-mâché." The former need but to be rinsed out, but the latter require a good washing.

Papier-mâché dishes need drying after usage, otherwise they split in all four corners. One must remember that they are made of compressed paperpulp, lightly glazed. They are cheap and economical, since they may be dropped without damage; they are light and easily portable. The same may be said of celluloid dishes, with the single disadvantage that some are highly inflammable. Now, an unclean dish will often spoil what otherwise might have been a good result. Some crystals of "hypo" may cling to the bottom and sides of a dish, which later will contain a developing solution and vice versa.

It is an excellent plan always to employ the same dishes for the same purpose. A small mark or label might be attached to each to distinguish the one from the other. The crystals are usually apparent when the dish is perfectly dry, and should act as an indication that the dish needs a thorough washing. Another point to be observed in developing is that concerning the red light. You will always obtain a better negative if your plate or film is shielded from all light at the beginning, since even an over-bright red glare may affect the sensitive surface. Therefore, cover your dish with a sheet of paper at the beginning and gently rock your bath. After perhaps a minute, you may remove the paper and continue the process with the ruby lamp or red electric bulb.

Let it be noted that the prices given in a previous issue of the "Cologne Post" still remain the same. They will be published again in the next article.

WITH A PREFACE BY MARÉCHAL FOCH.

". . . . The bulk of the old Regular Army long ago made the last sacrifice. Those who survive will, we are convinced, feel nothing but pride in this simple and moving record of supreme pause in British military annals when the old order passed away for ever, and in passing saved the Empire. . . . Lord French writes tersely and clearly. . . . When he pauses in his narrative, it is either to give a little picture of one or other of his distinguished comrades and friends, or to explain the trend of his own thought at a particular phase in the campaign. The chief value of the book is, of course, the flood of light it throws on the first five months of the British campaign in France and Flanders. It teems with new information."—The Times.

FUTURE OF OCCUPIED GERMANY.

HOW RHINELAND WILL BE ADMINISTERED BY INTER-ALLIED COMMISSION.

SOCIETY TRAGEDY AND SCANDALS.

RHINELAND.

AGREEMENT REGARDING THE OCCUPATION.

The text of the agreement between Great Britain, United States, France, Belgium and Germany, regarding the military occupation of territories of the Rhineland is officially issued.

The articles state that there shall be constituted a civilian body, styled the Inter-Allied Rhineland High Commission, which shall be the supreme representative of the Allied and Associated Powers, within the occupied territory.

This High Commission shall have power to issue ordinances so far as may be necessary for securing the maintenance, safety and requirements of the Allied forces. German courts shall continue to exercise civilian and criminal jurisdiction subject to certain exceptions. Any person committing an offence against the Allied forces may be made amenable to the Allied military jurisdiction.

Civil administration remains in the hands of the German authorities. No German direct taxes or duties will be payable by the High Commission, Allied Armies or their personnel. Personnel employed on all means of communication shall obey any orders given on behalf of the Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies for military purposes. Transport on the railways of soldiers or officers will be effected without payment. The Armies of Occupation may continue to use for military purposes, all existing telegraphic and telephonic installations, and may continue to instal military telegraph and telephonic lines and wireless stations.

The High Commission shall have power, whenever it thinks necessary, to declare a state of siege in the whole or any part of the occupied territory.

The above agreement was signed at Versailles at the same time as the Peace Treaty.—British Wireless.

AFGHANISTAN.

AMIR'S EVASIVE REPLY TO VICEROY'S LETTER.

The following official communiqué was issued at Simla on July 9th.

A letter from the Amir of Afghanistan, dated June 29, was received at Simla yesterday, in which he enters into a long dissertation on the one-sided character of the armistice terms and the impossibility of their literal observance. Thus, in response to our demand for the withdrawal of his regular troops, the Amir considers advisable the withdrawal of British troops from Spin Baldak and Dakka. He also considers it advisable that we should forgo the free movement of aeroplanes over Afghan territory, which, he states, will inevitably provoke the Afghans to fire upon them, in spite of strict prohibition, which would result in our retaliation and a breach of the armistice. The Amir affirms it to be his earnest endeavour that friendship and unity be established as strongly as ever for the honour of both Governments. The letter concludes, "I hope the Viceroy will now fix a date for the arrival of the Afghan delegates, who are ready to start."

A GRAVE AFFRONT.

The Viceroy's reply, which left Simla to-day, states that, while he is glad to learn that the Amir is sincerely anxious for peace, the tone of the letter compels the conclusion that he does not appreciate the true position. The Amir, he observes, appears to forget that the Afghan Government began the war and is now suing for peace, nor does the Amir realize that his Majesty's Government is gravely affronted by what has occurred, also that the British people are indignant at the fact of a great Power being wantonly attacked. This is the reason why his Majesty's Government could not allow any modification of the Armistice terms.

As no advantage could accrue by prolonging the correspondence, the Viceroy invites the Amir to direct the delegates to present themselves before 10 a.m. on July 22 at the British lines, whence they will be conducted to Rawalpindi. The British delegates will consist of Sir Alfred Hamilton Grant, K.C.I.E., as chief of the delegation, Mr. J. L. Maffey, C.I.E., General Moberly, Nawab Sir Snams Shah, and Sir Gurbaksh Singh Bedi.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

FIRST LABOUR CONFERENCE.

The first annual meeting of the Labour Conference which is provided for in the Peace Treaty will commence at Washington on October 1st. The Conference will be opened by President Wilson. British delegates have not yet been chosen but it is thought probable they may include Mr. George Barnes, Mr. Arthur Henderson and Sir Robert Horne.

WAX KAISER.

The Kaiser's effigy at Madame Tussaud's still arouses a considerable amount of hostility on the part of visitors. A few weeks ago an infuriated sailor smashed the effigy. Yesterday morning one of a party of Canadian soldiers drew from its scabbard the sword of the late Emperor of Austria, whose model is adjacent, and stabbed the restored figure of the Kaiser in the face.

SOCIETY TRAGEDY.

NOTABLE DIVORCE CASES RECALLED.

The inquest into the circumstances surrounding the tragic death of Mrs. Arthur Eliot, better known as Mrs. Atherton, was opened at the Westminster Coroner's Court yesterday morning.

Mrs. Eliot, who was by many accounted one of the most beautiful women of her day, will probably be best remembered through the notable law cases in which she figured. She was a daughter of Sir Edward John Dean Paul, the fourth baronet, by his second marriage with a daughter of Major-General James Ramsay, brother of the twelfth Earl of Dalhousie. In 1892 she married Colonel Thomas James Atherton, of the 12th Lancers, a son of Sir W. Atherton, M.P., Attorney-General. There was one son. Colonel Atherton obtained a divorce in 1906, when the co-respondent was Captain the Hon. Reginald Lopes Yarde-Buller, of the Scots Guards, now Lord Churston.

"SELFISH, IDLE PEOPLE."

In the following year Mrs. Atherton brought an action for breach of promise of marriage against Captain Yarde-Buller. At that time the decree nisi in the divorce suit had not been made absolute, and Mr. Justice Darling said that it was a question whether the promise had been made while the plaintiff was still married. Mrs. Atherton waived her claim for £20,000 damages, stating that her sole object was to establish that the promise had been made, and judgment was entered for her, with costs. In that suit, Sir Edward Carson, K.C., and Mr. Lush, K.C. (now Mr. Justice Lush), appeared for Mrs. Atherton, and Mr. Isaacs, K.C. (the present Lord Chief Justice) for Captain Yarde-Buller. In the same year Captain Yarde-Buller had married Miss Denise Orme, the actress.

Mrs. Atherton's name was again brought before the public in 1909 in cross-actions for divorce which came before Lord Guthrie in the Court of Session, Edinburgh. In the action by Mrs. Clara Elizabeth Stirling it was alleged that her husband had been unfaithful with Mrs. Atherton. In Mr. Stirling's action allegations were made that Mrs. Stirling had committed adultery with Lord Northland (eldest son of the Earl of Ranfurly), who was killed in action while serving with the Coldstream Guards in 1915. Lord Guthrie found in favour of Mr. Stirling and Mrs. Atherton in a judgment which was marked by a good deal of mordant criticism of certain phases of social life and of "selfish, idle people."

FARTHING DAMAGES.

Once more, in 1911, Mrs. Atherton appeared in Court. She then brought a slander action against her brother Sir Aubrey Dean Paul and his wife. Mrs. Atherton alleged that Lady Paul had stated of her that she had been turned out of a hotel in Cairo, and that she was a disreputable woman. The jury awarded one farthing damages but Sir Aubrey was made a defendant only for the reason that he was liable for alleged wrongs done by his wife. In that action Sir Edward Carson, K.C., and Mr. Rowlatt (now Mr. Justice Rowlatt) appeared for Mrs. Atherton; and Mr. Duke, K.C. (now Lord Justice Duke), and Mr. McCardie (now Mr. Justice McCardie) for the defendants. Towards the end of 1917 Mrs. Atherton obtained £322 damages for personal injuries which she received through being knocked down by a motorcar in Regent-street.

Mrs. Atherton was married in April last to Captain Arthur Ernest Henry Eliot, son of the late Colonel the Hon. Charles Eliot, brother of the fifth Earl of St. Germans. This was Captain Eliot's third marriage. His first wife was Florence Maude Parks-Smith, from whom he obtained a divorce in 1902. In 1911 he married Elizabeth, widow of Mr. William A. C. Cornell. She died in 1913.

Captain Eliot served in the South African War as a lieutenant in Kitchener's Horse. Afterwards he was on the staff of the Daily Mirror for a time. He served in the early days of the European War, and was engaged later on recruiting duties in the City of London. He produced, as joint author with Captain Bairnsfather, The Better 'Ole at the Oxford Theatre.

DARDANELLES.

FULL STORY TO BE REVEALED.

At a fête yesterday at Malpas Court, Newport (Monmouth), the residence of Sir Leonard Llewellyn, General Sir Ian Hamilton said they wanted, with reference to the Dardanelles, the actual documents, cables, and orders written by the military chiefs, and, most of all, the orders of the enemy. These had been secured by the Royal Commission during the past few days, and the story of the Dardanelles, at any rate, so far as troops were concerned, will be one of our proudest if, perhaps, saddest memories.

FRANCE AT FIUME.

The measures taken by the supreme Allied Council relating to the incidents at Fiume are generally well received in French circles. A commission of four Allied Generals will settle the grievances and find a way to re-establish harmony.

Arrangements are being made to publish the evidence which was heard in camera at the inquiry into the sinking of the Lusitania.

COST OF COAL.

GOVERNMENT WILL TACKLE TRADES UNIONS.

Yesterday's announcement that the retail price of coal is being increased by six shillings a ton next week in order to meet the miners' demand as contained in the Sankey report of the Coal Commission's findings has caused absolute consternation.

In political, commercial, industrial and social circles a general feeling is rampant against the unfairness of the men's demand, which forces up the price while the output is decreasing enomously, owing to the shortening of hours and limiting of production.

Monday's debate in the House of Commons is expected to strengthen the determination of the Government to come to grips with the wages problem in the great essential industries.

It is not unlikely that Parliament will declare itself in favour of accepting the risks of rejecting the extravagant demands of powerfully organised industries and will seek some means of adjusting wages and profits on an economic basis.

TOTTENHAM TRAGEDY.

DEAF AND DUMB TRIO WOUNDED.

On Wednesday afternoon, Miss Daisy Kenwood, aged 23, was seen to rush into the back garden of her home, 29, Rostyn-road, West-green, Tottenham, pointing to her head, which was smothered in blood. Neighbours sent for the police, who found the mother of Daisy Kenwood, with gashes in her head and face, being supported in the roadway by friends. In the back garden the girl had collapsed. A trail of blood led to her bedroom, where a young man, believed to be John Whiteman, was lying on the bed with his throat cut. Near him was a hatchet and a razor, blood-stained. The injured three, who are all deaf and dumb, were taken to Eumonton Infirmary in a critical condition. Whiteman, who has been in the habit of visiting the Kenwoods, is said to be married, his wife residing in Brading-road, Brixton.

No motive has yet been assigned for the tragedy.

THE SOLDIER'S VOTE.

HOW TO GET ON THE REGISTER.

An Army Council Instruction just issued, states that so far as military voters are concerned, the basis of the third half-yearly register of electors will be similar to that adopted for the preparation of the second register.

The following officers and soldiers should notify the registration officers (in the case of soldiers through Officers i.c. Records) of their qualifications for registration:—

(a) Those who have joined the Army since the end of the qualifying period for the registers now in force (January 15, 1919), and whose names have not been placed on the registers, and absent voters' lists.

(b) Those who have reached the age of 19 years since January 15, 1919.

(c) Those who, having reached 19 years of age by June 15, 1919, believe that their names are not recorded on the present registers and lists, but who are able to furnish a qualifying address.

The six month's qualifying period ends on June 15, 1919. The new registers come into force on October 15, 1919.

R. 34 HOMEWARD BOUND.

Telegrams received from New York announce that the R. 34 left Roosevelt Field at 11.57 p.m. (New York time).

Major Scott estimated that the homeward journey would take seventy-eight hours. If his estimate works out correctly the airship may be over London on Sunday forenoon.

A wireless message of her position shows the airship to be off the Nova Scotia coast, which indicates that she has gone on the Northern course. A later message received via Barrington passage gives her position at 2.12 as 63 degrees 30 minutes West, 41. degrees 15 minutes North, her course being East (magnetic) and making good a speed of 48 knots, but in her position she has apparently averaged 53 knots.

The decision to depart on Wednesday was reached after the receipt of a favourable weather report. She had a great send-off, all traffic being stopped as the people watched her departure.

MILITARY POSTAL AEROPLANE CRASHES.

A fatal accident to a British postal aeroplane took place yesterday morning in the neighbourhood of Pourrières, a small village of the Var department, near the mouth of the Rhone.

The aeroplane, No. 4591, was manned by four British aviators. It burst in flames and falling out of control was smashed, the impact causing the petrol tanks to explode.

All four occupants were completely carbonised. The names of three of the victims were:—Lieut. Hall, Lieut. Summers and Corporal Jaffe, the fourth being as yet unknown.

The remains have been interred in the British churchyard of Nazargues near Marseilles.

A WRETCHED IMPOSTOR.

An ex-private named James Parkins, who was arrested in London, was charged before the Atherstone Bench on Thursday with wearing decorations to which he was not entitled.

The double row of ribbons worn by this detestable impostor comprised the D.C.M. and M.M., the French, Russian and Belgian Croix de Guerre and the French, Italian and Serbian military medals.

He had been presented by the townspeople with eighty war savings' Certificates for his supposedly unique record.

He was remanded for a week for further inquiries.

GERMAN PRISONERS.

CIVIL PAY FOR WORKING ON THE LAND.

In answer to questions concerning the employment of German prisoners in England, Sir Robert Horne, Minister of Labour, stated in the House of Commons that on July 1st there were 31,595 prisoners employed.

Of this number 22,141 were engaged in agriculture, 8,821 on trench filling and other military work and 628 were employed by a Buxton firm of lime burners under an arrangement with the Trade Union concerned.

In every case when civilian labour became available the prisoners were automatically withdrawn, and it is proposed to send these prisoners back to Germany as soon as possible.

The absence of skilled agricultural labour made their service on the land indispensable at the present time, but every prisoner employed is receiving the same rate of pay as civilian labour.

FRANKFURTER WÜRSTCHEN

SMITHFIELD BUTCHERS DECLINE GERMAN OFFER.

The salesmen of Smithfield Markets have received a circular letter from a German firm in Frankfurt applying for appointment as German agents. The writers say:—"For more than 28 years we do act here as substantial importers of meat, slaugatered cattle, and fats, so we can assure you to be able to take your interests at heart." The letters are stamped with the name of a well known hotel in Rotterdam and were posted in Holland. All the salesmen have refused the offer, and one of the letters has been forwarded to the Home Secretary.

SANDBAGGED.

R.A.F. OFFICER'S HEAVY SENTENCE FOR ASSAULT.

At the Sussex Assizes on Thursday, Leslie Holland, Lieutenant in the Royal Air Force, was sentenced to five years penal servitude for assaulting William Farrow, manager of the Shoreham branch of Farrow's Bank.

It was stated in evidence that the prisoner entered the bank, struck the manager on the head with a sandbag and then threatened him with a revolver. A fierce struggle ensued and when assistance came from outside Holland was secured. He was then found to be wearing civilian clothes over his khaki uniform.

For the defence it was urged that prisoner's war service rendered him unanswerable for his conduct.

FUTURE OF R.A.F. OFFICERS.

An unfortunate misconception has arisen on the future of the temporary officers whom it is proposed to take into the new R.A.F. on a four years' agreement.

It has been stated that these officers, young men of about 24 years of age, will, having given some of the best of their life to the public service, be then sent away with a gratuity of £300 irrespective of rank, and with little chance of obtaining a good start in a business career.

This is entirely a wrong view point, says "Wing Adjutant." In four years' time the aircraft industry will have settled down, aerial post, goods, and passenger services will have started, and posts will be available for men with special knowledge. The temporary R.A.F. officer, having received a thorough technical training at the expense of the country, and after four years' practical flying and work on aeroplanes, will in all probability find that there is a long waiting list of firms anxious to obtain skilled airmen, aero engineers, and air administrative men, all of whom will be included in the temporary R.A.F.

"TAR AND FEATHER HIM".

In connection with the recent strike of Rhondda operative bakers a case was heard at Porth yesterday, when four of the strikers were charged with violent intimidation of an alleged backleg baker. It was stated that at six o'clock in the morning the prosecutor was marched to the top of Rhondda mountain, where he was stripped naked and told that a resolution had been passed at a court-martial of the strikers to tar and feather him. Prosecutor was compelled to walk two miles to his home clad only in his overcoat. For the defence it was urged that the affair was only a huge joke as regards the tarring and feathering, and that prosecutor voluntarily stripped himself nude, no violence whatever having been used Fines ranging from £6 to £10 were imposed.

OFFICER'S SUICIDE.

An inquest was held at Portsmouth on Saturday on Lieut. William Maturin R.A.F. When the body of deceased was recovered on Saturday last from Langstone Harbour it was found to have a bullet wound in the head.

Lieut. Maturin early in the war came from America to join the British Army and did good work with the Royal Air Force in France. Eventually he was invalided out of the service on account of wounds. Since his recovery he had been greatly worried over his inability to get employment.

A verdict of suicide whilst temporarily insane was returned.

RAILWAY STRIKE AVERTED.

At the request of the Board of Trade, the Great Northern Railway Company has reinstated three firemen over whom the recent dispute arose. This decision followed a settlement of the Caledonian Railway dispute earlier in the day. The sudden railway crisis is thus ended.

CANTEEN BURGLARY.

THIEVES MAKE A MEAL AND STEAL THE SAFE.

A safe, weighing two hundredweight, which burglars had carrried off from the premises of the Army and Navy canteen at Cardiff, was discovered on Thursday among some bushes on one of the banks of the river.

It is supposed that the burglars, after depositing the safe in the bushes, went back to the canteen for a meal. They helped themselves freely from the beer barrels, partook of cold meat, and smoked canteen cigarettes.

After the repast they went back to the river near by with the intention of forcing open the safe. A constable who was passing thought their conduct suspicious and asked them their business, and they replied that they were looking for a "nigger." The story did not impress the constable, and he arrested them. Subsequently the burglary at the canteen was discovered, and a search led to the finding of the safe.

BECKETT HANGED.

SPENT PRACTICALLY ALL HIS LIFE IN PRISON.

Alfred Beckett, who finished a lifelong career of crime by murdering in a most callous and brutal manner the four members of the Cornish family at Forest Gate, was hanged at Pentonville on Thursday morning, Ellis being the executioner.

At the formal inquest which followed, Major Davies, Governor of the prison, said that the dead man did not leave any written statement.

Detective Inspector Hall said the deceased was thirty-six years of age. He joined the Suffolk Regiment in 1916, previous to which he had spent practically all his life in prison. He had been convicted nineteen times and was thrice sentenced to terms of penal servitude. He was well-known to the police all over England.

POLICING THE WORLD.

A survey of the present disposition of British troops as given by a high military authority yesterday, reveals Great Britain in the old role of policeman of the world. There is general unrest all over the world, says the authority, and it is necessary for us to have sufficient overseas forces to keep order.

Apart from the Army of the Rhine, for which reserves are available in case of emergency, there are 214,000 men in France and Belgium engaged in clearing up the battlefields and salving large quantities of war material. The British share of the garrison of Fiume is 11,000 and there are some 44,000 men, including Indian troops, keeping order in the Black Sea areas. Recent troubles in Egypt being not yet settled it is also necessary to keep a garrison there and the same applies to Palestine, where there are 96,000 troops, including 10,000 Anzacs. In Mesopotamia 21,000 men are being maintained for the present, in view of the unrest on the lower Euphrates and in Central Arabia. The actual garrison of India to day is probably smaller than ever it was in peace time. Garrison duties at Hong Kong, Singapore, Bermuda, Malta and Gibraltar are employing 6,000 troops.

WINESHOP MURDER.

The funeral of Mr. John Thomas Gregory, the victim of the Hendon murder, took place yesterday at Ealing. The coffin was borne from his residence in Warwick-road to St. Mary's Church, where a brief service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. S. A. Gray. Large numbers of people followed the cortège from the church, and there were many sympathizers at the cemetery. The coffin and hearse were covered with wreaths, among which were two sent by Duncombe Mark Lodge of Freemasons, Plymouth, and the Duncombe Craft Lodge of Freemasons, Kingsbridge, of both of which Mr. Gregory was Past Master. He was also a Senior Grand Deacon of Mark Masters in Devonshire. The lodges were represented at the funeral by Mr. W. G. Beaumont.

FERDINAND PAYS FORFEIT.

At the Royal Courts of Justice yesterday a commission sat by direction of H.M. the King to enquire as to English securities to the value of £400,000 standing in the name of ex-King Ferdinend of Bulgaria.

The commission held that at the outbreak of war the securities were the property of Ferdinand and the Chief Commissioner declared them to be forfeit to the Crown.

BRITISH SUBMARINE AGROUND.

The British submarine H 29 stationed at Copenhagen ran aground yesterday when leaving the port. The mishap was due to its proceeding down the shallow channel used by fishing boats.

It is however expected that the vessel will be refloated with the assistance of a Danish salvage steamer which is in attendance.

Miss Blanche Beatrice Read, of New Milton, Hampshire, at the London Sheriff's Court yesterday, was awarded £350 damages in an action for breach of promise of marriage against Ernest Thomas Spencer, motor engineer and chauffeur, Cheltenham.

WHICH WAS WORSE?

Fatuous journalists wish fatuous things and readers are beguiled by the written word into belief in folly. Not many days ago in an article in a certain British journal, there appeared many perversions of fact on which were founded perverted reasonings.

Among the glaring mis-statements was the stock allegation of the Germans, thrown out quite as a matter of fact, that the peace which they have signed at Versailles is many times worse than the peace of Brest Litovsk.

What was the peace of Brest Litovsk? Russia was disarmed and powerless, not through the might of the forces arraigned, against her but her own abandonment in Bolshevism of all defensive preparation and her credulous reliance upon the promises of German agents.

Her enemies did not demand, as the Allies do, reparation for wrongs and outrages done by the act of war, they outlined no peace of nations, they merely tore and dismembered with greedy hands the body incapable of resistance of a people bemused, it is true, by the drugs which the Bolsheviks had mixed with the wine of license but instinct with 200 years of national consciousness.

They prescribed terms which would have rivetted a Teutonic domination for all time upon Russia to the confines of India and the Pacific ocean. Russia was deprived of the provinces of the Ukraine, Bessarabia, the Crimea, Georgia, a part of the Caucasus, Lithuania, the Baltic provinces, Finland.

The superficial area of these lost provinces (not including Finland was 707,000 square versts. (a verst is about half a mile). But the superficial area was as nothing compared with the fact, that in it was contained the most populous and the most thriving districts of the Moscovite empire.

The population contained in this area was over one fourth of the population of the whole country. These provinces produced a third of the grain of Russia, three quarters of its immense output of oil and one third of its manufactured articles.

In them the railway system had developed with prosperity and constituted one third of the mileage of this huge empire. Germany has lost some six millions of inhabitants by the treaty of Versailles but they were mainly the people of Alsace-Lorraine and Poland, neither an original part of the Prussia-German empire, nor friendly to it.

The extent of territory which she lost is of very subsidiary matter, but here again there is no comparison between it and the huge tract which Russia was to give up, and these tracts remember, were not outlying portions but integral parts of Russia, while Germany has retained all that which is purely German, intact.

There were many other and oppressive conditions involved in the treaty, but these are enough to show which in fact was the many times worse—Versailles or Brest Litovsk.

UNCERTAINTY.

Apart from the undercurrent of restlessness and dissatisfaction that is affecting certain classes to-day, the world generally, is seeking some rest from the bitter turmoil of the past few years and snatching at what happiness it can obtain before the burdens of the coming social and industrial struggle are shouldered.

After passing through the severest test that humanity has had to endure since the history of the race began, is this to be wondered at?

We live in an extraordinary time. Few of us can foresee with any hope of exactness what will happen in the next few years. We know of course that we can never return to the days before the war, but what the new days will be like we scarcely dare predict. We are all living on borrowed money but the rustle of paper notes sounds pleasant enough.

Crowds are thronging the pleasure resorts, living in a fool's Paradise perhaps, but at any rate it is some sort of a Paradise.

The average man is not disposed to worry too much about an uncertain future.

He is tired of peace talk and the significance of the signing of peace does not excite him greatly.

Peace celebrations give him the chance of a good time. In pageantry and hilarity he can be quite happy. They are tangible things. The future is intangible. Let it take care of itself, says he.

HOBBIES.

"What hobby can I take up while I am out here on the Rhine?" is a question many men are asking.

There are many hobbies, in fact, which can worthily claim the leisure of soldiers in the Occupied Area of Germany. Some of these give enjoyment to the man who prefers indoor life; and some take him into the streets and country.

Amongst the hobbies of the former class we mention stamp collecting. It is a pastime which invests history and geography with a novel interest, and it can be followed easily by the man of moderate means, as well as by the man who is dissatisfied until he finds in his collection the pearl of great price.

Then there is coin collecting. To most of us it is a serious art of life, but there is pleasure to be gained from the quest of very modest tokens of a nation's currency. The range of interest is widened in these days of paper money, and a collection of notes which bring nothing out pity or rebuke from canteens or field-canteens has a real interest for those who have an eye to the picturesque vagaries of scattered municipalities.

Again, there are always some men who are ill at ease till they can master the language of the people amongst whom they are living. For them the best of all hobbies is the learning of German.

Books, too, have their appeal to many soldiers. In the quiet of a man's billet he may learn the strange story of the nations, their struggles, aims, conquests, their inventions and ideals, their art and letters.

In The Open Air.

But in hobbies of out-door life most men find their chief enjoyment. It is not given to all to play games so well that sport becomes the only pastime. What of those who have not the necessary skill or physique or youth for the playing field?

Many find pleasure in photography, and in the land of lens s they have full scope for their activities. In after days much enjoyment will come to the man who has a collection of views that represents his personal interest in the Rhineland. It may be that he can buy cheaper and even better pictures of the recognised places of interest, but he can have photographic mementoes of scenes, friends, incidents in which the professional photographer is uninterested.

Even without the aid of a camera many find pleasure in visiting and inspecting some of the architectural beauties of this country. There are wonderful churches in Cologne that well repay the soldier whose hobby is the study of ecclesiastical art. There are, too, some ancient houses that have written on them the legends and traditions of olden days. There are statues that recall hoary annals, institutions, foundations, and museums that express a people's interest in philanthropy, love of learning, and cultivation of the arts.

Nature-Human and Otherwise.

The man who is interested in science can also follow his bent. There is a wonderful profusion of flowers in the by-ways of our neighbourhood that must make a direct appeal to the botanist, and the rich variety of the Rhineland's trees will lead him into the shady woods where he can in peace make the classifications that are dear to the scientist's heart.

Already some have begun geological study in the surrounding country, and some have made notes of the bird-life to be found in field, marsh and hill. There are few branches of science that cannot be studied by the man whose hobby lies in that direction.

One must not forget the greatest of all hobbies—the study of human nature. That can be followed everywhere and at all times. The streets of Cologne or Bonn or many another town will provide human interest to the soldier who is interested in the physiognomy and mentality of his fellows. He need not break even the spirit of the Army's recommendation regarding fraternization in his quest of psychology.

These are some of the hobbies that are open to us. The man with a hobby need fear no dull times, for his mind and will are pleasurably exercised.

"THREES."

"Eft, 'ight, 'eft, 'ight, 'eft, 'eft — Squad 'alt!! Tite Dress! Back number four, a little forward Six, Seven and Eight. No not too much. Steady Eyeees Front! Stondet easse! Stend easy!"

The squad of batmen half recognized these fairly familiar words of command, because, well they obeyed, after a style.

You see our batmen don't parade as a rule. Nevertheless they were on orders for the route march on the morrow anyway. B.R.O. 's were: "All batmen will attend".

As they don't usually parade they had not explored as yet the mysteries and wonders of forming threes.

The cockney N. C. O. was looking a bit dubious as he proceeded to unearth something in his pockets. "It" came at last. Two sheets of crumpled foolscap that absolutely shouted B.R.O. Then he started:

"You've orl 'eard abatt the noo roote marching order of column of threes. Well you've got to pick that there up in an nour. See!! Nah then, Wow! wait a bit. Squad shun!! — — In threes number. One! two! three! four! five! — As you were, as yer were! — In threes number. One! two! three! one!"

"Nah then. listen ere. On the word of command number one of the front rank, will not move. See. — Clear that, ain't it. From rear rank. Number two of the front rank will tike a pice backwards of 14½ inches with 'is left foot, no a pice to 'is left of 14 inches wide is right; I mean 'is left foot. Thats abaht orl yer do git in the Army, yer full plice in the ranks!"

"There's abaht umpteen different things yet. Number three of the front rank will tike a full pice of 27 inches to 'is right, no 'is rear, and a pice of 27 inches to 'is right. Got that clear."

"Nah abaht the rear rank."

"Pay attention there. At the same word of command, number one of the rear rank won't move at all." Number ones look relieved.

"Number two will! — corks wot does number two do? Ah 'ere we 'ave it. Number two will tike a pice forward with 'is left foot of 14 inches, and a pice to 'is left, no, 'is right with 'is left foot, no 'is left foot of 14 inches. Got that all clear. W'ats up with number two's of rear rank? Number 3 of the rear rank will tike a pice to 'is rear, no, 'is left, wide is right, left foot. Got that. Did they get it? Wait."

"Nah then lets see 'ow yer shipe. Squad! shun! Move to the right in threes!! A scuffle as of many feets and chaos reigns on the parade ground. As yer were, Asyerwere! Come on wike up. I made it clear didn't I? Form threes! Not so bad this time."

"Third section of threes is wrong. So 'is fourth fifth and sixth sections."

"Half a minute sergeant. There's two blank files here and I'm one. What do I do?"

"Yer dense idgit didn't I explain it once. Numbers three of the front rank, no rear, no I mean, number two tikes a pice to — oh 'ang it fall out for a smoke for ten minutes."

B.R.O.'s revised. "Batmen will not parade tomorrow." Authority. Para. 1. Page 66, section 44, signed as per parade states.

SIGNALLER.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

A GROWING PRACTICE.

Sir,— In the interest of members of the Army of Occupation and also to maintain the dignity of the British Army I would suggest that in places of public entertainment, seats should not be reserved indefinitely.

I was in a cabaret in Cologne last evening where all the best seats were either occupied or reserved for Germans, several of whom did not appear for an hour or more after the performance began.

Parties of British officers were turned away from unoccupied seats.

If a notice: "No seats reserved for more than 15 minutes after the performance has started", was put up we should be saved the exhibition of British officers being supplanted by Germans in public places.

"BIRD OF PASSAGE".

STILL MORE ABOUT OUR GIRLS.

Sir,—With reference to "Musician's" views re English girls, I think it is very unfair for Englishmen to refer to their own flesh and blood in such a way.

Not only are they insulting English girls, but including their own sisters.

For my part I prefer the English girls to either French, Belgian—or German. Give us the English girl every time.

"YPRES."

Sir,— "An Englishman's" letter in a recent issue is interesting. Although I have no intention of marrying a German girl, I can only say that, in my opinion, the German girl suffers little by comparison with others.

As to the thousands of nice young girls at home, and incidentally out here, it is obvious to most of us, that many of them hold the views of Mr. Justice Horridge.

"ONE OF THE COMMON ONES."

SCENTLESS COUNTRYSIDE.

Sir,—"Gunner M." in his letter, comments on the scentless countryside of Rhineland, as compared to that of England, but offers no explanation for the difference.

It is due mainly to the difference in humidity. New-mown hay, for instance, has here less sweetness than the English grown, yet it was the usual sweet clover.

In dry countries, such as Western Canada, the country has practically no smell, except in springtime, when all the land is moist.

Moisture in the air seems to carry scents much as wires do electric current.

C. C. S.

DR. BLACK'S LECTURE.

Sir,— Dr. Black in his lecture on "English speaking nations" at the Loreley Hall, said that he was not sure that we, the Rhine Army, were in so much need of his efforts as our American brothers.

We too, assisted by some sections of our press, are apt to forget our ties to America and to magnify our differences. All assistance to counteract this tendency is earnestly desired.

I am sure that I am expressing the feelings of many who were present when I say that I hope Dr. Black will grace us again very soon with his presence and that many more of our comrades will be there to hear his soul-stirring words.

J. W.

ART CLASSES.

Sir,—Referring to your correspondent "Queen's" on the subject of Art Classes, I for one can fully endorse the fact that such classes would be very popular.

As long ago as February last I had my name put down as desirous of taking up art studies but up to the present nothing has materialized. Apparently the educational scheme does not include art in its curriculum.

In view of the fact that an Arts and Crafts Exhibition is to be held in Cologne early in October there must be many would-be artists in the Rhine Army who would appreciate these classes to enable them to put forward their best efforts.

A.F.B.

We not fied in yesterday's issue that G.H.Q. had arranged an art class for the Rhine Army at 23 Kaiser Wilhelm Ring, Cologne.—Ed.

THE VALUE OF DISCIPLINE.

Sir,—The value of discipline is often urged upon us, but its salutary effects are not apparent in the ordinary audiences of British soldiers.

In such entertainment parties as those of Miss Lena Ashwell, much talent is displayed, but the attention of appreciative listeners is too often distracted by the noise and vulgar comments of many in the audience, who are devoid of good taste.

If strict discipline were enforced, this could be averted. It should not be allowable for music and art to be spoilt by people who have no soul for it.

"A PRIVATE."

GERMAN UNDER-CUTTING.

Sir,—Will you allow me a few lines in your paper to ask how it is that chocolate can be bought 20 pfgs. cheaper per small packet in the German shops in Cologne than the price charged by the E.F.C. I don't think it ought to be.

"STUNG."

IMPROVING OUR TRANSPORT.

Sir,—One phase of German organisation itself very evident, is worthy of comment in view of the transport difficulties exercising the minds of the people at home.

It would be useful if even only the third point mentioned were adopted.

First, it is a common sight to see the tram road used for transport—coal, for one thing.

Again, where circumstances justify it, trams use the same road as the trams, e.g. Cologne to Bonn, part way.

Lastly, but most important, is the system allowing factories to have private lines or "spurs" directly connected with the railways. The saving of time, inconvenience and expense is apparent both to consigner and consignee.

Can we hope for our railways to adopt this idea?

VICTORY.

Not thro' the clash of arms,
Through fierce encounter,
Man pitted against man
Has victory come:
But in that hour of reckoning
When mind surmounting mind
Checkmated force,
Re-sate fair reason on its throne.

LIONEL VERNEY.

"Zambuck's" Ride To Death.

AFTER THOUGHTS AND FORE THOUGHTS ON COLOGNE RACE MEETING.

One of the best races in Thursday's programme was undoubtedly the Welter steeplechase but the regrettable accident involving the death of the horse "Zambuck" diverted much of the attention that so exciting a finish would ordinarily have provoked. The animal left the course and dashed straight for the railings. Lieut. A. Terry, R.E. endeavoured with his mount to jump the obstacles, but the leap came too late so that the horse crashed into the top rail and, turning a complete somersault, broke his back. The rider was thrown many yards and was extremely lucky to escape injury.

* * * *

The liberal admixture of German civilians in the spectators present on the first day gave evidence of their being shrewd judges of racers After each race there was always a large crowd at the "paying out" department of the "Totalizator" from which it would seem that in the majority of cases the Germans enjoyed a profitable afternoon's sport.

* * * *

If the members of the Rhine Army Dramatic Company, and all who are familiar with their activities, did not benefit by the win of "General Post" they ought to have done. Those who go a-racing are notoriously as superstitions as sailors and many wierd reasons are advanced for supporting a particular horse. The fact that the Dramatic Company is already preparing for the production of "General Post" at the Deutsches Theatre the week after next, was surely sufficient excuse for having a totalizator ticket for this 17 to 1 winner.

TO-DAY's FORM.

In several of to-day's races — the first of which is timed for 1 o'clock, by the way — "spotting the winner" will present difficult problems. There are 20 entries in the Cologne Plate, of which "Brigade Major" will carry 12 st. 7 lbs. as a penalty for having won two races this year. Esmeralda, in the same race, ran second in the Goodwood Maiden Plate at Kalk last month, while "I Wonder" won the five furlong race on Thursday. "Charlie" won the great Metropolitan at Kalk in April.

* * * *

In the second race, the Maiden Welter Steeplechas, "Old King Cole" ran third to "Barney" and "Sticks" at the last meeting, while "Yellow Peril" was place third over the same distance.

* * * *

"John Cording", "Billy", "Chief Right" and "Nolo" are all carrying 12 st. in the Cologne Plate. The first-named won the Goodwood Maiden Plate (1st Division) on June 7th; "Billy" won the Cologne Derby in April, while at the same meeting Velociter ran second to "Boys o' Boys" in the Allied Stakes over 6 furlongs. "Nolo" ran well in the Goodwood Maiden Plate and was beaten for third place by a very narrow margin.

* * * *

"Bubbles" is expected to make a good performance in the Maiden Race. In April he was close to "Rugby" and "Inilong" when placed third. "Mary" in the same race finished second to "Golden Boy" over a mile course.

In the last race, "Paddy", who was extremely unfortunate on Thursday, will attract plenty of attention. He beat "Iron Gate" in a similar race on April 29th and on the previous day, in a two-mile chase ran second, after stumbling, to "Right There". "Naboth" is also to be considered having run third in the Goodwood Plate, in a close finish at the last meeting at Kalk.

* * * *

Several other horses engaged to-day have won smaller races in the past, but of these no record is available.

* * * *

A good field in the Allied Steeple-Chase includes "Old King Cole", "Iron Gate", who was third to "Charlie" and "Elsie" over six furlongs in April, "Right There", who won the International Chase with "Paddy" a couple of Lengths away, second, "Barney", first in a two-and-a-half mile jump race at the last meeting; "Peggy" winner of a six furlong race; George II winner of the 2½ mile grand military steeplechase, and "General Post" who romped home in a six furlong flat race on Thursday.

* * * *

In the Victory Plate, "Ruby" will come in for plenty of attention, having won the Kalk Scurry (7 furlongs) in April, as also will "Chief's Right" who defeated a useful field in the Goodwood Plate (1st Division). "Tommy G" was twice placed in his two races this year, while "Ballynooley" was not far behind in "Chief's Right's" race. "Bully" and "Vetociter" are also entered in this race.

* * * *

"Kilbay" will have many supporters in the Maiden Welter Steeplechase after his capital performance on Thursday, when he was beaten by a short margin by "Jimmy" over 2½ miles. "Jimmy" and "Kate", in this race have also performed well previously both gaining second place in the June meeting in steeplechases of similar distance.

CUP AND SHIELD.

PRESENTATION TO C. COY, 24th BN., DUKE OF WELLINGTON REGT.

A concert given by the above Coy., at Dirmerzheim on Monday evening, was thoroughly appreciated by everyone present. By the kind permission of Col. S. G. Francis, D.S.O., selections were rendered by the Battalion band under the able leadership of L/Cpl. Lee. The following artistes also contributed to a very interesting programme:—Pte. Longdridge, pianist, Sgt. Melvin, Sgt. Carr, Sgt. Wyatt, Cpl. Jones, L Cpls. Aldridge, Charnock and Bond, Ptes. Badger, Lofthouse and Leybourne.

During the interval, Col. S. G. Francis, D.S.O., presented the cup and shield, and said it was a great pleasure for him to be able to present the trophies, especially as they were awarded for high honours gained in a branch of sport which was good and clean. It proved that when men combined well in play they could always come out on top, and those who could do that in any game were always to be depended upon, whenever called upon in times of need. He trusted that in the future they would keep up their splendid record.

The second half of the programme was wound up by a comedy sketch, entitled: — "The adventures of Chewed-up Bones," the celebrated detective. Sgt. Wyatt, Cpl. Schofield, L/Cpls. Shelton, Bond, Charnock and Pte. Leybourne created great amusement.

CAV. DIV. A.C.'s REVENGE.

Cav. Div. Amm. Col., R.H.A. (51) v. 5th Bde. R.H.A., H.Q. (21), played at Bergheim on Tuesday, and won by the Amm. Col. by 30 runs. They thereby revenged their defeat by H.Q. by 4 runs earlier in the season. Bushfield and Harris each took 5 wickets for H.Q., but, bowling down wind for the Amm. Col., Bush took 6 wickets in 8 overs for 9 runs. Bush has now taken 47 wickets this season for 185 runs, or 3.93 apiece, while Price has secured 66 wickets for 257, or 3 apiece.

19th MIDDLESEX (138 FOR 5 DECD.) v. 187 BTY., R.F.A. (45).

A very interesting match was played at Unter Eschbach on Sunday, ending in a win for the 19th Middlesex. The 19th batted first, declaring with 5 wickets down for 138 runs. The R.F.A.'s total was 45. The chief scorers for the 19th were Sgt. Gass 43, and Sig. Taylor 38. Lieut. Luckhoff and Sig. Lathorpe bowled extremely well for the home team, the former taking 4 wickets for 26 and the latter 5 for 13.

TREMENDOUS BODY BLOW.

20 ROUND BOXING MATCH AT STOTZHEIM.

Great interest was manifested in and around Stotzheim in a 20 round fight, which took place in the village on Wednesday evening, between Gunner H. Gills and Sig. Smith, both of 174 Siege Bty, R.G.A. Gills had the advantage of reach and made very good use of it. The opening round was evenly contested, but in the second round, though both men were floored, Gills certainly had the best of matters.

In the subsequent fighting, Smith took a great deal of punishment and was only able to make an ineffective return. The end came in the tenth round, and was surprising, because it was unexpected. At the outset of the round, Gills drove his man hard. Suddenly, however, Smith slipped under his opponent's guard and landed him beneath the ropes with a tremendous body blow. Gills was counted out and Sergt. Gabe declared Smith the winner.

In the semi-final for the Roehampton Cup the Scouts beat Cowdray Park by 3 goals to 2.

Ranelagh County Cup semi-finals:—Wellington beat Rugby by 8—2, Wellington A. beat Aldershot by 8—7.

CAV. DIV. H.Q. (134) v. 51st NORTHUMBERLAND FUSILIERS (113) Some good scoring took place in this match which, after a most exciting finish was won by the Cav. by 21 runs. The Fusiliers started well, 18 runs being put on for the first wicket. Major Arkwright played splendid cricket, making 38 before being bowled by Lieut. Neil. Cpl. Spencer (26) and Lieut. Veitch (19) also did well. The Cavalry quite had the "wind up" against the bowling of Major Arkwright and Lieut. Veitch, losing their first four wickets for only 7 runs, a most disastrous start. Lieut. Fox (29) and Cpl. Harvey (22), however, stemmed the tide, taking the score to 56 before the latter was caught. Eight wickets were down for 102 when Lieut. C. R. Jennings was joined by Capt. Tolley, and both rose to the occasion splendidly, and pulled the game out of the fire, 128 being reached when Cpl. Tolley was bowled. He made one 6 and 2 fours in his 18. Lieut. C. R. Jennings carried his bat with a well-played 21.

1st WEST T.M.B. (66) v. 207 SQUADRON R.A.F. This postponed league match was played at Hermülheim on Monday. The T.M.'s batted first and apart from the first four batters (who all obtained double figure), did not too well, the whole side being out for 66. The R.A.F. started badly, Kaye alone showing anything like form. This player gave a vigorous display and scored 27, in which were four fours. He was also successful with the ball, taking 8 wickets at small cost. With this player's departure a close finish was in prospect, and with the last men together 3 runs were still required to win. Faulty fielding allowed two runs to be scored, but in attempting a "cheeky" one the last man was run out, leaving the game a tie—66 runs all.

No. 70 SQUADRON R.A.F. (152 for 8) v. A.P.O. COLOGNE (148). For the A.P.O. S.M. Sherman contributed a brilliant 55 and Major Pidduck played a nice innings for 36. With 4 wickets down for 45, things looked doubtful for the R.A.F., but Orris by hitting a bright 32 made a cheerful difference. The 8th wicket fell with 2 runs still required to win, but these were obtained without further loss.

207 SQUADRON R.A.F. (59) v. LANCS. DIV. M.T. COY. (47). For the losers, Lieut. Almond bowled extraordinarily well, taking 5 wickets for the loss of only 2 runs.

DEMPSEY'S CHALLENGER.

Mr. Cochran who has just returned from Paris says that Carpentier has agreed, if he wins at Olympia on September 2nd, to meet Dempsey for the world's title. Beckett has made the same agreement in the event of his winning at Olymia Dempsey's manager authorizes the statement that the present champion will only agree to the match if it is fought on American soil.

VICTORY SPORTS.

1/6th BATTALION THE PRINCE OF WALES' OWN (WEST YORKSHIRE REGIMENT).

Blucher Park, Cologne, was gay with bunting and the flags of the Allies on Wednesday, the occasion being the Victory Sports of the 1/6th Battalion The Prince of Wales' Own (West Yorkshire Regiment). There was a large assemblage of spectators. The regimental band conducted by Sergeant T. Raistrick rendered splendid selections, and Miss Phyllis (Pte. W. Moyse) an incomparable female impersonator, moved gracefully about the ground and by her charms won the hearts of many gallant subalterns who were not in the "know". The Jazz Band under Drm.-Major "Jazzer" Hume in their Chinese nigger, and other weird costumes caused great amusement and roars of laughter. Never were mouth organs and whistles blown more vigorously and Juanita, the Spanish dancer, excelled herself in her graceful motions, so much so that the General requested a special performance.

Lieut. W.H. de Vol conducted an interesting Pin Guessing Competition. The catering arrangements were in the capable hands of Lieut. R.A. Russell and the men's canteen had large stocks of fruit, ice-cream and other good things. It is interesting to note that the German police who assisted our regimental police to keep order were given, much to their surprise, an excellent tea and by this act of courtesy they were deeply impressed. Captain Hill was in charge of the "Charlie Chaplin" booth.

THE BEST ATHLETE.

The best athlete of the day was Lieut. W. Rumney, the sports officer, who was first in no less than six events. In the mile, half mile and flat races he far outstripped every other competitor. L/Cpl. Mercer of "D" Coy. also secured six prizes and was the best individual O.R. The officials were under the presidency of Bt.-Col. F.N.S.M. Howard, D.S.O. Lieut. Snoesmith acquitted himself well as clerk of the course, and he was ably assisted by Capts. Peberdy D.S.O. Bisatt, Sinclair, M.C. M.M., and Lieuts. Price, and Lancaster, M.C who performed the onerous duties of judges. The referee was Lieut. Richardson and the starters Capt. Rees, M.C., and 2/Lieut. Burnard. R.S.M. Cudworth made a splendid marshal of the course. Rev. G. Kendal, C.F. had charge of amusements and the other officials were; Recorders, Capt. Illingworth; 2/Lieut. Walker; Lap. Scorer: Lieut. Norton; Prizes: Lieut. Wilkinson; Groundsman: Pte. Driver; Blackboard; Sgts. Cook and Carruthers.

The Battalion Sports Cup was won by "B" Coy. and the announcement was made amid scenes of great enthusiasm. The prizes were presented to the winners by Brigadier-General H.C. Potter C.M.G. D.S.O. who said the sports were the best he had ever attended. He was accompanied by Brigade-Major G.S. Gartlan, D.S.O., M.C., and Staff Captain F.W. Paley, M.C., D.C.M., M.M.; also Col. H.H. Headlam C.M.G., D.S.O., 4th York and Lancs. Three bumper cheers for General Potter, Col. Howard and "B" Company brought a most successful day to a close.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

"The Mollusc" at Bruhl.

The first performance of the Rhine Army Dramatic Company outside Cologne was in every way a success. The Company visited Bruhl on Wednesday and submitted "The Mollusc" to a packed house. The caste was exactly the same as that which produced the play at Cologne.

The Merry Muffins.

"The Merry Muffins" gave an enjoyable entertainment at Düren Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday before a large audience. A good deal of new "business" was introduced and the items were varied and excellent throughout. The artistes were Lt. McCracken, Cpls. Haworth and Livingstone, S.S. Stribbling, Lce Cpl. Turner, Ptes. Armes and H.E. Stafford. The Irish Jazz Band was original and laughable.

East Lynne Burlesque.

My recent note concerning the performance of an East Lynne burlesque by "The Tabs" and the "Robin Hoods" has brought forth a letter from an individual who signs himself "Informant," and who claims that the "Diamonds" was the first Army Concert Party to work this act. Does no one else claim the distinction?

A Droll Comedian.

"The New Bing Boys," a concert party of quite recent origin, possesses an exceedingly droll and humorous comedian in Pte. Donn, of the Scotch Cyclists. Donn is very reminiscent of Sam Mayo, and his "Pilgrims of the Night," and "My Wife's First Husband" numbers never fail to cause roars of laughter. Before the war Donn saw much service with touring revues, and the name Phil Donn is well-known to hundreds of frequenters of the Northern theatres On Friday, Donn is appearing at the Church Army Cinema, Mülheim, and all should make a special point of seeing him.

A Juvenile Lead.

Frank Hartley (Sgt. Large) of whom this is an impression is the popular juvenile lead of the "Pedlars" concert party. He is also part producer of the sketches which are such a big feature in the "Pedlars" programmes. He is well known all over England and is a remarkably fine actor, some of his character parts being wonderfully good. He recently took up concerted item work in place of a member of the party who was ill, with such success, that he is now an essential member in the concerted numbers.

Jazz Band.

2nd Lieut. A.H. Bryan's (G.H.Q.) Jazz Band has had an active six weeks, tour in various parts of Rhineland. A few days ago immense enjoyment was provided for a large audience at the Excelsior Hotel, while to-morrow, Sunday, the talented combination of instrumentalists will play for the G.H.Q. midnight river dance in connection with the Remagen trip.

Euskirchen Y.M.C.A. Reading Circle.

At the weekly meeting on Monday evening, a good gathering heard Pte. A. Boreham's maiden effort, an ably arranged paper on "Dr. Johnson's Tour to the Hebrides." A brief resume of the life of the lexicographer, with an account of his tour, interspersed with well-chosen extracts from the book by Boswell, was very much enjoyed by those present, and a good deal of discussion followed, several members expressing their opinions upon the life and work of Johnson.

"The Darts" Concert Party.

The above party made their appearance at Stotzheim recently, and were well received by a packed house. They are to be congratulated on a very successful show. Pte. Conway sang "Jealous of me" (with clarionet accompaniment), Pte. Bell, as the "girl impersonator," sang his songs very tastefully and was very much to the fore, while Pte. Kendall, as the comedian, was a great favourite with the audience. The party also gave a very creditable show at Freisheim, and are to visit Euckenheim, Munstereifel, Gr. Vernich and Ludendorf, in search of fresh triumphs.

In a few words.

Another of the popular whist drives was held at the B.E.L.C. on Thursday night. Ptes. Beals and Munro tied for the first ladies' prize.

At the Saturday dance to be held to-day at the British Empire Leave Club, there will be an exhibition of the Highland reel by the men of the 4th Bn. Gordon Highlanders accompanied by a piper.

FUTILITY OF 'DRUG-TAKING' FOR NERVOUS WEAKNESS.

A copy of Dr. Muller's latest work, "The Way to Health," is enclosed in each box.

"Taking tonics or stimulating drugs, in cases of Nerve trouble, is folly of the worst kind. It is like giving neat brandy to a starving man. A temporary and misleading improvement is effected, which quickly passes, and leaves the exhausted Nervous system in worse plight than ever.

WHAT IS DR. MULLER'S NUTRIENT?

Dr. Muller has produced an exact counterpart of the essential Nutrient of which the Nerve Cells are composed, and on which alone they can be nourished, and further, by a special process of his own, has rendered this substance easily assimilable through the blood into the Nervous System; thus by Natural Means feeding, revitalising, and rebuilding the exhausted Nerve Cells to a state of robust and vigorous Nerve Health. The Muller Nutrient serves a treble purpose. It enriches the Blood, renders liability to attack from the insidious enemy of disease germs (such as Malaria) almost non-existent, and it builds by Natural Means a strong and Healthy Nervous System.

"Crowded-out Subalterns."

A HEATED DISCUSSION ENDS.

The letter from "Subaltern" complaining that junior officers are spurned by the fair sex in favour of seniors and staff officers at dances in Rhineland, and the indignant reply from "Agnes," have raised a storm among all ranks of the Rhine Army. The number of letters received on the subject has been so overwhelming that it is impossible to find space for them in the ordinary "Letterbox" column. As they are of such general interest, we devote to-day this special column to them.

IDENTIFICATIONS.

Sir,— I met "Agnes" at the VI Corps Ball. I'm afraid her head has been rather turned by a long series of unexpected successes amongst red tabs, decorations, and men generally. I think I know "Subaltern" too, and although not good looking, he is at least very courteous, (not nice, that's a horrid word to use about anyone). I'm very much inclined to agree with him about Agnes, whose conscience appears to be pricking her.

"RED TAB".

FROM A REGIMENTAL OFFICER.

Don't be silly Agnes; I assure you that I am generally supposed to have quite nice manners. You really must not give yourself airs because you happen to be spoilt by Brigadiers and red-tabbed officers! but I know you really don't mean what you say.

I am sure you will agree that there are far too many Staff Officers at these balls and that the Regimental Officer does not get a "look in" even though he be a grey haired regimental subaltern with the most perfect manners, and can dance like an angel.

I heard a girl address one of her sister V.A.D.'s as "Agnes" at a dance the other night. I wonder if she is the writer, I don't think she can be, she looked far too nice and sensible.

ARCHIBALD.

WAS "SUBALTERN" SHY?

Sir,—I would much rather dance with a young officer or "other rank" because I am young myself, but at one of the big dances in Cologne recently I found most of the partners I should have liked, booked girls up for the whole evening.

Now that sort of thing doesn't suit me. I like a change of partners, and so I was obliged to dance with men much older than I am. Some of them were very old and some had red tabs.

If "Subaltern" had asked me for a dance or two I would have jumped at his offer. Perhaps, though he was too shy to ask.

"SEVENTEEN."

ADVICE OF THE POET.

Sir,—"Subaltern" has evidently a grievance. Some fair maiden has given him the "go-by" in order to dance with some one whom she preferred to dance with.

Surely "Subaltern" would not be so selfish as to usurp pleasure to himself, irrespective of the lady's feelings in the matter. Apart from that, is it quite soldierly to whimper over these things in the public press?

Why not view the matter from the standpoint of the poet:—

If she be not fair to me,
What care I, how fair she be?

After all, we have all had to do without the society of the fair sex during the war, and I would advise "Subaltern" to do what we who are not subalterns will have to do, i.e. wait till we are demobbed.

TOMMY.

ARE JUNIOR OFFICERS DIFFIDENT?

Sir,—I have little patience with "Agnes" and would welcome the idea of a subalterns' dance club if one could be arranged.

Many of us are young, and would be very glad to meet officers of the same age. It has struck me that junior officers show too much diffidence where their seniors are concerned and do not press their claims.

Let them try their chances, and I for one, will never risk the claim to be a snob as "Majority's" friend must be. Personally the claims of the junior officer always appeal to

V.A.D.

MORE DISCRIMINATING.

Sir,- One of the reasons why Subalterns find it hard to obtain partners at dances etc. may be because being younger they are more particular as to the looks of the lady they dance with.

I think perhaps "Agnes" may have missed this point.

A. A.

TWAS EVER THUS.

Sir,—I must say that I fail to understand the grumble of "Subaltern" and others of that ilk for it was ever thus that the resplendent glory of tabs and rank made their appeal to the fair sex.

My mind wanders back to the days spent in hospital when one was able to get a few hours chat with our V.A.D. 's and I am mindful of many kindnesses, but even then I recall my envy of the wearer of a crown a few beds away Somehow "The Major" got all the attention.

"ROUEN."

THE MANNERS OF "AGNES."

Sir,—I suppose other ranks should have nothing to say on this question. Notwithstanding I should like to reply to "Agnes."

The letter freezes one as effectually as the gaze O.R.s so frequently receive from British ladies of Agnes's type in Cologne. Heaps of N.C.O's and men I know would like to spend an afternoon or evening occasionally with a British girl.

Association with a nice girl lifts Tommy out of his present self into his old self. Such associations apart from the enjoyment side, add to our good manners, but after reading the last paragraph of Agnes's letter I am of opinion that much could not be gained in manners from any association with her, although apparently she can dance.

NO MORE REPLIES.

The other day we had to explain why it had become absolutely necessary to abandon the idea of answering any queries on demobilization. Now, with regret, we are forced to say that our feature of "Answers to Correspondents" has to go by the board altogether as well. We can neither afford the space nor the considerable time it takes to handle such a feature. In a daily newspaper such as ours, to attempt to reply to the overwhelming number of enquiries, many of them entailing close and long research among records, reference works, and Army Orders, has now become quite beyond the powers of our necessarily limited staff of officers and other ranks. This we are sure will be understood by all. We would help every one if we could, but we cannot. So in future it is hoped that nobody will expect "Answers to Correspondents."

Teaching Them to Play.

Happening to be in Neuwied on the Rhine the other day, we were shown a copy of "The Indian," a bright periodical issued by the second Division of the United States troops. It is full of American "vim," and some really laughable sketches adorn its pages. One of its articles tells how the German children have learned to play games since the "Doughboys" came on the scene. The writer remarks: American soldiers simply cannot leave little children alone. Everywhere they go they play with the kiddies and teach them American games. Great big hulking doughboys, artillerymen, marines, ammunition handlers or truck drivers may be seen about the streets tossing balls to little boys and girls, teaching them games, and then entering heartily into the fun of the thing themselves. If these children had a bit more of the same sort of training, the future Germany would be a different place from that which the Americans found when they arrived here.

Hose Pipes.

In a public house just outside Cologne, a British Tommy and a German were conversing on the war. The Tommy took from his pocket his tobacco pouch and handed it to the German, who had a modern German pipe. His face beamed with satisfaction as he filled his pipe and returned the pouch with a smile and profuse thanks. After looking hard at the pouch and then at the German he was heard to exclaim to his pal standing close by "Blimey, Bill, drink up and let's get out of here, before some one else asks, 'Have you nix pipe of English tobacco for me?'"

A Midnight Marauder.

It was nearly midnight. Not a sound came from the deserted village outside. The writer was seated at the table, putting the finishing touches to his work, when a stealthy sound of scratching and breathing reached his ears. The room was on the gound floor, and the open window looked out on the main street; across the front of the windows were drawn some thin lace curtains. The noise continued. What could it be? Thoughts flew back to recent rumours which brought a chilly sensation to the spine. What could be done? The sound of breathing was audible in the stillness. But all was dark and black beyond the curtain. The sound remained, but nothing could be discerned. The curtain was swaying—unnaturally. There was something there; a black and white body was distinguishable. Fists after all might be useful, when there bounded into the room—a stray cat, one of the few left in Germany.

Have You Tasted Whorts?

Whorts, or as the native calls them, "Waldbeeren," are now being gathered in fairly large quantities in Rhineland. This delicious little fruit is as common in the South of England as here, though, strange to say, it is greatly neglected as an article of food, some even regarding it as a kind of poison berry. The whort bush is much like a garden box shrub in appearance and attains a height of about 18 inches. The fruit possesses the colouring and bloom of the hot-house black grape, is about the size of the currant and has a very delicate and distinctive flower. It is very appetizing in a tart, and being practically seedless and juicy, makes good jam and a rich wine.

Passing of an Army Daily.

We very much regret the passing of the "Amaroc News," the American Army daily newspaper printed at Coblence, which is to close down on July 15. The officers and men who have produced our contemporary are proceeding to Brest in order to embark for the United States. The News had a short but successful career. It is only ten weeks old, but had a circulation of 50,000 copies and to date has made a very considerable profit. We congratulate the staff upon the success which has attended their enterprize, and while we shall miss their daily musings, we wish them bon voyage and all the success we would wish ourselves in the future.

The Value of Gestures.

A humorous incident worthy of record occurred in Cologne. One of the young guards, being deficient of a tooth-brush, set out to purchase the necessary article. Upon referring to his German conversation guide he, of course, found no translation for the words toothbrush; so perforce entered a likely looking little fancy shop and asked the frau very distinctly for a toothbrush. This effort was greeted by shrugged shoulders and "nicht verstehn." So our friend was hit by an idea. Very carefully he went through the motions of cleaning his teeth. At once the good lady woke up and with a bright "jah, jah" "Versten ich", produced a mouth-organ.

Street Sales.

Not far from the centre of Cologne may be seen a small vegetable market the wares of which are distinctly good to look upon. The convenience of such a market is apparent at first sight. It is in the centre of a residential district and here under the trees morning after morning are set out many baskets containing the freshest of produce from the market gardens. To these sellers come mistress and maid and a wide selection awaits them. It is not so much the contents of the baskets as their fresh and cleanly appearance which attracts one. By 10.00 hours the vegetables have changes hands and after a sweep up, the square resumes its wanted calm. Such impromptu markets, if one may call them such, would be welcomed in many suburbs of our cities at home.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Pte. W. Moore, C. Coy 1/5th Border Regt. Rhine Army.

BLOCKADE OF GERMANY RAISED.

STARTLING EVIDENCE GIVEN AT INQUEST ON NOTORIOUS SOCIETY BEAUTY.

ENGINE OF R. 34 BREAKS DOWN.

BLOCKADE RAISED.

RESTRICTIONS WHICH STILL REMAIN IN FORCE.

The blockade of Germany is raised with effect from the 12th July, inclusive.

No restriction is placed on the movement of goods, with the following exceptions:—

(a) The export and import of arms, munitions and articles specially prepared for war are forbidden.

This does not refer to sporting arms and ammunition.

(b) The movement of coal and coke remains subject to the regulations now in force.

(c) The export of deystuffs and chemical products, platinum, gold and silver, coin and bullion, and foreign securities, is forbidden except under special licence which is to be applied for under the arrangements now in force.

All restrictions imposed by the Economic Committee, Luxembourg, or the Inter-Allied Rhineland Commission, on imports into and exports from Luxembourg, are cancelled.

These instructions do not prejudice in any way the Import and Export Regulations which may be in force in any allied or neutral country.

With the above exceptions all previous instructions relative to the import and export of goods are hereby cancelled.

The present regulations regarding the circulation of individuals remain in force.

FOCH INSISTS.

GERMANY'S RAPID EVACUATION OF ESTHONIA.

As the result of demands made by Marshal Foch to the German Government, General von der Goltz and the forces under him are now under orders completely to evacuate the Baltic provinces without further delay.

According to the latest information, Libau is already evacuated, while Riga and the towns to the East of the Dwina are almost cleared of Germans. The withdrawal on the Western bank is also proceeding satisfactorily.

The Lettish provisional Government has been transferred to Libau and Riga, where it has taken control of administration.

PLAYED OUT KAISER.

DUTCH OPINION ON RIGHT OF ASYLUM.

An article in the "Niewe Rotterdamsche Courant" expresses astonishment that the British people should wish such a sensational event as the trial of the ex-Kaiser to take place on English territory. Napoleon, it says, was a genius who might have been dangerous, but Wilhelm is irrevocably played out. The paper adds that it is impossible to separate the two questions of the ex-Kaiser's guilt and his responsibility for the war. However, if it is intended to examine the question of his guilt in an absolutely objective way, it would be unworthy of Holland to attempt to prevent this by refusing his extradition on the obsolete grounds of right of asylum. The Dutch legislature might therefore approve the extradition if guarantees are given and Dutch neutrality is strictly observed.

HUNGARIAN BOLSHEVISTS.

ALLIED INTERVENTION POSSIBLE.

The inter-Allied military staff at Versailles has been instructed to consider the question of possible measures which could be taken against the aggressive tendencies of Hungarian Bolshevists. The Supreme Allied Council was occupied with the question yesterday and will consider the advisability of affording armed assistance against the Hungarian Bolshevists of neighbouring states.

ITALY'S WAR DEBTS.

Signor Nitti, speaking in the Italian Chamber on the subject of Italy's foreign policy, declared that Italy had recognised and supported all just demands and rights of her Allies, but the rights demanded by Italy were not yet recognised.

Italy's financial situation was exceedingly complicated. She had a foreign debt of twenty thousand million lire and an internal debt of fifty-eight thousand millions. The paper currency was four times as great as before the war and expenditure amounted to eight thousand million lire. Signor Nitti announced that he would have to obtain 21,500,000,000 lire by means of death duties and other taxes.

NO FRESH ITALIAN RIOTS.

Rome was quiet yesterday after the previous day's outbreak of pillaging, and the shops which have unanimously reduced their prices by fifty per cent., have re-opened. A better situation also prevails in the provinces and no strikes or disorders are reported.

The Dutch Second Chamber has received three telegrams from various military associations at Perleburg and Dusseldorf requesting that the extradition of the ex-Kaiser be refused.

SOCIETY SUICIDE.

SENSATIONAL REVELATIONS AT THE INQUEST.

There were many dramatic passages at the inquest this afternoon on the body of Mrs. Arthur Eliot, better known as Mrs. Atherton, who shot herself with a double barrelled sporting gun at her flat in Curzon-street, Mayfair, shortly after midnight on Tuesday.

Colonel Eliot, her brother-in-law, told of a visit she paid Mrs. Eliot at her request on Tuesday. In a letter to him Mrs. Eliot spoke of being very miserable. At the interview it was disclosed that there had been trouble about Mrs. Eliot and her step-children, reference being made to an unmarried girl of twenty-four. Captain and Mrs. Eliot were living apart and Colonel Eliot told of his efforts to bring about a meeting. Mrs. Eliot was troubled as to whether she had been unkind to her husband. He approached Captain Eliot, who expressed a desire not to meet his wife. He was living in a flat with his daughter.

Mrs. Eliot's maid told of a visit to Eversleigh, where Captain Eliot told them to leave at once. On Tuesday, the day of her death, Mrs. Eliot was with witness for three-quarters of an hour, during which time the conversation was upon the impending interview with Captain Eliot. She said: "My whole life depends upon this interview with Captain Eliot," and she was very much upset.

The maid then told the story of the tragedy.

SCANDALOUS SUGGESTION.

The Earl of March was an unexpected witness. He came into court in an invalid's chair. He stated that he had known Mrs. Eliot for two or three years. Last Saturday he met her in Hyde Park and she told him then she was extremely miserable because her husband was living with her step-daughter. She made an allegation as to their conduct at Eversleigh and asked him for his advice. He told her that the obvious thing to do was to divorce her husband and also advised her to get hold of her husband's brother and talk the matter over with him. She wanted to see him and he wrote telling her what he thought of her husband. She wanted him to be present at the interview between herself and her husband, but he was unable to leave the house.

Miss Nellie Cornell, Captain Eliot's step-daughter, was called and gave an absolute denial to the allegations made respecting herself and Captain Eliot. Their conduct had never been anything but what one would expect between father and daughter.

Captain Eliot also gave evidence denying the suggestion made against him.

A verdict of suicide whilst of unsound mind was returned.

R. 34 MAKING WONDERFUL PROGRESS.

The R. 34 is making such good progress on her return flight from New York that in the opinion of experts at the Air Ministry the vessel was expected to be over London between noon and two o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The latest report gave her position at 4 a.m. on Friday morning as 43 degrees 30 minutes North, 46 degrees West. This means that she is more than half way across the Atlantic. She has the advantage of a following wind and she maintained average speed of sixty miles per hour for the first fifteen hours of flight, at times attaining seventy-five to eighty miles per hour.

ONE ENGINE BREAKS DOWN.

Later messages from the R 34 report that one engine has completely broken down, but if the wind continues favourable no trouble is expected, nor will her arrival in England be delayed.

The airship is making for Pulham, Norfolk, as the weather conditions over Scotland are unfavourable for landing.

RHINELAND.

ONLY DISCUSSION ON DETAIL PERMITTED.

Two German Commissions reached Versailles yesterday. The first, headed by Herr von Lowald, Secretary of the Interior, will confer on the convention relative to the Rhineland. The second, under State Secretary Schroeder, will deal with the question of reparations. Joint meetings of the German and Allied reparations commissions will commence immediately.

It is common knowledge that Germany intends to raise questions affecting the occupied territories, but while it is considered probable that the Allied delegates will admit discussion on the subject of the occupation, it is certain that they will not allow the negotiations to go beyond matters of detail and the putting into force of the peace terms.

The signed conditions of peace will be rigorously enforced.

A NEW MERSEY TUNNEL

Owing to the ever increasing congestion and consequent delays to goods traffic on the Mersey ferries, the Liverpool Corporation has instructed its chief engineer to report on the practicability of another tube or tunnel from Liverpool to the Cheshire side of the river.

FICKLE GROCER.

AMOROUS LETTERS FROM CAPTIVITY.

In the London Sheriff's Court yesterday, an amusing action was brought to recover damages for breach of promise of marriage. The proceedings had been remitted from the High Court for the assessment of damages, judgment having been allowed to go by default. There was no appearance for the defendant.

Counsel for the plaintiff, said his client, Miss Florence Baker, lived at Battersea, and the defendant, Walter John Reynolds, resided at Raynes Park. The plaintiff met the young man in 1910. In July, 1914, he asked her to marry him, and she agreed to do so. Reynolds joined the Army a month later, and he promised to marry her when the war was over. Counsel held in his hand bundles of letters written by the young man to the girl, but if he read them the jury would be there until next day. (Laughter.) Some of them were too affectionate to be read in court. In some, the defendant referred to the plaintiff as his wife; in fact, he was always talking of "my dear wife," and in one letter he quoted the well-known proverb, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder," and wrote, "I have 'I hear you calling me' on the brain," and "When I go to bed I pray for you. Good-bye, my darling, good-bye."

"I HEAR YOU CALLING ME."

Subsequently the defendant was taken prisoner in Kut, and in an affectionate letter written from that place in July, 1918, he wrote, "By the bye, my banking account is getting pretty large now." It was evident from the tone of the letter that he was being well treated at Kut, as he said, "I am continually singing the song 'I hear you calling me' before the officers, who tell me that I have a very fine voice. I have sung it a good many times near Constantinople, where the English officers and others have congratulated me upon my voice. I also sing 'Until,' which commences 'No rose in all the world until you came.' "The letters went on until Nov. 23, 1918, when he was released, and he returned to England in January, 1919. All the way through the letters had been of a most affectionate nature, but early in February the defendant called upon the plaintiff and said he could not marry her.

CALLED FOR THE COLLARS.

Plaintiff, a tall girl, gave evidence beating out her counsel's opening. Even after defendant's return from Kut he was still as affectionate as he was when he went away. On Feb. 1, 1919, he seemed very nervous when he came to her, and simply said he had called for the collars. She told him that she did not know he wanted them so soon, and he replied, "I did not come for them, but to tell you I cannot marry you." He also said he was going abroad, and might not be back for some years, adding that witness would not like to go abroad. As a fact, she would have gone abroad if he had carried out his promise.

The Under-Sheriff said it was delightful to hear that the defendant was so well treated in Kut, and that he obtained his release. He now wanted the plaintiff to release him, but her counsel thought he should not be released without suffering pecuniarily.

The jury awarded the plaintiff £300 damages, and judgment was given accordingly, with costs.

BRAVERY AT WIZERNES FIRE.

ALBERT MEDALS FOR RESCUE PARTY.

The King has awarded the Albert Medal to Lieutenant (acting Major) William Revell Smith, M.C., R.F.A., Sergeant Alexander Gibson, R.E., and Corporal James Smith, Military Mounted Police, in recognition of their gallantry in endeavouring to save life at Wizernes.

On January 17, a fire occurred at the brewery at Wizernes. In the engine room a Frenchman whose cries for help could be heard, had been entombed by a fall of masonry which completely blocked the entrance. The upper part of the building was blazing fiercely, and the only entrance to the engine room was by a small hole in the wall which carried the machinery belting. Major Smith, Sergeant Gibson, and Corporal Smith succeeded in making their way through this hole into the room, and worked for three-quarters of an hour before they exposed the head and shoulders of the entombed man, who was found to be dead. They risked their lives, for a further collapse of masonry (which appeared imminent) would have completely cut off their exit.

PARIS VICTORY MARCH.

The first detachment of British troops who are taking part in the Victory March on July 14th arrived in Paris on Friday. To-day Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig and General Sir William Robertson, Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the Rhine, are due. Other British Generals taking part in the march are Lord Cavan, Sir Julian Byng, Mayor-General Sir W. R. Marshall, General Sir Henry Rawlinson, General Sir H. S. Horne, Major-General Sir H. A. Lawrence, Lieut.-General Sir G. H. Fowke, Major-General Sir J. Birch and Major-General Heath.

POLICE HOURS AND WAGES.

It is understood that the report of Lord Desborough's committee, which has been dealing with police wages and conditions of service, is completed, and has been finally approved. It is expected to be issued early next week.

The statement that the report would recommend a minimum wage of £3 10s a week for every police force in the country is "correct as far as it goes," said a Home Office official. The effect of the report generally will be greatly to improve police conditions, and render the service more attractive.

Mr. Bonar Law announced yesterday that arrangements are being made whereby extensive leave will be granted to troops to enable them to see the peace celebrations.

WINESHOP MURDER.

EIGHTEEN-YEAR-OLD SUSPECT ARRESTED.

A man has been detained at Sheffield in connection with the Hendon wineshop murder. He has been brought to London and will be charged at the Hendon Petty Sessions. He gives his name as Arthur John Biggin and his age as eighteen.

The police had been closely following the clue which led to the detention of the man, but were greatly handicapped by the publicity given to certain features of the case.

WAR MUSEUM.

TEMPORARY HOME AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

The Crystal Palace, which during the war was the training centre of the R.N.V.R., has been hired for four years by the Government to house the collection of war relics and material ultimately intended for the war museum. It is hoped that eventually the huge collection will be housed in a permanent building to be erected on the South side of the Thames.

Sir Alfred Mond, in explaining the scheme, says that the name of every man who lost his life in the war will be inscribed on the walls. In the front of the building could be moored the Vindictive or a similar vessel. It is also intended to make the museum a great university of modern warfare from the time of Marlborough to the present.

COAL PROBLEM.

MINERS SAY INCREASED PRICE IS NOT JUSTIFIED.

The keenest interest is being taken in Monday's forthcoming important debate in the House of Commons on the coal problem. The Executive of the Miners Federation is expected to present a report to the delegates meeting at Keswick on Tuesday. They contend that nothing like an increased price of six shillings a ton is justified or necessary to cover the cost of the concessions to the miners. A very determined attitude is expected to be taken by them on nationalization.

The Premier is expected to make an important speech on the outlook immediately on his return to the House.

WILSON'S CRITICS.

BILL TO LIMIT FREEDOM OF FUTURE PRESIDENTS.

President Wilson was cordially welcomed by the Senate on Thursday. In the course of a brief address, he said that the League of Nations had become a practical necessity. He asked the Senate if it dared reject the League and so break the heart of the world. He did not touch the Franco-American-British alliance except to state that he is reserving his comments for a future occasion.

Senator Philipp Campbell of Kansas has introduced in the House of Representatives at Washington, a bill denying to future presidents of the United States the right of leaving the jurisdiction of the country. In a satirical statement he declared that no country could with safety permit its chief of executive to intrude in the domestic affairs of another country.

President Wilson, he said, had mistaken the receptions accorded him in England, France and Italy for an invitation to become their political master, the result being that he had lost prestige which would take years to restore. He declared that President Wilson has fallen a victim to the wiles of foreign diplomats.

HAIG AND BEATTY FOR THE PEACE PROCESSION.

It is now certain that in the great Peace celebration procession on July 19th, the leaders of the Army and Navy will personally be at the head of the men, who served under them. Field Marshal Haig with his staff, and all army and divisional commanders will figure in the march. Sir David Beatty will march at the head of his men with his second in command, Admiral Madden, and all the Admirals who held active command during the war.

TRAINING FOR EX-SERVICE MEN

During the week ended July 8th the Grants Committee of the Ministry of Labour has sanctioned the giving of 286 grants under the Government Scheme for training ex-Service men in civil careers, whether officers or men from the ranks of similar educational qualifications. The total of grants made up to date is 1,297, and of these 608 are for officers, and 689 are for other ranks.

SHOT AT POLICEMEN.

The Highgate magistrates committed for trial Frank Long, 29, described as a hairdresser, on charges of attempting at Finchley to murder P.C.s Wright and Ost, and of having in his possession housebreaking implements.

The two constables produced bullets which were found in their clothing, and stated that Long, while evading arrest at midnight on June 28, fired three revolver shots at Ost and one at Wright. Both had a remarkable escape, bullets penetrating their uniform and grazing the skin.

The Committee which is organizing the movement for a general strike in France on July 21st met yesterday. It has transpired that there is vigorous opposition to the strike on the part of the printers, railway workers and workers in the building trades.

LIGHTLESS LONDON.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS' STRIKE IMPERILS ILLUMINATIONS.

A strike of members of the electrical Trades Unions is likely to upset all the elaborate plans for the illumination of London for the celebration of peace. The men, who have been dissatisfied for some time past, have been instructed not to undertake any illuminating work in connection with the peace celebrations and up to the present no solution of the deadlock between masters and men has been found. One result of the strike was that Nelson's Column in Trafalgar Square was not illuminated on Friday night as it had been for the past week in connection with the Victory Loan Campaign.

ILLUMINATIONS CANCELLED.

A telegram received as we go to press states that the Office of Works officially announces that it is unable to proceed with the proposed official illuminations owing to the action of the Electrical Trades Union.

The men demanded to be paid 2s 6d per hour plus 120½ per cent, bonus, which, in default of an agreement between employers and workmen, the Office of Works is unable to grant.

ANTICIPATING CRIME.

NAPOLEONIC WARS TAKEN AS A PRECEDENT.

On the House of Commons Committee for Civil service estimates, a vote of £473,000 for prisons in England and Wales and the Colonies was submitted. Sir H. Greenwood, replying to questions, said that there had been a steady decrease in crime since 1913-14. In that year the number of prisoners was 18,236, while in 1918-19 it was only 9,199. The vote for the current year estimated for a great increase, because they had the precedent that after the Napoleonic wars there was a great growth in the numbers convicted. Up to the present, however, he was glad to say there had been no increase, and he hoped that the increase would not arise. Among the reasons for the decrease were the operation of the First Offenders Act and of the Act allowing time for the payment of fines. War bonuses were one of the reasons for the increase in the present estimate, and besides that there was an advance in the cost of labour and materials. As to the question of women police-constables, that was now in the experimental stage. If it justified itself, there might be some increase, though he hoped not very great.

The vote was agreed to, as were also votes of £285,332 for reformatories and industrial schools, and of £46,875 for criminal lunatics asylums.

LINER'S NARROW ESCAPE.

The Allan Liner Grampian, Montreal for Liverpool, collided with an iceberg on Wednesday night, and returned to St. John's Newfoundland, for repairs. Two persons were killed and two injured in the collision.

The liner, which had her bows stove in by the collision, was carrying 750 passengers and 850 crew.

The killed and injured members of the crew of the Grampian were asleep in the bow of the ship when she struck. Practically all the passengers, among whom were 500 women and children, were awake at the time of the collision. There was no panic. It is believed that the quick decision of the captain to change his course caused the vessel to hit the iceberg head on, instead of receiving a glancing blow, and thus saved the Grampian from the fate of the Titanic.

MINERS' SIX HOUR SHIFT.

The Yorkshire miners council at Barnsley has rejected the owner's proposal for a seven hour shift system which becomes due next Wednesday. They decided to demand a six hour Saturday shift for all workers.

Unless an agreement is reached the men announce that they will cease work on Monday.

LINEN COUNTER OPEN.

A statement has been issued by Mr. L.J.Martin the man who purchased the entire Government stock of forty-two million yards of linen. He announces that five million yards have been allotted to the home market.

The supplies will reach the drapers in about a week's time, when the public will be able to buy the material by the yard up to any quantity, at prices substantially below those at which the inferior article of commerce is obtainable.

The remainder of linen goes to allied and neutral countries.

HAIG PROPHESIES.

Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, speaking at Aberdeen University, where he received the honorary degree of L.L.D., said he could not think the people of Great Britain believed they were never going to fight a great battle again. If they did believe it he was sure they were wrong. At all costs and whatever the future might bring we had to be prepared. Then when the next great trial comes, as one day it surely will, we should be found a nation in arms, ready and prepared to meet it.

GIRL TELEGRAPH MESSENGERS.

Mr. Illingworth, Postmaster-General, states that it is the intention during the next four years gradually to replace, by boys, the girl telegraph messengers who were engaged as a temporary war measure. Approximately 6,500 girls are at present employed. No prospects of permanent employment can be held out, but girls who are suitable will be considered, if they so desire, for appointment as telephonists, so far as vacancies allow.

A NEW WORLD.

Social reconstruction affects us all. We see the necessity to-day of making the world anew. But how to accomplish it? The task is gigantic, almost appalling.

Sound reconstruction means hard thinking. There is no short cut to Utopia. It cannot be obtained by changing one form of government for another. Reconstruction that is to be permanent and satisfactory is mainly a question of efficiency.

At present in the British Isles we have some forty-five millions of people, for whom is produced at home only about half the necessaries they need for existence, or at any rate for an ample life.

Can we speed up production by greater efficiency so that we are able to supply the other half, or at least most of it?

Side by side with the cry for more and better housing, for ships, for coal and any amount of manufactured goods as well as the hands to do labour at these vital industries, there is the bitter cry of thousands of unemployed.

Our present social system is chaotic; it lacks efficiency.

By putting our brains into the war, with the aid of our Allies, we won it. Now we have to use our brains to the utmost of our power to re-model our country so that it can accommodate itself to the new order of things.

Everybody demands higher recompense for his work and we make no complaint against the natural aspiration for better wages.

But unless production is vastly increased and every scientific means adopted to that end, no power of Trade Union or government can maintain those rates. State doles and class legislation only aggravate the problems of to-day. The question is too big to handle piecemeal.

We spoke the other day of the necessity for a definite policy as to foreign trade. At present we have none.

We need even more, a thorough system of social and industrial reconstruction, but it may take long in evolving it.

Do not let us lose the harvest of Victory by drifting on. Every available brain in the country should be working towards the goal of a New World.

Are we showing the same united determined front in Peace as we did in war?

COUNTING CHICKENS.

A Cricket Match Fiasco.

"William," said the Adjutant, severely, "as a Sports' officer you're not exactly a success."

Being unprepared for this thrust, I made no comment, but allowed him to continue.

"Here is the report of our last League match," quoth he. "It is four days late, for a start, and of all the bald, uninteresting statements ever printed, I think this takes the proverbial bun. Why, you haven't even mentioned my 55, not out!"

"It wasn't altogether my fault the report was late," I protested warmly. "I'm not one of your literary fellows who can turn out copy by the yard. I did manage to finish the thing the day after the match, and gave it to the D.R. but I suppose he forgot to post it for a couple of days. As for your score, 55 not out, isn't so much to crow about for an ex-county bat."

"You've admitted your incapability to compose a proper report, anyway," rejoined the Adjutant. "That's the reason I've come to give you a helping hand. We've got another League match to-morrow, as you know, against some A.S.C. wallahs. Now, as we've won our last four matches hands down, I confidently expect a victory on this occasion. My idea, therefore, is to draft out a skeleton report, leaving blanks for the actual details. Now the Colonel, Bdr. Spinks, and myself have each scored double figures in all our matches to date. What is more natural than for us to do likewise in this one. Similarly, Jones and I, with all due modesty, should succeed in O.K.ing the wickets as before. Now what do you think of this for a skeleton report?"

He produced a folded sheet of foolscap, and I read as follows:—

"X" Bde, R.G.A. ( ) v. "Z" Col. A.S.C. ( ).

This match was played under ideal weather conditions, and ended in a win for the Gunners. For the victors, Col. J scored ( ) without giving a chance, while the Adj. (Capt. D.) compiled an irreproachable ( ). Bdr. Spinks also succeeded in reaching double figures ( ).

In bowling, Lieut. Jones, that wizard with the leather, succeeded in taking ( ) wkts. for ( ) runs; while Capt. D's performance was hardly less noteworthy, with ( ) wickets for ( ) runs. Altogether an enjoyable match, and a well-deserved win for the Brigade.

"Seems pretty cock-sure," I commented, "I know you're hot-stuff, but don't you think you're counting your ——"

"Stuff!" roared the Adjutant, slamming the door behind him.

* * *

The next day the match was played, while the sun shone from a clear blue sky. I filled in the skeleton report, and took it to the Adjutant. It now read, "X" Bde. R.G.A. (49) v. "Z" Col. A.S.C. (110 for 2 wkts.).

This match was played under ideal weather conditions, and ended in a lose (?) for the Gunners. For the losers Col. J scored 3 without giving a chance, while the Adj. (Capt. D) compiled an irreproachable 1. Bdr. Spinks succeeded in reaching double figures (41 not out.).

In bowling, Lieut. Jones that wizard with the leather, succeeded in taking 1 wkt. for 42 runs, while Capt. D's performance was hardly less noteworthy, with 1 wkt. for 68 runs. A together an enjoyable match, and a well-deserved loss for the Brigade.

"Will that do?" I inquired meekly. "I've made the necessary additions and alterations."

But the Adjutant seemed cross. "As I said before," he said with asperity, as a Sports officer you're not exactly a success. You ought to know that when a match is played in the 'Cologne Post" Cup League, a report of it should only be sent by the winning team!"

GREAT MEN.

Impress of Environment.

BY A CORRESPONDENT.

It has been asked "Why is it that Jesus Christ is the only catholic man?" What we mean by a catholic man is a man free from the impress of the environment in the midst of which he has been born and educated, and is free from the impress of the peculiarities of race and nation.

What are the facts with respect to all ordinary men? They invariably bear upon them the impress of that moral and spiritual atmosphere which they have habitually breathed.

This is the cause of those peculiarities of national character which are handed down from generation to generation. Even great men, very great men, have been unable to free themselves from their influence.

Thus Oriental philosophies and Oriental habits of thought, however much they may differ from one another, bear on them the impress of a type of thought widely different from that of the Occidental nations. So it has been with their great men.

Who founded Brahminism we know not; but certain it is that this system never could have attained a hold on the nations of the West. The same is true with Sakya Muni and Buddhism. This system bears the deep impress of that moral and spiritual atmosphere under the influence of which it was born and grew.

For Certain Environments.

Mahomet, however much he may have improved on the order of things as he found them, utterly failed to transcend the environments in which he was born and educated. His religion is fitted only for certain aspects of the Oriental mind, and among Western nations it can take no hold.

So it has been with Greece, her philosophy and civilisation. Of her great men (and she has produced many) not one of them has succeeded in exhibiting a character which is catholic. The same is true of Roman great men; the same is true of the great men of the modern world.

However much they may have risen above the average level of their countrymen, they all bear on them the unmistakable impress of that moral and spiritual atmosphere in the midst of which they were born and educated.

But to this universal rule Jesus Christ is the one solitary exception. He was born and educated in a remote village of a nation pre-eminently distinguished for exclusiveness.

For All Ages and All Men.

The intensity of this exclusiveness is an unquestionable fact; for we not only learn it from the writings which compose the Christian scriptures, but it is charged on the Jewish race by every heathen writer who has had occasion to refer to them.

Yet out of the bosom of such a nation has emerged the one only catholic man who has shown Himself capable of speaking to the heart of the civilized man and the savage, to the philosopher and the uneducated, and who, in the words of Mr. Lecky the historian, has shown Himself "capable of acting on all ages, nations and temperaments and conditions," and in those of Mr. Mill is such that a modern sceptic could not do better than so frame his life that it might meet with the approbation of Jesus Christ. He alone of men could ask "Which of you convinceth Me of sin?."

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

WAS HE A HERO?

Sir,—Having read your article, the "H.34's Stowaway," one wonders whether one ought not to took on him as a hero, rather than a defaulter.

According to his own story, he was promised to be one of the crew, and at the last minute was turned down. In his own words he says, "I am not worrying about the punishment, they are planning for me." I, for one, wish him the best of luck and a free pardon.

FAIR PLAY.

FACE FUNGUS.

Sir,—The cultivation of face fungus by army officers has inspired those people who so cheerfully undertake to compile our regulations to frequent literary effort.

The wearing of a beard has always been considered an unnecessary facial decoration while the compulsory growth of a moustache had to be abandoned.

To get to the point, however, what absurd nation is it that some officers have how got to bring the wearning of side-whiskers into fashion again? In ever growing numbers one sees young officers thus disfigured in the streets of Bonn, and I suppose, other towns.

If these fellows would only realise that not more than one face in a thousand can stand such adornment they would surely wield the razor well in the neighbourhood of the top of the ear.

"TATCHO."

THE GIRLS AT HOME.

Sir,—In answer to "Musican's" letter regarding the English girls' preference for Overseas Dominions troops. Personally I do not think it is altogether a matter of money, although I grant him it is an attraction in some cases.

And then I think it applies chiefly to the "Young Flapper" and not to the sensible girl who looks before she leaps.

With regard to one reader's statement in connection with the French and Belgian girls' I have not yet met a case where an honourable English Tommy has actually preferred either the French or Belgian to the English girl. As for the German girl I should think that would be his last hope.

S. S.

OUR NATIONAL ANTHEM.

Sir,— I notice that "Thoroughbred" refers to our National Anthem as a "Hanoverian Dirge," whilst "A.F.Y.", although he corrects that unfortunate and all too common error, remarks that it is "not a particularly happy effort."

With its grand simplicity it makes a far deeper appeal to most men than the somewhat superficial work referred to by "Thoroughbred," and is entirely worthy of our great Empire.

Beethoven himself derived inspiration from it, notably in the magnificent Andante movement of his Sonata in G Sharp, Op. 14, No. 2.

R.S.

Sir,—I have read with surprise the letters about our National Anthem. Now, why all this talk about a Poet Laureate and composer to write a good National Anthem when Britain has the best of all.

"God save the King" was only introduced in quite recent times and from a musical point of view "Rule Brit ania" our real national song, is surely a grand one.

A.R.A.M.

Sir,—I agree with "A.F.Y." that the Germans borrowed the tune of "God save the King" from us, and not we who adopted it from the German.

Very many attempts have been made to rewrite it in recent years and to add verses to extend its application to the whole Empire, but there is not a single verse that has come to be regarded as anything like permanent beside the original three verses.

They stand like a rock in our literature, as firmly as ever. Whence this remarkable stability? It is that they express the central force, the driving spirit of the British ideal, conscious of its ultimate righteousness such as no other song can do?

What other way can that ideal live than by the answer to the prayer of "O Lord our God arise, scatter his enemies, and make them fall."?

The spirit of these lines is on a level with Shakespeare when one of his characters exclaims in Henry IV, "This England never did, nor never shall, lie at the proud foot of a conqueror!" There is more than mere jingoism in both these quotations.

"COLOGNE BIRD."

THE REPLY SARCASTIC.

Sir,—I wish to thank you for your kindness in publishing my letter concerning the swallows and the flies; and also, if I may, to congratulate Ananias on his reply thereto.

Dear old Ananias! How nice it was to hear from him again: it would be delightful to have the views of his brethren "Paterfamilias," "Fair Play," and other valued contributors.

However "Et ego in Arcadia vixi," and I am astounded at anyone being able to sit down on a covey of nine sandgrouse simultaneously. Truly one cannot wonder that the trousers worn by Ananias in performing this feat could only be supplied as a government contract. (I wonder where Ananias gets his saddles?.)

As a man of parts and a student of nature, Ananias will be interested to learn that an officer fishing in the Ahr is now confined to a sofa with a nasty lacerated wound involving the patella and the quadriceps extensor of his right leg, a misfortune generally attributed to an underwater attack by a member of the species Trutta, subspecies Ferox.

If Ananias cares to send his name and address together with 25 marks or so to cover postage and packing expenses, I shall be glad to send him the cake to which his letter entitles him.

My friend Piscator informs me that there can be no doubt that the fly with which Ananias hooked and landed the hare (and of which he has forgotten the name) was a hare's lug.

EUSKIRCHEN.

THE BARGAIN.

My true love hath my heart, and I have his,
By just exchange one for another given:
I hold his dear, and mine he cannot miss,
There never was a better bargain driven:
My true love hath my heart, and I have his.

His heart in me keeps him and me in one,
My heart in him his thoughts and senses guides:
He loves my heart, for once it was his own,
I cherish his because in me it bides:
My true love hath my heart, and I have his.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY.

Thrilling Neck and Neck Racing.

CLOSE FINISHES ON SECOND DAY OF COLOGNE JULY MEETING.

At Merheim, yesterday, when the Cologne July Meeting was resumed, the sport was again of a first rate order, fields were large, and the going excellent. There was a comparatively small crowd present for the first race, but as time went on spectators streamed along in large numbers. The overcast sky that prevailed during the morning cleared after mid-day, and bright sunshine gladdened the proceedings.

INTERESTING MATCH.

"STICKS" WINS EXCITING UNOFFICIAL RACE BY A HEAD.

An interesting match preceded the official programme, "Sticks" (Capt. Barnard, Southern Div. Sigs) and Suzanne (Capt. Harris, R.A.S.C.) running a thrillingly close six furlong race. The animals ran neck and neck throughout the distance, "Sticks" winning by a head.

The meeting, which was run under the auspices of the Racing Sub-Committee of the Rhine Army, commenced punctually to time.

THE WINNERS.

Cologne Plate (1st Division), for horses and officers of the Rhine Army. 1 mile.

1, Mount Royal (Major T. Carlisle); 2, Sahib (Major T. Bagshaw, R.A.V.C., R.H.A.); 3, Sivan Song (Capt. L. Bathurst, R.A.S.C.).

The running was made by the three placed horses and Esmeralda, the last named leaving the course.

Maiden Welter Steeplechase (1st Division), for horses of the Rhine Army that have never won a race and officers of the same. 2 miles.

1, Gold Dust (Major A. Lord R.F.A.); 2, Old King Cole (Major R. Hewer, R.F.A.); 3, Yellow Peril (Lieut. R. McFarlane 9th Lancers).

The first mile was covered in a bunch when Yeoman refused a jump and was left well in the rear. The first three then gradually drew away and fought a close finish, half a length and a length separating the horses. Lady Violet, a hundred yards behind, was fourth.

Allied Steeplechase, for horses and officers of the Allied Armies. 2½ miles.

Results:—1, Golden Sunset (Lieut. R. Usher, Innis D.); 2, Barney (Capt. T. Cocksedge, R.A.V.C.); 3, Winamere (Major R. Sinclair). Winner 35 to 10.

The French horse led the way for five furlongs and then at the first jump became lame. Paddy, who was well supported, did not get going and came along last until the second jump, which he refused to take. The field was reduced by five, the riders being thrown at the high jump. The first and second made a keen finish, Golden Sunset winning an exciting race for the second time during the meeting by a length. Two lengths between second and third.

FIVE FURLONGS RACE.

MASCOT RUNS HOME EASY WINNER BY 15 LENGTHS.

Maiden Race, for horses of Infantry, R.E. and R.A.M.C., units of the Rhine Army that have never won a race, to be ridden by officers borne on the strength of any of those units. Five furlongs straight.

Results:—1, Mascot (Capt. W. Waterman, R.W.K.); 2, Maid of the Mountains (Lieut. C. Neill, R.E.); 3, The Parrott (Lieut. H. Parsons, R.E.) Winner 8 to 10. Mascot got away well and romped home an easy winner by 15 lengths, half a length between second and third.

Cologne Plate (2nd Division), for horses and officers of the Rhine Army. 1 mile.

The result was as follows:—1, Velociter (Lieut. Durnford, 9th Lancers); 2, Johnnie Walker (Major C. Hydeman Q.B.); 3, Nolo (Capt. H. Latham, R.F.A.). Winner 75 to 30.

For the last half mile, John Cording, Johnny Walker, and Nolo led with the field close up. Velociter then crept forward and won by a head. Half a length separated the second and third.

Victory Plate, for horses and officers of the Allied Amies. Seven furlongs.

1, Billy (Major E. Batther, R.F.A.); 2, Ballyhooley (Lieut. W. Fennell); 3, Remember Me (Lieut. E. Russell, R.A.S.C.). Ten ran. Winner 44 to 10.

Maiden Welter Steeplechase, for horses of the Army of the Rhine that have never won a race, to be ridden by officers of the same. 2 miles.

1, Yes Uncle (Lieut. Kelly, 9th Lancers.); 2 Late Report (Lieut. R. Bulteel, 17th Lancers.); 3, Lady Bird (Lieut. L. Birley, 17th Lancers.). Eight ran. Winner 18 to 10. Anthony, (2nd Lieut. W. Rogers, R.W.K.) was first past the post, but an objection for crossing was sustained and the race awarded as above.)

Maiden Hurdle Race, for horses of the Rhine Army that have never won a race and officers who have never ridden the winner of any race. 2 miles.

1, Naboth (Lieut. S. Spicer, 12th Lancers.); 2, Polish Banker (Major A. Needham); 3, Lady Diana (Capt. G. Corrall, Lancs. Div.) Furteen ran. Winner 24 to 10.

BRIGADE BOXING.

WELL CONTESTED MATCHES IN 1st KING'S COMPETITION.

The 1st King's Brigade Boxing Competition was held in the Recreational Hall, 51st Kings Liverpool Regt., Beuel, and was witnessed by a large and enthusiastic audience. The fighting throughout was excellent, as was also the spirit of the whole meeting. This competition forms part of a series of competitions for the Championship Shield, presented by the Brigade Commander (Brig.-Gen. Lambert, C.B. C.M.G.).

RESULTS.

8 Stones. 0 Lbs. . . . 13th K.L.R. (Pte. Gallacher. W.)
8 Stones. 6 Lbs. . . . 52nd K.L.R. (Pte. Gent. H.)
9 Stones. 0 Lbs. . . . 51st K.L.R. (Pte. Colshaw J.)
9 Stones. 9 Lbs. . . . 13th K.L.R. (Pte. Bradley. T)
11 Stones. 6 Lbs. . . . 52nd K.L.R. (Cpl. Holyneaux. B.)

The 8 stones. 9 lbs. contest deserves special mention, the loser (Pte. Rushden, 51st K.L.R.) displaying great pluck and receiving personal congratulation on his performance from the Referee. The 9 Stone. 9 lbs. contest between Private Bradley, 13th K.L.R., and Private Dean. 52nd K.L.R., was also particularly good.

Much of the success of the meeting was due to the able refereeing of Major Delany, O.B.E. A.G.S. and the very fair judging of Capt. Herbert M.C. and Capt. McSweeney, both of the A.G.S. all of whom came from Cologne to officiate. The boxing competition, as will be seen from the results, was won by the 52nd K.L.R., and the Brigade Championship now stands as follows:—

13th Kings. . . . . 8 points.
52nd Kings. . . . . 7 points.
51st Kings. . . . . 3 points.

4th SEAFORTH'S FINAL.

The final of the 4th Seaforth's inter-Coy. football competition was played between No. 3 and 4 Coys. at Zerkall on Tuesday evening. The large attendance of spectators was accounted for by the intense excitement which had been aroused in the Battalion and neighbouring units. From the commencement, No. 4 Coy. pressed and amidst great excitement, to the musical strains of gas rattles and other instruments, Rourke scored a great goal after 20 minutes play. Play continued in No. 4 's favour to the end of the first half.

The second half was more evenly contested and the play was of a very high standard. No. 3 came more into the game and Butcher No. 4 Coy's genial goal-keeper, was called upon several times to maintain his reputation of being "as steady as the rock of Gibraltar." As he himself predicted, "nothing but wind passed through his goal." The game ended in a win for No. 4 by 1 goal, deservedly won on the run of play.

ATHLETIC SPORTS.

10th BATTALION ("THE QUEENS") R.W.S. REGIMENTAL MEETING.

The above Battalion held their annual Regimental Sports on Monday and Tuesday at Engelskirchen in fine weather. Thanks to herculean efforts on the part of their Company Commander, "B" Company proved their supremacy after a very close run with "D" Company, only 3 points separating them. L/C Mills of "D" Company showed fine form, securing 3 first and 2 second prizes.

The Band of the 11th Battalion discoursed sweet music during the afternoon of the finals and the drums and fifes of the 10th Battalion played popular airs during the afternoon of the first day. The feature of the racing was the finish of the Three Mile Race, no fewer than five competitors entering the last lap practically abreast. This event was eventually secured by Capt. Evans M.C. from Sgt. Hobbs after a great sprint over the last 100 yds. The Prizes were distributed by the Brigade Commander, Brigadier-General F.A. Dudgeon. C.B.

Youthful Marksmen at Bisley.

BOY SHOTS IN GREAT FORCE: ASHBURTON SHIELD WON BY WINCHESTER.

School boy marksmen have attended the Bisley victory meeting in large numbers and the Ashburton Shield was won by Winchester with a score of 649.

Charterhouse was only one point behind, other scores being Felstead 641, Rugby 635, Repton 630, Marlboro 626, and Eton 625.

The best individual record was by Parmiter of the Rugby team, who scored 90 out of a possible 100:

200 yds. . . . . 4 5 4 4 5 4 5 5 5 5—46
500 yds. . . . . 2 5 4 5 4 4 5 5 5 5—44

Cadets Challenge Trophy:—This trophy was won by Wellington (Salop) with a score of 154, Clifton returning 153.

Spencer Cup:—Cadet Rose, Harrow, tied with C.S.M. Beal, Winchester. When the tie was fired off Rose won.

THE ROSS RIFLE BARRED.

As a result of protests by the Canadians and Australians, the Ross rifle is now debarred for competitions under Service conditions. The objection was grounded on the assertion that the Ross rifle, having been superseded during the war does not come within the conditions.

WITH A SERVICE RIFLE.

MEMBER OF NORTH LONDON CLUB GIVES INTERESTING DEMONSTRATION.

One of the most interesting features of the day's practice was the good shooting of Dr. F. H. Kelly, of the North London Rifle Club, who at 900 yards put up a score of 81 out of a possible 90, using the long pattern service rifle with peep-sight. Though firing against competitors with match rifles and telescopic sights, he came out top at this range with a score of 5 5 5 5 4 5 4 4 4 5 5 4 5 5 5 5=81.

Unlike all the other competitors, who fired lying on the back, he adopted the service prone position. His achievement was an interesting demonstration of what can be done with a service rifle against the .303 match rifles which are now being used.

INTERNATIONAL DAY.

Friday was International day, teams firing for the Elcho Shield. Final result:—England 1664; Scotland 1623; Ireland 1609.

WORLD'S RECORD BROKEN.

Sgt. R. Perriott, 3rd City of London (Royal Fusiliers), who undertook to punch a ball ceaselessly for 50 hours, successfully completed his self-imposed task, thereby creating a worlds' record. At the finish he collapsed and was carried off insensible.

He carries 20 shrapnel wounds received in Gallipoli in 1916, and after being invalided out of the Army rejoined for a second period of service.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

An informal Visit.

The "Braganzas," the concert party of the 11th. Btn. Queen's only came on an informal visit to the 2/4th Queens at Lindlar, on Monday, but the result constituted a red letter day. The "Ragtime" enthusiasts were absolutely great, and got the whole house "swaying" in less than no time. One of the finest "turns" was given by the "man" and the "girl" in the song entitled "The bells of Saint Marie." There was not a dull moment in the whole show. It was a huge rollicking success, and although the names of the artists were not known, it was noticeable how admirably everyone worked together.

Q.U.B. Dinner.

On Friday evening a number of old members of Queen's University, Belfast, met at dinner—the fifth on active service—in the Officers' Club, Cologne (Belgischer Hof). The toasts were "The King" and "Queen," followed by those of Lieut.-Col. Frank McCammond D.S.O. (R.A.M.C.) and of Major J.D.M. McCallum D.S.O., Croix de Guerre (12th R. Irish Rifles). Major McCallum—who made the arrangements—said that such meetings fostered and maintained esprit de corps. Lieut.-Col. W. Tyrell, O.C., D.S.O. (R.A.M.C.), the popular Irish rugger forward, was unfortunately unable to be present owing to duty in Paris in connection with the "14me".

Leave Club Events.

To-morrow, I hear the Rev. Gower Rees will speak in the writing room. This is the last time he will give one of his Sunday talks—as he is shortly to be demobilized. At 6.30 there will be a concert by the band of the 9th East Surrey Regiment (by kind permission of the O.C.) at which Miss West will play one of her delightful violin solos and Cpl. Walters will sing. An impromptu concert will be given in the music room from 5—6 on Monday July 14th, followed by a practice dance in the theatre at 6.30 p.m. On Tuesday, there will be a dancing class in the theatre from 5—6 and an impromptu concert in the music room at the same hour. A concert will take place at 7. p.m. details of which will be announced later.

The "Spare Parts."

As a fitting conclusion to the regimental sports, the concert party of the 10th "Queen's" performed before a crowded house at Engelskirchen on Wednesday. Although of recent formation, the "Spare Parts" have made great strides towards becoming one of the foremost concert parties on the Rhine, and the applause awarded them was in all cases well merited. Pte. Alford possesses a tenor voice of high quality and Cpl. Walton proved that he ranks among first-class baritone singers. The duet, "Watchman, what of the night," continues to be well received upon every occasion that it is rendered by these two vocalists. The comic side is successfully represented by Lieut. Harwood, and Pte. Hudson and Ptes. Mitchell and Coles make really first-class "girls." The manager, Lieut. Harwood, is to be congratulated upon the creditable "show" which was given to the battalion.

In a few Lines.

The programme of music at the N.A.C.B. Club, Cologne, recently contained the item "The wonderful whistle." When the piece was played it turned out to be "The Magic Flute."

"The Limits" will be the attraction at the Apollo Theatre, Cologne, next week.

The Dramatic Company is becoming famous. Yesterday a newspaper from California was delivered at the Amusements Office addressed to the Rhine Army Repertory Company.

JACQUES.

A BOXING CHALLENGE.

Pte. Jack Worman, 12th Platoon, "C" Coy., 17th Royal Fusiliers, Army of the Rhine writes as follows:—"Would you mind inserting a challenge to all-comers to box them at 10 stone, 4 lbs, 10, 15 or 20 rounds, with or without a side stake? No one barred. If no one comes forward, may I claim the championship (lightweight) among the boys in the Army of Occupation? I should very much like to meet all those at my weight, who think they have a chance."

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

For Belgium.

Four thoroughbred yearlings and three brood mares have left Mr. Coleman's place at Epsom for Belgium. Others are following shortly.

For Army Horses.

There will probably be a race each day at Deauville for army horses, one over hurdles, the other a steeple-chase.

A Record Tournament.

The Royal Military Tournament at Olympia has been the most successful on record. £8,000 will be paid by the committee to the Government in entertainment tax alone.

Leicester's International.

The Preston North End directors have transferred J. L. Macauley, the Irish international inside left, whom they secured from Huddersfield Town five years ago, to Leicester Town.

Crossing The Pond.

The Australian lawn tennis teams have had some difficulty in securing an early passage for America, but the whole U.S.A. Army now has the matter in hand, so probably it will be arranged.

Record Hauls.

Further record hauls of monster tope have been caught near the Goodwins, off Deal. Some anglers, with specially strong tackle, took over 12cwts. some of the fish scaling 40lb apiece.

"Gowf" Feat.

Lawrence Auchterlonie, playing in the July medal competition of the St. Andrews Golf Club over the Old Course, accomplished the round in the brilliant score of 71, which is a record for a medal competition.

"Wolves" for Newport County.

Pat Collins and Alf Brooks, of Wolverhampton Wanderers, have been signed on by Newport County. Collins has been in the "Wolves" since 1906, and Brooks (who came from Rotherham) has had two seasons with the club. Both are capable backs.

"Pal" Moore—A Bet.

Confident as are the supporters of Jimmy Wilde, "Pal" Moore has equally staunch followers, and at the Cafe de Paris last Monday night Mr. Ephraim Hoover, jun., of Chicago, bet £500 to £400 on the American. The odds were taken by a very well-known gentleman hailing from Cardiff.

Echoes from Rhineland.

Big Prizes to be won.

The winner of the Leave Club Victory "Sweep" will be a happy individual, for we hear that the first prize will amount to the very substantial sum of £850 in Victory Bonds. The second will be £340 and the third £170. Those who are lucky enough to gain either of these fine prizes will be in a fortunate position on demobilization. The draw takes place on Tuesday next at 20.00 hours, and will be looked forward to with great interest.

Early harvesting.

A farmer was noticed recently taking the first cut of harvest; quite a month in advance of harvesting at home. The difference of cultivation is interesting. Instead of planting his corn in square plots, as is done at home, the German farmer plants in long narrow strips. He does not waste time in weeding, but just leaves the corn to look after itself. Throughout the different seasons his lack of modern implements has been apparent, and his method of reaping brings this into prominence once more. Instead of the useful "binder" used at home, two men are employed. One has a stout staff which he holds across the corn, to keep it from bending under the powerful sweep of the other's scythe. The contrast is interesting, and makes one inquisitive to see how they will thresh it.

"Bisley" Engaged.

Three hundred officers and men of the Army of the Rhine are participating in the Victory Meeting of the National Rifle Association at Bisley, which opened this week, and 23 of them we understand, will compete in the King's Prize competition. So for the present, to employ that hoary jest which even the war could not kill, this contingent of shots from Rhineland will be "Bisley" engaged. This year a record number of entries has been received for the King's Prize, and at the various ranges where crack snipers congregate many a war experience will be retold.

M.G.C.'s Achievement.

A waggish correspondent camouflages a happy achievement by "C" Company of the 32nd Battalion M.G.C. in the way of war savings, behind allusions to the effect of great financial transactions upon the money market. He writes: "It is to avoid any such upsetting of the Stock Exchange by strange and unfounded rumours that I beg to inform you of a recent large transaction in specie and bullion," and proceeds to record the fact that a company of 150 men purchased, between June 28th and July 5th, 485 War Savings Certificates, an average of £2-10-0 per head. "It is denied," he says, that "either George Robey or a tank was sent from London to promote enthusiasm. At the present moment this celebrated Joint Stock Company is finding a difficulty in obtaining a sufficiency of cigarettes and they express a hope that the canteen allotments may increase in the same proportion as their share allotments in the British Empire. We must not forget the soothing effect of tobacco, especially in matters requiring great financial deliberation."

For American Friends.

Considering the comparatively few American troops to be seen in Cologne, it is a source of surprise that at least one establishment is making a feature of goods which bear American divisional and other signs. There is the familiar "A" on cigarette-cases, rings, match-box covers, distinguishing marks, the meaning of which are known to the troops only, all very nice in their way, but it is doubtful if they will make an appeal to the bodies of khaki-clad troops of this particular zone.

An Act of Bravery.

A British civilian employee was seen the other day in Cologne wearing a small Union Jack in his button hole. Always nail your colours to the mast.

Lindenthal "Tourney".

As Mr. P. A. Vaile, the author of "Modern Lawn Tennis," remarks, the general standard of the English game of tennis is not high, this being largely attributed to the defective hold of the racket most in vogue in England. I dropped into the picturesquely situated courts at Lindenthal on the opening day of the Tourney, and as it happened I witnessed several sets which revealed the national weakness. On the second day, however, when the mens' handicap doubles were in progress, I was more fortunate and witnessed an exhibition of really excellent strokes. Lawn-tennis, by the way, is a popular game with the Germans of both sexes.

Ex-Kaiser at Dovercourt.

It seems quite a curious coincidence that Dovercourt Church, where Captain Fryatt has been buried, is closely connected with the ex-Kaiser. The old Norman tower contains a richly decorated stained glass window, which was designed and presented by the royal fugitive some twenty years ago. The lych gate at the main entrance to the churchyard was at the same time erected at the expense of Queen Victoria. Both gifts are memorials of the ill-fated Walcheren expedition in 1809, when British and Prussian troops landed on that island in the mouth of the Scheldt.

An Ill-Fated Expedition.

The intention of Castlereagh, the English War Minister, was to help Wellesley in the Spanish Peninsula, by creating a diversion in an attempt to capture Antwerp. The troops, however, never reached their goal, being delayed for months before Flushing, and finally being almost decimated by fever on this unhospitable island. Returning to England, some forty odd died at Harwich and were buried in the churchyard of Dovercourt, about a mile away. The window contains some highly coloured glass, blue and red predominating, in which the inevitable German eagle appears above the figure of a soldier, the whole design being quite in contrast with the quiet subdued tones of the window in the east end, or indeed of the quaint yet dignified appearance of the lych gate.

A Mothers Thought.

Recently a Tommy returned from England following leave. This being his first from overseas, his parents eagerly anticipated his arrival, and the recital of his adventures. Three days after he arrived back, the post corporal handed him a parcel. Being that it was rather larger than usual, and thinking it would contain a few sweet cakes etc. he promised his comrades a share. To his surprise and to the amusement of his fellows the parcel was found to contain a sock, a pull through and his iron rations, also a note which read: "Hope they arrive before kit inspection: Mother." The roar of laughter brought in the Captain, who on hearing the joke shared the amusement caused.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Sergt. Davies, 52nd Bedford Regt. Rhine Army.

Opinions of the Moment.

THE FUTURE AIRSHIP.

Sir Charles Parsons, inventor of the turbine engine that bears his name, says: For long distances the airship will cut out the aeroplane. If we are to cross the Atlantic by air in the future it will be by airship. I agree there is a great future for the flying boat, the chances of which over land in a forced landing are greater than those of an aeroplane over the sea.

SOUND HEARTS — NOT HEADS.

Sir John D McClure, Headmaster of Mill Hill School says: Now that the war is over we must all work hard and live pluinly, which is what most of us now seem firmly resolved not to do. The old cry "the right to work" has given place to a new one, "the right to be idle." Many of the nation are proving at this instant that they were not worth fighting for. It may be that the heart of the nation is sound, but the head is not.

EMPIRE CO-PARTNERSHIP.

Lord Milner, late Secretary for War, who has just returned from a mission to Egypt, says: The only possibility of the continuance of the Empire is on the basis of out-and-out equal partnership between the United Kingdom and the Dominions. The working out of it in practice will be one of the most complicated tasks which statesmanship will have to face, without bringing about the severance of relations between ourselves and the Dominions.

OXFORD'S DEBT TO PARIS.

The Lord Chancellor, speaking on the bond between Great Britain and France, says: I suppose every Englishman will admit that the greatest university in the world must be pronounced to be the University of Paris. It is not as well known as it should be, that while those of Oxford rightly hold high language when they converse with their friends of Cambridge upon the antiquity of their institutions and the mushroom growth of others, that the very first germ and conception of academic institutions was derived by the University of Oxford from the University of Paris.

THE PERIL OF DRIFTING.

Lord Lee of Farnham, dealing with the lessons of the War says: If trade and commerce are to flourish we must have a definite policy given to us by the Government. We must have an understanding with Labour. The period of uncertainty and suspicion has been too unduly prolonged for trade and commerce to flourish. There is one certain way to disaster and that is to let the trade policy of the country drift—to have no policy at perhaps the most critical time in the history of the country.

THE STATE AND THE DISABLED.

Sir L. Worthington Evans, Minister of Pensions says:—Though it is the special duty of the State to look after disabled men, its work is often mechanical, since it deals with the average rather than the special case. The State, however does much more in special cases than it gets credit for. Thirty-three shillings a week is not the most the State allows, and though 7s. a week is subtracted from a man's pay where he is being maintained, the cost of each man is nearer 70s. than 7s.

CRIMINAL PROFITEERS.

C. A. McCurdy, K.C., M.P., Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Food, says: The law requires to be strengthened against the profiteer. If profiteering is to be stopped, not only in foodstuffs, but also in all essential commodities, it is first necessary to find out the fair cost of the commodity in question. When that is done, Parliament must be prepared to make regulations limiting the profit which may be made by producers and distributors to what is fair. Anyone who charges more must be dealt with as a criminal.

THE CONTRAST.

Sidney Walton, director of the Victory Loan campaign, says: Let those who complain of our position, or who object to the comparatively trifling restrictions that war has enforced, pause for a moment to think of what their plight would have been if British blood and British valour had not been given without stint to destroy the German menace. In Germany there will be a capital levy and taxation that will reach an absolutely terrible height; in England we find a taxation that must in all the circumstances be deemed moderate, no capital levy, merely an unlimited Loan, bringing in 5 per cent., with Government security behind it, and with bonuses.

LOVELY MRS. ATHERTON.

Langford North, writing on "Women who held the hearts of men," says: Mrs. Atherton's death seems like the passing of a dynasty. Her name will be remembered when those of better women are forgotten. A hundred years hence in books of memoirs, "the beautiful Mrs. Atherton" will figure, not because she governed a king, but because she stood to multitudes of people as a woman so imperial in her charm that every convention crumbled before her. Her life was an adventure illuminated by notoriety. Like Helen of Troy, her beauty brought disaster. Like the Pompadour, her fan was a sceptre fluttered by a capricious and audacious hand.

She was, at the height of her brilliant beauty, the most fascinating woman in England—and, in some circles, the most hated.

TRIUMPH OF VICTORY LOAN.

R. 34 COMPLETES THE DOUBLE TRIP, ARRIVING IN TIME FOR EARLY SUNDAY BREAKFAST.

ALLIES RHINELAND AGREEMENT.

HOME FROM U.S.A.

R. 34 COMPLETES THE ROUND TRIP.

The Air Ministry announced that the British airship, the R. 34, landed safely at Pulham, Norfolk, on Sunday morning at 6.56, exactly one hour after being first sighted from the air station. When she was sighted at 5.56 she was about fifteen miles away, steering a course almost due East. Turning South towards the airship station. she circled over Pulham at about 6.22 a.m., flying at 800 feet. A guy-rope was dropped which was promptly seized by an enthusiast who jumped several feet into the air in order to be the first. In a moment, hundreds of willing hands stretched out and grasped the ropes and the great vessel was quickly brought to the ground. The Royal Air Force band meanwhile played "See the conquering hero comes." Major Scott, the commanding officer, looked out of the window of his gondola, his face wreathed in broad smiles, and waved to the crowd, while Engineer Lieut. Shott r, in reply to a question, shouted "We have had a darned fine trip."

The crew was most enthusiastic, everyone agreeing that the round trip outward and homeward was an unqualified success. They speak in warm praise of the excellence of the arrangements made and of the warmth of the reception given them by the American authorities.

HIS MAJESTY'S TELEGRAM.

The King was the first to send a congratulatory telegram, which ran as follows: "I heartily congratulate you all on your safe return home after the completion of a memorable and indeed unique trans-Atlantic air voyage."

According to General Maitland's log the engine trouble was caused on Friday by a fracture of the connecting rod in one of the engines in the aft car, with the result that the crank case was badly notched and the engine damaged quite beyond repair.

AIRMEN'S STORY.

The following is part of the official log of the voyage up to midnight on July loth. It was issued by the Air Ministry one hour after the airship landed.

"it is a dark night and a gusty wind is blowing from the South West, strength about thirty miles per hour. Headed straight for New York, as promised, to fly over the city before heading out into the Atlantic. It was an extremely good "get away" considering the gusty wind and weather conditions generally. We have 4,600 gallons of petrol for the return journey.

NEW YORK FROM ABOVE.

New York at midnight looks wonderful from above, miles and miles of tiny bright twinkling lights — a veritable fairyland. The searchlights at first made a very unsuccessful search for us, but they usually get us fair and square. We are over Fifth Avenue. Times Square and Broadway present remarkable sights. We distinctly see thousands of upturned faces in spite of the early hour (one o'clock in the morning) and the whole scene is lighted by gigantic electrical signs which seem to concentrate about this point. One in particular over a land tower illustrates the enormous power of aerial advertisement. From 2,000 feet above we see its wheel revolving and the mist rising in a cloud beneath it, presumably an illustration of its speed. The air over New York feels very disturbed, partly oning to the approaching cyclones of which we have already had warnings aed partly also to the heat rising upwards from the city itself. The airship, however, rides out very steadily under the circumstances.

LETTERS FOR THE KING.

July 10th, Thursday.

1.10., morning. We head for home with 3,000 miles of sea between us and our Scottish base. Speed is estimated at 65 knots (or nearly 74 miles) per hour. The weather at the time of starting is decidely favourable for the flight from America to England.

2.17, morning. We are crossing the American coast with four out of five engines running, the fifth engine resting. Some hot coffee from a Thermos flask presented us by our kind American friends is very nice and warming.

9.15, morning. We have already covered 430 miles from New York and are going strong Our mails are now sorted and that took us ome time. We find we have quite a large collection of parcels and letters of all descriptions including some for his Majesty the King, the War Office, Admiralty, Postmaster General and a large number of copies of "Public Ledgers" for the editor of "The Times." This journey we hope will prove the fastest newspaper delivery between New York and London, yet accomplished and will be the forerunner of a regular interchange of mails between East and West — the old world and the new. —

10.45 morning. We are now making a good seventy-two knots, or eighty-three miles, per hour on four engines. Forward engine stopped. If all goes well Major Scott will go straight for London; across Atlantic from Broadway New York to Piccadilly Circus London from the heart of one capital to the heart of another.

10.45, morning. Cook asleep under dining room table.

TOTS OF RUM.

12 noon. Lunch: Mash, cold Bologna sausage pickles and stewed pineapple and a ration of rum". This latter was much appreciated as the weather had turned much colder. Conversation turned on the subject of obtaining secondary meteorological information in the Atlantic. Scott, Greenland, Luck and Harris thought one good method of getting information at a small cost would be to equip all cable repair ships with observers and a suitable outfit of kites and instruments. These ships would be in all parts of the world and are often at sea for days at a time, moreover the cable routes are ready in every case on the shortest and most direct route between the countries they link up.

1.5 afternoon.— We have averaged 5,6·3 knots per hour ever since leaving Broadway. Weather fine, wind 40 knots, South South-West, sea very rough. It is difficult from above to measure the height of the waves but it is easy to see that in a very heavy sea like this, surface ships would be having an extreme bad time. Up here we are as steady as a rock, and unless one looks out of the windows one would hardly realize one was travelling at all. Lieut.-Colonel Hemsley. United States Army Aviation Department, is steering and is taking opposite watch with Pritchard, while Luck has relieved Greenland in the forecar, Corporal Burgess being on the elevator. We are in very good wireless communication with Sable Island, and many messages wishing us success are received from America and Canada. We send our grateful thanks to the United States Naval and Military authorities for their very efficient and kind assistance, in looking after the airship at Mineola during four days of difficult and unpleasant weather conditions.

4.50., afternoon.—Position 42 degrees 15 minutes North, 45 degrees 5 minutes West. We have covered 900 miles from New York in sixteen hours and are 1,850 miles from the South coast of Ireland, exactly one third of the distance between the two countries. Our petrol consumption works out at about one gallon. Cooke determined his position by observation on the sun and using a sea horizon. There were only two occasions, on which he was able to do this on the outward journey owing to clouds and fog.

UNDER THE TABLE.

6,15., afternoon.—A five masted schooner under full sail on the starboard beam about five miles away was an interesting contrast between the old and the new sailing ship and airship. We are now over the main Eastward bound Summer route of steamers from New York to Queenstown. The steamship Adriatic, due at New York on the 13th, should be somewhere near us, and we are on the lookout for her on the wireless. Getting much colder.

8,0., night. — Position 42 degrees 40 minutes North, 50 degrees 30 minutes West making, a good fifty-five knots. It is now time for supper. We all discussed at great length our impressions of American men and American women. I wish our newly made American friends could have heard the delight ful things that were said about them. Pritchard goes to sleep under the dining room table while the second watch come in for their supper. This position under the dining room table seems to be the most sought after point of vantage in the ship.

RHINELAND.

PERIOD OF THE ALLIED OCCUPATION.

Following the publication of the agreement between the Allies and Germany with regard to the occupation of the Rhine Provinces, there was issued yesterday the text of the declaration made by the Governments of the United States, Great Britain, and France, setting forth their intentions relative to the length of the period of occupation. The document, which is dated June 16 last, and is signed by President Wilson, M. Clemenceau, and Mr. Lloyd George, is in the following terms:

The Allied and Associated Powers did not insist on making the period of occupation last until the reparation clauses were completely executed, because they assumed that Germany would be obliged to give every proof of her goodwill and every necessary guarantee before the end of the fifteen years' time.

As the cost of occupation involves an equivalent reduction of the amount available for reparations, the Allied and Associated Powers stipulated, by Article 431 of the Treaty, that if before the end of the fifteen years' period Germany had fulfilled all her obligations under the Treaty, the troops of occupation should be immediately withdrawn.

If Germany, at an earlier date, has given proofs of her goodwill and satisfactory guarantees to assure the fulfilment of her obligations the Allied and Associated Powers concerned will be ready to come to an agreement between themselves for the earlier termination of the period of occupation.

Now and henceforward, in order to alleviate the burden of the Reparations Bill, they agree that as soon as the Allied and Associated Powers concerned are convinced that the conditions of disarmament by Germany are being satisfactorily fulfilled, the annual amount of the sums to be paid by Germany to cover the cost of occupation shall not exceed 240 million marks (gold). This provision can be modified it the Allied and Associated Powers agree as to the necessity of such modification.

DISABLEMENT PENSIONS.

Sir R. Horne states in a written reply to Mr. L. Lyle, that the number of men in receipt of disablement pensions on July 1 was 770 000. The number registered as unemployed at employment exchanges in the United Kingdom on June 6 was 43,501. Of the remainder it is estimated that rougly 50 per cent, have returned to their previous employers. The balance (with the exception of those undergoing training) must be supposed to have found new employment.

VICTORY LOAN.

CAMPAIGN CROWNED WITH OVER £1,000,000,000.

A wonderful eleventh-hour rush signalised the closing of the Victory Loan on Saturday. The approximate estimate of the result of the result of the appeal will be given to the House of Commons by the Chancellor of the Exchequer tomorrow although the full total subscribed will not be known for at least a fortnight.

Quite 500 millions of new money had been subscribed, and according to reports from all part of the country, anything up to another 200 millions was possible in view of the late applications.

As the conversions are believed to total another 500 millions, there is a possible total of from 1,200 to 1,500 millions.

In all the London boroughs special arrangements were made to enable the public to purchase bonds after the closing of the banks. apart from the post-offices, which- of coure, were open as usual.

PARIS CELEBRATES.

GREAT NATIONAL AND VICTORY FETE.

The victory celebrations at Paris began on Sunday evening with a torchlight procession and the sounding of a military tattoo at the monument to the "Glorious Dead" at the Arc de Triomphe. At 9 o'clock the Municipal Council met in the Avenue de Champs Elyées, and, accompanied by detachments of the Republican Guard and torch carriers, proceeded to the cenotaph at the Arc de Triomphe where M. Evain, President of the Council, deposited a wreath in memory of those killed in the war.

Yesterday, at 7.40 a.m., the reception of the troops by the Municipal Council took place at the Maillot Gate. When President Poincaré arrived at the place de l'Etoile, the Marseillaise was be played.

President Poincaré, M. Clemenceau, a French poilu, a French sailor, and an Alsace-Lorrainian in turn placed wreaths at the foot of the monument.

The triumphal march of the armies of the Allies was led by a thousand wounded men.

Large military andvaral contingenits from all the Allies took part.

Paris has probably never before been so beautifully or strikingly decorated.

The Paris Prefect of Police estimates that six million people from the country travelled to Paris for the Victory Fête.

IRELAND.

CARSON DENOUNCES "CAMOUFLAGED IRISH REPUBLIC."

Addressing a vast assembly of Orangemen in Belfast yesterday on the occasion of the celebration of the "Victory Twelfth," Sir Edward Carson denounced Dominion Government as a "camouflaged Irish Republic". He said he did not want them to under estimate the forces that were working against them, or merely to talk. Let them be prepared for all and every emergency.

He told the British Government that if there was any attempt made to take away one jot or tittle of the rights of Ulster Unionists as British citizens he would call out the Ulster Volunteers.

NO INTERFERENCE.

He wanted good feeling between America and this country. He believed the whole future of the world probably depended upon the relations between the United States and themselves, but he was not going to submit to this kind of campaign, whether for friendship or any other purpose.

He said seriously to America: "You attend to your own affairs, and we will attend to ours; but we will not brook interference in our affairs by any country, however powerful."

Sir E. Carson concluded by declaring that if any attempt were made to revive and put into force the Home Rule Act he would summon the Provisional Government. "I will move," he declared, "that we repeal the Home Rule Act if nobody else does, and I will have behind me every loyal man and every loyal woman in Ulster."

DENIKIN'S VICTORY.

BOLSHEVIST COMMUNICATIONS SEVERED.

The War Office announces that in Southern Russia General Denikin's forces have inflicted a heavy defeat on the Bolshevists. His Cossacks crossed the Don, advancing towards the East at Tsaritsin. This move cuts the line of communication Northwards for the Bolshevist 11th and 12th armies lying between Tsaritsin and the Caspian sea.

An immense area in Southern Russia has now been cleared and is free from Bolshevists. Denikin's advance tends to complete encirclement as his progress Eastward brings him nearer to Kolchak's extreme left. Denikin's captures include four armoured trains, nineteen guns and thirty machine guns.

LANSING'S FAREWELL TO FRANCE

The United States Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Lansing, left Paris on Saturday evening. He was seen off by M. Clemenceau, M. Pichon, and M. Dutasta.

Before his departure Mr. Lansing addressed, through the medium of the Press, an affecting farewell to the French nation, expressing his profound gratitude for all the courtesies shown him during his stay in France.

His message concluded "I am returning to my country with a true perception of what France has suffered during the war and with a most profound conviction that the courage which allowed her to march to victory will assist her during the hard days of her reconstruction."

A MAJOR'S DIVORCE.

WHEN THE AIR WARNING SOUNDED.

A decree of divorce was granted by Lord Anderson to Frances Mary Walter, or Farie, Waverley Cottage, Camberley, Surrey, against Allan James Crawford Farie (major in the Royal Army Service Corps), of Farme, Lanarkshire, now residing at South Kensington.

The action was undefended.

The petitioner, aged 33, stated that she was married in St. George's, Hanover-quare, London, in January 1910. Her husband was a Scotsman and was the heir to estates in Lanarkshire. They lived in Birkhill, Lesnmahagow, and afterwards in London. There were two children born of the marriage.

In 1917 she learned that her husband had become acquainted with a Mrs. Edith Quick in London—in fact made his home with her. For some time her husband had ceased to reside with her altogether. In consequence of her husband's association with Mrs. Quick she regarded him as unsuitable to have the custody of the children.

Her husbands's income from the Lanarkshire estates was roughly about £2,000.

Miss Doreen Willis said that from July 1917 to January 1918 she shared a flat in Fulham with Mrs. Quick. Major Farie was a frequent visitor to Mrs. Quick, spending the night with her.

Wm. Mitchell, chauffeur, said that in 1917 he frequently drove Major Farie either in his own or in a Government car to Mrs. Quick's residence. This was practically every night. Major Farie had to go on duty during air raids, and he gave witness instructions to call at Mrs. Quick's House for him on those occasions.

Counsel stated that an arrangement had been come to between the parties in regard to the children. The defender was to pay aliment at the rate of £150 a year for each and was to have access for fourteen days each year, in charge of a person nominated by the petitioner and at a time to be fixed by her.

TAXI EXTORTIONS.

SERGEANTS PROTEST IN THE WRONG WAY.

The wrecking of a taxicab because it was alleged the driver wanted to overcharge his fares was described at North London Police Court yesterday, when three Royal Air Force sergeants —Sam Straight (23), William Dixon Fotheringham (21), and William Cook (22), all qualified flying men who have served through the war— were charged with having wilfully damaged a motor-cab to the extent of £30, the property of William Moriarity.

For the defence a plea of guilty was entered, and it was stated that the men were prepared to pay the damage and were anxious to avoid a conviction.

On the night of July 4, it was stated, they visited the Palladium, and as Fotheringham was taken ill they left before the show was over.

Outside they asked the driver of the cab to take them as far as Pinsbury Park, but at first he refused, saying that when the house closed he could get £2 for that distance.

Ultimately he agreed to take them for £1 if paid in advance, to which the soldiers assented; out on the way they came to the conclusion that the man shoutd be taught a lesson for extorting £1 for a 4s. fare, and they wrecked the inside of the cab.

The magistrate said they should not have taken the law into their own hands. He ordered each to pay a fine of 5s. and £10 for the damage done.

W.A.A.C. MYSTERY.

The mystery surrounding the murder of Miss Rault, whose body was found in the road adjoining Haynes Park Camp, near Bedford, on May 12, was referred to at a meeting of the Bedfordshire Standing Joint Committee.

The chief constable, Col. Stevens reported that he had received a letter from Sir Charles Mathews, the Director of Public Prosecutions, dated July 4, in which he said he had learned that Inspector Wensley had completed his inquiries and had returned to Scotland Yard.

Sir Charles trusted that as a result of his association with the Bedfordshire police they would soon hear that the murderer of Miss Rault would be brought to justice.

"The Weekly Dispatch" offers a reward of £100 for information which will lead to the discovery of the murderer of Miss Rault.

WAR AMBULANCE OVERTURNS.

A light military ambulance bringing soldier patients from Addington Park Hospital overturned yesterday in Wellesley-road, Croydon, through skidding and striking the kerb.

Mabel Williams, 18, the driver, was rendered unconscious and three of the soldiers were also injured.

A German prisoner on the ambulance escaped with slight cuts.

CHEAPER AND BETTER BEER.

Beer is not only to be cheaper but stronger By a new Order of the Food Controller, a pint of beer in a public bar below 1020 specific gravity will be sold at twopence instead of threepence per pint as now.

Beer of any price, however, must be of a greater strength than previously.

These regulations are in accordance with the decision of the cabinet that brewers must give better quality for the same money, instead of further taxation being imposed on them. August 1st is given as the "Joy Day" when the new Order takes effect.

Some 350,000 persons have witnessed the military tournament at Olympia, the takings being £50,000.

WINESHOP MURDER.

SENSATIONAL DEVELOPMENTS EXPECTED.

A new light is thrown on the mystery of the Hendon wineshop murder by the arrest at Sheffield of the young man named Biggin. The motive for the crime will be found to have been not robbery but a drama of passion in which the younger of two men battling for their lives survived.

The allegation is that the deceased man Gregory met Biggin and asked him to his house where he gave him drink and dinner. After the meal Biggin reclined on the couch. The actions of the older man then became peculiar and angry words arose between the pair. Deceased, it is suggested, became over wrought with passion and adopted such a menacing attitude towards the younger man as forced him to take measures necessary to defend himself and in doing so caused the injuries which proved fatal.

DAISY DORMER.

ROBBED OF HER SIX-GUINEA HANDBAG.

Mrs. Beatrice Gee, better known as Daisy Dormer, the music-hall artist, who resides at Caldecot-road, Denmark Hill, attended Marylebone police-court to prosecute Elizabeth Mann, a dressmaker, of Macklin-street, Drury-lane, for stealing her handbag and contents, value nine guineas. While making a purchase at Marshall and Snelgrove's, prosecutrix placed her handbag on the counter, and it disappeared. The bag cost six guineas.

The Clerk: Do you say the bag (a fancy Dorothy bag) cost six guineas. Mrs. Gee: Yes.

"Really," exclaimed the Clerk.

"Yes," said Mrs. Gee, with a merry smile, "and before the war, too."

The prisoner, a powerfully-built woman, admitted the theft.

Miss Blanch Bolton, lady detective at the shop, a little woman, saw the prisoner snatch the purse from the counter, and arrested her after a somewhat violent struggle. "Don't lock me up," begged the prisoner. "For God's sake, let me go."

A detective asked a remand on the ground that a number of other purses had been found in the prisoner's possession.

WHITE LILIES.

POLICEWOMEN UNNECESSARY AT LLANELLY.

Llanelly, in South Wales, prides itself on absolute immunity from immorality of the professional kind. According to the Chief Constable of Carmarthenshire, the morality of the town has reached such a high plane that the people would not tolerate the unfortunate class.

Such a rara avis, he declared, in a report to the Standing Joint Committee, would attract the immediate attention and close supervision of every constable in the locality! On this account he recommended that the proposed employment of policewomen was unnecessary.

He added that the youth of the town were "not quite the type who would be overawed by a policewoman." They came from a good fighting stock and he doubted whether a woman in nice uniform would inspire fear, if even respect. The committee agreed with the Chief Constable's suggestion that policewomen should not be employed.

COTTON STRIKE ENDED.

The employers in the cotton trade decided that they were willing to reopen the mills on Monday on the terms arranged last Wednesday. They also decided to recommend all employers in the cotton trade to close the mills on Peace Day, and to pay full wages to their workpeople.

The Operative Cotton Spinners also held a meeting, and decided by 130 votes to 22 to agree to the terms of settlement which were arranged on Wednesday. The vote being decisive, no ballot of the general body of members was necessary, and the operatives were at the mills ready for work on Monday morning.

Preston operative spinners unanimously decided to support the acceptance of the terms of settlement, and a similar decision was arrived at by a meeting of the general council of the Northern Counties Weavers' Amalgamation.

PRISON FOR EX-MAYOR.

Thomas Hampson, aged fifty one, ex-Mayor of Southport, was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment in the second division at Liverpool Assizes yesterday for fraudulently applying to his own use £22,585 belonging to the Vulcan Motor and Engineering Company, of which he was managing director.

It was stated that the money was obtained by selling scrap brass which had accumulated in the works.

For aiding and abetting, Davis Purves, aged seventy-five, received five months in the second division, and John Hamar, aged forty-eight, six months.

Purves and Hamar were co-directors of the Vulcan company.

SOUTHEND STRIKES SETTLED.

The strike of porters and carmen engaged in coal distribution at Southend is over. The corporation and their employees have come to a satisfactory arrangement as regards hours and wages, and work will be resumed immediately.

The strike at the gasworks has alsended, and some of the men have already gone back to work.

When fined 5s. at the Kingston police court yesterday for the irregular attendance of her children at school, a woman pleaded that she was the mother of twenty children. The statement was corroborated by a court official, whereupon the magistrate reduced the fine to 2s. 6d.

REVOLUTION OR—?

In the past when communication between individuals, cities and nations was tedious and uncertain; when only one man in ten in England, for example, could transmit an idea except by speech; in the days before newspapers, telephone and R3f's idea had little chance of survival.

It could not permeate. It was perhaps nourished by a few enthusiasts only to be blasted by the rage of bigotry, the scorn of ignorance or the frown of kings.

How different things are to-day. The world is a buzz of ideas bandied about by modern methods of transmission, acting and reacting on individual and national physiology.

Unfortunately this freedom of exchange has not run hand in hand with the actual survival of the best. Mankind has just emerged from five years of agony, borne to suppress the idea that might is right. Now the world chorus is singing the clear song of victory.

Already, however, the discords can be heard. It is useless to blink the fact that in men's minds is the idea of revolution, or more generally the urgent wish to see the immediate materialization of their idea of the brighter and better world which would justify the sufferings and sacrifices of its recent travail.

"The old order changeth, yielding place to new." The problem of the moment is—Will it change and merge into the new, or will order cease to exist before the new scheme of things is organised?

We are living in an artificial atmosphere, created by capital expenditure, which is approaching exhaustion. Already the weaker are gasping and efforts are being made to improve the ventilation.

If these temporary expedients are not quickly replaced by real fresh air, the fabric of society will be rent. Some are satisfied with things as they were; others desire anarchy. Both are wrong. The future happines of the world will be forged by those who are now actuated by the highest ideas of citizenship which can be summed up in the words Thought and Service.

It is the duty of each one of us to set them in opposition to the world-idea of revolution.

THE UNADVERTISED HEROINE.

With the horrors of war daily becoming only memories, we can all look back with pride or remorse at the part played by the individual in the great struggle.

The deeds of the soldier, the nursing sisterhood and the women who helped in so many other ways in active service naturally take the foremost place when the records of the war are in our minds. Nobody will begrudge an atom of the praise these deserved.

But there is a war heroine who has never donned uniform, has seldom been photographed for the illustrated press, but unobtrusively has carried on, whose sole satisfaction for faithful duty has been an absent husband and perhaps sons as well, with an allowance, which, owing to the rapid rise in the cost of living, was for the most part barely adequate to keep the home going.

This heroine, whose praises have been sung but little, is the soldier's wife.

Full of anxiety for her dear ones at the front, struggling to make ends meet, especially when the mother of a young family, she has kept a cheerful face, often slandered, but patiently enduring for the sake of home and country.

She deserves more appreciation than she has so far received. She has in most cases been a real heroine, and no one will be more willing to concede this than the married soldier who has gone through the hell of war.

She asks for no reward, but she is sure to obtain it in the increased devotion of her soldier husband on his return from Army life.

Through cloud and sunshine, her value has been felt even in the firing line and many a Tommy can bear testimony to a dull or dreadful day being brightened by a ray of sunshine through a few loving lines from the faithful little woman in Blighty — the soldier's wife.

YOUNG BLOOD.

It wasn't his fault that he wasn't out here before. Failure to arrange one's initial appearance on this interesting planet till 1889, though, perhaps, unfortunate, isn't culpable.

Nevertheless, Private Barton regretted his youth keenly, and bore the burden of adolescence impatiently, as was natural in a youth whose efforts to assert his manhood had, so far, failed. Granted, he did his best.

He assimilated all the best examples of the adjective in khaki, and invested the whole collection, one day, in our mess, in a demand to the Mess Orderly to get a lurid move on with the sanguinary rissoles.

But the effect was scarcely encouraging. The nouns couldn't keep step with the adjectives, and even the best of the latter, or, if you prefer it, the worst, grow war-weary if used injudiciously.

There were, in the Mess, seasoned veterans of adjectivity, artists, whose sensitive ears were offended, not by the adjectives (which, indeed, were good or bad enough), but by Cyril's deplorable waste of promising material.

The Mess Orderly alone took note of the outburst, but as his appreciation involved Cyril in an unusually long wait for his breakfast, he can scarcely be said to have 'clicked' on this occasion.

His quite impromptu second attempt at profanity when he realised the Orderly's intention, was infinitely more artistic, but as it was solo once it passed unnoticed.

Having failed the "language test," Cyril next attempted to impress us with the redness of his blood by alcoholic indulgence. "A little wine maketh glad the heart of man," so the Scripture hath it.

Cyril did not find it so. The wine he took was little enough, in all conscience, but it decidedly deplorable effect on his legs followed so closely its glad effect on his heart, and endured for so much longer, that he awoke the next morning a complete sceptic on one portion of the Scriptures.

Entering the Mess, as most of us were leaving it, he made a feeble effort to look the desperate fellow he was far from feeling, but a head is no respecter of "heroes," and the effort left us flat as Cyril himself had fallen some ten hours earlier.

Doubtless by now most of you are smiling at our innocence in seeking to create a "hero" out of such unpromising material as Cyril. But wait.

After his last adventure, Cyril decided the rôle of "Man of the World" was beyond his histrionic powers. Still determined, however, to cut some sort of figure in our world, he sought, and after a little manoeuvring secured the post of demobilization clerk, and here he found salvation.

His English now is as pure as that to be found in the Army Orders, of which he possesses a knowledge almost uncanny. From being a nonentity, he has become, in the eyes of all of us, a man of light and learning.

His status having been recognized, he is quite happy, and wields his power wisely. Every hour he emerge from his room, smiling and sometimes even singing "Wait a Little While."

If there's any moral in all this (which, perhaps, is doubtful) it's simply this: You can never be sure of the redness of your blood, so make the most of your grey matter, or, take care of your grey matter and the red blood will take care of you both.

E. J. TELLUM.

THE ANSWERED PRAYER

It is rather interesting in these days to recall the introduction of Dr. Wilhelm Rolandi's English edition of "Legends of the Rhine," written in May 1906, and now being sold to our troops.

He describes a journey that he made between Mainz and Bonn on the Rhine steamers, and sitting in his deck chair in the test of spirits he hears the sound of a melodious female voice speaking the English language. On looking round he sees a girl bending over his English translation and entertaining her father and mother by reading something of special interest and beauty.

He enters into conversation with the traveller and compliments them on the fact that during the last century the Rhine had become for the English people that home of romance which the Germans sought to find in Italy.

The girl smiles, and remarks that he must pay great compliment to her mother in particular, as she was by birth an Englishwoman. The father is an American, adds that they all can speak with enthusiasm of the beauties of the Rhine. The Doctor, commenting on this, says, "These two nations which are bound by so many ties to each other, and also to ourselves, were thus represented before me. The English people undoubtedly form by far the largest contingent of our Rhine travellers." As he hears the compliments paid to the grand old Rhine, he is deeply touched and his thoughts travel back to the days of "long, long ago" when as a little chap in his native Bonn he had first listened with interest to the melodious voices of the golden-haired daughters of old Albion who came in large numbers to reside in the famous University town.

He separates from these friends at the foot of the Drachenfels and gives to them a small present to keep as a memento of the Rhine and one of its poets.

In a state of exaltation and thrilled with joy unspeakable, he concludes.

And to the God who planted the desire to wander in the human breast, I addressed this prayer: "Send us many such from over the North Sea, and from beyond the great water to our beloved Rhineland."

Thus the prayer of 1906 has been answered in 1919, but not in the way the doctor would have wished.

Many more thousands have come from over the North Sea and beyond the great water than ever he imagined in his wildest dreams. They contemplate the beauties of the Rhine, but not always in a state of exaltation; the old Thames appeals more to them. The melodious voices of the sons of Albion can be heard everywhere. I wonder if it has the same charm as in the old tourist days? How they must love to hear the picquet after 11 p.m. requesting them in tones soft and low that he would like to see their passes. Melodious too, is the sound of the sentry's challenge upon the midnight air.

The Doctor is also a prophet, for in the last paragraph he rises to sublime heights "So long as they love our native stream with, its castle-crowned steeps, they will preserve a warm corner in their hearts for their Teutonic kinsmen." Our hearts are strangely warmed and our bodies too in these melting days as we keep our watch on the old Rhine.

HEART'S DESIRE.

Alas, that Spring should vanish with the Rose!
That youth's sweet-scented manuscript should close!
The nightingale that in the branches sang,
Ah, whence and whither flown again, who knows!

Ah Love! could thou and I with Fate conspire
To grasp this sorry scheme of things entire,
Would not we shatter it to bits—and then
Re-mould it nearer to the heart's desire?

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

FACE FUNGUS.

Sir, — Although personally I am not one of those people who offend your correspondent "Tatcho" by wearing "sideboards," I do not consider he is justified in criticising those people who adopt this form of adornment.

I do not like parting my hair on the right side, I detest the idea of growing a moustache, and I abhor red neckties.

But these facts do not entitle me to dictate to those who are partial to these things.

In the great majority of cases "those men who made England what she is" wore side whiskers, and that mythical individual who is representative of Britain, "John Bull", is invariably pictured with a goodly growth of fungus about the ears.

Is it jealousy on the part of "Tatcho" at his inability to develop this decoration that makes him write such "Tommy rot"?

F.O.R.

RACING SUGCESTIONS.

Sir,— Splendid as were the arrangements made by the Racing Sub-Committee for the excellent day's racing provided by them at Cologne on Thursday and Saturday, future events would, in my opinion, be greatly improved if the following three suggestions (which I hope the Clerk of the Course will forgive me for making) were carried out:

1. Lopping of the trees which at present obstruct the views of the start for the five furlong races from the Grand Stand.
2. Showing the "raw" on the number board.
3. Disallowing different horses to bear the same name.

This latter point with regard to the duplication of names led to a good deal of confusion on Thursday. When registering a horse, if the name required has already been taken, could not a numeral be attached or another name selected as is done under Jockey Club Rules?

"KINGSCLERE."

WHY NOT BE PUNCTUAL?

Sir,— Punctuality is an important item in everyday work. Why should it not be the same with pleasure?

Last Sunday, one of the Rhine river trip boats was to have left Bonn for Coblenz at 09.30 hours, according to programme.

At the appointed time 300 officers and men were on the boat waiting to depart.

Two members of the party, however, were yet to come, and for these two the boat was delayed one hour and a half, it being after 11.00 before we left Bonn Pier.

It seemed to me to be extremely unfair that 300 pleasure seekers should lose some of their pleasure owing to the tardiness of two individuals.

DISSATISFIED.

SWEEPSTAKES.

Sir,—There is no doubt that the Victory Loan sweepstake organised by the British Empire Leave Club has been a huge success.

It means that there are eight or nine thousand men willing to take a sporting chance of winning a substantial prize in Victory Loan.

I would suggest that there should be more of these sweeps. Every man would stand a sporting chance, and the state would benefit considerably.

The Leave Club has given a lead, so why should not each individual unit have its own sweep.

At the present rate of exchange a War Savings certificate costs about 55 mks. At two marks a ticket, it would take twenty-seven members to buy one certificate, and this could be increased ten-fold, in any average sized unit.

"VICTORY."

IN QUEST OF A HOBBY.

Sir, — I was greatly interested in your article on "Hobbies". Every young soldier out here ought to take up something of the kind, I think.

Now, there were two hobbies that were not mentioned and they are two of the best.

Meteorology, or the observation of the weather, with its "infinite variety", or astronomy, the science of the stars. Neither costs much to follow, and above all, if we do the practical observations, it takes us out in the air.

"ASTER".

ARE WE FORGOTTEN?

Sir,— What must strike everyone who goes on leave now is that the man in civvies appears to be thought more of than the soldier in khaki.

What a contrast! During the war nobody could do too much for the fighting man; he was honoured everywhere. He was doing his best to save England from the horror of a German victory. He was enabling the factory and office to keep going and the profiteers to acquire a fortune.

Now, so short is the public memory, he is thought of no account. People ask "what, are you doing in khaki?" They seem to think one is almost a slacker for wearing the King's uniform. It really makes one despair of the attitude of mind of one's countrymen.

SERVING SOLDIER.

"NO-CIGARETTE" GROUSE.

Sir,—I must confess that I was surprised when I saw the N.A.C.B. Canteen at the Cologne Rhine supplying German civilians with two packets of cigarettes, while there are British Tommies who have to go without for days.

A.E. ZURNER.

NONE "BY REQUEST."

Sir,— To-night at the Officers' Club we have been informed that no "requests" are to be submitted to the Orchestra.

Does this mean we have to sit and listen to German music all through dinner without being able to listen to our own?

I think this is a little hard on those who like to hear a little other than "sob stuff" played by the orchestra at the Officers' Club.

W. S. M.

WHERE DID THEY GO TO?

Sir, — H.A.D.'s interesting communication on the mystery of the cigarettes purchased at the E.F.C. calls to mind a similar experience of my own.

Some weeks ago I purchased five packets of cigarettes in a certain canteen in Cologne. Each packet "pledged" itself to contain ten cigarettes, but on opening one some time after I had left the vicinity of the Canteen, I discovered nine cigarettes only.

My curiosity being aroused, I examined the remaining packets, and to my surprise, and disgust, found two others out of the five containing only nine cigarettes each.

I make no further comment but such things provide food for thought!

Deadly First Ball at Kalk.

93rd BRIGADE R.G.A. v. D/130 BDE R.F.A. at Kalk on Friday. Ogden and Bingham opened to Wright and Smythe. With his first ball Smythe bowled Ogden. Wright and Smythe bowled well, but they were badly backed by the field, several catches being dropped. The board showed 48 for 5. A double change was then effected. Ellis and Rushton disposed of the remainder for 67. Ellis and Pallisr started confidently for the 93rd, and 34 was raised before Pallisr was caught behind the sticks. Weight joined Ellis and they got the runs with ease. The score was carried to 122 for 1 when stumps were drawn, with Ellis 59 not out and Weight 50 not out.

31st LABOUR GROUP (78) v. 420 SIEGE BATTERY (25) on the Pola Wiesen ground, Cologne, on Saturday. For the winners, L/Cpl. Walker made 31 and Pte. Spencer 28. Sgt. Kenyon took 4 wickets for 10 runs, and Pte. Trendle 4 for 12.

D/190 BDE. R.F.A. (42 for 5) v. 161 BDE. R.F.A. (39), on the 161 Bde. ground at Siegburg Muhdorf, on Wednesday. Dvr. Bingham, for D/190 Bde., took 8 wickets for 10 runs, of which one hit accounted for 6

2/4 HANTS (108) v. 88 FIELD AMBULANCE (41). Bowling for the Hants on Sunday, Captain Clarke secured 7 wickets in 30 balls at the small cost of 4 runs. The batting of the Hampshires was excellent throughout, Major Westmorland being top scorer with 24. A rare incident happened during the match; the bowler swung his arm to deliver the ball, but instead of delivering it, broke the wicket, catching the unwary batsman out of his ground.

"D" CORPS SIGNAL COY. (54) v. IVth CORPS TROOPS M.T. COY. (58) at Duren. An interesting game with an exciting finish. For the winners, who went in first, Pte. LONDON D.M.T. COY. (130) v. 13 M.A.C. (47), at Merheim on Saturday. After the M.T. Coy. had lost the first 2 wickets for 10, the batting improved, the next 4 wickets putting on 72. Lieut. 4th R. SUSSEX (156) v. 52nd NORTHUMBERLAND FUSILIERS (75), on Saturday. The R. Sussex, thanks to a splendid partnership of 88 for the 2nd wicket by L/Cpl. Bryant and Pte. Crick, had 100 on the board for one wicket. After this the batting failed before the bowling of Lieut. Hargreaves, and the whole side was out for 156.

269 A.E. COY. (53) v. 18th FIELD AMBULANCE (51) on the A.E. Coy.'s ground at Euskirchen on Saturday.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Music and Dancing.

The 8th East Surrey Band, under the conductorship of Bandmaster J. Cooney, gave a splendid concert at the Leave Club on Sunday evening. The hall was packed, and there was hardly any standing room. Perhaps the most attractive items were the overture, "Morning, Noon and Night," by Suppé, and the characteristic "War Whoop Rag." Miss Elsie West played Sibelius' "Valse Triste" with great brilliance and delicacy, and was loudly encored. The other soloist was Cpl. Walters, who is also well known at the Club. He sang "The Watchman," by Squire, and "The Trumpeter," and was encored. He has a beautiful deep voice and every word can be heard at the back of the hall, which is a rare accomplishment. On Saturday a delightful exhibition of Highland dancing was given by the Reel Team of the 4th Gordons to the largest audience ever gathered together in the hall.

A Busy Week.

There will be an impromptu concert in the Music Room of the Leave Club on Wednesday, from 5-6 followed by a dance in the Theatre at 6.30 p.m. The Band of the 9th Durham Light Infantry will play for this dance. The Pipers of the 4th Bn. Gordon Highlanders will play in the garden from 5-6 on Thursday and there will be a whist Drive at 6.30 p.m. On Friday, there will be a dancing class in the Theatre at 5 p.m. and an impromptu concert at the same time in the Music Room. There will be a continuous cinema performance from 2.30 onwards. On Saturday, an impromptu concert will take place at 5 p.m. and dance in the Theatre at 6.30, at which exhibition of various dances will be given.

A Popular Warrant Officer.

A very pleasing ceremony took place on Wednesday evening at the Sergeants' Mess of the 51st Battalion Manchester Regt., when all the W.O.'s and Sergeants available met together to bid farewell to Sergeant-Major Birtwistle upon his leaving the Battalion to proceed to England for demobilization. R.S.M. J. Moore was chairman of the proceedings. He said C.S.M. Birtwistle had been with the Battalion for over three years as C.S.M. and R.S.M. and had taken a keen interest in the welfare of the men. He was a keen footballer and cross country runner. Sergt. Birtwistle was presented with a case of cutlery by Major Murphy on behalf of the sergeants. During the evening an enjoyable programme was contributed to by C.S.M. Ellis, Sergts. Greenwood, Boor, Kirkland, Thornton and Butler. C.S.M. Birtwistle acknowledged the gift in a brief happily-worded speech. The presentation was accompanied by a sketch of the recipient by Lieut. Fryer.

In a Few Lines.

"The Title" by Arnold Bennett was produced at the Deutsches Theatre by the, Rhine Army Dramatic Company yesterday evening.

At each of the 18 performances of the revue "Well I'm—!" by "The Tabs" the Apollo Theatre, Cologne, was filled to its utmost capacity.

"The Limits," the 6th London's concert party commenced a week's engagement at the Apollo Theatre yesterday evening.

The Agrippina Theatre has been handed over to the Germans, and the Modern Theatre taken over in its place as Army Cinema No. 2.

Another change is under consideration, and in the near future a move will probably be made from the Apollo to the Palace Theatre.

The Rhine Army Dramatic Company received a very enthusiastic ovation when they gave a performance of "The Mollusc" at Bonn last week.

"The Tabs" went on leave to England on Sunday and when they return, they will be joined by Pte. Hosking, the well known light baritone of the original "Crumps".

There will be another Backhaus recital at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne, on Sunday next.

Echoes from Rhineland.

The Cologne Races.

We were returning from the races. There had been a good day's sport, but we could not refrain from unconsciously comparing this race day with those we had experienced in England in those happy days before the war. The arrangements were excellent, but one or two familiar scenes of the English racecourse were absent. We were wending our way home when in the distance a familiar sound fell upon our ears. We halted, and round a bend in the road we saw a sight which brought memories of good old England vividly to our mind — a "four-in-hand" drawn by four spirited horses with a crowd of officers sitting on the top blowing horns. We were strangely thrilled by this sight. Memories of the good old Ascot days came back to us, but instead of the usual top hats and frock coats the occupants of the coach wore the khaki uniform which had been worn during the last five years by those who had been playing "the greater game." It was strange how the fortune of war had brought this old English custom into unaccustomed surroundings.

Encouraging Sport.

Major General Sir D. Campbell, K. C. B. commanding the Highland Division of the Rhine Army is one of those who encourage the troops to occupy themselves during their leisure hours in an active participation in games of all kinds Addressing a huge gathering of all ranks at the close of the 2nd Highland Brigade Groups athletic meeting at Düren recently, he expressed his pleasure at witnessing a long and interesting series of competitions contested in the keen, sportsmanlike British fashion. He confessed to having seen nothing finer than the dead-heat finish of the three miles foot race. It was their power to "stick it" as revealed in sport, and their desire always to play the game which found them in the happy position to-day of having won the war. He wished to see everyone engage in the games they loved and not merely to follow them as onlookers.

Strange Boxing.

Boxing, it would seem in Germany is not quite in accordance with the traditions familiar to the English mind, and the referee at the Cologne Crystal Palace seemed to have great difficulty in pleasing the crowd. After pushing over one of the combatants in a heroic effort to separate them, amidst the cheering and catcalls of the soldier element, an American dashed on to the stage and into the ring, and by taking off his coat and his general behaviour intended to fight someone. Whom we could not say, as before any damage could be done, he was joined by a lady, who with more speed than dignity got into the ring and proceeding to embrace him, plainly showed her desire to act as peacemaker. In her efforts, she was ably seconded by the manager, who attired in a frock coat and top hat, had entered the ring in such haste that he adorned the floor with the unfortunate boxer who was the cause of the disturbance, thus affording an effective curtain.

No Cigarettes.

It is a striking commentary upon the system of distribution in operation that while men of the Rhine Army are met at the canteens by the notice "No Cigarettes," the inhabitants of the occupied area, male and female smokers, seem to specialize in English cigarettes. These are easily recognizable and a glance round any cabaret will convince one of the justice of Tommy's grouse. The bartering of cigarettes calls for stringent punishment and we believe it is being meted out, but even more severe penalties seem to be needed.

No Sanitary Arrangements.

All who have been billeted in the smaller villages of Rhineland will have been struck by the bad sanitary conditions under which the peasants live. Bad as are those at home, the evil is not so noticeable as here where the adage of "Waste not, want not" is lived up to, in an amazing degree. Excreta is used on all hand for the manuring of pasture land, and when this process is being carried out it requires something more than a pipe of strong tobacco to make life liveable. Many are familiar with accumulated culinary smells, but the palm goes to the houses in which the animal stalls are often only just removed from the living compartments by a flimsy partition.

Somewhat Smelly.

Here is an example. In one house there were living a woman, her daughter, two sons, and three cows. One room of the house was used as a stable for the cows, and all that separated this room from the kitchen was a thin wall, connected by a door, nearly always open! The room directly above was a bedroom, and here one received the full force of the stench from the stable, and no part of the house was free from this unpleasant smell. A slight examination of the other houses in the village showed that among the peasants it is the rule, rather than the exception, for their cows to live under the same roof as themselves.

Labour Saving Electricity.

The motor for driving the washing apparatus was out of order; the charwoman was neither young nor fascinating yet how could one bear to see her toil, hour after hour, in an atmosphere reeking with vapour, when all that was required to relieve her of her wearsome backaching work was to set her motor buzzing again. Human sympathy won. The misery, one witnessed, caused by her kin for the moment, was blotted out. But what was brought forcibly to ones notice was the way in which electricity is used, both for lighting and power, and the vast amount of comfort and labour saving its use entails, this even in the country districts of Rhineland. Besides washing, milk-separating, buttermaking, corngrinding, and pumping are all carried out, in the one farm, by three phase motors, which as motors go, require a minimum of attention.

Lesser Echoes.

There has been a marked increase in the number of French troops in Cologne during the past day or two.

Cherries having almost had their day, gooseberries are taking their place on the street stalls.

Many German girls are imitating the style of headgear worn by our Wrafs.

The troops at Euskirchen are asking for dancing lessons to be arranged there.

Besides the big prizes there are to be twenty "consolers" in the Leave Club Victory "Sweep."

"I am delighted to hear that the men in France are taking so keen an interest in housing," writes the Minister of Health, in reply to an army lecturer addressing troops on the Rhine on this subject.

Mr. Asquith is at Brussels, and on Saturday visited Louvain and Malines, where he conversed with Cardinal Mercier.

It is expected that the interests of ex-Service men will be fully represented on the new Committee, which is advising the Army Council as to the disposal of the profits earned by the canteens during the war.

Many parties of Germans were celebrating the raising of the blockade in the restaurants the night the news was circulated.

Photographic classes and dancing classes are suggested by a correspondent as a welcome change to compulsory games.

Some extraordinary breeds of dog have been noticed in Bonn. Someone asks if these canine monstrosities are the "Jazz" species.

The draw for the Leave Club Victory Loan Sweep is postponed until Wednesday at 20.00 hours, when Lady Gatacre will conduct it.

At Euskirchen a camera club has been formed at the Y.M.C.A. and classes in photography are being held at the VI Corps school, Lindenthal.

Sgt. O. Hauff, attached Lowland Division, Dormagen, has written an interesting booklet on Zons and its historic fortifications, photographically illustrated.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Pte. Eric Tolson, No 37 C.C.S. Army of Rhine.

SH!!!!!!!

With extra care I wrapped it up in thick brown paper, but ah! people might guess what precious thing I was carrying. Yes, I would camouflage it with ordinary newspaper. Hurriedly drawing a "Cologne Post" from my pocket, I carefully re-wrapped it, keeping at the same time a sharp look out in case any one was watching me.

Gingerly I peeped round the door and looked up the street. Yes there were some M.P's. farther up, so I was forced to wait until they had disappeared. Considering it much safer to carry it out of sight, I pushed it under my tunic, not being able to get it in my pocket. How it bulged and seemed to increase. I felt I should surely be accosted and asked as to what I was carrying and then all would be up. I broke out into a cold sweat at the thought of someone's hand gripping my neck.

Again I peeped round the door. The Red Caps had vanished. Swiftly I raced up the road; turning the corner, horrors, a M.P. was coming towards me. He was raising his hand; I had lost — but, no — thank goodness he only saluted an officer.

At last my goal was in sight, what a relief; but what was that crowd of fellows standing in front of my door, and, horrors, another Red Cap with them. They knew, then, and were waiting for me.

Swiftly I turned down a by-road, and reached the back door of my billet, jerking open the door, I rushed upstairs; removing a loose floor board I placed my precious parcel in the cavity and carefully replaced the board. Thank goodness it was now safe from prying eyes.

The Officers' Mess waiter had managed to supply me with a box of cigarettes.

CHOOSING BINOCULARS.

Several queries have reached me with reference to the power and price of binoculars. The British are buying them everywhere and are occasionally dissatisfied later with their purchase. Those who have never before possessed a pair are often confused over the dimension mentioned by the shopkeeper. I venture to give a few explanations and approximately what are fair prices. The latter must be adhered to strictly, and over-charging should not be submitted to.

ZEISS.

8 40	465 "
10×50	775 "
18×50	825 "

GOERTZ.

6×24	325 marks
6×30	375 "
8×26	350 "

Now with reference to the figures given above, the lefthand side (6, 8, 10, 18) represent the field of vision, and the right-hand side, the diameter of the largest lens — the lens farthest from one's eyes — in millimeters. For my own part I prefer the Zeiss lenses. The last two of those I have given — i. e., 10 50 and 18×50, are only suitable for long-range work; they are exceedingly powerful. The best of all, for all-round work, is undoubtedly the 6×30 (Zeiss) at 375 marks, as has been proved by experience.

It is a really reliable instrument and is provided with all necessary straps and a leather case. Great care should be taken in preserving the lenses from harm—scratches and rough rubbing. One should take silk or fine tissue-paper for cleaning. It is always advisable to blow all dust from each glass before polishing since the smallest grain may damage the delicate surface. If one is careful to keep one's binoculars, when not in use, in their case, cleaning will be less necessary, of course, and, therefore, so much the better will be the condition of the lenses.

PEACE PAGEANT IN PARIS.

MOST JOYOUS DAY OF FRENCH HISTORY.

NIGHT-LONG VICTORY CARNIVAL.

CARSON'S "BOLSHEVIST" SPEECH.

PARIS CELEBRATES.

UNPARALLELED SCENES OF REJOICING.

Enthusiastic scenes were witnessed at Paris throughout Sunday night in anticipation of Monday's victory pageant. The crowds spent the night singing and dancing and in searching for resting places. As a last resort many camped out in the branches of trees. The busses and trams ran continuously.

At six o'clock on Monday morning the line of route for the triumphal march was closed. The procession began at 8.45 a.m. Victorious troops of all the Allies, including a strong British Naval and Military contingent, passed through the Arc de Triomphe, the chains of which were removed for the first time since 1870, and down the Champs Elisées which was packed with people. One thousand wounded men, some of whom were carried on stretchers, headed the procession. Marshal Foch and Marshal Joffre rode side by side and General Pershing led the American troops. Bluejackets and marines headed the British contingent preceding Sir Douglas Haig and his staff with the colours of the 17th Lancers. His escort comprised generals of armies and army corps, staff and ordnance officers. The Guards Band headed the contingents of many regiments with their colours, the thousand strong representatives of the Army of the Rhine and the Seaforth Highlanders with their band.

Field Marshal Haig was very warmly cheered. The people threw money and souvenirs to the soldiers of all the Allies and offered them chocolate and wine.

After the procession the crowd scattered in all directions, giving themselves over to more dancing and singing. It was, as one correspondent describes it, the greatest day in the history of France and the scenes may be regarded as a foretaste of what London may expect on Saturday next.

YOUNG TURKS.

MISSING LEADERS SENTENCED TO DEATH.

The Turkish court-martial has finally pronounced its sentences in the trial of the principal members of the late Unionist régime and has submitted them for the imperial sanction.

Talaat, Enver, and Djemal, who sought safety by flight, have been condemned to death in contumaciam, while the ex-Sheikh-ul-Islam, Alusa Metssa Kiazim, and Djavid Bey, ex-Minister of Finance, were sentenced to 15 years' hard labour. Rifaat Bey, ex-President of the Senate, and Hachim Bey, ex-Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, were acquitted.

The trial of the officials accused of the massacre of Armenians at Trebizond was resumed to-day.

TRADE WITH GERMANY.

PRE-WAR TRANSACTIONS: IMPORTANT RESERVATION.

The general license issued by the Board of Trade, under the trading with the enemy enactments, authorizes, with certain reservations, the resumption of trade with Germany and German-Austria. The licenses, however, do not remove the still existing restrictions upon payment of debts and return of property due or deliverable to persons in Germany in respect to pre-war transactions.

EX-KAISER'S HOST.

REJOICINGS AT AMERONGEN.

The ex-Kaiser's present host, Count Bentinck, celebrated on Saturday the fortieth anniversary of the day on which he settled at Amerongen. The entire populace turned out to serenade him. A great banquet was given in honour of the event, Count Bentinck himself subscribing ten thousand guilders towards the expenses of the rejoicings and the ex-Kaiser and Kaiserin providing the floral decorations.

PLOTS AGAINST FINLAND.

The Finnish police authorities have discovered a plot to explode the large stocks of ammunition at Helsingfors and Wiborg and to murder General Mannerheim by blowing up his residence. Several of the ringleaders have been arrested.

The police have also secured possession of numerous maps and reports from spies, thus frustrating the intention of sending them to Russia to facilitate an attack on Finland.

SNUB FOR BELA KUN.

The Allied and Associated Powers have sent a wireless message to Bela Kun informing him that as he will not carry out the conditions of the Armistice, they cannot enter into any discussions with him.

The Secretary of the Admiralty announces that it has been decided that from July 21 naval officers are to resume the wearing of plain clothes to the same extent as before the war.

CARSON CRITICISED.

INFLAMMATORY SPEECH STRONGLY DENOUNCED.

Sir Edward Carson has had a "bad press" for his speech delivered at the Orange Celebrations at Belfast on July 12th. Demanding the repeal of the Home Rule Act, he threatened resistance if any attempt were made to change the status of Ulster, delivered an attack on Sir Horace Plunkett and described his scheme of Dominion Rule for Ireland as being merely a mask for an Irish republic, and passionately declared that Ulstermen would acknowledge no flag but the Union Jack.

The leading party organs have so far refrained from comment on the speech, but other papers strongly deprecate the tone of defiance adopted by the Ulster leader.

On Sunday Mr. J. L. Garvin in the "Observer" said: "It is no longer enough for the Ulster Covenanters to say 'we won't have it.' That pre-war formula is as dead as King William. By itself it is Bolshevist dogma of minority fanaticism . . ."

The "Times" is no less emphatic, and after remarking on "the perilous likeness" of Carson's threats to the direct action of Bolshevists, says: "He chose to speak as a provincial chieftain, seeming to aim above all at securing his own position in the leadership of Ulster. If he is more than a provincial chieftain he will henceforth eschew threats which if taken seriously might place him and his followers in a very false position, and he will seek to qualify for admission into the ranks of constructive and therefore truly patriotic British and Irish statesmen."

The "Daily Mail" heads its leader "Carson's Bolshevism" and asks if there is one law for him and another for Mr. Smillie. Carson's sabre rattling, it considers, can only be intended to rouse passion against quiet and just consideration of the Irish problem. "British policy in Ireland is an important factor in the good feeling between this country and our Dominions and we should satisfy all those freedom-loving peoples that we are honestly desirous of burying this old feud and setting up free national government in Ireland."

NATIONALIZATION.

RUSSIAN SOVIETS STEAL SWEDISH GOODS.

According to information received from the Commercial Committee of the Swedish Association in Petrograd, the Russian Soviet Government has nationalized all commerce with foreign countries and has established a very strict supervision over the transactions of all private firms. In many cases they have confiscated stocks of goods.

The report states that large Swedish stocks have been seized without compensation to the owners.

TROOPS FOR BUDA-PESTH.

As a consequence of the continued terrorism exercised by Bela Kun, the Italian Government has intervened on behalf of the Entente, demanding all political prisoners to be placed under the protection of the Allied powers. The Soviet Government at once took prompt action and put a stop to the prevalent executions. It is reported that several thousand Entente troops are being sent to Buda-Pesth as a policing force.

GERMAN LEVY ON PROPERTY.

The official text of the bill relative to the levy on property confirms, according to a Berlin telegram, that the levy amounts to 10 per cent. on fortunes of from 5,000 to 50,000 marks, but the subsequent rate of progression differs from the earlier versions. The amount of the levy reaches 24.6 per cent. on fortunes of 1,000,000 marks, 54.2 per cent. on those of 10,000,000 marks, and 63.9 per cent. on those of 100,000,000 marks.

PRINCE'S VISIT TO CANADA.

The following members of the Prince of Wales' Household will be in attendance during his visit to Canada:—Private secretary: Sir Godfrey Thomas. Equerries: Capt. Lord Claud Hamilton and Capt. the Hon. P.W. Legh.

The King has also approved of the special appointments for the tour:—Chief of the Staff: Rear-Admiral Sir Lionel Holsey. Naval A.D.C.: Commander Dudley North. Military secretary: Lieut.-Col. E. W. M. Grigg.

NAVAL SERVICE SECRETS.

The Admiralty desires to call the attention of all persons who have served, but are no longer serving, in the Naval Service, or in any capacity in the naval experimental research or other establishments, to the fact that whereas in many cases their technical knowledge of various subjects has been considerably increased during their period of service, no information gained through their acquaintance with the details of Service technical apparatus or in any other way consequent upon their serving under the Admiralty must be divulged without the consent in writing of the Admiralty. Such divulgation may be in contravention of the Official Secrets Act.

COAL PRICES.

STERN WARNING BY THE GOVERNMENT.

The highly important debate on the coal crisis which has arisen in consequence of the prospective six shillings per ton increase in the cost of coal, was opened by Sir Auckland Geddes in the House of Commons yesterday.

He emphasised, among others, the following points. The issues at stake were as grave as any raised during the period of the war. The proposed increase was not based on any political consideration, but only on the serious position which the Government realised that the country has got to face owing to the serious reduction of output. The shortage was not all due to the industry itself; the shortage of wagons, for instance, strangled the flow from the collieries and the eight hour day on the railways had led to delay in clearing. Less work had been done on the railways despite higher wages, and less work in one industry reacted on another. The work of the country was for one reason or another not being done.

DOCTRINE OF LIMITATION.

There is a most pernicious doctrine being preached that if a man does less work it leads to more work for others to do. The present is not the time for any section of the community to say that their interests are separate from the interests of the whole community. Workers must get back to the spirit they had in the war. He urged the leaders of the miners to tell the men that this is no time for doing anything less than their maximum. If the output is increased the Government is prepared to meet that increase by a falling price. The final key to the problem rests with the miners.

A voice: "Carry out the Sankey report."

Sir Auckland Geddes: "This question does not rest on any report but on work."

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

In the debate which followed, the miners' representatives sought to show that it was the Government and not the men which was responsible for the diminished output, owing to the lack of necessary materials which had kept some of the mines idle for days together.

Mr. Brace said the miners quite realised the seriousness of the position and urged the Government to appoint a committee of enquiry into the questions of increased price and falling output.

BONAR LAW'S PROMISE.

Mr. Hartshorn promised that if the Government organised the supply of the necessary materials required to work the mines, the miners' leaders would stake their very existence upon it that without threats the men would produce as much coal per man per year as would make it unnecessary to add a single penny to the price.

Mr. Bonar Law said that if the miners would give a valid undertaking that for three months they would put their backs into it to increase the output and would neither strike nor cause any stoppage in that period, he would be inclined to defer putting on the increased price.

After further discussion the decision to increase the price was deferred until Monday next.

AEROPLANE COLLISION.

THREE FATALITIES.

A distressing mishap occurred at Farnboro on Monday afternoon in which three lives were lost. An Avro two-seater collided in mid-air with another machine and both planes crashed, the Avro falling into the grounds of Farnboro Court.

The pilot, Lieut. Herbert, attached R.A.F., and the air mechanic passenger named Hiley were killed. The other machine fell 500 yards away, the pilot, Lieut. Bizion, being also killed.

GERMAN'S GALLANT RESCUE.

A very gallant rescue was effected by a German civilian named Fritz Foster of 9 Kirchstrasse, Rodenkirchen, yesterday. While loading a barge near Benrath, a Royal Engineer slipped off the gangway plank. Foster jumped into the river and sustained the man until picked up by a boat. But for the pluck and promptitude shown by Foster, who lost his wrist watch in the water, the R.E. would undoubtedly have been drowned.

GLASGOW TRAM COLLISION.

Twenty persons were treated at Glasgow Royal Infirmary on Monday night for injuries sustained in a tram car collision in the High-street. The brakes of one car failed to act and the vehicle dashed down a steep incline into the rear of another car. Both cars kept the rails, but each was badly smashed.

Passengers, drivers and conductors were thrown in all directions, but fortunately the injuries sustained were mostly superficial, only two persons having to be detained in hospital.

FLYING RESTRICTIONS TEMPORARILY SUSPENDED.

Pending a definite agreement in accordance with the Air Convention, and in order to enable French and British aircraft firms to send machines to London and Paris during the forthcoming peace celebrations this week, arrangements have been made with the French Government for the opening of civil communication by air between London and Paris. This permission is only granted up to and including the 20th July.

RAYNHAM'S RUN OF BAD LUCK.

All arrangements had been made by Raynham to start for the Atlantic flight on the Martynside machine on Monday. As the machine was being wheeled from the hangar one of the tyres burst, and immediate repair being impossible, the flight was again postponed.

WINESHOP MURDER.

ACCUSED MAN TELLS HIS DRAMATIC STORY.

There was an intensely dramatic solution yesterday of the mysterious wineshop murder at Hendon on July 4th when John Thomas Gregory the manager was found battered to death. The young man named Arthur John Biggin, who was found in a wood near Sheffield on Friday suffering from poison, appeared before the magistrate at Hendon Petty Sessions charged with the murder.

The only evidence apart from the fact of the arrest consisted of a sensational statement made by Biggin to the police.

In this voluntary statement prisoner described how he first met Gregory three weeks ago and had a drink with him in a room behind the shop. Gregory invited him to call again and he did so, when Gregory again gave him wine and offered to supply him with a few bottles. On July 4th, the day of the tragedy, Biggin called at the shop with a suitcase initialled J. W. B. in which to take away the wine. He said he drank a good deal of wine which Gregory pressed on him. After drinking a reddish yellow mixture he felt heavy and dizzy.

Then Gregory made certain overtures to him which he repulsed; Gregory, saying "You young viper, you won't? Then I'll make you," appeared to go mad. He went to the fireplace, got the poker and made as if to strike prisoner, actually aiming a blow which Biggin managed to escape. Biggin then picked up a bottle of wine and struck him on the head with it, cutting his head. Deceased again attacked him with the poker.

Prisoner alleges that he then picked up the tongs and guarded himself. Closing with Gregory he dispossessed him of the poker and struck him with it. After that he remembers nothing of what took place. The statement then described how Biggin got away, and concluded "at the time I felt that if I didn't do him in he would do me in."

Inspector Neil said the whole statement was a voluntary one.

Biggin was remanded till Thursday.

W.A.A.C.'s. INJURED.

MOTOR FIRE ESCAPE AND LORRY COLLIDE.

A motor fire escape collided with an army lorry in Wandsworth yesterday. The driver of the fire escape and seven W.A.A.C.s. who were in the lorry were injured, but with the exception of one girl the injuries were slight. The injured girl was conveyed to the W.A.A.C.s.' special hospital.

MAD MULLINGAR

SOLDIERS' AND SINN FEINERS' PITCHED BATTLE.

An encounter between a party of soldiers of the East Yorks Regiment numbering about one hundred and a party of Sinn Feiners to about the same number occurred at Mullingar on Saturday night. Eventually the fight was broken up by the arrival of an armoured car.

Before this appeared on the scene, however, a pitched battle was fought for two hours with varying fortunes. The Sinn Feiners used bottles and other missiles as weapons, while the soldiers attacked with bayonets and entrenching tools. The impartial police charged with batons.

Several persons received serious injuries and one policeman is in hospital in a precarious condition. Two Sinn Feiners were arrested.

NEW SCALE OF POLICE PAY.

The report of the committee on the Metropolitan Police service was issued last night. It recommends for all constables a minimum weekly wage of seventy shillings, rising by annual increments of two shillings per week to ninety shillings. Houses or quarters are to be provided rent free for all ranks or allowances given in lieu. Boot allowances are to be standardized at a flat rate of 1s. 6d. per week for all ranks, and a normal eight hour day is to be adopted throughout the police service.

ECHO OF DRUMMING-OUT CASE.

One of the German prisoners at the camp at Standon, Hertfordshire, was last week sentenced by a court-martial to 28 days' solitary confinement for breaking camp.

At midnight a special constable saw a man in uniform leave the camp and make his way towards a house in the neighbouring hamlet of Hare-street. Inquiring at the camp the constable discovered that a German was missing, and he then returned to the house, which was occupied by a discharged and paralysed soldier and his wife and two children.

Next day the woman was "drummed out" of the village by her neighbours, the drumming being performed with pots and pans.

DOG GIVES EVIDENCE.

At Wandsworth County Court yesterday, when Mrs. Clara Leybourne, of Selincourt-road, Tooting, sued Frank Richardson, the caretaker of an L.C.C. school at Tooting, for the return of a lurcher dog, Judge Hartington ordered the dog to be unmuzzled and brought into court. It immediately ran to the plaintiff and licked her face. His Honour gave judgment for its return, with costs.

CAPTAIN CHARGED WITH BIGAMY.

John Robert Lamp (43), captain in the Army Pay Corps, was remanded at Highgate on a charge of bigamy. Evidence of arrest only was given, the prisoner having admitted the charge.

THE ATHERTON CASE.

MORBID CROWD DEMONSTRATES AT THE FUNERAL.

The ashes of Mrs. Arthur Eliot ("Mrs. Atherton") were interred in the Paul family tomb at Kensal Green cemetery yesterday. Crowds flocked to the cemetery.

When the hearse arrived at the church there was an unseemly rush on the part of the onlookers, and some difficulty was experienced in making way for the casket.

The service, conducted in the church by the Rev. B. C. H. Andrews, was private, only sixteen persons being admitted. Captain Eliot was not present.

When the casket was removed from the church to the family tomb after the service there was unpleasant behaviour on the part of the crowd. People rushed for a place close to the tomb and struggled for vantage points on and between the surrounding graves.

After the interment one of the women mourners was followed and hooted by the crowd, and only escaped by driving away in a motor car.

In order to refute the suggestions made at the Atherton inquest, Miss Cornell, Captain Eliot's stepdaughter, has undergone independent examination by three specialists. A statement is being prepared which completely disproves the allegations which Mrs. Eliot was stated in evidence to have made.

MURDER EPIDEMIC.

THREE TRAGEDIES OF PASSION.

Crimes of violence grow daily more frequent, one of the most distressing results of the war in which passions are blunted and familiarity to suffering develops into callousness. Three cases of murder and attempted murder transpired yesterday.

At Coventry. Edward Tutten, a discharged soldier, was committed for trial for attempting to murder his wife. They had been separated and it is alleged that prisoner went to the house where his wife was living and attacked her with a razor. Prisoner said he had heard complaints about his wife and attacked her in a fit of passion.

HATCHET MURDER.

Another ex-soldier, Fred Carter, formerly in the seventh Lincolns, confessed at Nottingham yesterday to the murder of his landlady by striking her on the head with a hatchet while she was reading a paper.

It is understood that prisoner was gassed in France and he appeared dazed in court. He was remanded.

SGT.-MAJOR SHOOTS HIS WIFE.

Shots and screams and a young woman running into the street calling "Police" and "Murder," attracted attention to a house in Holland-road, Felixstowe, on Saturday evening. The police on arrival found Sergeant-Major Matheson, better known as Murray, R.G.A., and his young wife lying dead on the floor. Near the man's body was a service revolver with six chambers discharged.

Murray had been in the Army since 1901, and had seen service in Egypt and France.

GERMAN OFFICER ARRESTED IN LONDON.

A dashing young German officer, belonging to one of the ex-Kaiser's crack regiments, was arrested on Monday night in the Strand. When apprehended he offered various excuses, and insisted that he was a South African bred and born.

He gave his name as Rudolph Lewis and admitted that he had fought in some of the most famous battles on the western front. He does not appear to have been taken a prisoner of war, and his presence in London has caused much uneasiness.

He is now lodged at Brixton Prison and it is possible that a grave charge may be preferred against him.

ALLEGED BURGLARIES BY POLICE OFFICERS.

Thomas Maxwell, a sergeant, and Alfred Shaw, a constable in the Metropolitan Police, who were found asleep in a house at Netherhall Gardens, Hampstead, were charged at Marylebone Police Court yesterday with burglary. The goods taken consisted chiefly of household linen.

Police-constable Green, who was instrumental in finding the men owing to a mark he had put on the front door having been tampered with, told how he found the prisoners asleep in a room on the second floor.

Asked if the prisoners were sober, the constable said he thought both were suffering from the effects of drink.

Prisoners were remanded, bail being refused.

FACTORIES BURNT OUT.

Two serious fires occurred on Sunday. One at Dundee, which caused damage to the extent of £20,000, occurred in a building owned by Cunningham Ltd., in which a quantity of jute bags were stored.

The second outbreak was at Lincoln where a fire which started in a congested area quickly spread to the factory belonging to Clarke's Blood Mixture Co. The factory was completely destroyed, many hundreds of workers being thrown out of employment in consequence.

America had a record birth-rate last year, despite the war. Statistics just compiled show that there were 270,000 births in the United States in 1918, or 27,000 in excess of the previous year.

This extraordinary war-time record is due to the fact that the Government did not call the married men to the colours, the American army being composed almost exclusively of bachelors.

FRANCE'S DAY.

The fourteenth of July is a notable day in the annals of France. One hundred and thirty years ago the populace of Paris rose in the exuberance of their might and struck a resounding blow against the dominance of an ancient and oppressive regime. The portals of the Bastille gave way before the eager champions of Liberty.

The Bastille is a symbol for France, and it was fitting that on the anniversary of its fall our allies should celebrate victory over their enemies. For more than four years they fought a stern and sorrowful campaign against the principalities and powers of the Bastille—against the thraldom of boastful dominion and vaunted culture.

France's Day has been gloriously celebrated. With the pomp and dignity of martial procession the people have witnessed the passing of war. The tension and poignancy of battle are no more. Sorrow remains as a mist through which eyes view the splendour of victory, and it is a mist which widens the halo of triumph.

On the fourteenth of July 1870 France and Prussia were standing on the brink of war. It was a war which brought defeat and disaster to our ally, and there are many who still remember the dark days of their country. Almost fifty years have passed before the fortunes of battle have turned against Prussia's might. These have too glibly been called the years of revanche for men must remember that a great country cannot forget the shame that once was cast upon it.

But France's pilgrimage in the wilderness is over. "Peace with honour," has come to her land and she rejoices in a new liberty and a new vision. France knows fully the inspiration of Beaconsfield's classic words.

The British Army of the Rhine had its representatives in Paris, but no delegation can adequately express the feelings of British soldiers. We were the comrades of the French in many a hard-fought battle, and we shall always pay our respectful tribute to the gallantry and chivalry and endurance of our comrades.

France, Italy, Britain—all had their dark days, when victory eluded their grasp, when misfortune and tragedy hovered over them. No one of us can boast over the other. Each played its gallant part in a common and glorious triumph. United they stood; united they conquered; united they call for an era of peace, brotherhood and prosperity.

WHAT DEAR COAL MEANS.

Undoubtedly the most serious event of the moment is the great increase in the price of coal, which is threatened in Great Britain.

It affects, directly or indirectly, everyone in the Rhine Army and particularly the married soldier whose family at home will be faced with higher costs of living. For, coal being the foundation of nearly all our industries, any rise in its price is reflected upon every kind of manufactured article we produce.

Some idea of what will happen will be gained when we state that 6/- a ton advance in coal will add at least £2 a ton to the cost of producing steel. Even at the present moment British steel is being undersold by the Continental and American producers.

It has been pointed out, coal ought not to cost anything like even the that present figure, but the time has gone past, unfortunately, for warnings to deaf ears.

The miners are not alone in pursuing short-sighted and self-destructive tactics, but the case against them is the most unanswerable, for it is not the capitalist now, who demands the further heavy advance in coal prices, but the Government, who are still in control of the coal mines, and who find that the present cost of production leaves no other alternative.

High pay has unhappily only produced a great decrease in production, and the two influences combined lead to destruction.

It is a belief, now widely entertained, and we have previously referred to it, that Great Britain is rapidly approaching a great industrial convulsion. We are living in a highly artificial condition of unsound and illusive prosperity, and we fear that it will only be through severe suffering that the great mass of the people will get back to sanity.

The process of killing the goose that lays the golden eggs is in full sway.

The profiteers, who belong to all classes engaged in the commercial and industrial life of this country, are with feverish energy feathering their nests while the good time lasts.

There are preparations for war on a large and complete scale on both sides of industrial life, and we fear that the clash has now become inevitable, and that it will be prolonged and bitter in the extreme.

VICTORY MARCHES.

For months we have read of them; the preparations, the route, the march itself, with reports of the wonderful ovation with which the empire greeted her sons, then there follows, in regular sequence, an appreciation of the glorious debt she owes the fine fellows, who have sacrificed so much for her.

A victory march originates very quietly in the correspondence column of some London paper.

There is a letter to the editor, signed by the head of some well-known city firm, modestly suggesting that a chance should be given for "the city to show it's appreciation," etc., etc.

Thus a victory march originates, is organised, the day arrives, and, with your permission, we shall watch the gentleman who started the ball rolling.

His office building is on one of the main thoroughfares (quite a coincidence), so the troops will pass that way, and as the patriot arrives at his office this morning he is pleased to note that preparations are already in hand and that his own building is second to none in the matter of bunting.

His morning is much the same as other mornings, but at 12.30 p.m. an unnecessary reference to his diary shows that he is entertaining a few business friends to lunch — in honour of the march.

At 2.30 p.m. he returns with the friends he has lunched with, the window is opened wide and the seats arranged.

In the street below the crowds are already dense, and soon the sound of cheering, carried on the breeze, becomes louder, and louder. The head of the column is now directly beneath, and, for thirty minutes, the street is a pandemonium of cheers.

Our business-man is half out of the window, gesticulating wildly and cheering, cheering, cheering; but gradually quietness returns, the window is closed. "Splendid fellows," he murmurs "but cheering is dry work: say when?"

* * *

A few days later in the "Situations Vacant" column of the same paper there is an announcement by the same man, and there is no lack of applicants for the appointment.

He sits scanning the applications and his expression becomes harder and harder, as, one by one, he puts them aside:—

"Enlisted in '14, released '19," he reads, then musingly:—

"Five years lost: it would be suicide to mix sentiment with business," and a glance at the window reminds him of that Victory March.

Had he not cheered himself hoarse for them? was it not his idea? What presumption the fellows had.

So to the next application:—

"Throughout the war I have held the post of deputy assistant, etc, at the Ministry of - - - -"

Our friend has no faith in any ministry clerks, but anything is better than a man who has been "wasting time" for five years or so, and the letter of acceptance is written.

The victory march, then, is really a declaration of bankruptcy; the country acknowledges a tremendous debt and by cheeping she pays a farthing in the pound.

Sir Douglas Haig still tours the country begging for justice for his men. RAS.

OUR GUEST NIGHT.

It begins with due solemnity and ends with appropriate hilarity. I would not for the world libel our mess by suggesting that this is the result of too many "spots" and wine which maketh glad the heart of man.

Oh! No! It is wonderful how a delightful dinner and good fellowship melts the ice and banishes the awe inspired by the presence of the Divisional Commander or the Brigadier.

Our mess secretary is a gem and full of enthusiasm to make each weekly guest night eclipse the former. He dances here, there and everywhere: full of good spirits, and a contagious zeal which passes to the mess sergeant and his staff.

Let it not be thought, however, that in the midst of all his activities our mess bills are forgotten. Oh! No! They are increased in due proportion.

"Guests may come and guests may go
But mess bills run for ever."

"To-night's the night," and so our panelled dining room with its brilliant electric lights is of greater importance even than the Hall of Mirrors. The long table with its two wings is covered by a snow-white cloth. It is resplendent in glass—four to each officer—flowers, cutlery, and sports trophies.

Our regimental and Battalion colours are entwined in the place of honour on the wall at the back of the Colonel's chair. The Mess President has a wonderfully carved throne becoming his dignity.

At 8 o'clock all the guests and members of the Mess are assembled in the ante-room. The buglers give the dinner call, and our regimental band, which is always in attendance, strikes up some soul-thrilling selection as we take our places around the tables.

For the next hour the room presents an animated sight as course succeeds course. Do not think that we are extravagant, the courses are made up from rations with a few other luxuries purchased from the canteen or locally.

Perhaps for a few moments the conversation lags, but by the time the incomparable army beef has been disposed of, interesting stories and experiences are trotted out and there is more freedom.

Above the hum of the conversation you can hear the band and the shouts of the admiring German children who gather in crowds from all the neighbouring streets.

The last course is finished and the port wine passed round and then the President sings out:—

"Mr. Vice, the King!" The Vice-President responds:—

"Gentlemen, the King!" The band strikes up the National Anthem as the officers all standing raise their glasses and drink the time honoured toast:—

"The King! God bless Him!"

So ends the dinner which is typical of the Messes in the Rhine Army.

The rest of the evening is spent in good fellowship, songs and dances, ping-pong and bridge, and hilarity. G.K.

EN AVANT.

Pick up your burden of mistakes,
The road of life's a long one.
What matter though the path one takes
To "cut off" is the wrong one?

There's many another just beyond;
The future has surprises.
A stone may prove a diamond;
'Tis fortune gives the prizes.

Strap on your load of fears and cares,
And face Miss Fortune bravely.
She loves the man who laughs and dares—
Not him who woos her gravely.

TOM HALL.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

FACE FUNGUS.

Sir,—I quite agree with "Tatcho" as to "face fungus." I know our great grandfathers were side adornments on their cheeks, but to-day the fashion seems to smack of effeminacy. I don't know why.

Most of the decadent artists who throng the cafés of the Latin quarter in Paris and a certain resort in London affect the fashion, and for British officers or men to do so is unthinkable.

Personally, I have not come across an example, though "Tatcho" seems to have seen many.
"MOUSTACHE."

AIRMEN AND SALUTING.

Sir,—Lately I have had to pull up several airmen for not saluting. In each case they have said "I'm not a soldier, and don't have to salute any officers not of the Air Force'

I do not know where they get this notion from, but it seems very prevalent.

All men in each service—Army, Navy or Air Force—must salute all officers in either.

I know sailors are very slack in saluting army officers, but that is no reason why airmen should be. MAJOR B.

THE GIRLS AT HOME.

Sir,— In answer to the sweeping statement of "S. S." wherein he states that he has not met an honourable Tommy who has actually preferred a Belgian or French girl, may I say, speaking on my own behalf, that I do not think that I have lost my honour by the mere fact that I intend making one of Belgium's daughters my future wife.

I have been out here since 1914 and have another year to do, and trust that should my hopes regarding the lady in question materialize, I shall not have stained an honourable career.
HONI SOIT QUI MAL Y PENSE.

Sir,—May I reply to "S.S." regarding the statement that he has not yet met a case where an honourable English Tommy has actually preferred the French or Belgian girl. Well, I have.

Two cases I have in mind. The first has been married to a French lady for over twelve months, and things are still going swimmingly, and likely to continue so.

Case number two, a Scotsman, by the way. Although he had thoughts of the "life sublime" before the war, the right girl had not turned up. It was in France that he found her, and I was a guest at "le Diner des Fiancailles".

I also take exception to his use of the word "honourable", which implies, consciously or unconsciously, that the French or Belgian girl is only worth the consideration of the "other-than-honourable" English Tommy, which is certainly not the case. A French or Belgian girl can be just as good in every sense of the word as the English girl. "DING DONG."

DOGS IN CHURCH.

Sir,— May I voice a protest against the habit of taking dogs to church? All men are animal lovers, but this is carrying it too far.

On several occasions dogs have accompanied parades and individuals to the Military Church, and it is getting quite a common thing to see a dog hunt there.

The climax was reached on Sunday morning, when the owner, a sergeant, caused an altercation in the entrance, after his dog had already been twice expelled. The sergeant actually wanted to take it in with him.

Surely it's up to everyone to show respect for God's house and play the game in a matter of this kind. It would not hurt a dog to leave it at a billet. "GUNNER."

TOMMY'S CONDUCT.

Sir,— I do not know how many shows "A Private" has seen since his arrival in Germany, but I have been to several entertainments and must certainly repudiate his statement with regard to the conduct of the "ordinary audience of British soldiers!"

My experience has been otherwise, and, in my opinion, Tommy does know how to conduct himself, and forms a very appreciative audience.

THE BISLEY MEETING.

Sir,— I read of the progress of Bisley shooting, but think many good shots from the Rhine could have competed if they had been given the opportunity.

I see that Dr. F. J. Kelly, in a demonstration, scored 81 out of a possible 90, which is an exceptionally good score, but I know there are some shots in my battalion who could have distinguished themselves, provided they had been given the chance. I myself in 1917 scored 152 out of a possible 170 under bad weather conditions.

My score was made on a difficult course, including 10 rounds rapid at 200 yards, also 15 rounds rapid at 300 yards. In these I scored 10 bulls and 13 bulls and two inners respectively. I think good shots should have been given a chance. Why not a meeting for the Rhine Army? C. S. M.

CYCLES ON HIRE.

Sir,—Tommy has a number of varied amusements, but, I think, there is room for another. A pleasant afternoon could be spent if we could hire a bicycle.

It does not seem the custom in Germany to get a cycle on hire, but I think it would be possible to make battalion arrangements, each user paying for the hire of the machine and any damage which might be caused. P. S. K.

WHY ONLY THE MARRIED?

Sir,—It is rumoured that wives may soon be allowed into the Army area, but there is no word of permission being extended to unmarried relations.

Before any official pronouncement is made on the subject, may I enquire if no unmarried girl is allowed out, how is the unmarried man to get married?

We are likely to be here many years. Marriages based on the brief acquaintances made in a fourteen days' leave almost invariably end in disaster, as is shown by a record in the divorce courts, unparalleled in the history of English home-life.

We men are but human. Is the unmarried soldier to be left to form one of those Anglo-German alliances which your correspondents "Concordia Victrix" and "An Englishman" so rightly deplore? The married man deserves no especial consideration; he has got his wife all right, keeping the home fires burning against his return.

But the single man has no home fire; and as the years fly by, he sees all hope disappear of ever founding a happy home and breeding sturdy little Britons, to carry on the great tradition of our Empire.

Surely on grounds of justice and of patriotism it is not the already appropriated wife who should be brought out, but rather the unmarried sister and cousin. "GOING ON FOR THIRTY."

Eight Consecutive Bulls At Bisley.

MARKERS DISSATISFIED: BOLTS ORDERED TO BE REMOVED FROM ALL RIFLES.

Some excellent shooting was witnessed at Bisley on Monday, Captain Stewart, firing at 200 yards, registering eight consecutive bulls.

Among the competitors were Sergt. Finch of the Royal Marines — a Zeebrugge V. C. — and Pte. Kydd, late 2nd Black Watch, who was in the Queen's final 41 years ago.

On Monday evening the markers, dissatisfied with their terms of service, threatened an ominous move, as a result of which the bolts were ordered to be removed from all rifles in the camp.

Three ties were shot off at Bisley on Monday. The first was the "Daily Telegraph Cup," three rounds being fired at 600 yards. The weather again was bad, fine rain falling, and a wind of varying strength blew across the ranges. The tie resulted: — Corpl. Cope, South Africa, 12; Lieut. Smelder, Canada, 11; Mr. Arkill, City Rifle Club, 8.

The second tie was fired at 500 yards for the "Graphic" Cup. Lieut. Vincent, Toronto, Cpl. Noyon, Guernsey, and Pte. Ford, 5th City of London, again tied, all scoring 13. Each fired another round. Vincent made a bull, the other two inners, so Vincent was declared the winner.

The tie for the "Daily Graphic Cup," fired at 200 yards, was won by Captain Martin, Canada, 14, Capt. Mackenzie, 8th Black Watch, scoring 11.

A ZEEBRUGGE V.C.

Results of Alexandria and Prince of Wales Competitions.

Shooting for the Alexandra prize, was Sergt. Finch of the Royal Marines, a Zeebrugge V.C. The best score at 200 was made by Capt. Stewart, R.E., who registered eight consecutive bulls, the last two shots being inners. There were several scores of 46, and Pte. Kydd, late 2nd Black Watch, who was in the Queen's final 41 years ago, made 40. The competition was won by Air Mechanic Bell, Australia, with 79 points.

The Prince of Wales' prize was won by C.J. Smith, N.R.A. School of Musketry, with 93.

KING'S PRIZE COMPETITION IN PERIL.

It was reported late on Monday night that the markers intend to make a determined effort to prevent shooting for the King's Prize on Tuesday. It has been known for the past week that the markers were dissatisfied with the conditions of pay and the hours of work. A serious move is threatened by the men and steps have been taken should an outbreak occur. The N.R.A., fearing this might happen, on Monday night ordered the bolts to be removed from all rifles in the camp.

"PAL" MOORE.

Score of Pressmen Witness Boxer In Training.

Thursday evening's meeting of the world's fly-weight champion (Jimmy Wilde) and the American bantam, ("Pal" Moore) is a distinctly "popular" event. The rush for seats has been tremendous.

About a score of Pressmen, at the invitation of Mr. C. B. Cochran, journeyed out to Stanmore Middlesex, the other day, to watch the American at work, and found him all ready to commence.

"Pal" is undoubtedly strong and can stay. At times he seemed inclined to crouch, but when he stood upright he appeared to possess a most useful reach. He is just the height a bantamweight should be—5ft 5½in. Perhaps he was not all out for he did not appear to punch as accurately as he might do, and at times left himself rather too open, but the book indicates that, no matter what opinions was formed of his last meeting with Jimmy Wilde at the Albert Hall, he is a really good man, his record including a referee's decision against Johnny Ertle over fifteen rounds.

A Memorable Battle.

A more accurate line to his form is gained through his meeting with Joe Lynch, who met Jimmy Wilde in a memorable battle at the National Sporting Club not long ago. Moore and Lynch have met three times. On the first occasion they boxed a ten-round no-decision bout in New York; at Providence (Rhode Island) Lynch was given a referee's decision after twelve hard-fought rounds, while at the same place three weeks later Moore won the decision, also after twelve rounds. On returning to New York after obtaining the decision over Wilde last December Moore had no idea of remaining idle, and from the last day of January to the first day of June took part in fourteen contests, in some cases travelling thousands of miles within a few days to fulfil engagements.

Jimmy Wilde is also vigorously in training.

"B" COY. 52nd WELSH REGT. (95) v. T.M.B. XI. (44).

At Duisdorf on Saturday, for "B" Coy., L/Cpl. Jones batted well for 30. The T.M.B. XI. failed in the task allotted them, this to a great extent being due to the very excellent fielding of the home side, no fewer than five batsmen being dismissed by catches. The 52nd Battalion team must look to its laurels now that "B" Coy. has entered the arena.

CROSS-COUNTRY RUN.

In connection with the forthcoming sports of the 32nd. Battalion Machine Gun Corps, a very successful cross-country run was held on Saturday. There were about 72 entrants. The course was through Vilich and Geislar, along the banks of the river Sieg, across country to the outskirts of Schwarz Rheindorf, finishing at Vilich. Pte. Buck was first home, and was followed at a distance of about 250 yards by Sgt. Cahill. Pte. Sear was third. 2/Lt. J. S. Lee, who was responsible for the organization of the event, acted as time-keeper and starter.

APPLEGARTHS AT 40.

The 1st Signal Squadron R.E., were unable to finish their sports on July 5th, so the three remaining events were decided on Sunday at Quadrath. The veterans race was a very keen one, S.S.M. W.J. Lambourne, (scratch), winning, but only by a narrow margin, Q.M.S. Murphy, and Dvr. Mayor being second and third respectively. It is a pity that the times were not booked, as they were evidently thinking of the new leave train rate. Spr. Babbage won the throwing of the cricket ball, and in the 880 yards Spr. Gaffney was the winner, with Spr. Babbage and Spr. Howard second and third respectively. Lt. C. R. Jennings and Lt. J. N. Dart, were the judges.

The spectacle of a real highland athletic gathering, in which several thousand young Scotsmen belonging to the kilted units of the 2nd Highland Brigade Group took part, was witnessed at the Germania Sport Club grounds, Düren, on Friday. A lengthy programme of events contested by keen competitors for valuable prizes, brought out the best qualities and powers of the young sportsmen. In the evening "The Merry Muffins" concert party gave an open-air performance under pleasant auspices, while a successful torchlight procession brought to a close an enjoyable and interesting day of sport. Side-shows were run in connection with the sports, Captain Loewe, education officer of the 51st Gordons, was responsible for the management, and an energetic staff rendered him able assistance.

NEWMARKET MEETING.

Selections for July and Bury Handicaps.

The second July meeting, at Newmarket opened yesterday. To-day the July Handicap and to-morrow the Bury Handicap will be run. For these races "Jerry M." telegraphs the following selections from England:—

July Handicap . . . . Vain Dream.
Bury Handicap. . . . Love Note.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

At the Gurzenich.

Last Sunday I went to a concert organised by the new Kölner Koncertdirektion—the first concert in fact that they have given—at the Gurzenich Saal. An excellent Programme was arranged. Fräulein Bertha Grimm-Mittelmann, of the Cologne Opera, with her pleasing contralto voice, was heard to great advantage in five delightful songs by Weber. Her rendering of "Der kleine Fritz an seine jungen Freunde" was particularly charming. Arnold Földesy, a brilliant celloist, rendered the Sonata of Locatelli with great delicacy, but I was more happily impressed by "The Dance of the Fairies" a whimsical little item by Popper.

Backhaus Again.

Backhaus, one of Germany's greatest living pianists, was also there; I need not say more. His rendering of Beethoven's "Appassionata" certainly deserved more applause. The execution of the three Chopin pieces which terminated the performance showed the celebrated pianist at his best, the Nocturne in "D" major being especially fine. The Kölner Koncertdirektion are to be congratulated on the success of their first concert.

"Fledermaus" at Düren.

There was, I hear, a very successful performance of the opera "Fledermaus" at the Stadt-Theatre, Düren, last Saturday evening attended by many of our troops. Frau Rosalind von Eisenstein who was more sinned against than sinning, was admirably played by Fräulein Beike, whilst that of the somewhat frisky husband who finished by dining too well was realistically portrayed by Herr Nicolini. Herr Poerner as the pusnful lover who was slightly addicted to drink was almost true to life, whilst Fräulein Wolf gave an excellent performance as a chambermaid, of the type often heard about but very seldom found, who flirts artistically with her master.

Touring Concert Parties.

In connection with the forthcoming arrangement for Army concert parties to go on tour, a correspondent sends along this scheme:—Representatives from the Army Amusements Office should visit all the concert parties on tour and place them in a category, according to their merits. The various halls would also be visited and classified according to their conveniences and holding capacity. The question of remuneration would be worked out as follows:—If an "A" Concert party visited an "A" hall, they would claim the usal 50% of the takings, but if an "A" party visited a "B" hall 70% would be their share of the takings. Thus a table would be arranged as follows:—

PARTY	HALL	TAKINGS
"A" visits	"A" takes	50%
"A" visits	"B" takes	60%
"A" visits	"C" takes	70%
"B" visits	"A" takes	40%
"B" visits	"B" takes	50%
"B" visits	"C" takes	60%
"C" visits	"A" takes	30%
"C" visits	"B" takes	40%
"C" visits	"C" takes	50%

"The Title" at Cologne.

The wonderful ability of Arnold Bennett to weave fascinating stories out of every possible kind of material is undiminished in his latest three act comedy, "The Title." A certain Mr. Culvert, who, "in the fourth year of the greatest war that the world" . . . etcetera, etcetera, is engaged in the accounts department at Whitehall. The whole point of the play gravitates round the question as to whether this individual shall or shall not accept a baronetcy that is offered to him. He and his son and his daughter have an extraordinary contempt for such honours and are all in favour of refusing the title. The wife, however, has the greatest ambition to hear herself addressed as "My Lady." There are other side issues in the plot and, of course, a "love interest." The action is swift and continuous and is crammed full of breezy and clever dialogue. In their treatment of the play at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne, on Monday, members of the British Rhine Army Dramatic Company added to their already excellent reputation.

People in the Caste.

Some misgiving was felt by those familiar with the Company's previous work on account of the absence from the caste of Lieut. S. E. Percy, R.L.I., who has hitherto carried the whole business along. Notwithstanding his absence, however, the performance "went" splendidly. Miss Inez Bensusan acted with brilliance the part of Mrs. Culver, the charming, strong-willed and persuasive wife of the prospective baronet. She failed not in the slightest degree to make the very most of a difficult character, and the result was generally acknowledged to be thoroughly accomplished. Mr. Culver was given a successful interpretation by Lieut. J. H. Hope, R.E. He presented in an ideal manner the affectionate and tolerant husband and father. Lieut D. A. Onions, 2nd Monmouth, jumped in one bound from a comparatively small part in a previous production to the important role of John Culver. The character suits him admirably and there is little doubt that he will be given prominence in subsequent castes. Miss Shirley King made a particularly charming Hildegarde Culver, and Lt. H. L. Farnell, Bedford Regt, was a satisfactory Tranto. Miss Gabrielle Paul, as Miss Stackey, Capt. Gordon Blight, Berks Rgt., as Samson Straight, and Lt. S. H. Mocatto, West Yorks, as a manservant, completed a caste of all-round exellence.

In Few Words.

The Rhine Army Choral Society, and Alfred Barker, the well-known violinist, will give a private performance before the C.-in-C. on Thursday.

Writers as well as actors are being "discovered" by the Dramatic Company. A one-act play written by an officer in the Rhine Army will shortly be produced at Cologne.

The first night of the new Army Cinema, the Modernes Theatre, Cologne, provided capital and well-scened pictures and enjoyable orchestral music for a full house.

Divisional concert parties in all parts of Rhineland have started the new touring scheme. After three weeks in its own area, each party will commence an eleven weeks tour.

At the conclusion of the performance of "The Title" on Monday, Lieut. S. E. Percy, the producer, thanked the audience for its generous and sympathetic reception of the play.

It appears that the cinema performance at the Leave Club on Fridays is not continuous.

Echoes from Rhineland.

Peace Celebrations.

The celebration of peace on Monday was not altogether confined to Paris. The many French soldiers who are at present in Rhineland in connection with various duties could not resist "enthusing" a little on their own account. In Cologne, although no official programme had been drawn up, there were many scenes of jollification. Various messes were amalgamated for impromptu peace dinners and later in the evening a sufficient number of our Allies foregathered to form an imposing procession. Headed by a soldier carrying a large French flag, the main streets were paraded, the walls echoing and re-echoing with the strains, lustily sung, of French patriotic songs.

The Victory Spirit.

In other large Rhineland towns where there are French troops in any considerable numbers, similar scenes were witnessed. Everywhere there was the same atmosphere of rejoicing, prompted by the knowledge that at last the great war has actually joined the category of things that have happened. Speeches were not infrequent in all places where the French were gathered together and they seem to have been characterized by dignity and a spirit of thankfulness at the conclusion of hostilities and not indicative of feelings of animosity.

A French Tattoo.

The ratification of the peace and the French national fete day were so nearly coincident as naturally to cause the dual rejoicings to be amalgamated. One of the most effective displays took place at Bad Kreuznach, in the form of a military tattoo, hundreds of paper lanterns being substituted for torches. A "La Marseillaise" at the finish roused the French troops to a frenzy of enthusiasm. Although the function was marred by heavy rain, almost the entire population of the town cheerfully got wet through. Is Cologne ever going to have a British torchlight tattoo?

German Commemorative Stamp.

Souvenir-hunters will be interested in the German National Assembly Commemorative Stamp, of which only a limited number of copies have been printed and very few samples have found their way to the Rhineland. The colouring is red on a white background. Scrolls above and below carry the words "Deutsche Nationalversammlung." Between is a very cubist representation of a tree with its branches lopped off, but with new sprouts showing. The explanation is simple. The red colouring is the apotheosis of the Social Democratic Majority, the tree is the old German oak, the lopped-off branches symbolize the lost provinces, while the new sprouts suggest the hope of future developments on new lines from Germany's persistent strength and vitality. The style of art is reminiscent of the cubist orgy, which, with other phenomena, heralded the birth of the German Republic.

Letters by Aeroplane.

The gingering up of the postal services brought about by aeroplane is borne out by the experience of Pte. S. Hyom, 12th Loyal North Lancs Regt. who, having completed a course at the Army College at Cologne, returned to his unit. Not knowing this, his parents addressed a letter to him at the college, the postmark on the envelope bearing the name of a district office in Liverpool and dated 9.45 a.m. July 2nd 1919. That letter was returned home marked "Gone back to unit," and was delivered at his home on the afternoon of the same day. The letter, unopened was put in another envelope and reposted addressed to the unit, this second envelope bearing date stamp of the same district in Liverpool, dated 7 p.m. July 2nd, 1919. This seems incredible, but the envelopes bear testimony to the accuracy of this feat. It can only be attributable to our splendid aeroplane postal service.

The Language Difficulty.

Amusing situations produced by the language difficulty are endless. These are not infrequently the outcome of a self-possessed opinion of knowledge of the German language. Here is a case in point. A chum had just made a purchase, and was experiencing great difficulty in making the German understand that he wanted his change. "Leave it to me," said he, who could "Sprechen nur ruhig Deutsch." "Guten Tag," spoke up our interpreter. "Guten Tag," answered the German. "Sprechen Sie Deutsch," continued the soldier. "Yah, Yah," said the shopkeeper, whereupon the self-appointed interpreter burst forth: "Why the devil don't you give my mate his blinking change." Collapse of friend and shopkeeper.

Victory Bond Sweep.

The Lancashire Divisional Artillery have held a successful Victory Bond Sweep. Nearly 20,000 marks were subscribed, tickets being 10 marks each. The prizes were £50 and £5 Victory Bonds and several officers who won these presented them to the members of their battery who purchased the largest number of tickets. This induced one driver to buy 24 and another 21 tickets. Each of them obtained a prize. Encouraged by the success of this sweep, it is now hoped to get up similar periodical sweeps for War Savings Certificates.

The Frau's Fruit Store.

Anyone who takes the trouble to explore the average German household will be struck by the large stocks of bottled fruit, etc. which are to be seen. This preserving is in full swing just now in preparation for the coming of winter. It is a very simple operation because of the simplicity of the vessels which are employed. Surprisingly large quantities of sugar are used in the operation. In one case which came under the writer's notice anything from 30 to 40 pounds of sugar were employed. Yet at home the greatest difficulty is experienced in obtaining sugar.

Minor Comparisons.

We see evidence of sound ideas all around us. Bridges were built for use, if not as objects of art, and everywhere practicability seems to claim priority. There is an effort at production of art on the exteriors of houses, but inside one is inclined to criticize things here and there, joyless stoves for instance, which certainly yield all the heat, but at the expense of that welcome cheeriness beloved by the Englishman. And who of us can appreciate the ungainly appearance of the door-handles? At home the unobtrusive knob looks far preferable, but here neatness is a secondary matter. Can we open the usual English door with the little finger? We have only to observe the frauen carrying trays from the room to grasp the idea. The elbow both opens and pulls.

Rhineland Light Railways.

The trucks used for carrying stones on the narrow gauge railways of Rhineland are very ingeniously constructed. The sides of these trucks, which are built of steel, are fitted with two doors hinged at the top and fastened at the bottom by means of a strong steel bar. The floors, instead of being level, are built on a "shed" principle, that is, like the roof of a house, so that when the door bar is released the stones force open the doors and are automatically unloaded. Obviously the saving in time and labour is considerable.

Echo Answers.

In this column, where a comparison exists, it is very often to the disadvantage of the British. This is a good fault. It shows that we observe and appreciate what is better done here, with some idea of its application in our own country. But we must not slip into the notion that we are hopelessly behind at home. To pick the worst of a few faults, some of the public conveniences would disgrace a much smaller town than Cologne. Dark, evil-smelling, and inadequate, they have no pretension to sanitation. Lesser towns in England have vastly better places underground. If cleanliness counts at all, the Germans are not many rungs up the golden ladder. Again, they fail to make the best of their fine river. If the population of Cologne were supplanted by the British, the municipal heads would provide seats along the stretches of embankment at either end of the town. We should prefer the river breeze and open view to the pent- up heat of the Hohestrasse cabarets.

Unsightly Advertisement Pillars.

Nor do we decorate our show towns with advertisement pillars, veritable eyesores in otherwise pleasant spots. It is doubtful if any great town at home would tolerate in such a prominent position the batch of hovels which lie between the Rhein Hotel and the Suspension Bridge. Fronting the river, the very eye of Cologne, these dens retain the vice and dilapidation of years without acquiring that aspect of mellow veneration which age often bestows. True, such habitations are a feature of every shipping town, but Cologne has enough to be ashamed of behind the Hansa wharf and museum, without polluting the fine river front. It is admitted the Rhine bridges are structures to be proud of, but why the civilians suffer the nuisance of paying a paltry toll at each crossing is beyond us. British towns would buy the bridges and throw them open, paying for upkeep out of the rates.

The German Navy.

Can some historian say when the German navy came into existence? The query is prompted by the sight of a large model which we saw in a shipbroker's office. It was a three masted ship with a very high poop, square rigged except for the mainsail on the mizzen, and carried a broadside of twenty one guns, twelve of which were on the main deck, six on the upper deck and three on the poop deck. The model was undoubtedly of the Armada period but it carried the Prussian ensign. Did Prussia possess a navy in the "spacious days of good Queen Bess"?

Army Phrases.

Much has been written about the catch-phrases brought into common use by the war. Many are in daily use by everybody. We speak of a man being "unlucky" or having "some hope", an acquaintance of having "Gone West" and England is "Blighty." These phrases and many others live, but it is interesting to note how many have already fallen into disuse. It was natural that with the finish of fighting such sayings as "Fritz is up" and "Where did that one go? were "washed out" but why has "got the wind up" declined in popularity?

Dropped out.

The most conspicuous example, however, of a once common saying having outlived its usefulness is "before you came up." It is seldom heard now, but there was a time when it was in every soldier's mouth. Nothing has taken its place. By the way it is older than is generally supposed. Shakespeare uses it in "Julius Caesar." Thus Cassius in his quarrel with Brutus says:—"I am a soldier, I, older in practice, abler than yourself." What is that, but a poetical rendering of Tommy's expression "before you came up"?

A Premium on Discomfort.

Not long ago we referred to the system of seating in operation at a Brühl cinema, and commended it as worthy of adoption. There is one matter, however, in which we think the German has something to learn from the English trade and that is to place the better seats at the back of the hall. The reason is obvious. A better view of the pictures is obtainable and the patron is spared the flicker and glare so noticeable from the front seats. In Germany, however, the method is to arrange the higher priced seats at the front and further to increase the discomfort of their patrons by having their screen about eight feet above the ordinary level which leaves their best customers with a stiff neck and a bad headache after each performance.

Land-Lovers.

A thing which does not escape notice is the interest Germans take in and the importance they attach to their land. There is cultivation on all sides and an entire absence of waste land such as one sees in many parts of England. At Stürzelburg for several miles around, every field is showing signs of an excellent harvest, many local farmers having already obtained a good crop of hay. The spare ground immediately in and around the village is devoted to the cultivation of table vegetables and every inch is put to good purpose, an example which has been forced upon us at home by the war.

Lesser Echoes.

It is suggested that a rifle meeting on Bisley lines be arranged for the Army of the Rhine.

Walnuts have displaced cherries on the hawkers' barrows in Cologne.

Yesterday morning the Cathedral spires were invisible from the ground owing to thick mist.

Repatriated German prisoners are now returning to Cologne in large numbers from France and Belgium prior to moving to their homes.

To-night the draw for the Leave Club Victory Loan "Sweep" takes place. The lucky winner ought to be pleased with himself.

Boots and shoes with "patchwork" wooden soles are still being made in large quantities in Germany.

Whether or not they were encouraged by our recent note, the authorities in Cologne are levelling the roads and the tram lines to the satisfaction of motor cyclists.

Discussing the subject of Prohibition, an American officer in the club yesterday was heard to remark, "A bone-dry nation means a life full of sorrows without a chance to drown them."

The streets of Cologne resounded with the air of the "Marseillaise" sung both by French and British soldiers on the night of France's Peace Day.

A correspondent asks who was the officer who mistook a "one pip" naval officer of the Rhine Flotilla, travelling on the Cologne-Boulogne express, for a car attendant and asked the said naval officer to make his bed up for him?

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 Marks is awarded to Pte. G. V. Stilliard (Oxfords) Train Headquarters, Eastern Division.

FOR OFFENCES IN WAR-TIME.

SERIOUS CHARGES OF GROSS CRUELTY TO SICK AND WOUNDED FELLOW-PRISONERS OF WAR.

DISASTER TO BRITISH AIRSHIP.

HORRORS OF KUT.

REVOLTING CONDUCT ALLEGED AGAINST "BRITISH" M.O.

An amazing story of the revolting conditions suffered by British prisoners of war in Turkish hands after the fall of Kut was told at a Court-martial held at Middlesex Guildhall on Tuesday during the hearing of serious charges against a warrant officer, a Eurasian named Williat Pratal, who was British medical officer at the hospital at Bagtsche.

In all there were nineteen charges, which alleged:—that accused failed to admit to hospital certain British prisoners of war or took any steps to alleviate their condition; that he refused the request of a dying man for medicine, declaring that advantage was being taken of the goodwill of the Turks; that he did not visit the camps of British prisoners as was his duty; that he neglected to take proper steps to ensure that British dead were properly respected and that he did not use his best endeavours to ensure proper accommodation or medical aid or to administer medical comforts supplied on the occasion of the removal of the hospital at which he was medical officer.

Accused pleaded "not guilty" to all charges.

The President of the Court-Martial is Colonel McSteele of the Coldstream Guards, Captain Eastwood is Prosecutor and Mr. Sutherland Graeme Judge-Advocate. Accused is represented by Mr. Bartlett.

Captain Eastwood in opening the case said that the facts from which the charges arose constituted in all probability some of the greatest tragedies of the whole war, concerning, as they did, the fate of British prisoners in the hands of the Turks.

Accused was at Kut as medical officer to a Battery of artillery. After the fall of Kut he joined a party of prisoners at Baghdad and eventually went to Bagtsche. He was the only medical officer at the hospital who could speak English.

The men were in a most terrible state. They had marched across the desert and were absolutely worn out and sick. In one case a man named Penny who was suffering from dysentry and malaria was taken to hospital by two soldiers. Accused refused him admittance and sent Penny back to camp, where he died next morning.

Another man, Gunner Neve, who was too ill to walk, was ordered back to camp by accused, who called him a "white livered—" and literally kicked him out of his way. Neve was taken back to camp and died there.

Other similar cases were instanced and Captain Eastwood said he was going to ask the Court to infer that accused thought the British Army was beaten and that he would get a feather in his cap and ingratiate himself with the Turks.

Another case mentioned was where bodies were buried so near the surface that they were dug up by jackals and gnawed.

No evidence was called and the case was adjourned, at the request of accused, to August 6th.

HIDEOUS CHARGE.

ALLEGED GROSS CRUELTY TO FELLOW PRISONERS OF WAR.

A series of very serious charges, happily very rare, engaged the attention of a Court Martial at Sutton (Surrey) yesterday. The accused was Private Percival Frome Inder of the 8th Reserve (Cyclist) Battalion, The Essex Regiment. He was charged with being guilty of disgraceful conduct of a cruel kind to sick and wounded fellow prisoners of war at Bouchain and Queant Prisoners of War Camps and with using insubordinate language to a superior officer.

Private Evans, Durham Light Infantry, deposed that when he was ill and in bed at Queant the accused, who acted as interpreter, entered the room with a German, and after pulling the blankets from his bed seized him by the neck and punched him on the mouth. Later he saw the two drinking together.

Private Derby, Shropshire Light Infantry, said that while suffering from wounds and confined in a cell at Bouchain in 1917, accused entered, struck him in the face and kicked him in the stomach. He suffered great pain for fourteen months and afterwards underwent an operation at the hospital. He attributed his sufferings to the kick.

Sergeant Blundell said that in consequence of complaints that food intended for prisoners had been sent elsewhere, he spoke to accused who replied "Shut up! Who do you think you are? You're a prisoner the same as myself. Rank doesn't count here."

Accused denied the charged brought against him and attributed the allegations to prejudice because he could speak German.

For the defence Sergeant Boon said he had never seen anyone ilitreated by the accused. The decision of the court will be promulgated in due course.

LUSITANIA CLAIMS.

Federal Judge Mayer has issued at New York an important final decree regarding numerous claims lodged against the Cunard Steamship Company arising out of the loss of the Lusitania in May 1915.

The decree grants complete immunity to the Cunard Company in respect of claims for damages and states that the claimants must look to Germany for reimbursement.

AIRSHIP DISASTER.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING AND LOST WITH ALL HANDS.

It is feared that disaster has overtaken the British airship N. S. 11, which left the air station at Pulham, Norfolk, on Monday night. Residents on the coast saw a tremendous flare in the sky shortly after midnight and watched a blazing mass drop into the sea. A portion of wreckage, believed to be from the airship, was washed up at Sheringham on Tuesday morning. There is no news as to the fate of the crew, which consisted of five or six men.

When news of the disaster reached Cromer, an exhaustive search was organised but no information is at present available. Many people in the neighbourhood heard the airship about midnight. Abour an hour later there was a terrible thunderstorm at the height of which a big explosion occured which was heard for miles around. Ther the mass of flame appeared in the sky and the quick descent of the burning object was plainly observed.

The Sheringham lifeboat put off immediately in addition to two motor boats. They scoured the sea for hours but did not find anything. The one piece of wreckage washed ashore consists of some strips of aluminium and the burnt remains of an airman's rubber suit.

At the Air Ministry the theory is put forward that while the vessel was engaged in mine locating in the early morning she was struck by lightning during the heavy storm. An official statement will shortly be issued.

HUNGARY.

ALLIES PROTEST AGAINST THEFT OF SECURITIES.

Authoritative information has been received in Paris that the Communist Government at Buda-Pesth has ordered all banks in Hungarian territory to hand over to it bonds and other securities held on deposit and it appears that steps have been taken to carry out this order.

The Allied Powers have despatched to Bela Kun a sharp protest declaring that they consider as aggravated theft the seizure of bonds and securities belonging to their nationals and warning the Communist Government that they will regard as null and void all measures of confiscation and will hold the Government responsible for all losses resulting therefrom.

It is rumoured that General Franchet d'Esperey, the Allies representative at Buda-Pesth, has requested the Hungarian Government immediately to resign and make place for a Government freely elected by the people. In the event of refusal military action is threatened.

A Vienna telegram says that operations are to be begun directly by Roumanian and French troops under General d'Esperey. French Colonial troops passed through Vienna on Sunday.

DENIKIN'S CAPTURES.

TWELVE MONTH'S OPERATIONS IN RUSSIA.

Mr. Churchill announced that the report of the Chief of the British Mission in Russia records that in the last twelve months Denikin had captured 200,000 prisoners, the majority of whom are now fighting for Denikin or working loyally with him as free men.

The only prisoners who were ever shot were persons against whom criminal acts had been proved and then only after fair trial by court martial. These were usually Chinese, Letts or other mercenaries.

The Government, said the War Secretary, is supporting Denikin by every means in its power short of the despatch of large units from Great Britain.

THE EX-KAISER.

HOLLAND UNABLE TO REFUSE EXTRADITION.

Dutch newspapers are still discussing the question of the ex-Kaiser's extradition. "Het Volk" holds that it is a political and not a legal question, as a prolonged stay of the ex-Kaiser in Holland will certainly have political consequences at some early date, and Holland will then be held responsible if Great Britain insists on the extradition. A refusal by Holland, which is only a weak opponent, could never be final.

The Deutsche "Allgemeine Zeitung" claims to learn from Dutch official circles that in the course of semi-official negotiations with the Allied powers the Dutch Government has signified its willingness for proceedings in connection with the extradition to take place at the Hague.

CANTEEN PROFITS.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Hogge asked the Secretary for War if he could make a statement regarding the control and distribution of canteen profits.

Mr. Forster said he hoped to be able to make an announcement at an early date and agreed that the question be repeated on Thursday.

V. C.'s LIBEL ACTION.

HEAVY CLAIM AGAINST SCOTTISH PAPER.

In the Court of Session at Edinburgh the trial was commenced of an action brought by Colonel William Gordon, a Boer War V. C., against Messrs. John Leng and Co. proprietors of "The People's Journal."

Colonel Gordon who is claiming £5,000 damages for alleged slander, said he had held a commission in the Gordon Highlanders for thirty-three years and won the Victoria Cross in South Africa. He alleges that in an article which appeared in December 1917, purporting to give an account of the battle of Mons, the statement was made that he said to his men "It's no use fighting any longer" and that it would be better to lay down arms and surrender.

The Colonel said that the article represented him as being responsible for the surrender and as having failed in his duty as an officer. In describing what actually occurred during the operations in question, Colonel Gordon described how on an occasion during the retreat from Mons firing unexpectedly broke out in the darkness. He gave the order to fix bayonets and said, "We will fight to the death or get through". He did not receive an immediate response.

In reply to a question by Counsel why that was so, Colonel Gordon said that an officer shouted "I order you to disobey the Colonel's orders. I call this bloody massacre. It is an unnecessary waste of life."

Counsel: "Who was this officer?"

Colonel Gordon: Lieut.-Colonel Neish, who at that time was subordinate

The Judge was asked to disallow the last question as it was not in order for Colonel Gordon to reflect on the military character of a fellow-officer who had no opportunity of defending himself.

The Judge (Lord Ormidale) however allowed the question and answer to stand.

A few minutes afterwards he saw men of the column with their hands up. Success would have been a certainty if his brave and gallant men had not been taken out of his hands. His objection to the article was that it put in his mouth an order given by a fellow-officer who was one of the proprietors of the paper.

Captain A. D. Stewart said Colonel Gordon was a very brave man and was dead against surrender. If Colonel Neish had kept his mouth shut the column under Colonel Gordon would have broken through and got back.

The case stands adjourned.

HUNDREDS OF VESSELS SUNK BY HURRICANE.

At least eighty-seven and probably many more lives were lost as the result of a terrific hurricane which swept over the port of Valparaiso on Saturday and Sunday last. Fourteen large medium sized vessels were sunk and upwards of a hundred small craft destroyed. Enormous quantities of merchandise were lost. The damage to property alone is estimated at 200 million pesos (about forty million sterling).

The German steamers, including the Gotha and Westfalen, which were interned there sank and ten sailors were drowned.

PERSHING IN LONDON.

Preparations for Saturday's great pageant are practically complete. Kensington Gardens are closed to the public until Monday next on account of its being used as a camp by the troops taking part in the Victory march. Accommodation along the line of route will be taxed to the utmost. Generous provision has been made for discharged and wounded soldiers and sailors and war widows. Three thousand windows along the route have been given to St Dunstan's Hospital for sale on behalf of its funds.

The most impressive moment in the march will be in Whitehall where the procession will divide on either side of the great memorial to the glorious dead which has been specially designed. The march will start an hour earlier than has been announced in order to finish before the children's festivities in the afternoon.

PARIS EN FÊTE.

The peace celebrations at Paris continue night and day amid scenes of unparalleled enthusiasm The spirit of the occasion is reflected in all the newspapers, including even those possessing extreme socialist and pacifist views. The entire press dwells on the splendid appearance of the British troops with their regimental colours. The "Figaro" describes our contingent as one great outburst of colour, music, youth and strength; the health and vigour of a simple, powerful and cordial nation.

Throughout the afternoons and evenings the boulevards were crowded, illuminated and fire-work displays were given and huge bonfires in Montmartre, the Bastille Column and Place de la Nation. Free performances were given at the theatres. At the Opera Comique M. Clemenceau was present at the singing of a triumphial hymn founded on sentences from his speeches.

BIRKENFELD PROCLAIMS A REPUBLIC.

The principality of Birkenfeld in the extreme South of the Rhineland has renounced its allegiance to the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg in North Rhineland. It has proclaimed itself as a separate republic and set up a Government.

Oldenburg, which has thus lost 192 square miles of territory which it acquired by the Congress of Vienna, has a total area smaller than Devonshire. It has nevertheless given new dynasties to Denmark, Russia and Sweden.

Over one thousand sheep and many hundreds of cattle have been drowned by floods in the Southern part of Buenos Ayres province.

BLOWN MAST HIGH.

APPALLING EXPLOSION ON OIL SHIP.

A frightful disaster occured on Tuesday afternoon on board the oil ship Roseleaf in Cardiff dry dock, where the ship was undergoing repairs. Work was proceeding as usual when suddenly there was a terrific explosion and debris was sent flying in all directions. For a long time it was very difficult to get near the scene of the diaster. It was soon established however that ats least twelve men had perished and some of the bodies have been recovered in a terribly mutilated condition. All the victims are natives of Cardiff. The severely injured number more than a dozen.

The explosion took place in the forepeak, where a gang of rivetters was at work. Several men were hurled into the air higher than the mast head, others were blown from the deck clean over the shed at the dockside while another man was blown up from the hold into the dry dock.

The cause of the explosion is a mystery but the theory is advanced that gas pumping operations being in progress a spark from one of the rivetting forges ignited the gas escaping from underneath one of the partitions. Unfortunately the only persons who could throw light on it are among the dead.

Some daring rescue work was done. Parties of volunteers descended into the hold despite the suffocating fumes and a crane was employed to hoist some of the bodies.

An eyewitness says the blast of the explosion was simply terrible, eimbs, bodies, tools and material being scattered about everywhere.

The Roseleaf is an oil-tank three-masted screw steamer of about 6,000 tons, built in 1916 and registered at the Port of London.

LABOUR CORPS.

COURT-MARTIAL IN BATCHES OF FORTY.

The Court-martial was opened at Sutton yesterday of men charged as the result of trouble at Belmont Labour Corps Camp on June 22nd in connection with which 360 men were placed under arrest.

The men were dealt with in batches of forty, the charge being one of insubordination and mutiny and of not using the utmost endeavours to suppress mutiny. The evidence showed that the men were ordered to parade at 6.30, but refused. They were then given until 7.25 to make up their minds. Officers and non-commissioned officers went through the camp and met with some success. The recalcitrants were then rounded up by detachments of the Welsh and Cheshire Regiments and marched off.

For the defence it was claimed that some of the accused were not men who refused to parade that some were not in camp on the day in question and that others did not hear the call to parade.

The court was adjourned.

UNEMPLOYED SCOUNDREL.

Benjamin Waite, 27, of Rose Cottage, South-street, Greenwich, was charged before Mr. Hay Halkett at Greenwich with obtaining 35s, moneys of the Ministry of Labour, by false pretences.

Police-constable 921 R. said he arrested prisoner that morning in Adolphus-street. Deptford, where he was on a ladder cleaning windows. He said, "You drew 35s from the Labour Exchange yesterday, and signed the out-of-work book this morning. Now you're working." Prisoner replied. "I'm very sorry. I'm doing a little bit." He had 42s on him ond a book containing names of people whose windows he cleaned.

Prisoner: I can't keep a wife and two children on the out-of-work pay.

Mr. Hay Halkett: The book shows that you earned 15s yesterday.

Detective Horrell said prisoner had been following this practice since March last, and said he had earned about £2 10s a week, and was keeping the out-of-work donation in case he should fall out of employment.

Mr. Hay Halkett said this was a gross fraud on the community, and prisoner was cutting at the root of the principle which underlay the out-of-work donation. He had been consistently working for many weeks while drawing the donation. He did not know how many thousands were doing the same. He committed prisoner for three months' hard labour.

"DEMOBBING" THE AQUITANIA.

The Cunard leviathan "Aquitania" is on her last trip prior to being "demobilized."

In the first days of August, 1914, the "Aquitania," in less than a week, was transformed into an armed merchant cruiser. About 3,000 men were employed in stripping off her luxurious passenger accommodation, and over 1,200 wagons of fittings were taken into store.

Subsequently she made several voyages to the Dardanelles, carrying in all some 60,000 troops. Later as a hospital ship she carried some 25,000 wounded soldiers.

Last year, refitted as a transport, she brought over 60,000 American troops. Since the Armistice she has carried back 50,000 American and Canadian soldiers.

DEFINITION OF "DRUNK."

In a case at the London Sessions yesterday a sergeant, giving evidence against a soldier, said that in the Army a man was either drunk or sober, and in a military sense the prisoner was not drunk.

Counsel.—What was the prisoner's condition in a civilian sense?

The witness.—I should say he was highly intoxicated.

Raisuli, the famous Moroccan insurgent has attacked the Spanish troops with great violence between Larache and Tetonan. The Spanish troops have suffered considerably.

THE BLOCKADE.

FACTS WHICH REFUTE GERMAN COMPLAINTS.

The German Government wireless message of July 13th marks the lifting of the blockade by one of its usual tirades against the "whole ghastly inexcusable policy of our opponents in the use of this fearful weapon," It gives extracts from the "Localanzeiger" and concludes "the other newspapers, while making no comments, yet show by their headlines the bitterness caused by a wrong so long endured."

It is well to recall the facts about the Blockade. It was not a voluntary measure on the part of the Allies but was an act of reprisal after the Germans had definitely announced their determination to embark on the policy of piracy which they believed would force the British Empire — receiving in ships four out of every five of its loaves — to sue for peace. They avowedly set out to starve Britain, which did not then institute an economic blockade.

On the contrary Germany continued to receive vast quantities of foods through neighbouring neutral states. But in the Autumn of 1914 the indiscriminate sinking of our merchant ships was begun and early in the following February it was officially announced from Berlin that the "waters around Britain and Ireland, including the entire English Channel" were a "military area" and warning was given out that after February 7th "every hostile merchant ship in these waters will be destroyed even if it is not always possible to avoid the resulting dangers which threaten crews and passengers."

By this declaration Great Britain was brought face to face with starvation and the whole German nation exulted at the grim prospect. It was Germany's descent to common piracy, directed finally against all ships both Allied and neutral and carried out with ruthless brutality, that led to the blockade by the British Fleet and it was not until the following month that our measures of reprisal were announced. Germany intensified her submarine campaign and it proved her undoing. The British Navy beat the submarines.

Germany ignores all the facts and endeavours to trade on sentiment by talking of the "fearful weapon" and of "wrong so long endured."

LONDON PREPARING.

ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETED FOR PEACE DAY.

General Pershing arrived at Dover yesterday morning, crossing the channel in the destroyer Orpheus. He was received on the Admiralty pier by General Horne of the Eastern Command, Admiral Dampier and others.

On his arrival in London he met with an enthusiastic reception at Victoria where he was officially welcomed by Mr. Winston Churchill, Secretary for War, and many representative officers. Carriages were sent from Buckingham Palace. General Pershing drove off to the Carlton where he was entertained to luncheon.

At the American Embassy in the evening he was entertained to dinner by the heads of the American Contingent which is taking part in Saturday's Peace Celebration.

HAIG'S CRITICISM.

In the House of Commons yesterday, Major Christopher Lowther asked the Secretaryfor War, whether his attention had been called to a speech by Field Marshal Haig at Newcastle on July 8th in which he made critical remarks as to the efforts of our Allies in the war, and whether he could see his way to advise officers on the active list to refrain from making public derogatory statements.

Mr. Churchill said he had not seen a full report of the speech in question, but he was sure there was no intention on Sir Douglas Haig's part to deprecate the efforts of our Allies. Indeed it appeared from a summary of his speech that his object was simply to show how heavy was the burden borne by the British Army.

It was quite unnecessary to issue any general instructions to officers not to make speeches derogatory to our Allies.

COMMERCIAL CENSORSHIP TO GO.

The Supreme Allied Council is considering the question of raising the blockade against Russia.

It is announced that the Council recommends the abolition of the commercial censorship which formed part of the measures constituting the blockade of Germany.

Negotiations are now proceeding with neutral countries in order to obtain their consent to the immediate rescision of all blockade agreements.

MUZZLING ORDER EXTENDED.

An extension of the London, Middlesex, and District Muzzling and Control of Dogs Order came into force yesterday. The new order, which includes the requirement of leading, extends the inner control area, so as to include Old Windsor and Slough, linking it up with the existing area. It is due to the confirmation of a case of rabies in a dog at Old Windsor, Berkshire, ast Friday.

MORALITY IN THE PARKS.

Putting a question at the London County Council meeting in regard to the number of trained women employed in the parks "in the interests of morals and decency," the Rev. H. H. Carlisle remarked that the holiday season was approaching, and there was undoubtedly a lapse of morals. The Chairman of the Parks Committee said that steps were being taken in conjunction with the Metropolitan Police for the appointment of a number of trained women.

The number of War Savings Certificates sold during the week ended July 5 was 2,469,595, bringing the total to that date up to 334,555,744.

TO THE MEN AT HOME.

In time of war the soldier has but one purpose in life—the defeat of his country's enemies. That purpose is his passion. Every thought, interest, and ambition are devoted to the achievement of triumph. He cannot pay heed to the vagaries of England's home-life, whilst he is abroad fighting for its welfare.

But when war gives way to peace the soldier's tension relaxes, and he cannot avoid interest in the affairs of his country. He is not unmoved by the joys and sorrows, the hopes and fears of England, for the soldier is a patriot.

For him there are no party politics, and his profession teaches him that patriotismis above all politics. He can look at civil life from afar and ponder its problems with more impartiality than his fellow countrymen can assume. He may have some things to learn, but he has some things to teach.

England is on the eve of victory celebration. The allied chiefs will take their places in London's pageant of Peace, and in the paean of triumph all men will banish sorrow and welcome joyfulness. Yet there are signs that peace has still victories to win.

Even now there are alarums and excursions in the commercial and industrial life of Britain. The soldier hears voices which speak of "triple alliances," of commissions and conferences, of profiteers and strikers; and he is perplexed.

His part was to win the war, and he expects his countrymen to do their part—to win the peace. It is not for the soldier to make comparisons between the difficulties involved in each of these tasks. But he can remind the men of England that the army learned two lessons in its campaign. and these he can pass on, in the hope that they will be marked, read, and inwardly digested.

One was the lesson of discipline and the other was the lesson of loyalty, of esprit de corps. Were these learned in the homeland, its future would be assured.

There is no room in the British army for the profiteer or the striker, and there should be no place in England for these foes of society. The vision of a fair and prosperous country comes only to men and women who put the call of patriotism before the lure of selfishness.

England was worth the sacrifice of her sons, and England's traditions must not be sullied when her victory has been won.

COAL AND EVERYMAN.

Almost everyone, nowadays, knows the part played by energy in industry and the whole scheme of human welfare, but many neglect to make the obvious application of this knowledge to themselves. Those who see in the railway train nothing but a rapid and convenient method of transportation, are missing its greatest significance.

The sunlight locked up ages ago is being released to perform work formerly done by horses and slaves. Watt shares with Wilberforce the honour of Abolition.

If coal becomes so costly that its application in the transmutation of energy is economically impossible for certain industries, a substitute must be found, if human affairs are to continue as at present organised. Unfortunately none yet exists outside the imagination of the speculative scientist.

Until those dreams of machines worked directly by solar rays materialise, or until every cottage has its own oil well in the back-garden, the life of everyone is vitally bound up with the necessity for cheap and plentiful coal.

The proposed large increase in the price of coal to which we referred yesterday, will necessitate a review of all those activities which make life easier for the majority; besides handicapping at the outset the whole process of rebuilding for which the world is now crying out and the weaving of the mantle to cover the nakedness left by war.

Not only is it proposed that the price of coal be raised but it is alleged that the output is being deliberately restricted. If that is the case it is a political move designed to confront the community with the necessity of making an immediate redistribution of the available supplies of energy.

It is a questionable and dangerous method of forcing social reform; better indeed than the red flag and Soviet, but appearing too much like a juggling trick, with the well-being of the commonwealth for apparatus.

CORRESPONDENTS WANTED.

The Editor of the "Cologne Post" wishes to appoint a representative in every unit of the Rhine Army who will act as correspondent, furnishing the paper with news of the latest happenings as they occur. Literary ability will be a secondary consideration. It is facts briefly stated that are needed. Given these, the Editorial staff will do the rest. Who will volunteer?

WHAT I SAW IN PARIS

Impressions of the Great Victory Day.

BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

'Gay' is the adjective applied to Paris always, but for Monday last, it would indeed be difficult to find a word adequately to express the spirit that had gripped the entire French capital. It was France's Victory day, the day of rejoicing for a victory bought by countless lives and by endless agony, by the unselfish surrender of all that life holds dear — sad hearts there must have been on Monday, but even they must have been thrilled by the pomp and dignity of the Allied Armies' Victory March, a spectacle that has not and probably will not be equalled in the history of the world.

The first thing that must have struck a would-be-spectator of this historic pageant, was of course, the immense number of people lining not only the route, but also the side streets. The artifices and devices adopted by ingenious sightseers to secure a point of vantage provided much amusement, as well as effecting at times a display of silken hose and lingerie that would astonish even a modern review producer.

One girl had clambered up on to an advertisement sign fixed on a lamp post, a poetic justice had seated her on the announcement of a theatre whose review was entitled "Shocking."

Trees, chairs, window blind supports, ladders and steps were all pressed into service. There were also a number of seats suspended from the cross arms of lamp posts. Those who had no point of vantage forgot all the dictates of courtesy, and stopped at nothing to secure a better position.

One gunner officer was occupying an exalted (but not dignified), position on a crazy pair of steps, together with a French lady. It was fairly obvious that the erection would not stand any more weight, and a lady who tried to clamber up was requested by both parties to desist. She however was deaf to their entreaties, and the gunner threatened to step on one of her hands. She retaliated by pinching his companion's leg. This caused the disappearance of the party — steps and all.

The Spirit of Carnival.

The route was lined by French soldiers, into whom the spirit of carnival had thoroughly entered. The crowd, during the long wait scattered coins — pennies, half francs and francs — and the poilus had no hesitation in breaking ranks and scrambling for these coins.

Much laughter was caused by this diversion, and its undulating roar was like the sound of the sea, breaking on a rocky shore. One poilu, chasing a half franc was knocked down by an automobile. Even the fates seemed inclined to jest, for it was a motor ambulance with which he tried conclusions. A sudden silence. A great roar from five thousand throats, the trumpets of the Garde Republicain are heard, we see their scarlet plumes and the glint of the sun on the trumpets. Behind them comes Marshal Foch and with him Joffre, the former looking every inch the soldier he is.

Loud acclamations greet General Pershing and his men, whose soldierly bearing brought forth favourable comment on all sides. Here the khaki is relieved by the brave display of colours. Proud to lead the Victory march, the doughboys were proud too of 'Old Glory.'

Led by General Gillian, the Belgians received an ovation all along the route. Soldier subjects of a soldier King. We were reminded by the laurel crowned tri-colour of the valiant efforts made by brave little Belgium in the early and later stages of the war.

A familiar melody is heard — "Tipperary" played by the band of the Royal Marines, who headed the British contingent. Sir Douglas Haig, mounted on a beautiful horse follows, then our famous generals, including Sir William Robertson and, conspicuous by his 'wideawake', General Birdwood.

Our Boys Acclaimed.

Next our 'Tommies', who were cheered and cheered again, marching strictly to attention, creating that sense of irresistibility and strength, of unyielding force that a marching body of English troops always do. Our colours too, carried proudly erect, made a brave display.

Next come the Italians whose picturesque dress and colouring are welcome after the khaki of the troops who have already passed. Some of them have a red handkerchief over their heart. They are volunteers of Garibaldi. All the Italians carry their arms at the trail.

Mounted we have the Japanese, small and extremely smart. Then the Greeks in varied costumes, but marching in a manner worthy of the Guards. Following we have representative bodies of all the smaller nations, with their colours. The Serbians call for special comment by their appearance and splendid marching.

Then the French, headed by the band of the Garde Republicaine. Because they are clad in their overcoats, the fickle sun streams down on them, but their step is light and their faces smile.

Is it not their day of Victory. Have they not once again marched under the Arc de Triomphe after it has been so long closed for such a sad reason?. And their flags, torn and soiled and old, the colours of many battles. Most of them adorned with the Croix de Guerre, the Military Medal or the Leigion of Honour—in some cases with the three. Most rifles were adorned with flowers, and many people who were near enough, threw flowers in front of the Poilus.

The Glory of France.

Quite justly the French soldiers came in for the most demonstrations, and steel helmet, overcoat and marching order notwithstanding, the poilus bore the happy smile of victors.

Crowds, bent on pleasure turned the main streets into gigantic confetti carnivals. Practically every side street had its bandstand and an al fresco dance. All Paris is in a good humour, woe betide one who frowns at the harmless fun.

One girl rather resented being kissed by an absolute stranger, and said so. She was immediately surrounded by a ring of youths and girls who danced round her and pelted her with confetti until she smiled — then she joined the merry throng in rounding up someone else.

By nine o'clock, movement became possible in one direction only—towards the Place de la Concorde, where there was to be a wonderful display of illuminations, and of course everyone wanted to see the Champs-Elysees.

From the Place de la Concorde to the Arc de Triomphe and as far as the eye could see, stretched festoons of ruby lamps. The Arc itself and the temporary pillars were outlined in the same manner. The Place de la Concorde was a riot of little lamps, and in the distance the Eifel Tower showed varying coloured lights. A searchlight with ever changing colours played on the fountain.

Everywhere laughter, everywhere lights — some of the larger stores had excelled all previous efforts even Paris has known in illumination. At ten o'clock the sky became lurid with fireworks from all parts of Paris, at eleven more so. When would it finish? Who knew? Who cared? It was Victory Day, and Paris was en fete.

H. V. WALLACE KING.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

FACE FUNGUS.

Sir,— It surprises me to read "Tatcho's" prattle against face fungus.

Personally I think "sideboards" make the wearer look dignified and intelligent. Perhaps "Tatcho's" intelligence beams without the aid of facial adornment.

FREDDY.

DIRTY RAILWAY CARRIAGES.

Sir,— I wonder if your readers can tell me why the accommodation provided for officers in the German civilian trains is allowed to get into such a disgusting condition.

It is well-known that the German authorities always provided their officers with clean first-class accomodation, yet British officers are only given second-class carriages, which are seldom if ever cleaned out.

Surely this matter ought to be rectified, if only in order to uphold the dignity of the British Army.

C. C. G., Lieut.

AIRMEN AND SALUTING.

Sir,—As one who resents "Major B's" letter Airmen and Saluting, I wish to point out a thing which is becoming more obvious every day. I refer to the antipathy shown towards the R.A.F. (even the W.R.A.F. are not immune from it). Take for instance, the attitude of the Military Police who are only too ready to correct airmen while soldiers carry on in their own sweet way.

Many of us are proud of our good name, and people who find fault with the exceptional instances are so prone to make the majority suffer — if they can!

And should not "Major B," who should know the correct way to air his little worries, have complained direct to H.Q. R.A.F?

"PRESIDENT".

HAVE THEY FORGOTTEN?

Sir,—I have returned from leave and can bear out "Serving Soldier's" statement, about the way Tommy is treated in Blighty. The people at home do not want to remember.

Those who used to greet you with "When are you going back?' when the war was on, do not condescend to notice you now. I met a lad in London who had served three years in the Navy and had been trying to get a job for over two months without success. He was only 18 and alone in the world and said no one seemed to care now the war is over. He did the only thing left open for him and joined the service again.

VOLUNTEER.

THE UNADVERTISED HEROINE.

Sir, — I for one, tender to you thanks for the tribute which you paid under the above heading to the part played by the wives of England through four years of war.

I hesitate to add a word to the praise which you bestow, not because I think anything which you may have written can in any wise fully recognise their part, but because try how I would, I could not give expression to my thoughts on the subject.

I would remind you, however, that apart from the soldier's wife there is his old mother. She too has done her "bit." Please accept the thanks of

"MARRIED MAN."

WHY ONLY THE MARRIED?

Sir,—I and many comrades read with astonishment and indignation, the disgraceful perpetration signed "Going on for Thirty".

His whole "argument" is so preposterous that I find it difficult to answer such unmitigated balderdash (indeed it is scarce worthy of a reply), but I feel it due to the many married men out here and tho the credit of the British Army of the Rhine, not to let it pass unanswered.

Does "Going on for Thirty" seriously pretend that a philandering young whippersnapper of a bachelor has more right to consideration than a man who has done his bit in founding a home, and bringing up children?

Are a thousand happy English homes to be broken up in order to turn the British Army of the Rhine into an Institute for the propagation of flirtation?

But I suppose that it is useless to look for either common sense or common decency in "Going on for Thirty".

DISGUSTED.

CHEWING GUM FOR TOMMY.

Sir,— When will the E.F.C. realize that Tommy is a man, not a baby? Their latest stunt — it's been in operation several days now — is to give two packets of an American cigarette and some chewing gum for two marks.

In a more remote canteen in Cologne to which, by the way, a notice at the E. F. C. advises you to go, you can, so I'm told, get three packets of good English cigarettes for two marks, ten pfg.

Unfortunately one's working hours do not permit promenades to the top of Hohestrasse; so we have to smile like "good ickle children" and imagine that we do like chewing gum.

"FED UP."

A POINT IN CRICKET LAW.

Sir,—I was greatly interested to read in the report of a cricket match between 2/4 Hants and 88 Field Ambulence that "the bowler swung his arm to deliver the ball, but instead of delivering it, broke the wicket, catching, the unwary batsman out of his ground."

From this, I presume that the batsman was given "Out". Surely this was a wrong decision, or perhaps my knowledge of the game is very limited. I am under the impression that the ball is not in play until it has left the bowler's hand, otherwise, what is to prevent the batsman running before the bowler has delivered the ball, or even running when a boundary has been scored, as it appears from the above decision that the ball is never "dead." Perhaps some authority will advise me.

A.R.H.

LAW 35 reads "After the ball shall have finally settled in the wicket-keeper's or bowler's hand, it shall become dead; but when the bowler is about to deliver the ball, if the batsman at his wicket be out of his ground before actual delivery, the said bowler may run him out."—Ed.

WOULD YOU?

If you were a zephyr and I were a rose
Beside some cottage door,
Would you know me while in thick hedgerows
Grew a thousand roses more?

If I were a daisy and you were the sun,
Unfurling the dawn's sweet light,
Would you kiss me, and me alone,
When my sisters were all in sight?

If I were a clover and you were a bee,
Out seeking for honey dew,
Would you seek me when over the lea
Myriads beckoned to you?

J. W. WALSH.

To-night's the Night. Wilde v. Moore.

PRINCE OF WALES TO OCCUPY THE ROYAL BOX AT OLYMPIA.

The Prince of Wales, Prince Albert, and General Pershing will occupy the Royal box at Olympia to-night for the Wilde - Moore boxing contest. Among the "also theres" will be a large contingent of Welshmen, and a repetition of the stirring episodes which marked the Fred Welsh and Willie Ritchie contest in the same place in 1914 is anticipated. In an equally vociferous manner a large number of General Pershing's army will encourage "Pal" Moore.

WELSHMAN VERY FIT.

Majority Of His Sparring Partners Bantam-Weights.

Jimmy Wilde is doing plenty of work with a corps of partners at his home, Tylorstown, and latest reports speak of him as being as well as he has ever been of late years.

Most of his sparring partners are bantamweights, the one exception being Young Chips. He and Wilde have some rare mills. Harold Jones, Sammy Jones, Young Colecombe, and Ned Copp also give Jimmy plenty of practice, so that his boxing eye is in. Wilde is very confident of receiving the big end of Mr. Cochran's purse. This is how he sums it up: "If Moore cannot box any better than he did at the Albert Hall, I shall win." The seats for the big clash are selling very freely, and only a few of the best now remain on hand.

CONTESTS IN COLOGNE.

Numerous Entries For Leave Club Events.

The boxing competition, for Army troops only, which is to take place at the British Empire Leave Club, Cologne, on the 15th and 16th August, is attracting many competitors. Only two weights will be included in the contests. These will be:—

Feather Weight 9st and under = 57 kilos.
Welter Weight 10st 7 and under = 67 kilos.

Entries should be sent to A.I., P. and R. T., G.H.Q., Cologne, to reach there by Saturday, 2nd August. No entries will be accepted after that date.

FUTURE BOXING.

Amusing Hints for the Use of Promoters of Big Fights.

The singing of "Land of my Fathers" by a Welsh choir as Wilde enters the ring, and the encouragement of Moore by his Yankee supporters with the singing of "A Good Man is Hard to Fight"—both of which items appear on tonight's programme at Olympia—has provoked a certain amount of adverse criticism in boxing circles. Treating the subject facetiously "Orion" in the "Daily Express" suggests the following developments for the use of big fight promoters:—

PROGRAMME.

Overture, Descriptive piece. "Recollections of Boxing-days," by the fighting Fifth's Regimental Band.

Mr. Harry Preston will tell how he came to make his Xmas vow to swim every morning (winter included) in the sea at Brighton, following up the explanation with a "dumbbell" exhibition with two Royal York hams.

The Welshmen in the audience will sing "Land of my Fathers."

The Scotsmen present will sing "Annie Laurie."

The Irishmen present will sing "I'll take you home again, Kathleen."

The Englishmen present will sing small.

A procession of the Losing Favourites of the year will be headed by Frank Goddard, the Human Dynamo with the Iron Jaw, The Panther bringing up the rear, as usual.

Mrs. B. Ruiser will say how it feels to be the wife of a champion boxer, and show in the ring how she prepares the omelettes that make her husband so fierce and terrible in combat. (Stove, kitchen utensils, and ingredients kindly supplied by Blank and Co.)

The children of the rival champion boxers will be introduced to the audience by Mr. C. B. Cochran. Each child will be presented with a chocolate cauliflower-ear before leaving the ring.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

FIVE WEEKS MORE FOR LEAGUES.

Time is going apace and but five weeks now remain in which to complete the fixtures in the various leagues, for this must be done before the end of August in order that the final competition to decide the destination of the Cup may be arranged, and played before September is out. Delay is most inadvisable as demobilization is making itself felt to an appreciable extent and this week six clubs have had to withdraw, principally owing to disbandment. A few clubs still have much leeway to make up and in some cases, it is to be feared they will find it impossible to avoid forfeiting points. This is regrettable but only fair to those clubs which were prepared to play on the appointed date.

3rd HUSSARS (51) V. 15th HUSSARS, (74 runs for 8). For the 3rd. Hussars, B.M. Hatherly scored 19 runs and also accomplished the "hat trick." For the winners, Lieut. Clerk and Lieut. Straker bowled well, the former taking 6 wickets for 25, and the latter 4 wickets for 14.

D.190 BDE. R.F.A. (50 FOR 6) V. LANCER M.G. SQUADRON (47) at Poll on Sunday. The bowling of Battery was as effective as ever (always excepting the match versus the famous 93rd Bde. R.G.A., when it was smitten violently all over the field), and Dr. Bingham took 8 wickets for 18, Lieut. Baines accounting for the remainder. The Battery's batsmen were at first greatly disturbed by the tricky bowling of Major Humphries, but recovered, and passed their opponents' score before the sixth wicket fell. D/190 has won eight matches out of ten played in the League.

31st LABOUR GROUP (40) v. NO. 14 G.H.Q. M.T. COY. (24) on the Pola Wiesen ground on Monday. For the winners, L/Cpl. Walker batted through the innings for 22 not out, and Sergt. Kenyon took 5 wickets for 3 runs and Pte. Trendle 4 for 11. Cpl. Whiting, for the losers, batted well for 11 before being run out.

MIDLAND D.A.C. (29 for 3) v. 269 A.E. COY. (10). At Nieder Elvenich, on Monday, in very unsettled weather. The Company batted first, but were unable to stand up to the bowling of Lieuts. Rich and Taylor (4 wickets for 2 runs, and 4 wickets for 7 runs respectively (2 being run out). It was undoubtedly a bowlers wicket and the Company only just reached double figures (10) before all were dismissed. The D.A.C. commenced on a sodden wicket after a heavy shower, but managed to score 29 for the loss of 3 wickets (Hutton 13 not out) before another heavy shower made it necessary to conclude the game.

BAKERIES SPORTS CLUB (62) v. 53rd NORTHUMBERLAND FUSILIERS (38). On the Bakeries ground Pte. Lines did well for the home team, taking 5 wickets for 17, and also compiling 41 with the bat.

ADV. SUPPLY DEPOT R.A.S.C. (43) v. 51 AUX. BUS. COY. (40), at Zollstock on Monday.

II CORPS H.Q. (104) v. 1/5 WEST YORKS (41) at Leverkusen on Saturday. Sergt. Middleton (34), Pte. Briar (19), and Pte. Lindley (17 not out) batted excellently for the H.Q., while Major Yates took 4 for 14 and Capt. McNeil 5 for 17. Only three of the West Yorks batsmen reached double figures.

OTHER RESULTS.

41 Bn. M.G.C. (127) v. Northern Div. R.E. (53).
52 Royal Warwick (54) v. 75 Bde. R.F.A. (29).
73 Bde., R.G.A. (33) v. 21 Bde. R.G.A. (25).

31st LABOUR GROUP LEAGUE.

29th Labour Coy. (28) v. 180th Labour Coy. (41) at Zollstock on Tuesday. This match was played on a wicket that suited the bowlers, the result being some good averages. Christian was best for 29th Coy. with 3 wickets for 4 runs, Senior coming second with 4 wickets for 19 runs. Cpl. Stevenson was on top for 180 Coy with 6 wickets for 12 runs.

Shooting in the first stage for the King's Prize commenced at Bisley, on Tuesday morning, the conditions being perfect. There are 1098 entries.

Twenty-three members of the contingent from the Army of the Rhine are competing in the competition.

Overnight it was feared that the markers contemplated ominous action, and precautions were taken. It is now stated they may attempt to interfere with the final on Friday.

Successful Meeting at Stommeln to Celebrate Peace Day.

Despite the fact that the 12th (S.) AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Whist and Song.

"B" Company, 13th Bn. King's Liverpool Regt., hidden away among the hills of Neidorholtorf, spent an enjoyable evening at whist last week. The drive was promoted by the officers, who spared no pains to make it a success. The proceedings were judiciously relieved by songs and refreshment intervals. At the conclusion, Capt. Whittle and Capt. Hickenhall were accorded enthusiastic cheers for their efforts.

On Reading.

In spite of the heavy rain which fell on Monday, a good attendance gathered at the Y.M.C.A. Circle to hear Sapper C.W. Fieldhouse, who leaves during the week for England, give an evening on "General reading." Sapper Fieldhouse planned out the matter and method of the general reader regarding selection and reading with the primary object of securing the maximum of pleasure, interest and benefit. A bright discussion, led by L/Cpl. Seaton, followed.

Weak Features of "The Limits."

In "The Limits," the 6th City of London Regt. have a concert party, whose show is bright, well varied and in many ways original. All who have visited the Apollo Theatre, Cologne, this week will probably agree. Nevertheless the programme is capable of being improved. For instance there is a hackneyed chestnut about beer going down, the humour (if any) of which lies in its coarseness. This might well be omitted. Then, "The Night Watchman," excellently performed, loses considerable interest by being rather too long drawn out and by the inebriated gentleman who assists in the sketch emphasizing his condition too persistently. The lightning sketch artiste would improve his turn by developing a more fluent flow of patter, and the performance of the juggler would be more effective were he to cut out his almost inaudible side talk.

And Many Good Points.

Everybody knows that it is the easiest thing in the world to criticise, but I merely wish to point out a few glaring faults with the suggestion that the performance of "The Limits" would be greatly improved by attention to these small details. The good points of the entertainment are many, as the enthusiastic reception of the items accorded each might testify. Alf Barnard sings delightfully and chooses his numbers with skill. Harry King is a capital comedian of the Wilkie Bard type; Harry Edwards, as well as being an agreeable female impersonator, is a smart step dancer, while Naito brings back happy memories of circus days by his clever manipulation of a barrel. Extraordinary things are done with pencils and paint by Frank Backham, who produces pictures with incredible speed and Billy Johns, vocalist, and W.J. Brown are also included in the programme. 2/Lt. E. Morris conducts a capable little orchestra.

"PEACE" FOOTBALL MATCHES.

The Emergency Committee of the F. A. have decided that "Peace" matches may be played on July 19 and any day during the following week, including July 26.

Fulham and Chelsea have arranged to play at Fulham on Saturday.

An officer who wore R.A.F. "blue" in Cologne has been so often pestered with questions by members of the travelling public who mistook him for a tramway official that he has gone back to khaki.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Facetious.

The seating capacity of Olympia is 20,000 and there is room for Moore in the ring.

Plymouth Argyle.

An old Plymouth Argyle half-back, W. Davis, has again been signed on. He joined the Footballer's Battalion at the outbreak of hostilities and rose to the rank of captain. He recently retired from the Army.

Famous Pedestrian Dead.

Information has been received at Preston of the death in Glasgow Cancer Hospital of William Cummings, for many years England's champion long-distance pedestrian. Cummings, who was sixty years old, was a native of Paisley.

"Shot, sir."

The most sincere tribute that lawn tennis has earned was uttered at Roehampton. "I am afraid the dinner will spoil," said a quiet feminine voice. "Dinner—who can think of dinner with such play in progress." "Shot, sir," replied an elderly masculine voice.

Running in Blinkers.

It is never a pleasant sight to see a good colt—on form the best of his age—run in blinkers, but Mr. Gilpin will try the experiment of putting the badge on Sarchedon in his engagement to-day. It is hoped to stop his rearing propensities that way, for he will not know when he is in front.

Darling "Demobb'd."

Fred Darling having been demobilized is back again training at Beckhampton. He has 11 horses under his charge at present.

Jockey for Bhopal.

Jose Ruiz, who rode Noutbutweel to victory at Haydock on Saturday, returns to India this week to resume his riding engagement with the ruler of Bhopal.

Joy-night Weight-lifters.

Peace-day among the weight-lifters will be celebrated on Monday, Jule 21, at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell New-road, with an important heavy-weight weight lifting match between two well-known lifters, Leonard Burner, of Hampshire, and J. H. Hatliffe, of Lincoln.

Grand Prix d'Ostende.

Fifty-one horses remain in the Grand Prix d'Ostende, which will be run on Sunday, August 24. It promises to be a real international affair, English, French, and Franco-American owners, and, of course, Belgians having horses engaged.

Rangers' Capture.

The Glasgow Rangers have made a distinct capture in securing the transfer from Portsmouth of James Walls, a left half-back, who came into prominence as a dour defender and artistic purveyor of passes in pre-war Southern League football.

Busy Piermaster.—Medway trade unionists have sent a vigorous protest to Chatham Council because the piermaster is himself painting the corporation pier.

Dear Clothes.—No longer ashamed to be economical, men and women are patronizing the mending and renovation business that sprang up during the war.

Earl as Corporal.—The Earl of Crawford has made application, as Corporal Crawford, for membership of the Wigan branch of the Comrades of the Great War. He was Corporal in the R.A.M.C.

German Levy.—The German levy on property begins with fortunes of 5,000 marks, and rises to 10 per cent, up to 50,000 marks, reaching gradually 45 per cent for fortunes of between half a million and a million marks, and 65 per cent for fortunes over three millions.

Nasty!—Residents of Bulpham complained o the peculiar taste of the water in the village well, and an analysis disclosed 475 grains of magnesium sulphate (1oz. of Epsom salts) per gallon. The inhabitants are at present relying on rain-water for drinking purposes.

Echoes from Rhineland.

Repatriated German Prisoners.

Repatriated German prisoners continue to arrive in large numbers, and as is only natural meet with a very warm welcome from their compatriots. Converted hospital trains are being used to convey these parties from the coast, the trains carrying a full nursing staff. The men for the most part seem overjoyed to get back and indulge in much handkerchief waving while they freely garland their trains. Two of these repatriated prisoners held quite a reception in Severinstrasse the other night. They were surrounded by a large crowd and gifts of cherries, eatables and smokes were showered upon them.

Bathing de Luxe.

There are many good points about the construction of the Swimming Bath near the Opera House which could with advantage be copied. The method of entering the bath through the dressing boxes from side corridors obviates the necessity of people wandering along the sides of the bath in search of vacant boxes and at the same time assists the attendants to keep the sides clean. Draughts are almost eliminated and the maximum number of bathers at any one time is established since admission can only be obtained through a box. As the boxes can be locked, the swimmer need not worry about the safety of his property. The spacious accommodation for washing and the numerous sprays with unlimited quantities of hot water are worthy of praise. Many an accident through slipping must also be saved by the cocoanut fibre mats.

Times Are Changed.

In the Cologne office of the Norddeutsche Lloyd the other day we picked up a copy of their "Ocean Pleasure Trips, 1914;" it was truly a large and most attractive list of tours extending over the seven seas. Asking for their 1919 edition, we were given a tiny pamphlet advertising trips by river steamer from Bremen to the islands off the German coast — they do not now propose to enter even the "German Ocean." Their larger boats have all literally gone West, some as far as England and France and the remainder across the Atlantic.

Careless Children.

It is a peculiar trait of human nature that we treasure a thing most, after it has been taken from us. If this applies to the women of Germany as strongly as it does to those at home, it is surprising to observe the freedom the Teutonic mother allows her offspring. Yesterday afternoon an interval of only a couple of hours elapsed between two accidents that might easily have been attended with very serious consequences. They both happened in the vicinity of the cathedral. They both involved motor cars and the victims were young boys. In the first case, a lad rushed across the road, heedless of the busy traffic, and pulled up to find himself in front of a fast travelling motor car. With considerable presence of mind he jumped upon the radiator to which he clung until the chaffeur was able to pull up ten yards or so further on. A little later, another boy darted from behind the vehicles in front of the cathedral and collided with a car that knocked him down and bruised him rather badly. In the latter case, the writer happens to know that the driver of the car is probably the most experienced and capable German chaffeur in British employ at the present time.

THE ENGLISH GIRL.

A Final batch of Letters on an Engrossing Subject.

To the Editor, "Cologne Post."

Sir,—I agree with "Musician", especially after my experience, whilst on leave.

During my stay, I saw girls drinking and dancing with "Aussies." I was looked upon as dirt, and from several of my "demobbed" chums came the same story.

One cannot relish the idea of returning home to make one of these "left off's" his wife. Amongst them were some very respectable girls and not flappers. "ZUMMERZET."

Sir,— It is not only the girls at home who seem to be forgetting what the boys did for Old England in the dark days of war when they did their best — many at the cost of life — to prevent a German victory, but nearly everyone adopts the same attitude.

It makes one wonder if Napoleon wasn't right when he called us "a nation of shopkeepers." The profiteer and munition worker earning big money in safety, seem, as much thought of as the soldier, now that the dirty work has been done. This may be human nature but it is unpleasant to think about. H. H. P.

Sir, — I also have not met an honourable British Tommy who has preferred a French or Belgian girl to an English one, although I doubt not, there are some as good.

A large majority of French girls I have met haven't a leg to stand on when compared with the average English girl.

I cannot agree with "S.S." that the German girl would be an Englishman's last hope. I think, judged fairly, the German girl is better, on the average, than Belgian or French, although not up to the average English. EX-INFANTRY.

Sir,—We have heard a deal as to the merits of the English girl over her French and Belgian sisters, but are males not tempted to view the matter from a selfish point of view, no matter the nationality of the girl!

There is a standard set by mere man both as regards disposition, accomplishments and morals, yet how short of that standard does he fall?

To take the duties of the wifely slave, how about duties for the prospective husband. How many of them, for instance, know how to carve an ordinary meat joint, let alone a chicken?

This is but a sideline, yet in others there is always the complaint of man. Let him put his house in order. "ENGLISH GIRL."

Sir,—I have read with interest the paragraphs on the morals and standards of our English girls, and if you will allow me I would like to add my view to those already received.

I read with disgust the letter by "Musician". In my opinion the English girls of to-day are far superior both in beauty and charm to all foreign damsels, and no sane-minded soldier would dream of taking unto himself any French or Belgian girl, unless of course he has not seen the many beautiful girls to be found in Blighty.

I have had plenty of experience with English, French and Belgian girls and a fair amount with fräuleins, but I can safely say that the English girl is superior to the others. As for their preferring Colonials to our own boys, that is all rot.

Each man for his own nationality is a good motto. "Musician" wants to open his eyes before he writes in such a tune. R. A. P.

War Savings Achievement.

The appeal which the Government system of war savings makes to officers and men is borne out by particulars of achievements, which continue to reach us. We gladly give publicity to that of the 1st Battalion Machine Gun Corps which subscribed in War Savings in one day, July 2nd, the sum of 42,430 Marks; of this total: B Company subscribed 21,150.55 Marks, and D Company subscribed 13,687 Marks. Such figures should stimulate interest and competition in other Battalions. We congratulate the Machine Gun Corps.

Yet Another.

Huge figures have also been reached by the 53rd Bn. Royal Sussex Regiment War Savings Association during the first month of its existence. Between June 13th and July 13th, the total amount subscribed was 187,988 marks, representing £1841/15/9 in English money, and 2377 certificates, while the highest haul of marks for one day was 57,628. Lieut. L. A. Malleson the Hon. Sec. of the Association has been complimented by the Brigade Commander upon the results obtained.

Taking No Risks.

A motor lorry having been overhauled in a M. T. Workshop, was taken on test by a mechanics staff sergeant, prior to its being returned to its unit; when just clear of the gates trouble was experienced and suddenly a fire broke out. The Pyrene extinguisher was called for and promptly produced, but was found to be empty. The M.S.S. at once detailed a man to double back to the shops and obtain another Pyrene, while he, ably assisted by willing hands, succeeded in extinguishing the flames by other means. A few minutes afterwards the messenger returned, practically on his knees, with a large German Feuerlöscher nine litre extinguisher on his shoulder, saying he had been made to bring it. At mess the following dialogue was heard: "Why did you send me that large Bosch extinguisher?" "Well, I didn't know what size fire you were having, did I?"

White Bread.

One has heard so much of the German peasants' black bread that it comes as a surprise to find that white bread is not unknown amongst the same class even under the present very abnormal conditions. In a farm house visited recently, white bread was frequently seen. This was explained by the fact that the farmer had his own private mill in a portion of the house buildings, where his cereals were ground, the driving power being supplied by a horse gear arrangement so common to English farmhouses. A boon at all times, it must have proved itself a valuable asset when food was far more scarce than it is at present in the occupied zone.

The enterprising Yankee.

During the past week, a wonderful change has come over the shops in Cologne, particularly those of the confectionery, grocery and delikatessen types. A short while back the windows were graced by pretty paper flowers in vases and china dishes containing fearsome looking cakes. Then came the peace, and "Presto" in a flash there appears, real solid food and delicious. One sees in the windows of the Colonial Waren, juicy bacon, prime butter, cereals of all description and a large variety of tinned goods, while the confectioners have a brave show of appetising sweets and chocolate galore, all at a reasonable figure. If one cares to look carefully at this huge dump of "goodies" they will be struck by one amazing fact—i.e. all of the tins or packets bear the name of American manufacturers.

And ourselves.

It is interesting to see that the "M.P." can purchase a souvenir bearing his regimental lettering, the men of the R.A.M.C. their colours and familiar cross, while in other respects British regimental signs have been copied. How long are we to wait before we may have the selection of the whole run of regimental badges? We must say that we tire of the Dom and certainly do not fancy it on soap-box, razor, and ash tray. The regimental badge might appeal, but the other is overdone.

"Why Learn German?"

One of ourreaders says: "The homely hausfrau at our first billet in the Rhineland was not a linguist. When I came to Germany I knew at least six words of German pronounced more or less correctly. I foolishly allowed this knowledge to escape me, with the result that I was at once marked out for the voluble conversation of our hostess. I know considerably more German now but the good woman little knows that she was the incentive to my study of Deutsch. I was driven despairingly to wrestle with verbs, declensions and vocabularies in order to get some faint idea as to what she was talking to me about. My knowledge increased gradually. At first I could recognise about one word in twenty, then one in ten and after a time was able to understand anything from 25 to 60 per cent. of her conversation. Moreover, I had to increase my local knowledge, as I found I was expected to know every person in the village, their characters and shortcomings in order to appreciate to a nicety the scandalous revelations of my hostess."

German Easy.

"In my absence she would sometimes address a few remarks to one of my companions, and I would return to the billet to find him facing blankly a guttural bombardment. The reply to my question as to the subject of conversation was invariably, God knows, I once asked the good lady why she expected us to know German whereas she knew not one word of English. The answer was, Oh, German is easy, Why don't you learn English? I asked. Oh, that is too hard, was the reply. I am still trying to solve this peculiar argument. One fact was mercifully veiled from me in those early days, for I know that not only is our hostess an inexhaustible conversationalist but also an exponent of how German should not be spoken according to the best professors."

Biting.

An amusing passage of words occurred between a Cockney Sergeant and the gunner of a certain battery. The gunner thought he was a cut above the sergeant and lost no opportunity of trying to score off him, but he met his match the other morning, when he turned up late on parade. The sergeant spotted him coming into the lines and said, "Good morning, Mister Jones," (with the accent on the Mr.) "Have you missed your train this morning? Never mind, just put your silk hat and walking stick away, and we will commence business. You can groom those two ruddy horses for a start."

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Cpl. E. Fisher, D.o.S. & T., G.H.Q., Cologne.

AFGHANS' SURPRISE ATTACK.

REPULSED WITH HEAVY LOSS.

TIRPITZ TELLING THE TRUTH.

NEW PARLIAMENTARY PARTY.

AFGHANISTAN.

TRIBESMEN'S FIERCE ATTACK SEVERELY REPULSED.

It is officially stated that on Sunday morning British picketing troops moving into position East of Girdhil, Afghanistan, met with strong opposition from the tribesmen.

The enemy, estimated at 800 strong, made an attempt against the left flank which was frustrated by subsidiary pickets, the tribesmen being driven off after heavy fighting at close quarters.

British guns obtained favourable targets and the enemy suffered severely.

THE AMIR'S THRONE.

In the House of Commons yesterday Viscount Curzon asked if it is the intention of the Government to allow the present ruler of Afghanistan to retain his throne in view of his recent unprovoked attack upon British territory.

Mr. Montague, in reply, said he hoped that Peace negotiations would shortly be opened. Our object was to secure the frontier against the recurrence of such unprovoked attacks. It was not our present intention to express any opinion as to who should rule over Afghanistan.

THREE TURKS HEADS.

REFUGE IN GERMANY IS NO ASYLUM.

It is announced that the Turkish Government has consented to negotiate with the Entente about the extradition of Talaat Pasha, Enver Pasha, and Djemal Bey whom the recent Court-martial condemned to death in contumaciam.

The three Ministers are actually in Germany

BACK TO WORK.

SUPREME COUNCIL RESUMES PEACE BUSINESS.

After the elaborate celebrations in Paris over the week-end the attention of Peace Conference circles is again turned towards the settling of outstanding questions. The Supreme Allied Council are at present considering the situation which arises in regard to Russia in consequence of the removal of the blockade on Germany. The question is one of great importance and it will be interesting to know the means adopted by the council to prevent the Russian Bolshevists from benefiting by the raising of the blockade.

It is also expected that the treaty regulating the situation in regard to Bulgaria will be finished shortly, but no date has yet been fixed for drawing up the Turkish settlement.

The Matin declares that the Council has agreed that to continue the blockade of Russia would be futile as the re-export of goods from Germany to Russia could not be controlled. It was also agreed that to prohibit Entente countries from doing trade direct with Russia would result in an economic rapprochement between Germany and Russia.

No definite decision on these points has been announced.

BALKAN INDEPENDENCE.

According to reports received from Agram (emanating from Berlin) negotiations are in progress between the South Slav, Bulgarian and Greek Cabinets with reference to the establishment of the political and economic independence of the Balkans.

The German report suggestively remarks that these States wish the Allies to renounce their ceremonial predominance in favour of the native population.

MODERN MUNCHAUSEN.

A Deal mariner, who has just arrived home after a journey from Amsterdam on a Dutch liner bound for Mexico, states that among some fifty Germans on the boat was Dr. Denner, a notorious German, who spoke English fluently and volubly. Sporting two Iron Crosses and other German decorations, Dr. Denner declared openly that he had made five different voyages to Mexico in a German submarine, and was now on his way there to "raise hell." He had been in charge of a German internment camp at the Isle of Man, and had been detained in the Tower for five days as a spy and condemned to be shot, and that he was even now wanted in England. He had been educated in America and France, had married an Irish girl, and swore by Ireland. The Germans, he said, had no further use for the All-Highest War Lord.

ALLIED WARSHIPS AT FIUME.

Three Allied warships from Great Britain, France and America have arrived at Fiume. Quiet prevails everywhere. Some modifications in prices have been introduced because obviously the recognised reduction of fifty per cent, cannot be maintained on all productions.

PEN AND INK WARFARE.

UNCONVINCING GERMAN RECRIMINATIONS.

Germany seems to find great difficulty in making up its mind regarding the prime facts of the war. The accounts of their apologists vary from day to day. Writers, professional and amateur, declare one day that Germany was not responsible for the war and the next day they are quarrelling among themselves as to which particular German was to blame. Statesmen blame militarists, and militarists accuse statesmen. Hindenburg speaks of "Germany's crushing defeat," and Hindenburg's officers send him an overpowering testimonial as "a victor unconquered in East or West." Admiral Scheer declares he won the battle of Jutland, and the German Government unconsciously smashes this amusing claim by its explosive anger at the success of the blockade, which could hardly have been attained by a defeated British Navy. The German Army, according to German apologists, was undefeated, and the German navy won the decisive battle of the war. This "victory" was signalised by the surrender of the German fleet and the urgent appeal for an armistice to to save the "victorious" army from utter annihilation!

FLIGHTS OF IMAGINATION.

Many of these German protestations scattered to a sceptical world by wireless are little flights of imagination of Major Moraht, Germany's famous military critic, who at one advanced period of the war claimed such progressive slaughter and capture of British troops that his mathematical calculation showed that Britain, on his basis of computation, could not possibly have one soldier left. Each of the Allied nations in turn is blamed for the war. The indisputable proofs of German Prince Lichnowsk's famous memorandum and Bavarian revelations, which leave no doubt of Germany's guilt, are conveniently ignored.

Even Admiral von Tirpitz, in the preface to to his book which will appear this month, emphasises Germany's responsibility. Having declared that Lord Grey's proposal at the end of July 1914 was calculated to prevent war, he adds: "As I have since learned with a shock, it was known in Berlin as early as July 11th that the Entente had advised Belgrade to yield. Bethmann-Hollweg thereby had the means peacefully to unravel the knot in his hands. From the fact that the Entente did not want war, however, Bethmann-Hollweg drew the conclusion that Germany could take any liberties and force an invasion of Serbia without regard to the Entente. The Austrian ultimatum was to be so highly peppered that, as the Foreign under-secretary expressed it, 'Serbia would be unable to swallow it.'"

FINLAND ANXIOUS.

SEEKS PROTECTION OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

The Finnish press urges the necessity of Finland's joining the League of Nations as soon as possible as a protection against the probable inclination for expansion on the part of a re-established Russia, and also against a possible Russian-German combination. The Hafvudstadbiad points out that Finland's independence is of special interest to Scandinavia, as any attempt by Russia to regain her hold on Finland would be a menace to Scandinavia.

HUNGARY.

CHANGE OF GOVERNMENT IMMINENT.

A change of Government is imminent in Hungary as the result of the pressure exercised by the Entente Powers. Count Albert Apponyi is to become Foreign Minister. It is stated the dispute between Hungary and Austria regarding official Hungarian propaganda in Vienna has been settled.

MESOPOTAMIA POLICY.

Mr. Churchill states that our future policy with regard to the policing of Mesopotamia could not be laid down until we had received a mandate to administer the country. The army of occupation would be as small as possible, and would contain as large a proportion as was feasible of Indian and native troops. It was hoped to make a considerable use of the air service with a view to economising troops.

SOUTH AFRICAN AGITATORS.

Johannesburg Nationalist stalwarts are continuing with undiminished energy their campaign in favour of the establishment of a republican form of Government for South Africa. One of the strongest planks in their programme is a demand for the repatriation of Indians born in India and the segregation of those born in Africa. Supporters of republicanism advocate the accomplishment of their aims by what they term constitutional means and deprecate any resort to force.

Mackensen and the German soldiers who were interned in Hungary are on their way home.

"SURRENDER" LIBEL CASE

MONS CORPORAL'S STORY OF THE INCIDENT.

The action for slander brought by Colonel W. Gordon, of the Gordon Highlanders, against Sir John Leng and Company, proprietors of the "People's Journal," was continued at the Court of Session, Edinburgh, yesterday.

Corporal George Mutch, 1st Bn, Gordon Highlanders, said that he heard the order to put up hands and surrender, but it was not Colonel Gordon who gave it. Colonel Gordon gave the order to fix bayonets.

Witness said he escaped from Sennelager internment camp and when he reached home the "People's Journal" reporter asked him for the story of his experiences in Germany. Ultimately he agreed to give them, but he never told the reporter anything about Colonel Gordon's ordering the surrender, nor was Lieut.-Colonel Neish's name mentioned.

Cross-examined, witness said he supposed the order to surrender was given in order to avoid the useless sacrifice of men.

The hearing was again adjourned.

PEACE DAY.

ORDER OF PROCESSION IN LONDON.

The chief feature of the celebrations in London on Saturday will be the great peace pageant. The contingents representing the mighty forces of the Allies will march in alphabetical order. First will come the American forces, headed by General Pershing. They will consist of a large band and three battalions, each comprising thirty-three officers and 1,100 men. Next will come forty officers and 400 men of the Belgian Army headed by General Gillain. There will be ninety French officers and 900 men, who, it is officially announced, will be led by Marshal Foch. Lieut. General Montnouri will lead the Italian contingent of thirty-five officers and 800 men. Japan will be represented by a number of officers. Poland, Portugal, Roumania, Serbia, Siam and Slovakia will each have five officers and fifty men in the procession.

The Allied contingents will be followed by representatives of the forces of the British Empire. The Naval contingent will be headed by Admiral Sir David Beatty and that of the Army by Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig and his Generals.

COST OF COAL.

MINERS DELIBERATING ON THEIR ACTION.

There has been some talk that the Miners Federation might call a strike early in August, on the question of Nationalisation in view of their anger over the proposed increase of 6/- perton in the retail price of coal.

Yesterday, however, such extremists met with a rebuff, when the Federation resumed its conference at Keswick. A resolution to authorise either the Executive or a National Conference to call members out on strike without first taking a ballot vote "if necessity arose" was defeated by a large majority.

It is evident therefore that a democratic form of administration is to be pursued in the society. Mr. Brace arrived at Keswick on Wednesday night and attended the conference yesterday morning. He is prepared it is understood, to make a statement for the information of the delegates regarding the debate in the House of Commons on the subject of the 6/- increase.

IRELAND AND CARSON.

Irish affairs again furnished the bulk of the questions in Parliament yesterday. In reply to various points raised, Mr. Bonar Law said he had consulted the Law Officers to the Crown and was advised that there was no ground for Government action against Sir Edward Carson for his recent speech at Belfast.

KARACHI TROOP TRAIN.

Lieut. Colonel Walter Guinness asked the Secretary of State for India if he would state in what particulars General Shaw failed to act up to his responsibility in connection with the Karachi troop train incident.

Mr. Montagu said in reply that eighteen months ago an offer of a new enquiry was made to General Shaw. That offer, however, had never had been accepted, but he was now prepared to keep it open for another week. If General Shaw did not accept within that time he would advise the Hon. Member to let the matter drop.

U.S. RELIEF FOR TORPEDOED SEAMEN.

Mr. Davis, American Ambassador in London, has written approving the proposal to raise funds in the United States to endow a convalescent home at Limpsfield (Surrey), and otherwise to relieve British seamen who have been crippled through German submarine attacks. Admiral Sims is honorary chairman of the American Committee.

ALIENS IN BUSINESS.

The number of business names registered to the end of April 1910 in respect of businesses in which an unnaturalized alien is sole proprietor, or in which such alien is partner, is 8,312, states Mr. Bridgeman.

This number is in excess of the actual number of aliens on the register, as in some cases an alien is concerned in more than one business.

A Paris train containing a large number of French soldiers on leave, was in collision at Gray Station, twenty-five miles from Besancon on Tuesday. Five men were killed and twenty injured.

PERSHING IN LONDON.

OUT OF SIGHT IS NOT OUT OF MIND.

One of the largest gatherings of Americans ever held in London assembled to entertain General Pershing at the Savoy yesterday. The American Ambassador, Mr. Davis, presided.

General Pershing, speaking of the American Army, said the world would recall that when their first division entered the battle line and fought a small though brilliant battle—their first as an independent command—at Catigny the success they attained not only set an example for future American divisions but had an electrical effect throughout the Allied lines.

Following the course of their efforts they would recall the counter-offensive in which their best divisions took part, the combined effort depriving the Germans of the initiative for ever. He concluded his speech with a warning:—"Now that the end is come let us first of all insist that our late enemy completely fulfils the obligations that have been forced upon him. It must not be understood, because America has not left in Europe a large army, that they on their part will not insist on the fulfilment of those obligations."

MONROE DOCTRINE.

U. S. SENATE DOUBTFUL ABOUT THE PEACE TREATY.

The Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate has unanimously adopted a resolution requesting the President, if it be not incompatable with puplic interest, to furnish all the documents considered by the United States Commission in its work of framing the Peace Treaty.

Senator Morris attacked the League of Nations, declaring the Shantung clause to be indefensible and so wicked that it alone would be sufficient cause for the rejection of the treaty. He charged Japan with secretly obtaining pledges from Great Britain, France, Italy and Russia early in 1917 that Shantung, in consideration for certain concessions, should be assigned to Japan in the Peace settlement.

Senator Underwood announced that he would vote for the League of Nations without any reservations.

Mr. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, in a statement on behalf of the Republican party in respect of the League of Nations, declares that there must be an effective reservation safeguarding the sovereignty of the United States, in every particular and that the maintenance of the Monroe doctrine must be placed beyond any shadow of doubt.

REPARATION FOR THE MURDER OF A FRENCH SOLDIER.

The French Government has deliberated on the murder of a French sergeant at Berlin, a short time ago and has decided that France will demand the punishment of the guilty person and the payment of one hundred thousand francs to the parents of the victim, in addition to a fine of one million francs.

In this connection Baron von Lersner has expressed the regret of the Weimar Government and declares that it is ready to make all necessary reparations.

The murder of this sergeant was a sequel to a dispute between French and German soldiers in Berlin. French interests in unoccupied Germany, pending the appointment of a French ambassador, are being watched over by the Spanish ambassador, to whom Herr von Haniel expressed the official regrets for the outrage. A reward of 10,000 marks is offered for the arrest of the murderer.

NEW GERMAN SILENT MOTOR FOR AEROPLANES.

It is stated that several great German manufacturers, including Krupp's at Essen, have been making trials in the greatest secrecy with new motors for aeroplanes. They are said to be much superior to any explosive motor in use up to now. The chief secret of the invention is a gas turbine which makes for almost silent working. Giant aeroplanes are reputed to have been constructed with a capacity of 64 persons.

The Zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen are also said to be building new airships and Gothas.

BIRKENFELD REPUBLIC.

Behind the proclamation of the Birkenfeld Republic separating itself from the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg, there seems to be a movement towards uniting the principality to the Saar district, which as is well known, is to be placed under the Administration of the League of Nations.

The German Government announces that it will take measures against anybody connected with sucha movement.

KING RECEIVES R. 34 OFFICERS.

General Maitland and Major Scott were received by H. M. the King at Buckingham Palace yesterday morning. The King congratulated both officers upon their great achievement in the R. 34 and asked many questions concerning the voyage. The two officers were heartily cheered by a large crowd assembled outside the Palace.

LOSSES ON LORRIBUSES.

The non-stop runs of the lorribuses have been discontinued, and these vehicles, of which there are 168 in the service, now halt at all ordinary 'bus points. With these additions the London 'buses now reach a total of 2,457, as compared with 1,758 on Armistice Day. The lorribuses are said to involve a loss of £1 10s. each per day.

TREASURY WINDFALL.

ECCENTRIC CONDITIONS IN A WILL.

Mr. Justice Eve, in the Chancery Division gave judgment in the action concerning the will of the late Mr. C. W. Wallace, a member of the firm of Shaw, Wallace, and Co., Indian merchants, who directed that the residue of his estate, valued at £250,000, should go to the British and Indian Treasuries unless either of his two sons secured at least a baronetcy. He did this, he explained in his will, "becuse I hold the view that, subject to the right to make adequate provision for his children, all possessions, great or small, if acquired by the testator through the people, as mine were, should return to the people."

Captain Wallace, of Ashley-gardens, the testator's surviving son, not having obtained a title, it was sought by the parties to set aside this provision of the will on the ground that it was against public policy, as it embarrassed the Crown officers in the distribution of honours and induced the persons concerned to adopt improper means to obtain titles.

Mr. Justice Eve said that he could not appreciate that this condition in the will, which was calculated to induce a man to devote his services to the public good, was against public policy. It was urged that he might be induced to adopt sordid means to obtain a title, and he did not deny that possibility. But as the will did not necessarily involve anything against the welfare of society, it was valid. Assuming that honours were in the majority of cases conferred as rewards for meritorious services to the community, it followed that the will was likely to be fulfilled by methods to the benefit of society. He could not therefore hold that the will was invalid.

TRAIN SMASH.

SKIDS INTO BUFFERS THROUGH BRAKES FAILING TO ACT.

Owing, it is believed, to the skidding of the wheels when the brakes were applied, the Dartford train due at Cannon-street Station at 8.45 yesterday morning crashed heavily into the stop buffers at the end of the platform. All the passengers, many of whom were standing by open doors ready to leave the train, were thrown violently against the sides of the carriages or were heavily precipitated on to each other.

Most of the windows in the train were smashed by the concussion of the impact and a number of persons sustained injuries from splintered glass. Over a score were injured, the more serious being taken to St. Bartholomew's hospital. The majority were able to leave after receiving surgical treatment.

HOME POLITICS.

FORMATION OF A NEW GROUP IN PARLIAMENT.

The much discussed proposal for the formation of a "Centre" party in the House of Commons which will absorb and preserve the coalition in a permanet form is now taking definite shape. Fresh significance was given to the idea last night, by the presence at a parliamentary dinner of Mr. Winston Churchill, who made a carefully prepared speech, after a visit to the Premier. He is reported to have expounded the idea of a Centre party, which would combine all the moderate men of the old Liberal and Conservative parties and would preserve the results of the victory in the war by means of a national progressive and patriotic policy.

Members who were present at the dinner expressed the belief that in future the only two important parties will be Centre and Labour.

SCOTCHED.

BLAZING WHISKY DESTROYS BLOCK OF HOUSES.

A destructive fire broke out at Perth last night, resulting in damage to the extent of many hundred thousand pounds. It originated in a four-storied whisky bond belonging to Messrs. Arthur Bell and Sons, situated in a very congested area.

Burning spirit gushed into the street and converted the thoroughfare into a huge lake of fire. The flames spread to a large block of tenement dwelling houses, completely gutting them. Many families were rendered homeless.

BRUSSELS FINANCES.

Some interesting features of the effect of German occupation on the finances of the city of Brussels have just been made public. The cost of the German occupation, Reuter's Agency learns, was exactly £12,680,000. This sum included an expenditure of £1,020,000 on communal soup, £680,000 in out-of-work donations, £1,400,000 on purchase of goods, £6,000 on Brussels men kept as prisoners in Germany, £21,600 on French and Belgian refugees, and £140,000 on various aids for the middle classes. The debt of the city had risen by May last to £5,566,000. It is proposed to raise a loan to cover the deficit.

PENAL SERVITUDE FOR RIOTOUS NEGROES.

As an outcome of a recent affray at Cardiff, when coloured men attacked American seamen, two negroes, John Davies and Robert Wilson, at Swansea Assizes were sentenced to three and five years' penal servitude respectively for shooting with intent.

The ex-Kaiser is reported to be suffering from the effects of a cold, and the ex-Kaiserin from a slight weakness of the heart.

SLINGING MUD.

Why, oh why do some individuals, an Army chaplain least of all, find it necessary to sling mud?

Not many weeks ago, a tactless expression which fell from the lips of a learned judge aroused the ire of many officers and men, who quite naturally resented the employment of a term which at first sight gave the impression that Tommy was an inferior being. That opinion is of course unshared by any thinking man or woman.

Now we have the crusade against immorality, which some will have us believe, is to be part and parcel of our Victory celebrations. In other words, there are individuals who are unable to separate an honest expression of joy at victory from connection with vice. It was ever thus.

One has only to cast the mind back over the past four years to be reminded of the "Mrs. Grundy" scares, the product of imaginations run run riot.

Now when the lie direct has been given to these charges against the much maligned soldier, we find an Army chaplain, who has apparently been employed in the censoring of correspondence, relieving himself of the opinion that hopes very few letters written by English soldiers fell into German hands, because they were so illiterate.

This opinion will not be shared by many officers, who often at the expense of much needed rest in dug-out and trench, have censored the letters of the men under their command.

"Mostly humorous, sometimes sad, always well phrased, they become a recreation instead of an irksome duty to me during a long spell 'in'," is one censor's opinion. Often enough it was an irksome duty to wade through the formidable pile of letters which came along in the early days of the spell "out", yet there was always the hand ready to help and speed the departure of the epistles, which a chaplain would not have had fall into German hands.

They were not all billets-doux of scholarly finish. Sufficient that they breathed sentiments which, put into practice, now permit even a chaplain to give free expression to his views. Without that effort we should have been lost. Let Tommy's critics and those who would sling mud, remember that.

THE MOTOR "RUSH."

Thousands of demobilized soldiers are to-day entering the market in quest of the motor-car or cycle they dreamed of acquiring, when their days of active service in the fighting forces were finished.

Back in civil life they seek for the object of their ambition, but, unfortunately, far too many have been severely stung through ignorance of the qualities of a car or cycle and of the methods of the motor trade. It is to sound a note of warning to those likely to be demobilized shortly, that these lines are written.

In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, the price demanded in England is far above the running value of a second-hand car. Profiteering in this branch of trade as in many others is rife, and to those with little knowledge of motors the pitfalls are great.

Patience is above all things needed just now. Do not be in a hurry to snatch at any offer which on the face of it seems a bargain. Bargains are practically non-existent to-day in the motor world.

Eighty pounds, for instance, is an absurd figure to pay for a second-hand motor bicycle, or with a side-car £150 to £180. They are not worth it. Neither is a light car, for which £400 to £600 is asked. Yet such prices are being foolishly parted with, by those desperately eager to possess cars or cycles.

The wise course is to wait another six months or more, when there is a possibility of the new post-war models being available. Then you stand a chance of obtaining a new light car for about half the money demanded to-day for the second hand machine.

Motor manufacturers have been heavily handicapped during the war owing to many of their workshops being commandeered by the Government for making army motor vehicles or for the production of munitions.

Consequently the supply of cars to the civilian public has been almost nil. Much valuable knowledge has, however, been gained in motor construction and by designers of engines during the war.

All this knowledge will be put into the new post-war car, and consequently a cheaper and better motor-car will be the result.

CORRESPONDENTS WANTED.

The Editor of the "Cologne Post" wishes to appoint a representative in every unit of the Rhine Army who will act as correspondent, furnishing the paper with news of all the latest happenings.

THE HORRORS OF PEACE.

We have a real orderly room now that the war is over, and, moreover, it is quite a good one too. In fact, in the Belgian village in which we are billetted we have in one of the houses a room, exclusively set apart for that purpose, complete with tables, chairs, elderly bewhiskered pens, defunct blotting paper, and even a small room adjoining with a bed for the pay sergeant to sleep in and keep a watchful eye on the cash box during the night; while finally there are various stage properties in the shape of madame, five children, and a dog, named Adèle.

Alas! No longer now can I weigh off men by eights on the sandbag steps of "Rosemary Villa" and sign papers while eating breakfast! No! G.H.Q. has decided that the war is over, and the C.S.M. that peace-time ritual must be observed.

Punctually therefore at nine, I run hurriedly over my forty-five pockets, doing up the buttons, and set out with a firm tread and a sinking heart to the orderly room.

A stentorian bellow of "Party, Cherrrmmm!", a flash of buttons, semi-quaver salutes, bristling red moustache, and medal ribbons, as I near the office, warns me that the C.S.M. is afloat and in action; and bowing my head, I bashfully run through the barrage of waiting men into the pavilion. A series of pistol-like reports as the orderly room staff come to attention greets me on entry, and I sit down at my table, where in a minute the C.S.M. is at my side:

"Will you see the prisoners now, sir?"

I reply in the affirmative, and he exits right centre, followed by "voices off":

"Prisnernescort——Why the 'ell don't yer wipe yer ruddy nose, Mulligan, afore yer comes 'ere——And stand up straight when I'm talking, yer jelly-backed concertina a 'anging round the escort like threepennorth of wet dishcloth——Prisnernescort! Cherrrmmm! Quickmarchright-wheelmarktimealtrightturn! Sapper Mulligan, sir!"

I hastily glance at the charge sheet.

"Sapper Mulligan, you are charged with being unshaven on parade. Corporal Hemsworth!"

A young corporal enters, salutes, and on being asked for his evidence, clears his throat noisily, fixes his eyes on a lithograph in three colours of "Le Roi Albert" hanging on the wall opposite, and reels off the following without tone or punctuation.

"Sir, on the morning of the tenth instant I was inspecting Number Three Section on the eight-thirty parade I see Spr. Mulligan not shaved I say you ain't shaved he say no I ain't shaved I say why ain't you shaved you're for office termorrer." His mouth shuts with a snap, and, forcibly detaching himself from "Le Roi Albert," he leaves the room.

In answer to my enquiry, Spr. Mulligan admits he was not shaved, and states he has no razor; further examination elicits the fact that he "lorst it on the Somme." I gaze sternly at the culprit, but it is generally at this most impressive point that madame enters, to ask how the pay sergeant slept and if he liked his bed, or to retrieve some children, or Adèle, or bath, from awesome contemplation of the escort's bayonetted glory.

Indeed, on one terrible occasion, out of the kindness of her heart, she brought in a chair in order that the prisoner might sit down, as he looked (after a two days "drunk") si fatigué.

I overcome any little obstacles of this sort, my motto being "business as usual," and after a few more confidences, Spr. Mulligan departs, or rather, owing to the C.S.M., "is departed," leaving the Government richer by three days pay.

Then I take a firm grasp on my pen, wipe the sweat from my brow, and seize the papers in the "In" tray.

Wading through these, I sign my name everywhere, including three "outers" on the office blotter, and throw them into the "Out" tray. Then, seizing my hat, I take an affectionate farewell of the pay sergeant, and fly to the obscurity of the Mess and the new number of "La Vie Parisienne," so that I can for a moment turn to the lighter side of peace. UBIQUE.

PARADE SERVICE.

A hum of voices, an occasional subdued laugh, a shuffling of feet, all echo through the crowded building, which on weekdays is a cinema or small theatre, but for to-day is a church. Every row of seats is filled to its utmost capacity. In front are the officers of the battalion, self-consciously twisting prayer books about in their hands and wishing the men would not make so much noise; while behind is Thomas Atkins in force, audibly expressing his opinion of compulsory services in general and this one in particular.

A sudden hush falls on the assembly, as a figure in surplice and cassock emerges from the wings of the tiny stage—the Padre. He advances to the centre and, book in hand, tries to make his voice carry above the renewed murmuring. He does not, in his wisdom, ask them to stop their talking, and thereby annoy them at once. No, he knows a trick worth two of that.

Hymn No. 84, "Fight the good fight," swells out in a few minutes from several hundred lusty throats, and a large part of the discontent, impatience, and general sense of inattention, which always accompanies a compulsory church parade, disappears, as the notes die away, out of the small windows into the hot summer air. Tommy is always put in a good temper by a sing-song, be it a hymn or the latest revue melody.

The organist at the one battered piano crashes out the "Amen," and seats are resumed with a shuffle and a clatter. Again the under-current of murmuring breaks out, though this time more subdued, while the Padre says a few prayers and announces another hymn. This is sung with energy, and then every man half-unconsciously comes to attention for the Creed, the "God save The King" of religion, after which a few more prayers follow, with a short lesson. The general air of indifference has now gradually vanished, as the Padre knew it would. Both those who have come to the service because they had to, and those who have come because they like it, are alike quiet and attentive.

"There is a green hill far away" follows with vigour, and the sermon is begun. A few words, a joke or two, at which the men laugh heartily, and the speaker has his congregation hanging on his lips. The ground is ready to sow the seed.

Follow some brief sentences, a new idea made plain, a new point of view driven home and backed with a quotation; a short address, preached by a man to men, all in pithy, terse utterances and slang of the day; no fine trappings, just plain rock-bottom speech straight from the heart. Not a man is there, as they all rise for the final hymn, but feels he has learnt a little something, has made a good resolution, has seen things in another light, perhaps only just thinks the Padre is a good old sort. But even that last is something; for a good old sort can do more than most with the men.

The seed has been planted. Who can tell, behind the nonchalant, unemotional exterior of the British soldier, who affects to despise religion, whether it has taken firm root?

The last "Amen" sounds from the piano; there is a sudden click; and the notes of "God save the King" rise into the heated air. Then a tramping and shuffling of feet, a bellowing outside of "Fall in, the markers!" and it is over.
UBIQUE.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

THAT LEAVE.

Sir,—May I suggest that the railway companies running trains out of the principal London termini between 16.00 hours and 18.00 hours daily set aside accommodation for officers and men bound for the provinces?

It is particularly disconcerting to find after a chase from Victoria station that one's endeavour to get to the North of England the same night and thus take full advantage of leave, is frustrated by the selfishness of individuals who not content with annexing a seat for themselves display bags and coats on those vacant for late arriving friends.

That was my experience at King's Cross. A "choice piece" evidently the property of a war profiteer judging by her manners had annexed three seats and looked quite surprised when I told her that I intended to occupy one.

There is too much straphanging by men but for whose efforts travel in England to-day would be very difficult. "FED UP."

FACE FUNGUS.

Sir,—There are lots of men in the commissioned and other ranks now who have not any idea of the soldier instinct. They are civilians camouflaged by khaki and they can't forget that they are civvies.

They kick at the soldier spirit and can't leave their old habits behind them when in the Army.

That is why one sees freaks wearing side-whiskers masquerading in the King's uniform. Thank goodness though, they won't long be with us. Steadily these temporary folk are being demobilized.

I don't think the regular officer who remains will go in for "face fungus" or other unauthorized decorations. B. C. H.

AIRMEN AND SALUTING.

Sir,—"President" evades the charge made by Major B and makes some irrelevant remarks as to "antipathy to the R.A.F."

If anything of the kind exists it is due to many airmen not behaving in a soldierly way. It is up to them to salute smartly like other troops, and until they do they will not regain the status that they held.

When they were part of the Army as the R.F.C. I think it will be agreed they were smarter than now. One sees airmen strolling in the streets with hands in pockets and generally not acting as member of H.M. Forces should.

I have a brother in the R.A.F., so am sorry to have to say this. J.H.V.

Sir,—With regard to Major B.'s letter, it certainly is distressing that these "Adastrians" should display so lamentable a lack of knowledge of correct procedure and an equal want of tact in their methods of admitting it.

Yet, is it really necessary that Officers of Field Rank should display identical deficiencies while other and more proper means are still open to them?

Can it be that the omission of a salute has been taken as a personal affront instead of as a failure to admit in ceremonious fashion the recognition of his Majesty's uniform under a varied guise? REGULAR SUBSCRIBER.

WHY ONLY THE MARRIED?

Sir,—I don't see why "Disgusted" should be disgusted as he tries to make out he is.

"Going on for Thirty" may have youth on his side, but he has sense as well. His views may be unconventional, but they are sound enough, even if his plan is somewhat impracticable.

The British soldier out here is differently placed to the French or Belgian who has no gap of water between him and his home friends and can see them oftener. They will be able to visit him, too.

The British can only get to Blighty once in a while for a week or two, and, as "Going on for Thirty" says, the time is too short to get to know a girl, and engagements as the result of leave are mostly failures. Most of us want to marry nice girls in Blighty and I agree that it is the unmarried who ought to come out here.
W.W.A.

HAVE THEY FORGOTTEN?

Sir—As a serving soldier, I was interested in "Serving Soldier's" letter. Surely he must realise that the snobbishness which is again becoming prevalent is only what it was before the war?

A few years ago an officer took his brother (a private), to a London theatre. The former was in evening dress and the latter in uniform. The seats which they were to occupy were stalls. Did they occupy them? Not a bit of it. They were informed that men in uniform were not allowed in the stalls, that only evening dress was de rigeur, and that the soldier must either have his seat transferred to some other part of the house, where soldiers were permitted, or have his money refunded.

This was a deliberate insult, not only to the soldier who was a member of a good family, but also to the King's uniform. Needless to say neither the officer nor his brother witnessed the performance.

Another instance which I would like to quote but the truth of which I cannot vouch for, is this. A certain park in London at one time exhibited a notice to the effect that "Dogs and soldiers were not admitted". C.R.H.

A CRICKET POINT.

Sir,—In reference to your "Unusual Incident" reported in to-day's "Post," I consider it unfair to give a batsman out under such circumstances, and I certainly do not think such a decision could be found in the "Rules of Cricket."

When bowling, the bowler is supposed to deliver the ball in the manner required in the rules. Should he not do so the ball immediately becomes a "no ball," from which it is not possible to get a batsman out.

When standing out of the popping crease the batsman risks two chances of being run out: (1) by the other batsman playing the ball on to his wicket, and (2) by the bowler getting a sharp return from the wicket-keeper. The point, however, seems debatable. "BUZZ."

[Law 35, which was reproduced in this column yesterday, covers the point at issue.—Ed.]

PLAIN JOHN.

I heard them talking after "post" had come,
And from their speech I fancied with what ease
Their little circles I could call to mind:
Edgar spoke often of his "people" and their ways,
Their preferences and the things they never did;
Of how he should be pleased when his release
Would let him "mix" with his own set again.

Ernest talked loudly of "our residence,"
The lawn, the summerhouse, the "bathroom" up-to-date,
The girl-friends of his sisters and his chums.
But John — John simply said that he had had a line,
Not from his pater, or his mater, or "the Guv.";
Not from the office — but from Home!

SAVED BY A V.A.D.

Alarming Incident at Blinded Soldiers' Regatta at Putney.

The blinded soldiers of St. Dunstan's held a regatta at Putney on Tuesday. The weather was very bleak, but, in spite of this, the soldiers carried through their programme of racing with remarkable zest. In the event for one-armed men, the winners, Rose and Killingbeck, offered to row again as the second pair had broken an oar, and this excellent spirit prevailed throughout the day.

The water conditions became so bad with the turn of the tide—the wind being dead against it—that an abandonment of racing was seriously considered. An attempt was made, however, to bring off two four-oared races.

In the first, the three boats engaged collided, and in the second one of the boats became waterlogged. Miss Stein, a V.A.D. nurse, who was acting as coxswain, swam about the boat, encouraging her blinded crew, and guiding them back to the boat, where they held on until the police launch arrived. All were rescued, largely owing to Miss Stein's calm and courageous behaviour in a very dangerous situation.

COLOGNE CRICKET WEEK.

Conclusion of Infantry v. The Rest Match at Lindenthal.

The match between the Infantry officers and those of "The Rest" of the Rhine Army, played in connection with the Cologne Cricket week, provided interesting sport at Lintenthal.

The Infantry opened the game and scored 89 in the first innings, "The Rest" compiling the useful total of 241. The second day's play brought interest to a high level when the Infantry knocked up 284, Major Arkwright (70) and Major H. Yates (65) being the chief contributors in this total.

With an hour and a quarter to play, The Rest went in with the idea of making a bold bid for victory by scoring about two runs a minute. They accomplished this by half, stumps being drawn with the score 64 for 2. Details of three innings were given yesterday, the scores in "The Rest" 2nd innings being as follows:—

Major S. D. Douglas-Jones b Yates	39

"COLOGNE POST" CUP COMPETITION: KEEN RIVALRY AMONG LEADERS.

The Cricket Cup Competition has arrived at the stage when probable League winners are being looked for and at present this is no easy matter. Competition amongst the more successful clubs is becoming keener as each match is played, and as each league has several clubs well in the running, interest increases as each table is published. Below will be found the latest relative positions of the clubs in the Euskirchen League.

WELL HELD.

Excellent Fielding By 83rd General Hospital at Langenfeld.

83 (DUBLIN) GEN. HOSP. (72) v. SOUTHERN DIV. R.E. (37) at Langenfeld on Saturday. Capt. Norman's slow bowling accounted for 7 of the R.E.'s wicket at a cost of 13 runs. The 83rd fielding was good, six catches being held. Capt. Norman (25) and Capt. Robinson (14), batted steadily for the Hospital.

EASTERN DIV. H.Q. (176) v. 207 SQUAD R.A.F. (63). The R.A.F. made a good start, 39 being scored before the first wicket fell, but the remainder put up a poor show and were dismissed for 63, chief scorers being Sgt. Flowers 17 and Billingsby 18. Bowling:—Col. Dobbie 6 for 24 and Cpl. Gill 4 for 9. The Eastern Division opened their innings well and passed the R.A.F. total with the loss of two wickets. The chief scorers were Spr. Thompson 45, Rev. Brumwell 40 (not out), Pte. Walker 31 and Col.-Sgt. Sandell 25. Bowling: Lieut. Champ 5 for 83, Sgt. Flowers 2 for 46 and Sidler 3 for 32.

"MAPS," 4 F.S. BN. (71) v. 1/4 YORK AND LANC (42) at Blücher Park, Nippes, on Tuesday. L/C Saunders was top scorer for Maps with 20, while Pte. Payne with 19 was the Hallamshire's most successful bat.

EASTERN DIV. SIG. COY., (61) v. 51 K. LIVERPOOL, (43) at Bonn. The bowling on both sides was exceptionally good and the Sigs., had 8 wickets down for 16 but Sig. Holsworth with a well played 33 pulled the game out of the fire for his side.

2nd BN. M.G.C. (103 for 2 decd.) v. "G" A.A. BTY. (70 for 8) at Bonn on Sunday. C.Q.M.S. Mitchell with 49 not out was chief scorer for the M.G. while the Archies most successful batsman was Gnr. Newbold (21). The result was a draw.

CAVALRY DIVISION H.Q. (87) v 52nd NORTHUMBERLAND FUSILIERS (38) at Quadrath. The Cavalry found runs difficult to get against the bowling of Lieut. Hargreaves and Lieut. Emery. Five wickets were down for 38, but thanks to Lieut. Neil (18) Spr. Smith (17), and Cpl. Adams (15), 87 was reached when the last wicket fell. The Northumberlands started in a very bad way, their first three wickets falling for 10 runs, Lieut. Neil bringing off two excellent catches in the slips. Lieut. Hargreaves batted splendidly and when he was smartly caught by Lieut. Fox behind the wickets, he had 20 to his credit, out of the 29 scored for the 6th wicket. The remaining batsmen were quickly disposed of. A word of praise must be given to Cpl. Adams of the Cav. Div., who in seven overs, two of which were maidens, claimed 8 wickets for 16 runs.

Gibson, and later on a "hat trick" was accomplished by Sgt. Smith. For the winners good scores were made by Pte. Kimber, who played an excellent innings and carried his bat for twenty-four, and Pte. Ewens, who gave a very fine exhibition of free hitting all round the wicket, and compiled the top score of the team, 29. Ptes. Tudor and Thomas bowled well for the Bus Company.

"SIGS" BOWLER IN FORM.

7 Wickets For 12 Runs Against 53rd N.F's.

ARMY H. Q. SIGNALS, (111), v. 53rd NORTHUMBERLAND FUS. (27) at Klettenberg on Wednesday Howarth and Leyland opened the Signals innings and soon mastered the bowling and carried the score to 67 before Leyland was dismissed. Howarth and Fraser soon rattled the score along to 96. Fraser scoring 18 in merry style including a six. Howarth was eventually dismissed for a well played 56. The Fusiliers opened against Fraser and Wilson, and the batsmen soon found themselves in difficulties, especially against the deliveries of Wilson who took 7 wickets for 12 runs.

"E" CORPS SIGNAL COY. (34) v 185 SIEGE BTY. R.G.A. (25) at Flamersheim on Tuesday. Boddy of the Signal Coy performed the hat trick, taking 6 wickets for 4 runs.

LONDON DIV, M.T. COY. (110) v. 29th BN. M.G.C. (94) at Stumpf on Tuesday. The M.T. Coy.'s first four wickets fell very cheaply, the score only being 4, thanks to the excellent bowling of Lieut. Astill. Lieut. Howard and Lieut. Wright then got together and made an excellent stand putting on 45 runs before the former was bowled, after making a well played 28. Other scores were, Pte. Goddard, not out, 19, Pte. Lewis, 12. Lieut. Wright played an excellent innings and made the top score of 34. The M.G.C.'s first three wickets fell for 24 but Lieut. Astill put the score up to 69 before he was caught in the slips by Lieut. Wright, after hitting a rapid and well played 41. Other scores were Cpl Sadler 17 and Major Harding 10. For the winners Pte. Jacobs bowled very well, getting 8 wickets for 30. This was the M.G.C.'s first loss.

Cpl. R. W. Belk. N. Zealand E.F.	43

In the final heat of the Cheylesmore Cup, Machine Gun Corps, Grantham, beat Royal Marine Light Infantry, Plymouth.

BUCHAN AND THE ST. LEGER.

BY CENTAUR.

The concluding half of the Newmarket Meeting was marked by the victory of Buchan in the Prince of Wales' Stakes. Once upon a time this was a ten thousand pound race, but it has declined in value steadily until now it is worth little more than £1,000. Buchan gave a delightfully smooth show, and as he proved that he is well and improving he certainly looks like having the St. Leger at his mercy. Major Astor's horse had a very poor opposition to account for, but he did his task most gallantly, and his trainer now informs me that his next race will be the Eclipse Stankes at Sadown Park on the 19th inst.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

"Le Jockey Du Jockey".

The death is announced at the age of 58 of M. Albert Bernier, for many years editor of the leading French sporting paper, "Le Jockey."

All-England championship.

The National Federation of Anglers has revived the All-England Championship match this year, and it will be fished in the Ancholme, at Brigg (Lincolnshire), in September.

With the Aga Khan.

J. H. Taylor (Mid-Surrey) will leave England on July 29 for a month's tour of the Continent in company with the Aga Khan. Switzerland and France will be visited, among other places, but only private play is expected to take place.

Fate of a Pike.

A large pike of 32lb. has been found dead with a flight of hooks in its throat in a lake near Stony Stratford, Buckinghamshire. It had evidently been hooked and broken away from some angler, who had thus lost a very fine specimen fish.

Stage Golfing Society.

Thirty members of the Stage Golfing Society competed at Ashford Manor in the 36 holes competition for the gold cigarette case presented by Mr. Percy Hutchison. The winner was Mr. Thorpe Bates (handicap 4) with a score of 80 and 81—161 net.

Broke His Thumb.

Bullough, in trying to make a catch off Stephens, in the Warwickshire v. Lancashire match broke the thumb of his left hand and had to retire from the game.

F. C. Transfer.

A. W. Smith, centre forward of Birmingham F.C. has been transferred to West Bromwich Albion. Morries, who has been attached to the R.A.F., has once again signed up for the Throstles.

From the "Wolves."

The Newport County A.F.C. have signed on Pat Collins and A Brooks, the Wolverhampton full backs, and R. Barnacle, of Coventry City. An effort is being made to raise £4,000 by 5s shares.

Jimmy Wilde as Golfer.

At golf Jimmy Wilde's handicap is four, and it is quite clear that the noble art has not spoiled his proficiency in other games where accuracy of touch, judgment of distance, and steady nerves are just as important as in boxing.

Appeal to Breeders.

The stock of brood mares in Belgium has been so depleted through the war that an appeal has been made to French breeders to sell them some mares in foal. It is also intended to buy a number in England, and sell them at auction in Belgium.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

More Drama For Rhineland.

The Havre Repertory Company will arrive in Cologne on Monday to add their popular quota to the entertainments in Rhineland. The artistes include Messrs Henry Oscar, D. J. Williams, A. Field, J. Nugent, B. O'Brien; Misses Adah Dick, Edith Ryland, Shelly Carlton, and Yvette Pienne. Performances will be given in connection with Y.M.C.A. amusements by arrangement with Miss Lena Ashwell.

Another Lady Artiste.

Additional talent is shortly to be infused into the British Rhine Army Dramatic Company by the arrival of Miss Frances Chisholm. In the past, this artiste has been associated with many successful theatrical performances, while during the greater part of the war she was engaged in the V.A.D. work in France. She will make her debut with the Rhine Army Dramatic Company in "Helen with the High Hand," by Arnold Bennett, which will be produced in a few weeks.

In few Words.

In many small villages, the troops are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the touring concert parties.

A very enjoyable dance was held on Wednesday night at the Leave Club; the excellent playing of the Band of the 52nd. Durham Light Infantry made the dancers keener than ever.

JACQUES.

OLD SCOUTS' CORNER.

Last Saturday was a red letter day in the short history of our Old Scouts' Circle for it was the occasion of our Peace Celebration which was held in the tastefully decorated grounds of the Y.M.C.A. at Lindenthal.

After a short whist-drive in which nearly all participated, tea was served and this was done ample justice to.

The guest of honour was Captain H. Heydemann, M.C. a former London Commissioner, who gave us a most interesting talk. The secretary pointed out that the expenses of the tea and entertainment given by the Lena Ashwell Concert Party in the evening, and greatly appreciated by all, were provided by the Scoutmaster and boys of the 163rd North London Troop, and the Liverpool Commissioner (Lieut. A.H. Noble).

Mrs. Jarvis, who supervised the catering, is deserving of our praise, for the success of the proceedings was due in no small measure to her ceaseless and untiring efforts.

On Wednesday evening a demonstration of first aid, arranged by Pte. Butler, was given by Corporal Sands, and in a subsequent sing-song, Pte. Creamer sang a song extolling the virtues of Yorkshire "pudden."

To-morrow (Saturday) we are going to Brühl, and will meet outside the station at 2.40 p.m. so as to catch the 2.55 p.m. train. There will be no necessity to bring food.

This is the last occasion that the undersigned will have the privilege of writing these notes, as he is returning to England. 2nd Lieut. W.J. Paine has kindly consented to act as Hon. Organising Secretary and he will be assisted by a committee.

That the circle may continue to grow and enjoy an increasingly successful time is the sincere and farewell wish of the original

Echoes from Rhineland.

Sunshine Back Again.

Animals trees and plants took a new lease of life yesterday, when the summer came into its own again. One could not resist the temptation to walk abroad and enjoy to the full the charm of the sunlight. The weaker sex cast off the gloomy apparel of the uncertain days of the past week and appeared in dresses of shimmering colourings, looking so delightfully cool that wearers of the sombre khaki cast envious eyes in their direction. There is no mistaking the fact that sunshine gives an added zest to life, a fact noticeable by reason of the cheerliness of one's friends. The clubs and places where men congregate in these days were singularly deserted about midday onwards. Was it that the usual loungers were tempted to hie themselves Rodenkirchen way and enjoy the pleasures and sights of unrestricted mixed bathing?

About Motor Driving.

The absurdity of treating motor cars as playthings was exemplified on Tuesday at Merheim when the crashing of a tender into a tree is alleged to have been caused by the driver of a lorry in front, in endeavouring to avoid being overtaken, swerved from one side of the road to the other. There seems, one cannot but notice, to be a growing tendency on the part of chauffeurs to drive far too quickly through the busy streets of the big towns and the screeching and hooting of an extraordinary variety of warning contraptions, while clearing the way effectively, are calculated to cause great irritation to pedestrians.

Tiger's as War Savers.

The 51st Battalion Leicestershire Regt. made its first effort as a War Savings Association last week, when on one day a sum of over 41,000 marks was subscribed, 534 certificates being bought outright. It is some time since the men of this unit drew their credits, so that a total of 100,000 marks is expected by the end of the month.

No Old Wine.

A discussion on music in Cologne was recently taking place in a well-known R. A. Mess, when the naval officer present asked an enthusiastic young sub if he had been to "Old Vienna" at the — — Theatre. Very interested, the young man replied that he had not. The last time he visited that particular theatre "Alt Wien" was being played. He said "but that is Old Vienna in German." "It is Alt Wien, not Alter Wein (Old Wine)" replied the surprised naval man. Amidst much laughter the sub was heard to remark: "Well, I said at the time that I did not see much old wine about the piece."

Laying the dust.

There have been many interesting comparisons between British customs, habits and methods and those of Germany. In the matter of dust laying by watering the streets, it must be generally admitted that the German is very far advanced. The many uses to which the electrical power of the tramway system is put includes the spraying of the roads and this in done so efficiently that pedestrians are rarely troubled with dust clouds. The tank attached to an ordinary tram car having been filled with water, practically the whole width of the street operated upon is sprayed at the rate of about eight to ten miles an hour. The system is one that might well be adopted in England and elsewhere with advantage.

For the Prospective Colonist.

A great many soldiers are thinking of making their homes after demobilization in the colonies. Any information on these lands across the sea is therefore acceptable, and the Year Book and Guide to South and East Africa, which has recently been issued by the Union Castle Mail Steamship Co. Ltd. 3 & 4 Fenchurch Street, London E.C. will be found most informative. It contains over 700 pages of useful facts about these important African colonies, so that anyone intending to settle in either of them will have everything at his fingers' ends if he consults the book. It is most complete and accurate and its value is enhanced by many coloured maps, plans and diagrams. The book only costs half a crown, and ought to be in the hands of all prospective colonists in South and East Africa.

"Dinner up."

It is remarkable how the juvenile element in our villages have come to know the time of regimental meals. With the opening notes of "Come to the Cookhouse" there comes a rush of German youngsters armed with utensils, and they line up queue fashion to await the generosity of the cook. The appearance of the orderly officer is a signal for a general camouflage of cans and jugs, while a word from that individual will send the party scampering away. At the conclusion of the meal, liberal donations of stew and "duff" are eagerly snatched up and carried away to their homes. One wonders how often these little stomachs went short in the days before Tommy was seen on the Rhine. Every scrap is devoured, but appetite is renewed with next day's meal.

Oh, Those Fags.

"Have you ever felt sad, yet glad, elated yet depressed?" writes a correspondent. "It's a funny sort of feeling, but that is just how I feel. I have a black eye, a thick ear, a piece off my nose, and the state of my tunic means a rough quarter of an hour with the quartermaster. Still I am pleased, for I won, not the fight, because I did not fight anyone in particular. It was this way. Everything was going smoothly, when a sort of wireless message went round the battery. If you have been on leave, you know what I mean, when everybody jumps up at the same time and shoulders his kit without a word or order being spoken. Work ceased at once, and everyone made for the office. I was well to the front, being a Derby man, for I concluded that nothing short of demobilization would cause such a commotion. After a ten minutes struggle, in which blows were given and taken, I got to the front, paybook and all particulars ready, to get my forms filled in, and mentally disposing of my surplus kit. Well, was it demob? you ask. No, but nearly as good. Two packets of cigarettes a man for nix, and we haven't seen a fag for a month, except the issue."

The Musical German.

Few will not admit the fact that the Germans are a very musical nation; but there is one phase of the country's musical activities which must strike all who have the good luck to be in Rhineland, now the summer is upon us. One has only to journey to Wermelskirchen on a fine Sunday and spend the day in the neighbouring woods. Music will be heard all the day long, for it seems to be an established custom of the inhabitants to spend holidays in the woods, picnicing and singing, and music-making generally. Vocal four-part harmony is the usual thing, and favourite songs seem to be those of the kind which compare most in style to that of old English songs. They can hardly be termed "folk-songs," and to call them popular would immediately cause our English minds to class the songs with what we call "popular" in England, a very different thing.

Cobbled Highways.

It will be noticed in Rhineland that, except where tram lines are, cobbles are only half the size of those used in England and are laid half moon fashion in semi circular shape instead of end on end, horizontally or brickwork style as is the method in England. It would be interesting to know which way stands the most wear and tear. The German style certainly entails more labour in the making of the road, though it may prove worth while if the German method is more serviceable.

Lesser Echoes.

We want a regular correspondent in every unit of the Rhine Army. Don't all speak at once.

Everyone is asking "How will Peace Day be celebrated in Cologne?"

The Café Germania in Cologne was called the Piccadilly Café before the war.

A request has been circulated to units asking for "a return of wives in bulk."

We are promised a heat wave in Germany. In this event, we should have more open air concerts.

Mrs. Wormley, Mountsorrel, Leicestershire, would be grateful for news of Pte. W. G. Wormley, 41383, No. 10 Platoon, C. Company, 9th Norfolk Regt. reported missing.

Tommy should not be pestered for "shokolade" in these days judging by the window displays. German, American, Swiss and French chocolate compete for favour, but at what a price?

What are English manufacturers doing? Seventy-five per cent. of the articles one sees in the shops bear the U.S.A. stamp. American boot polish is the latest in window displays.

The endeavours of a swain to get a fräulein to ignore an admirer in uniform was one of the amusing sights of Hohestrasse last evening.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Sgt. W. A. Hilton, H.Q., Staff 63rd. H.A.B. Rhine Army.

AN ALPHABET OF THE RHINE ARMY.

A is for Army, the B.A.O.R.;
You see it in crowds everywhere near and far.
B for Berlin where we started of late,
But returned as we were after June 28.
C the Cashier where advances are got,
And three times a month you can draw quite a lot.
D for the Dances where generals abound,
And subaltern wall flowers in dozens are found.
E for the Empire — the Leave Club, I mean,
The jolliest place in Cologne that I've seen.
F is for Fräulein and also for frat — —
Perhaps we had better just leave it at that.
G for the German I speak with such care
To the Fritzes, who put on a blank puzzled stare.
H — Hohestrasse. — Keep to the right
And walk up and down till late in the night.
I is for Indent, filled in with care;
To-morrow (I don't think) the things will be there
J for the Jerries now homeward boun ;
We shall soon meet some friends of ours walking around.
K is for Kaffee like nothing on earth;
It costs but a mark, which is more than it's worth.
L for the Leave we are hoping to get;
We apply every week, but have not got it yet.
M for the Marks that we treasure with care,
In the hope they will soon be worth more than dead.
N for the Navy that lives on the Rhine
They dance and play bridge and keep jolly good wine.
O for the Opera — I went home to bed
After six hours of Wagner and wished I were dead.
P for the Post Office, where you're allowed
To spend half a day with the rest of the crowd.
Q for the Queue at the E.F.C. door;
Which seems to consist of a million or more.
R for the Rhine — we watch it with care,
But it never gives trouble and always is there.
S for the Staff, resplendent in red,
Who bag all the partners at dances it's said.
T for the Trams that tear down the street,
And try hard to kill all the people they meet.
U for the Uferbahn running to Bonn;
If you have any luck you may just get on.
V for the Victory Loan — my little lot
Was a 10 mark sweep ticket, and that's all I've got.
W for Wire, where the outpost is kept,
At spotting the smugglers we soon grow adept.
X for Xcelsior, now G.H.Q.;
Far too exalted for me or for you.
Y for the Y.M.C.A. where one gets
Tea or a lecture or else cigarettes.
Z for the Zoo where I went every day
Till they very unreasonably asked me to pay.

FUTURE OF THE RHINE ARMY.

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT OF ORDER AND PROBABLE DATES OF DEMOBILIZATION.

LONDON DRESSED FOR PEACE.

ARMY OF THE RHINE,

OFFICIAL STATEMENT ON DEMOBILIZATION.

The Secretary for War has issued a memorandum explaining the present position with regard to demobilization, and outlining the steps which have been decided upon for expediting the release of men still with the colours. Mr. Churchill states that the re-creation of the Regular Army is proceeding satisfactorily and that if the present rate of enlistment is maintained the probability is that all men who actually fought in the war will be released before the Military Service Act expires on April 30th next.

The memorandum says:

. . . Volunteering on the whole has been well maintained, and has lately improved. The average weekly intake of recruits and re-enlisted men is more than four times what the usual rate was before the war.

If this goes on it is likely that all men who actually fought in the field in the war will be released before the new Military Service Act expires, and it is hoped that a very large proportion will have been released before the end of the present year. Thus we should be able to provide for the defence of the British Empire in 1820 entirely by volunteers for the Regular Army and young recruits who did not join in time to share in the fighting.

The above is not a pledge in any sense of the word, because no one can foresee what will happen, and Parliament must remain supreme to take whatever steps are necessary for the common safety. It is, however, a very clear indication of what we believe is likely to happen, and what we are trying to bring about.

The Army of the Rhine, which now consists of ten divisions, is to be reduced to two divisions by the late autumn. This will effect a saving of about 150,000 men. The clearing-up in France and Flanders is also proceeding well, and as soon as the German prisoners have been sent home the men who are guarding them will become available. Altogether, by Nov. 1, it is hoped that the force in France and Flanders will have been reduced by more than 100,000 men.

By the end of the year the British Army will be reduced to about half its present strength.

INDIA AND THE MIDDLE EAST,

There are two parts of the world, however, where we cannot at present reduce our armies at all. In the Middle East, including Egypt, and in India, where the Afghans and Bolshevist agents are making trouble, we must maintain our force at full strength. But these are also the very places where there is the largest proportion of men who have been away from their homes for the longest time. As we cannot reduce these men, we have to replace them. Before we can bring them home, according to the promise which has been made, we must find men to relieve them. In these distant theatres there are also the difficulties of making the necessary shipping arrangements; but it is expected that the regular troops who are to form the permanent garrison of India will all be despatched by the end of this year to release the present temporary garrison.

These regular units are now being sent out, two or three battalions every week, and they will relieve an equal number of demobilizable men whom we have hitherto been forced to retain in India. First among those to come home from India will be those who were already on their way from Mesopotamia and who were stopped in India on account of the outbreak there.

We have not yet, however, got enough volunteer regular units ready to be able to provide reliefs. The following, therefore, are the rules on which we shall preceed:

1. (a) Definite orders have been issued that all 1914 men, except those in India and any there may be in Russia, shall begin their journey home within one month of the signature of peace namely, July 28.

(b) That all 1915 men and men over 37 years of age, except those in India and Russia, shall start for home within two months of the signature of peace, namely, by Aug. 28.

(c) That all other men who are now desirous and eligible for demobilization under existing regulations will start for home within three months of the signature of peace, namely by Sept. 28.

The above programme of releases will apply equally to men who, although demobilizable, have hitherto been retained for essential purposes usually described as "machinery of demobilization," but will not, of course, apply to men who, although eligible for demobilization, have volunteered to stay on for a period with the Armies of Occupation.

2. All Derby men who joined the colours for service before July 1, 1916, excepting those in India and Russia, will have begun their journey home by Nov. 1.

3. All 1914, 1915 men and all Derby men who joined the Colours before July 1, 1916, who are in India will similarly have started for home by Dec. 1, if not released earlier, provided always that no unexpected trouble occurs in that country.

4. All troops in Russia, who have not volunteered to join the missions, will have started for home before the winter, as already explained.

5. As from July 1, no conscript soldier will be sent to India or Mesopotamia, and no Derby men will be sent further from home than the Army of the Rhine.

Finally, it is hoped that it may be found possible to release in the early spring of next year all the remaining men of all classes who fought in the war, that is to say, embarked for any theatre of war or garrison abroad before the armistice was signed, excepting always such as may have volunteered to continue serving. It is impossible, however, at this distance of time to make any definite plans in this respect.

Moreover, it must be clearly understood that if peace is not ratified or if the ratification is delayed or if the Germans break out again, or if there are risings in India and Egypt, or serious trouble to Turkey, the above programme will have to be modified, and, here and there, there may be shipping delays. But assuming all goes well, we have every hope and intention of being able to give effect to it.

LONDON READY.

FINISHING TOUCHES TO RECORD DECORATIONS.

London yesterday was busily engaged in putting the completing touches to the preparations for to-day's peace carnival. The streets are gay with decorations, which are more elaborate than for any occasion since Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee. At many churches London school children yesterday offered thanks for peace, and something like 750,000 were present at services in St. Paul's Cathedral. The Fleet is now at anchor off Southend and a time-table has been issued showing when people may visit certain ships.

Discharged and disabled men in hospital have been sent to their homes. Their fares were paid and they were given ten shillings each for travelling incidentals.

The contingent of United States troops from the Army of Occupation which will form part of the procession will number 136 officers and 3,260 men, under command of Lieut.-Colonel Babcock. Two companies have been chosen from each of the first six divisions of the American Expeditionary Force. The are all infantry. The contingent was inspected yesterday morning in Hyde Park by the Prince of Wales, who was also present at the subsequent investiture parade at which General Pershing presented the American Distinguished Service Medal to eighty British officers.

GENERAL SERVICE MEDAL.

RIBBON TO BE WORN FOR ONE DAY ONLY.

The King has given directions that the ribbon of the British war medal shall be worn by all officers and men of the Navy and Army taking part in the march through London. It was officially stated last night that every effort is being made to issue the general service medal in time for the procession.

The qualifications entitling to the medal have not yet been finally decided and the issue of ribbon on the occasion of the celebration of the signing of Peace is not necessarily to be taken as establishing a title to the medal.

MURMANSK OPERATIONS.

ENEMY BEATEN OFF AND OUR CASUALTIES NIL.

The War Office yesterday issued the following communiqué:

On June 14th, 500 Bolshevists attacked our garrison at Zivdiya (11 miles south-east of Kyapeseiga and west of Lake Onega). The attack was beaten off after it had lasted for one and a half hours with considerable loss to the enemy, who retreated south, burning bridges; 22 dead and large numbers of wounded have been picked up by our pursuing force. We suffered no casualties.

Partisans on the western shore of Lake Onega attacked the Bolshevist troops who had landed on the Shunga Peninsula, capturing six prisoners and killing a considerable number of the enemy.

GERMANS EVADING TAXATION.

During the last six months, in spite of all surveillance of the German Government, enormous sums of money in German securities have been sent to neutral countries by rich German people seeking to evade the heavy taxes which will be imposed on fortunes.

A law to prevent this fraud is in course of preparation, which provides that all securities which do not bear a new official stamp will be of no value.

SCIENTIFIC DUEL

Two American practitioners, Dr. Zettel, of St. Paul, and Dr. Hill, of Minnesota, have decided to engage in what is virtually a duel between ordinary health and the latest methods of inoculating against disease. Zettel holds that the viciousness of germs has been greatly exaggerated. He relies upon healthy food and drink for protection. Hill will go through the preliminaries of inoculation and vaccination. Both undertake to expose themselves to the germs of typhoid fever, small-pox, bubonic plague, and other maladies in a duel to the death.

THE "SURRENDER" CASE.

EX-COMMANDING OFFICER'S FLAT DENIAL.

Hearing was continued in the court of Session, Edinburgh, yesterday of the action in which Colonel W. E. Gordon, V.C., sued the proprietors of the "People's Journal", Dundee, for £5,000 damages for alleged slander, in respect of a statement that he ordered the Gordon Highlanders to surrender in the retreat from Mons.

"THE KA'SER'S BODYGUARD."

Sergeant-Major W. B. Anderson, Aberdeen, said that he heard derogatory remarks about the 1st Gordon Highlanders in reference to the retreat from Mons. They were supposed to have given up without good cause. A man of the Cameron Highlanders once said to the witness that he had no cause to congratulate himself, as the Gordons were the Kaiser's bodyguard.

On another occasion, in a mess in Aberdeen, an Irishman in the A.S.C., who was somewhat inebriated, said the Gordons had lost more men at Mons than the A.S.C. had lost during the whole war. (Laughter.) He resented that, and the result was that the mess had to be cleared. (Renewed laughter.)

In his evidence, Colonel Neish said he commanded the 1st Gordons from 1911 until last April, when he was gazetted out on account of ill-health contracted on active service. He went to France with his battalion in August, 1914, and was taken prisoner on August 27, being transferred to Switzerland in 1916.

COLONEL NEISH'S DENIAL.

Counsel—It is suggested that you inspired the article complained of by Colonel Gordon? It is absolutely untrue. I had no knowledge whatsoever of its publication.

Cross-examined, witness said—He did not write to Colonel Gordon expressing regret that such an article had appeared, for a very good reason.

Counsel—Why?—Because the last time I had a word with Colonel Gordon, which was in October, 1914, when I addressed him by name, he said: "I shall not speak to you again; I will ruin you." Therefore I did not write to Colonel Gordon.

At the conclusion of his evidence, Colonel Neish said: I desire to make a remark in open Court as regards my situation in this case. I was cited as a witness for the defendants, and I am not a party in the case. Evidence has been led against me which I had no opportunity of refuting, but I am perfectly willing to have an inquiry in the proper quarter, where I shall be a party to the case and where I shall have an opportunity of calling witnesses. The last remark I wish to make under the circumstances is that I take this opportunity of most emphatically denying that I ever gave the order to the mixed column to surrender.

The jury, after deliberation, returned a verdict for Colonel Gordon and fixed the damages at five hundred pounds.

"KIND HEARTS . . ."

GERMANY ABOLISHES TITLES AND DECORATIONS.

The National Assembly discussed on Tuesday those paragraphs of the new constitutional law regarding the proposed abolition of the German nobility and of decorations. The Social Democrats' proposal was for complete abolition of all titles, but this was rejected. It was nevertheless agreed that all Germans must be held to be equal according to law with equal rights for men and women.

No titles are to be bestowed except upon persons holding high office in the state. No orders or decorations whatever are to be bestowed, nor is any German to be permitted to accept titles or decorations from a foreign Government.

CAPTAIN'S BIGAMY.

Captain John Robert Lamb, Army Pay Corps, was charged at Highgate Police Court with bigamy.

Mrs. Lamb, who lives at Sutton, said the marriage took place at Dalston Junction Baptist Chapel in 1907. They had known each other sixteen months before they married, and Captain Lamb did not tell her that he had been previously married.

Winifred Muriel Hales said she went through a form of marriage with Captain Lamb at the Hammersmith Registry Office in September 1918. She had known him since June 1917.

The defending solicitor asked for a remand. He said that when Captain Lamb married the first wife who appeared in this case he was already married, and the wife of that first marriage was living when he contracted the second marriage. He submitted that if he proved that to be the case Captain Lamb was entitled to be discharged.

The clerk said he could be further proceeded against for bigamously marrying the Mrs. Lamb who had come forward.

The magistrate said it was a curious point which had been raised.

The Solicitor: We are living in curious times, and we are having curious cases.

The magistrate granted a remand, and accepted bail in £200.

LOSSES OF GERMAN REGIMENTS.

Publication has commenced at Basle of the losses sustained by some of the Prussian regiments during the war. The Guard-Fusiliers lost 140 officers and 4,607 other ranks, the fifth Foot Guards 85 officers and 4,525 other ranks, while the Crown Prince's Grenadiers lost 114 officers and 5,292 other ranks.

MEDITERRANEAN COMMAND.

The Secretary of the Admiralty announces that Vice-Admiral Sir John M. de Robeck succeed- Vice-Admiral the Hon. Sir Somerset A. Gough-Calthorpe as Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean, to date from July 26.

MASKED ROBBERS.

RESTAURANT MANAGER'S STORY OF THE CRIME.

Further evidence was given at Bow street in connection with the charges against two men of being concerned in the robbery at the Elysee Restaurant, Coventry-street, when about £430 in Treasury notes was stolen, and in entering an office at Guy's Hospital and attacking Mr. Curry on June 20. A further charge was of highway robbery on June 24 in Belsize-lane. The accused are two Italians—Peter Albert Vincent, whose real name is believed to be Gaida, aged 20; and Natali Anda, 18, a waiter.

Edmond O'Flaherty, assistant manager at the restaurant, said that as he was leaving at night by a dark passage a hand was placed on his neck, and a voice said, "Stop, I am a policeman. Not a word; there's a man in the cellar." He was pushed along the passage, and the hall porter coming up with an electric torch he saw two masked men each presenting an automatic pistol at their heads. Vincent said, "We've come for money, and we want the keys. If you move hand or foot we will shoot you both dead."

VICTIM'S COURAGE PRAISED.

The two men threatened to shoot, and said they had been soldiers, adding, "It is the fault of your Government. We have no work or money, and have to get some."

Witness proceeded to describe how he was taken upstairs, still covered by the revolver, and after arguing to delay the men, eventually handed over the keys. Witness and his comrade were then taken to the stokehold, placed back to back, and bound with cord round the arms, legs and waist. Vincent on leaving remarked to witness. "You are the most courageous man I have ever met. I have never seen anyone act so calmly under such circumstances. When we tackle them they usually squeal."

The prisoners were remanded until Tuesday next.

CARSON'S SPEECH.

GOVERNMENT TO TAKE ACTION.

Amid cheers the adjournment of the House of Commons was moved by Mr. Clynes yesterday in order to call attention to the speeches made by Sir Edward Carson at Belfast. He contended that it was the duty of the Government to see that the law is equitably enforced, and he claimed that serious harm is done to the whole cause of law and order by Sir Edward Carson's utterances.

The Attorney General, in reply, said that if he had been satisfied that an offence had been committed or that there was any case to be tried, his advice would have been different. Mr. Maclean regretted the reply as it would give the impression that a distinction had been made between rich and poor. After further discussion a division was challenged, when the motion was defeated by 217 votes to 73.

BROWBEATING ULSTER.

Sir Edward Carson left the House before the debate, but to friends in the Lobby he gave his reasons for his recent declaration.

"Consider," said he, "this de Valera campaign in America, which is being conducted against the integrity of the British Empire by people who were our enemies all through the war. It is being utilized both on the other side of the Atlantic and this, with the obvious aim of browbeating Ulster and forcing her under some sort of Dublin Parliament. Now remember that throughout the war the Ulster men and women were among the foremost of the King's subjects in devoting themselves and their substance to the support of the Empire, and to the fight for liberty and justice.

"I know well how bitterly they feel the suggestion that their reward should be to be handed over to their enemies; and I spoke as I did in order to let it be clearly known that Ulster will not stand it."

AEROPLANE COLLISION.

INQUEST ON VICTIMS.

The Aldershot Coroner yesterday recorded a verdict of accidental death in the case of Lieutenant Herbert and Lieutenant Biziou, R.A.F., and Charles Hiley, fitter at the Royal Aircraft Factory, who were killed after a collision between two aeroplanes at Farnborough.

Major Hill, Royal Air Force, said that both pilots were on test flights and were not doing stunts. The weather was indifferent for flying, but not dangerous. The storm, however, would have an adverse effect on visibility.

OIL IN NORFOLK.

Drilling operations in the Norfolk shale fields, South of Kings Lynn, have revealed the presence of much larger quantities of oil shale than were formerly known to exist. During the present week strong pressures of gas, accompanied by showers of liquid oil, have been met with in two new experimental bores which are being drilled almost on the limits of the old proven areas.

Dr. Forbes Leslie, who is in charge of the geological work, estimates that the quantity of petroleum-producing shale already in sight exceeds 200,000,000 tons.

FATAL CLUMSINESS.

A disastrous explosion occurred on Tuesday at Wiborg as the result of the dropping of a box of explosives by two soldiers who were engaged in loading a wagon. The entire load was blown up. Both soldiers were killed and fourteen other persons injured, some of them fatally, while several buildings in the neighbourhood were destroyed.

There will not be a Naval Review at Spithead this year.

MRS. ISAACS IN COURT.

STORY OF INTRIGUE AND ELOPEMENT.

Driving up to the Sessions House, Clerkenwell, in a taxi-cab, Mrs. Vilma Isaacs, 24, the divorced wife of Mr. Marcel Godfrey Isaacs, son of Mr. Godfrey Isaacs, surrendered to her bail, her two sureties, one in £1,000 and the other in £500, having been a brigadier-general and a colonel. She was accused of having obtained goods by false pretences from Debenham's, Ltd., and also of having incurred a debt of £334 17s to that firm by fraud and other false pretences.

ANOTHER YOUNG GENTLEMAN.

"It is quite a plain, straightforward case," continued Sir Archibald Bodkin, prosecuting counsel, "of a woman desiring to adorn herself and to be possessed of a large quantity of expensive and luxurious articles without having to pay for them. She got them under a system of conduct in the course of which she told falsehoods, and never paid, or could pay, anything for them." The jury, counsel went on, would hear that the defendant was married in November, 1914, to a young gentleman named Marcel Godfrey Isaacs, the son of Mr. Godfrey Isaacs, whose name is familiar as being largely responsible for the great Marconi Company. Her maiden name was Williams. On Oct. 25 of last year she left her husband, her child, and her flat in Lauderdale-mansions, Maida-vale, and "went to consort and live together with another young gentleman named Louis Cox. "It is not necessary," said Sir Archibald, "to mention the particular branch of the Service in which he was engaged, but he was an officer in the Forces of the Crown."

EN ROUTE FOR AMERICA.

Divorce proceedings were commenced, and on April 10 a suit that was undefended by the wife was followed by a decree nisi dissolving the marriage, the ground being her misconduct with Mr. Cox. Towards the end of May she had clearly formed an intention to proceed to Canada viâ America, with Mr. Cox, and then began her relations with the prosecuting firm. She was allowed credit, and obtained goods, valued at £334 17s. A warrant was obtained for defendant's arrest, and she was eventually found at Euston Station en route for Liverpool. On being told she would be arrested, she said: "Cannot I pay for the things now? I did not do it to defraud Debenham's Ltd., but to make Godfrey Isaacs—by which, counsel interpolated, I understand her to mean her husband—pay something for me. I did not intend to defraud at all." She added: "I did not intend to cheat Debenham's Ltd. I was going to America with Mr. Cox to-morrow."

Prisoner was found guilty of incurring debt by fraud. The Recorder thought, however, that she was not actuated by any intention to defraud but by a desire to revenge herself upon her husband. He accordingly bound her over for two years and ordered her to pay fifty pounds towards the cost of the prosecution.

PRISONERS OF WAR.

SEQUEL TO AN ALLEGATION OF JOKING.

The action brought by Lord Newton against the "Daily Mail" for an alleged libel was opened before the Lord Chief Justice and a special jury in the King's Bench.

At the time the alleged libel was published Lord Newton was in charge of the Prisoners of War Department of the Foreign Office. The words complained of appeared on June 4, 1918, and were:

"We, not having the war and its horrors in our own towns, mines and fields, permit Lord Newton to treat our suffering prisoners in Germany as an opportunity for self advertisement, accompanied by pitiless jokes and sneers."

On December 2, 1918, these words were published:

"Lord Newton . . . . in a debate found occasion for a joke on the tragic sufferings of our prisoners."

Defendants denied that the words bore any meaning defamatory of Lord Newton, and said they were fair comment on a matter of public interest.

The case was adjourned.

WORK OF THE NAVY.

Some interesting details of the work of the navy during the war were given by Lieutenant-Commander Hughes, late R.N.V.R. and Admiralty official speaker, in an address on "The British Navy in the war," delivered on Thursday afternoon, before members of the Rotary Club. He said that of 915 German merchant vessels at sea at the opening of the war, only fifty-six got back home, and at the end of five months not a single German merchant vessel was at sea in any part of the world. At one time there were 3,200 British vessels, with 25,000 men, sweeping up German mines, and up to the end of 1917 they had destroyed 3,000 mines; but there were some 20,000 floating mines yet to be accounted for in the North Sea.

Perhaps it would never be realised how near this country was to "touch and go" when the submarine campaign of "frightfulness" was in operation, with its destruction of millions of tons of shipping and foodstuffs, and the murdering of 18,000 men, women, and children. The beginning of the end of the menace must be dated from the attack on Zeebrugge, which bottled up seventeen of Germany's largest submarines and some twenty-three German destroyers.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales will embark in H.M.S. Renown on August 5th at Portsmouth for his tour in Canada.

In the House of Lords yesterday Lord Newton informed Viscount Pryce that the Austrian Peace delegates have been informed that it was intended to annex to Italy large parts of the Southern Tyrol.

Baron and Baroness W. H. Schröder are desirous of relinquishing the use of their title granted to them by Royal Licence in 1912, and wish in future to be known and addressed as Captain and Mrs. W. H. Schroder.

THE VICTORY OF PEACE.

To-day London holds its high festival of Peace. In all the dignity and pomp of military pageantry the citizens of England's metropolis will witness the passing of War. The celebration is national, and throughout all the provinces of Britain men and women will joyously acclaim the advent of a new and better order.

The Englishman takes his joys sadly, we are told, and it is true that our countrymen lack the spontaneity and abandon which make for perfect carnival. We cannot emulate the natural gaiety of the Latin peoples, and as a nation we are not given to spectacle. Our self-consciousness is to blame, and self-conscious mankind cannot rejoice at the bidding of authority.

But the history of England lends itself to symbolism. In a grave and dignified fashion the traditions of our race can be worthily embodied in the trappings of "insubstantial pageant." Thus the genius of our people will express itself fitly in the majestic ceremonies of the nineteenth of July.

It is a paradox that the celebrations of peace are invariably accompanied by the panoply of war. Mars is foremost in the festival which proclaims his discomfiture; he is alive even in his obsequies. England's peace will be heralded by an unexampled display of England's martial might. Yet the paradox has its meaning and its lesson.

To-day there will be no vain display of overbearing power. The soldiers represent the men who fought and the men who died in her campaign against the symbolism of the sword. Their march will speak of heroism and sacrifice and freedom.

It is good to know that in Whitehall a memorial to the dead has been erected, a monument which will bear a Union Jack, a White Ensign, and a Red Ensign; and as the troops pass this simple, majestic pylon they will pay their tribute to the men who have fallen for their country. Our celebration would not have been worthily held without this solemn rite.

But the festival of Peace is a festival of Hope. Men rejoice that war is no more, and their joy is inspired by the spirit of optimism. The morrow will have its victories, but the victories of the morrow must be the victories of Peace.

OUR ADVERTISEMENTS.

We have received one or two letters of late from earnest correspondents in regard to the German advertisements which appear in these columns.

We stated soon after this paper started that there are certain categories of German advertisements which we should accept. Now that the blockade is raised, British merchants should have opportunities of trade with germany equal to those enjoyed by other allied and neutral nations.

There is a great market in Germany for goods which England produces, and which, if they cannot come by direct routes, arrive n evertheless by devious paths; England is thereby robbed of her legitimate earnings, while foreign houses acquire, as customers, German firms who would prefer to deal direct with us.

It would be contrary, therefore, to British interests to refuse to our firms the advantage of advertisements paid for by Germans who seek, either as agents or as direct purchasers, to import British commodities, and we should only drive British advertisers to have recourse to German papers — as has happened.

Further, Germany has to pay very big indemnities. If those indemnities are to be paid, Germany must produce and sell goods. When these goods do not compete with British staple industries there is no reason why they should not be advertised for export.

Lastly, the main circulation of the "Cologne Post" is in the occupied area. Advertisements of commodities which are useful to the army of occupation or to English traders coming out here in the interests of their firms will be accepted.

THE FIGHTERS.

The grey cat glided slowly up to the third step and limped along to the sunny end. The Persian from next door dozing there got up and sat on the step above. She always resented the matter of fact way the Parfitt's beast took things. The Persian decided to ignore the affront and said,

"I see he's home."

"What?" drawled the grey. "Oh yes. Came home yesterday." She settled herself camfortably in the corner closing her eyes in the enjoyment of the sun.

"Nasty mark you've got by your ear, dear," said the Persian in her sweetest purr.

The grey seemed to have fallen asleep.

"I heard he threw a boot at you, though of course I denied the rumour at once. I said I believed yours to be quite a respoctable family even though you did keep a dog."

The grey opened her eyelids ever so little and took a gentle grip of the step with her claws.

"It must be very trying for you to have a man in the house again; but the Master said only this mornirg that he thought Mr. Parfitt had done quite right in going off to the War."

The grey cat shot up, placed her fore paws on the step above and glared into the face of the shrinking Persian.

"Stop that!" she hissed. "When a man comes back with the D.S.O. and M.C. I don't care the skin of a sausage whether he throws a boot at me or not. I daresay I deserved it for clawing the baby when he pulled my tail. But I won't have you running him down. You just say another word against him and I'll have those pretty ears of yours in ribbons. "Respectable family" are we? You pap-fed profiteer! We've had to fight for our living these last four years. I've had to scrounge mice and rats in sheds and drains, or else starve; while you've been suffering indigestion on a pale mauve cushion with gold tassels. Bah!

"The Master says Mr. Parfitt has done his duty" does he? Captain Parfitt to you please, and don't forget it."

The grey cat's jade eyes burned within an inch of the Persian's quivering nostrils.

"And I don't care if he does keep a dog. I'll put up with it if he likes the brute. But I hope Towser will skake the life out of you, you pretty darling!"

A fierce bark of delight and a ruh of teeth and hair sent the Persian bounding along the pavement in desperate flight. The grey straightened out her arched back and settled down to a dignified lounge.

"I'm rather sorry now," she said to herself as she watched a little cloud of dust at the end of the street, "that Towser has to wear a muzzle."

SOLVING A PROBLEM.

The Demobilization Officer sighed wearily, a frown darkening his usually even-tempered countenance. His ruffled feelings were to some extent excusable, as the new Army Order affecting his department had entailed a considerable amount of work. "All men enlisting on and after February, 28th 1919, and whose fathers possess black-handled pocket knives, and who could be spared by their commanding officers, were to be demobilized forthwith, providing they were engaged upon work of military importance and were considered indispensable."

This straightforward statement although perfectly understood by those responsible for its draft, had caused many sleepless nights to the company quarter-master-sergeants who were called upon to produce nominal rolls of the "above mentioned."

The immediate result of the "necessary action" was the appearance of two privates standing outside the door of the demobilization office that morning.

Helping himself to one of his clerk's "Ruby Queens", with a motion of the hand, the officer signified his readiness to hear the claims of the two applicants.

"Well my man, What is it?" he enquired.

"Sir, I have been detailed to report to you this morning under Army Order No. 765920/A/53 GMB."

The lieutenant mentally noted the ease with which the applicant mastered the technicalities of the situation.

"What is your job?" he enquired curiously.

"Clerk to the Education Officer, Sir!"

"H'm, obviously work of military importance," he mused.

"Did you enlist after February the 28th of this year?"

"Yes Sir! on March the 1st. My father also possesses three pocket knives of which two are black "handled."

"Excellent! the only thing now is to find out if you can be spared."

At this juncture, the commandingofficer entered the room. The case was duly set before him.

After consideration, the latter decided that the applicant was engaged upon work of military importance, but as he could not be replaced, did not come under the provisions of the new order.

The man much crest-fallen, retired, and made way for the next aspirant for civil honours.

"Has your father a black-handled pocket-knife?" asked the lieutenant with careful deliberation.

"Yes Sir!" answered the other. "He owns a cutlery factory." The two officers exchanged looks; this was obviously not a man to be trifled with.

"How are you employed in the battalion?" was the next question. "I am the Commanding Officer's batman."

The two officers exchanged glances again, whilst between them passed some telepathic communication.

"I am very sorry," began the lieutenant, "Although the commanding officer would be willing to release you, but you understand the work of a batman is not considered of military importance within the meaning of the new order."

With the assurance of having handled a delicate situation with tact and masterful resource, he lit another "Ruby Queen", and strolled out with his chief to lunch.

Thus ended another episode in the process of Demobilization.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

FACE FUNGUS.

Sir,— I agree with your correspondents who deplore the fashion of side-whiskers.

It is unsoldierly, but how about the freakish wearing of long hair? Were those who favour lengthy locks, in musical comedy, or have they artistic leanings?

After all there are plenty of hairdressing shops about. MAGGIE.

Sir,— I am not going to concern myself with the merits of face fungus as aids to beauty.

If one turned critic then it would be possible for me to write for a day and a night anent the unsoldierly dressiness of many to be seen in uniform on the Rhine, but what I do take exception to is the snobbery of "B.C.H."

I have heard the expression "temporary folk" before. It savours of that snobbery which happily got it in the back of the neck when the "temporary" people, camouflaged civilians, came along and set out to win the war.

I am reminded of the "dug-out" who remarked to another of the cease-fire variety "I say old chap, I shall be glad to get back to real soldiering shan't you?" His "real soldiering" so far as the war was concerned was of the Base variety. "B.C.H." and others of his kidney make me sick. "TEMPORARY ONE."

PARIS FOR LEAVE.

Sir,—Many men going on leave are, I am certain, very often tempted to spend it in Paris, leaving "Blighty" until they go home once and for all.

Could not arrangements be made whereby men could spend the first seven days of their leave in Paris, and then proceed to England from there for the other seven days?

I am certain that no man would mind paying the single fare from Cologne to Paris, knowing full well that on arrival there, the time spent would well repay him. TOURIST.

WHY ONLY THE MARRIED?

Sir,— I think "Going on for Thirty" must have a perverted sense of humour to voice such an opinion of the rights of wives, as compared with those of the unmarried.

Any reasonable person will agree that in the event of any English women coming to Rhineland, the soldiers wives should be first.

Personally I was married three years ago, while on leave, and since, I have spent thirty-four days at home, and I am only one of many who have done the same.

I think that your correspondent's letter may be passed over as gush, but if he cannot manage without contracting an Anglo-German alliance, it is time he was sent home.

Altogether, I was surprised to see his nom de plume, as it reads more like the effusion of one "Getting on for twenty." BENEDICT.

Sir,— "Going on for Thirty" suggests allowing only single girls to come to Germany to give soldiers a chance of getting married and says it is not necessary for a married woman to come out here.

Under the circumstances should the suggestion be adopted, a wife would have to return after the ceremony.

He is afraid of his comrades marrying German girls. Is he afraid of himself? His nom de plume almost suggests it.

I wonder if he has made headway in the "Engagement Stakes" and wants his fiancee or German girl in order to finish the job. If not may I suggest that he proposes on his next leave and marries on the leave after. By that time he will be over thirty and nearly demobbed. LET 'EM ALL COME.

ADVERTISEMENT PILLARS.

Sir,—A correspondent rails against the advertisement pillars to be seen in Cologne and describes them as eyesores.

Apparently he lacks artistic sense, or he would realise the superiority of the German system. Would he prefer to see noble buildings plastered with unsightly advertisements or great hoardings disfiguring parts of otherwise beautiful thoroughfares and hiding architectural masterpieces?

Apparently, too, he has omitted to notice the fact that these pillars have in themselves a certain beauty of form. P. D. B.

DOGS IN CHURCH.

Sir,—Re "Gunner's" letter, I am, I presume, the sergeant in question. The climax he mentions, was caused, not because it was desired to have the dog in Church, but by the doorkeeper's ill-treatment of the animal.

I may further state that I am not the owner of the dog and had no knowledge of its presence in church until I saw it undergoing punishment. If "Gunner" is a lover of animals, he has a funny way of showing it.

A LOVER OF ANIMALS.

RACING IN OCCUPIED GERMANY.

Sir,—Much discussion is taking place regarding the merits and demerits of the Totalizator, and the opinion of Tommy in his own language—is that it's a "washout". I have talked the question over with other ranks from Private to R.S.M. and have found no one who has a good word for it.

At the Cologne Race Meeting, one heard complaints on every hand as regards prices paid by the Tote, for, with the exception of three races, all the winners were odds on chances, and after backing for a place in a field from 12 to 16 horses and being successful in spotting one of the first three, it is rather heartrending to pick up 21 marks for an outlay of 20, which was my experience in two races.

There would be no betting at such odds if one knew them, and it is a matter of mystery to all, why Tommy should not be allowed to shout the odds if he be so minded.

There would be much more enjoyment for the punter if bookmakers were allowed, and also the excessive crowding at the Tote would be done away with.

One is also curious to know what the total percentage deducted is. Perhaps other readers may have views on the question. W.R.B.

SOLITUDE.

There is the loneliness of peopled places;
Streets roaring with their human flood; the crowd
That fills bright rooms with billowing sounds and faces,
Like foreign music, overshrill and loud.
There is the loneliness of one who stands
Fronting the waste under the cold sealight
A wisp of flesh against the endless sands,
Like a lost gull in solitary flight.
Single is all uprising and downlying;
Struggle or fear or silence none may share;
Each is alone in bearing, and in dying;
Conquest is uncompanioned as despair,
But I have known no loneliness like this,
Locked in your arms and bent beneath your kiss.

International Boxing Match Result.

WILDE WINS ON POINTS AT OLYMPIA: DING-DONG 20 ROUNDS.

All sporting London made its way to Olympia on Thursday night to witness the Wilde—Moore boxing contest for £5000 (60 per cent for the winner, 40 per cent for the loser) and £500 a side.

Among those present were the Prince of Wales, Prince Albert, Prince Henry, and General Pershing.

The fight ran the whole 20 rounds, Wilde winning on points.

Wilde had much the best of the first round and came up very confident for the second meeting. Moore adopted a crouching attitude with his head well forward. At the outset he made free use of hitting with an open glove, the majority of his blows being in the nature of swinging slaps which did not seem to hurt Wilde in the least.

On the other hand Wilde fought splendidly and at the end of ten rounds held a great lead.

Things went well for the Welshman for another two rounds but thence onwards Moore made a great effort. He flung himself at his opponent and slashed wildly with both hands and for a time Wilde was unable to stem his persistent rushes.

In the fifteenth round Wilde re-asserted his superiority, Moore being badly punished and seeming groggy when he went to his corner.

The American made a surprising recovery in the sixteenth round, in which he fought Wilde all the way. Realising that his only chance of winning stood in administering a knockout he tried hard for it and at one time came perilously near achieving it.

Moore continued to show better during the next three rounds only to find, however, that Wilde still had a bit in hand.

In the last round the Welshman let himself go "all out" and completely nonplussed the American, beating him all ends up from start to finish.

Wilde's display was electrical and the last round was witnessed by the twenty thousand present all standing and cheering at the uncanny brilliance of the performance.

Mr. Eugene Corri announced Wilde as the winner on points.

THE "RANJI" OF MODERN PUGILISM.

An English sporting writer says:—"Wilde is the "Ranji" of modern pugilism, and can do things which no other living boxer dare attempt. If not such a classic model of a sound style, orthodox in defence as well as in offence, as Jim Driscoll was in his prime, his pace, precision, and power have never been surpassed.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

A CONTEST OF WITS.

I have been asked for humorous military anecdotes and quips that can be used by a producer of concert party "shows." Amusing things that have happened in the trenches, in billets or on parade, smart repartee and clever bon mots — funny mistakes, made by would-be linguists — all will be eligible. There are probably many of our readers who can contribute tit-bits that would help enliven any entertainments for the troops, and I am authorised to offer money prizes of FIFTY, TWENTY-FIVE, FIFTEEN and TEN Marks respectively for the four best humorous gems sent in.

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" will be the judge and his decision will be final. The competition will be open to all readers and the closing date will be July 31st. Brevity and "snap" are the points to aim at. Envelopes must be marked "QUIPS."

A New Party.

A concert party organised by the Adjutant of the 51st Royal Sussex Regt. gave its first performance at Neunkirchen on Tuesday, when the songs, costumes, and effects combined to make up a cheery show. Enjoyable items were contributed by Pte Thorpe, Sergt. Cogger, L/Cpl. Missen, Pte. Cook, Cpl. Newman, Pte. Fletcher, C.S.M. Wells, L/Cpl. Chessom, C.S.M. Bell, and Cpl. Southcott. The orchestra, under Cpl. Gardiner, did good work throughout the evening.

A la Harry Lauder.

The old failing of choristers generally, to pay rather more attention to their copies than to the conductor's baton was happily absent, save in one part-song, when for a few moments a slight confusion was present. This, I thought, was due to an error on the part of the conductor (Capt. G. E. Sykes, R.G.A.) who indicated a tempo rather in excess of that demanded by the piece in question, and a few unhappy moments elapsed before he was able to obtain the "proper swing" of the part-song. Otherwise, the singing was most effective, the light and shade obtained in "As Torrents," and a "The Comrades' Song of Hope," being most pronounced. Cpl. Walters possesses a deep bass voice of unusual clearness and power, and sang "The Trumpeter," "The Watchman" and "Sombre Woods," with marked success. "Jock" Limond provided the light aspect of the programme, singing two songs à la Harry Lauder.

Mixed Audiences.

Backhaus tells me he is very annoyed at the reference to his recital at the "Deutsches" with Barker, contained in a Berlin paper. He, they said, played to an audience of soldiers, and the German public were forbidden to attend. This, contends Backhaus, was not the case, as there were civilians in the audience. Moreover, being a musical occasion, it was open to all the musical fraternity.

Again at his recitals at the Disch Saal, the Bürgergesellschaft, and the Gürzenich Saal (organised by civilian musical societies) quite forty per cent of the audiences were British soldiers.

Coming Events.

On Sunday, the Rev. C. P. Wheeler will speak in the writing room of the Leave Club and at 6.30 there will be a concert in the theatre by the Band of the 3rd Hussars. Lieut. Ramsay and Pte. Hill will also give solos. An impromptu concert will be held in the music room at 5 p.m. on Monday, followed by a practice dance in the theatre at 6.30. On Tuesday, there will be a dancing class in the theatre at 5 p.m. and an impromptu concert in the music room at the same hour. At 7 p.m. the Starlight Concert Party have kindly promised to give a performance

In few Words.

I met "Bobby," the mascot of the old "Crumps," the other evening. He is an Airedale entitled to three wound bars — and anxiously awaiting demob.

ARMY RUGBY.

The Army next season will indulge in a regular series of Rugby football matches, and have already arranged a first-class progamme. They play home-and-home matches with Oxford University, Cambridge University, Richmond, London Scottish, Blackheath, Leicester, and Northampton, and also meet United Services (Chatham), Yorkshire, United Hospitals, Harlequins, the Royal Navy, the Royal Air Force, and a combined fifteen of Woolwich and Sandhurst. Their home matches will be decided at the Queen's Club, West Kensington, and the Navy will be opposed at Twickenham at the end of February.

Under the auspices of the Army Rugby Union it is also proposed to run an Army Commands Rugby Championship, the Commands to take part in it being Aldershot, Southern, London District, Eastern, Northern, Scottish, Western, and Irish.

LUCKY PUNTERS.

Gaze on this picture and on that. Newmarket, July 3, two-year-old seller: Estelle colt down the course; S.P., 20 to 1. July 16, two-year-old seller: Estelle colt down the course; S.P., 20 to 1. July 16, two-year-old seller: Estelle colt won; S.P., 6 to 5 on. Some of those lucky punters in the know about Sir William Cooke's plater got 7 to 2 to their money. Evidently a constant change in stables has done the colt good, for he won comfortably in more moderate company after swerving across his field a good deal.

WON A LOVE RUBBER.

R. C. E. Dickinson and E. Lambert played the first of home-and-home tennis matches at Princes Club, Knightsbridge, this week. Lambert, who hit tremendously hard with a heavy cut, won a love rubber. The return match will be played on a date to be fixed in Lambert's home court at Jesmond Dene, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

ENTERTAMMENT ITEMS.

In view of the Northern Division being stationed in Cologne where adequate amusements are available, they will not be visited by other concert parties concerned in the touring scheme.

Four Lena Ashwell concert parties are now touring the occupied areas.

Asked yesterday if he was going to hear the Beethoven recital, an officer of the R.A.F. replied, "No, it will be in German so I should ut understand it!"

Why, in the "bill matter" of the artistes in "The Limits," is one singer described as "vocalist" and another as "baritone"?

Negotiations are being made to secure a visit to occupied Germany by the S.O.S.'s one of the strongest concert parties at present in England.

All who have been charmed by the singing of Miss Hilda Potts will be glad to learn that this accomplished artiste has practically recovered from her illness.

Another successful Whist Drive was held at the Leave Club on Thursday evening. As the weather was beautifully fine the tournament was held in the garden. The Commanding Officer of the 7th Gordon Higlanders very kindly allowed his Pipers and Drummers to give a performance from 5 to 6.

"General Post," by J. E. Harold Terry, will be given at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne, by the British Rhine Army Dramatic Company each evening next week.

THE JOCKEY CLUB.

The Stewards of the Jockey Club, at Newmarket, inquired into the riding of Old Castle in the City Selling Plate at the Bibury Club Meeting last week. They considered that Scourse's riding was most unsatisfactory, and open to grave suspicion, but in view of further information which the local Stewards had received, and which they now submitted, that the horse was ungenerous and would not do his best, they felt unable to take further action.

WESTMINSTER WETBOBS.

The annual four-oared race between the King's Scholars and Town Boys of Westminster School was decided at Putney this week and was won by King's Scholars by a length and a half, after a good race.

Three heats of the Colquhoun Sculls were also decided. In the first W. T. Lord beat C. Willoughby and J. Dobbie; the second went to Jacob-Hood, who defeated J. Dauber and G. Shaw, and the third was won by R. Sage, his opponent being J. Evans.

RACING ALL DAY !

The St. Dunstan's regatta, which was interrupted by the capsizing of a boat on Tuesday, was concluded on Wednesday, no fewer than thirty-four races being decided. Among these were four contests with Worcester College for the Blind, in all of which St. Dunstan's were successful.

Chief honours went to McLurg in the sculls, Captain Pereth and Lieutenant Hitchen in the pairs. Captain Baker in the old boys' sculls, and to the Bungalow crew, Carter, Craigie, Ham, and Glendinning, in the fours. This crew was racing all day, and did wonderfully well.

CONCERT AT BONN.

The Rhine Army Choral Society, assisted by Cpl. Harold Walters, (Bass), and "Jock" Limmond (humourist) gave an excellent concert in the Beethoven Hall, Bonn, on Wednesday evening, on the invitation of the Church Army. The part-songs "Beware," (Halton); "The Song of the Pedlar," (Lee Williams); "The Three Chafers," (Thrum); "A Catastrophe" (Spragne); "A Medley of old English Songs," (Bales); "As torrents in Summer" (Elgar); "In Absence" (Back); and "The Comrades' Song of Hope" (Adam), were sung with admirable precision. The tone of the choir and the balance of the parts are excellent, and their clear enunciation was especially not eeable.

"Father Time" v. Club Secretaries!

EXEMPLARY KEENNESS IN "COLOGNE POST" CRICKET COMPETITION.

Club Secretaries are again reminded that time is so short that pace must be kept with the fixture list, and that Rule 7 will be applied in all cases of default, unless good reason is given for postponing matches. One club has set an example of keenness by already playing two of its August matches besides bringing its fixture list right up to date.

TIE AT OPLADEN.

92rd Bde. R.G.A. Gunner Takes 8 Wickets for 19.

"MAPS" 4 F.S.BN. (52) v. 92 BDE R.G.A. (52). At Opladen on Wednesday a tie resulted. For "Maps", Major Gaine batted splendidly for 20, while Gnr. Charlton for the Brigade, besides making 17, took eight of "Maps" wickets for 19.

LONDON D.M.T. COY. (71 for 3 declared) v. F.S. BTN. MAPS (59) at Merheim on Thursday. The Maps won the toss and decided to bat first. At first the batting was very slow, 4 wickets falling for 43. The D.M.T. Coy did not start well, 3 wickets falling for 36, but Lieut. Howard and Lieut. Wright changed the aspect and put the score up to 71 without any further loss, and the innings was declared closed. For the winners Lieut. Howard played a good innings for 34 not out, other scores being Lieut. Wright not out 12, Cpl. Wright 19. Pte. Jacobs took 4 wickets for 17 and Lieut. Wright 5 for 25. For the losers Spr. Ward made the top score of 12.

Your Savings

YOUR weekly savings will grow into a small fortune if you invest them regularly in Savings Certificates. Not only will your savings increase as week by week you add to them, but the money itself will grow.

Each 15/6 you save up and put into Certificates grows into 15/9 after you've kept it in one year. Then it grows at the rate of 1d. per month during the next four years, so that at the end of the fifth year it is worth £1. That is a clear profit of 4/6 on every 15/6—and it costs you nothing—not even trouble. The extension of the life of a Savings Certificate has now been extended to 10 years, when they can be cashed for £1.6.0, a profit of 10/6 on every 15/6 invested and no income tax has to be paid on it.

You can buy Savings Certificates from any Field Post Office, but your best plan is to

Echoes from Rhineland.

MORE MONEY FOR ECHOES.

So successful has our offer of a daily prize to contributors of "Echoes" been, that we have decided to extend our offer by giving three prizes very day of ten marks each. This increase in the number of awards will, it is hoped lead to an even greater response than hitherto from readers. All who keep their eyes and ears open must see and hear many incidents in Rhineland that are informative or amusing. Lack of literary style need debar no one from competing. It is the facts however, crudely expressed, that counts. Our Editorial staff will put the items in presentable form. So remember that henceforth there will be three prizes daily.

Possibilities of the Rhine.

Years ago the word "Rhine" would have meant to most of us a European river to be read about and studied with a heap of other, at that time, uninteresting geographical matter. Little did we dream that we should find ourselves so closely associated with the river. Some of us find it a misfortune that restrictions have to be observed. Had we this glorious waterway in other and freer circumstances what possibilities! Who ever sees a yacht here? Obviously the native has no use for such things nowadays, but if he ever had we should have found the craft somewhere. And as for rowing! What would our "Varsities" give for these chances! The rowing seen here makes one want to creep into forests and weep: and we could pull better on the stream of our tears.

The Barber's "Bowl."

All are familiar with the barber's sign in Rhineland, a brass bowl usually about the size of a dinner plate, which hangs outside the door of the shop, and which serves the same purpose as the barber's pole. It may not be generally known that the bowl is the ancient sign of "barber-surgery" which was formerly practised in practically all civilized countries, including England. In those days the barber performed operations of quite a different nature to those of the "tonsorial" artist of to-day. The operation generally consisted of "cupping" or blood-letting," which was performed by the barber, whose assistant held the bowl to catch the blood from the patient's veins. Different veins were opened according to the nature of the disease from which the patient suffered, the quantity of "blood-letting" varying with the severity or otherwise of the disease.

PHOTOGRAPHY.

XIV

By Lieut. William R. Patterson, F.R.G.S.

Many amateurs of photography here are restricting themselves to occasional snapshots in town and to portraits of chums and acquaintances. Some of them have taken the same photograph several times over.

This is rather a pity since the environs of Cologne present much scope for artistic work. Within walking distance of the town we have both the Zoo and the beautiful botanical park called the Flora.

The former provides us with charming animal studies, the latter with exquisitely arranged alleys and avenues.

Now is the time to visit the Flora for she is so gaily bedecked and therefore affords excellent opportunities for landscape photography.

There are groves and flowers and trees most picturesque; there are lawns and statues; indeed it is an ideal study and one of the best also for the beginner. For the latter it is advisable to take two photographs of the same object at different speeds in order to learn something of the power of light. Only by practice can one hope to be successful. Otherwise, one may become disheartened.

Heads Out.

What makes the travelling German public hug the railway carriage windows so much? On only main lines, when the train happens to stop between stations, take a look out of the window and you will see a long string of carriages from the sides of which faces, hats, hands and shoulders seem to grow in profusion. Take another peep out, when the train is doing its 40 or 50 miles an hour. Hands and hat brims and even an occasional face are still visible, along the train. Perhaps the travellers cannot resist gazing upon the beauties of the Fatherland, or it may be the spirit of the "Wandervögel," a craving for fresh air, which always seems to be emphasized in an ordinary travelling crowd, by the number of rucksacks which the people carry. Or it may simply be that the carriages are overcrowded. Judging by the overcrowded nature of the trains, we should imagine that this is the real reason.

A Fact.

He was a very downy one pip and rather deaf too — doing his first duty at a forward O. P. The day had been fairly quiet with only a few 'pip squeaks' buzzing about; but as darkness came on "Jerry" began to mix 'em up a bit and make things rather interesting. Needless to say our hero grew rather windy. No reports having been received at H.Q., in spite of the fact that batteries had sent through numerous flash lamp lights etc. the "Oldman" (not the mildest on the Western front) thought it about time to make enquiries at O.P. "Hallo Mudlark Hallo!— What, speak up? Dem it man I'm yelling blue now. Have you nothing to report?" Downy Pip's reply "Nothing much Sir." "What's nothing much? Why the whole place is alight, and you've seen nothing special in lights. Do you know what the Hades you are up there for?" Utter collapse of Lt. Col. Black and fusing of all lines on receiving Downy Pip's final effort: "Yes, Sir, for twenty-four hours. I'm off at 9 a.m."

A Tip for Builders.

British builders—that is repairing builders—might well take a tip from German workmen in the matter of scaffolding. Instead of the clumsy scaffold poles embedded in barrels of earth, the knocking out of bricks for the insertion of tie beams and the lashing of other poles to attain height, the Germans have a system of standardized scaffolding which is a marvel of speed and efficiency. Bolted end and intermediate ladders and planks are quickly put together, security being made absolute by a system of screw tie rods and clamps which fit into the window embrasures. Recently in Cologne I saw a washing down of the wall of an hotel courtyard. It was at least ninety feet high by forty wide. The whole of the operation, including erecting and dismounting the scaffold, was done in one day!

The Silhouette Vogue.

One of the things that cannot fail to have been noticed by those who study the shopwindows of Cologne is the craze that exists for silhouette pictures. These can be seen in great variety and the skill in producing these dainty outlines cut out entirely by hand is considerable. The subjects are mostly of the fantastic kind, sylvan scenes, weird dances, and sporting subjects. It is a pretty vogue and we hear that it is spreading to London.

A Club for Wrafs.

Strolling through the arcades of the Hohestrasse yesterday we came across a new institution just opening. It is the Wraf club and library and we were shown over the extensive premises by one of the lady staff. When it is completed there will be ample accommodation for reading and writing and the shelves are being well stocked with books. Much of the literature provided seemed to be of quite a serious type and plenty of technical and educational publications are there to be read or consulted. The club will be a valuable addition to the organization of the Wrafs in Cologne and district.

Heard in Billets.

In a certain Signalling Company where there is a linesman named Charles Dickens, an amusing incident occured. A certain sapper arrived at the billet feeling very pleased with himself, after a jovial evening and entering, uttered in dramatic manner "Curse you Copperfield, Curse you!" when the following dialogue occurred. Corporal: "If you say that again I will shove you in clink. Sapper: "Shove me in clink. What for?" Corporal: "What for! Why shouting, curse you Corporal." Third Party: "Haven't you ever heard of Charles Dickens." Corporal: "Yes, of course, I know him. Charles Dickens the linesman!"

Lesser Echoes.

There was a crowd reminiscent of sale day in Regent-street. One fought for a place, only to find that the enterprising German shopkeeper was exhibiting his latest consignment of cocoa and fondants.

A German, who was unwise enough to have two bags of issue cigarettes in his possession the other night, is to-day a sad but wiser man. He scarcely bargained for the questioning of an astute M.P. Let others take warning.

The result of delay in the preparation of the Lindenthal cricket ground is now apparent in the roughness of the pitch.

The practice of using electric bells to give warnings on the opening of shop doors is very prevalent in Rhineland. It is also in use in England, but, while in England some type of primary battery is invariably used to supply the necessary energy to the bell, in this country the supply is taken from the shop lighting circuit. This latter plan hds undoubted advantages.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Pte. G. V. Stilliard, Train Headquarters, Eastern Division, Rhine Army.

KING'S MESSAGE TO WOUNDED.

PRINCE OF WALES CHEERED FOR CHARMING INCIDENT AT AMERICAN REVIEW.

PEACE DAY REJOICINGS.

PEACE PAGEANT.

EXCITING AND PRINCELY INCIDENT.

There was a fever of excitement over the Peace pageant in London yesterday. Immense crowds parading the streets were swelled by the influx from the suburbs and provinces for preliminary inspections of the lavish scheme of decorations. Foreign troops, in uniforms unknown to London, mixed freely with the crowds and aroused great curiosity and interest.

"THE GLORIOUS DEAD."

The imposing memorial to the dead in Whitehall was unveiled on Friday. It is a simple stone monolith 32 feet high, striking and significant without being lavish. On its Northern and Southern faces are the simple words "The glorious dead." This and the Victoria memorial in front of Buckingham Palace are the two saluting points in the great march.

Marshal Foch arrived on Friday and was accorded a great popular ovation. He was met at Victoria by Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, General Seely, Admiral Wemyss and many other distinguished soldiers and sailors.

The contingent of officers and men of the fleet, now lying off Southend, reached London on Friday afternoon, their march through the streets to their quarters being watched by thousands of sightseers.

SOLDIER'S WIFE PETITIONS PRINCE OF WALES.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales in the morning witnessed the march past of the American troops.

At the end of the parade there was a dramatic little scene in Hyde Park, when the Prince was petitioned by a poor woman. The Prince had just finished addressing the American officers. Immediately they had received the order to fall out, the big crowd of spectators was surprised and alarmed to see a young woman, neatly dressed in black, walk sharply towards the Prince.

"Your Highness," she said, "I've come to see if you can do anything regarding the pension awarded to my husband."

OUTBURST OF CHEERS.

Having enlisted his attention, she explained that no pension had yet been received although it had been granted.

The Prince listened sympathetically and looked at the documents she produced.

"I will see that the matter is looked into," he said.

Mr. Winston Churchill made a similar promise, and the woman, obviously gratified, expressed her thanks to the Prince.

He bade her "good morning" and shook hands with her, a spontaneous action which was greeted with an outburst of cheering.

KING'S MESSAGE TO SICK AND WOUNDED.

His Majesty the King sent the following message to the sick and wounded on Peace Day.

"We are celebrating a victorious peace and amidst the national rejoicings my thoughts and those of Her Majesty the Queen go out to the men who in their gallant part taken to secure that victory suffered and are yet suffering from the cruel hand of war. To those sick and wounded who cannot take an active part in the festival of victories we send our greetings and bid them be of good cheer, assuring them that the wounds and scars so honourable to themselves, inspire in the hearts of their fellow countrymen the warmest feelings of gratitude and respect."

FREEDOM OF THE CITY FOR PERSHING.

General Pershing received the freedom of the City of London at the Guildhall on Friday morning, the ceremony being conducted with all the customary civic dignity. A great demonstration was accorded the distinguished guest, while Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig and his wife were even more demonstratively welcomed.

Replying to the toast of his health, General Pershing said that the history of the Anglo-Saxon race was the history of human progress. Our common ancestors had ever fought for human rights, and the liberties of mankind had always been their goal. It is our hope that these two great nations may now act in common in achieving new successes during the years of peace that are to be ours and in the enjoyment of those blessings which common sacrifices have won for us.

TRAITOR IN SAFE KEEPING.

Lieut.-Col. Sir F. Hall asked the Home Secretary in the House of Commons if an order had been made for the deportation of Trebitsch Lincoln, the Hungarian spy and ex-M.P.; if arrangements were made for the order to be carried out on July 2nd and if the deported man was recalled on his way to the port of embarkation.

Mr. Shortt said the facts as cited were correctly stated. The deportation was suspended on receipt of information which made it appear undesirable in the present circumstances to allow Lincoln to return to his own country.

The Supreme Economic Council has considered the Austrian note asking that the reprovisioning of the country by the Allies may be continued till November. It is stated that in view of the state of that country, the note appears to contain a fair demand.

"ORIENTAL KAISER."

U.S. SENATOR URGES CHINA'S MILITARY DEVELOPMENT.

President Wilson devoted most of his time on Thursday to engagements with republican Senators who desired to hear at first hand the President's views concerning the Shantung problem.

Speaking on this question in the Senate, Senator Shearman protested against what he called the dismemberment of China, and warned the chamber against the "Oriental Kaiser who would menace the world."

This threat, he claimed, could be checked by the United States expressing its emphatic disapproval of the Shantung clause or by the awakening of China, from its dream of pacifism and urging her to develop some military strength. The question is being considered by the Foreign Relations Committee.

FOCH'S PRECAUTION.

ANXIOUS NOT TO DENUDE OCCUPIED AREA.

The French Press yesterday commented with surprise on Marshal Foch's presence at the last sitting of the Supreme Economic Council and regards the incident as of much importance.

All the big problems occupying the Council at present are concerned with the mode of carrying out the provisions of the Peace Treaty.

The presence of Marshal Foch is therefore probably connected with the question of the withdrawal of British and American troops from the left bank of the Rhine.

M. Clemenceau made a statement to the Peace Committee of the Senate last night, in which he declared that Marshal Foch had recommended the establishment of bridgeheads on the Rhine guarded by Entente troops. He preferred that protection to the suggested bridgeheads, which French soldiers alone would guard, which might lead to political difficulties.

The German Army, reduced to a hundred thousand men, could not make movements which might be considered provocative at a distance of fifty kilometres from the frontier. French security being certain, the Government would be able to consider the possibility of a change in the conditions of military service.

CAPE TO CAIRO.

EXCHANGE OF TERRITORIES ENSURES ALL RED ROUTE.

The Committee charged with fixing the mandates for the colonies met at Paris on Friday. In the course of the discussion Belgium was prevailed upon to cede to Britain a fairly considerable portion of the old Belgian Congo possessions in the region of the lake Tanganyika. She will receive in exchange a large part of German East Africa.

By this advantageous combination for the two countries Great Britain is assured of the Cape to Cairo communication and Belgium receives seven millions of subjects and rich territories. She abandons only three million native inhabitants.

The Supreme Council has to ratify these agreements.

FRENCH BOLSHEVIST'S HEAVY SENTENCE.

A French Naval Court-martial has sentenced to twenty years hard labour a naval artificer named Marty who was one of the crew of the French destroyer Protest.

He plotted to seize the warship while it was lying at anchor in the Black Sea and deliver it over to the Bolshevists. The plot was fortunately discovered in time.

LATEST KAISER RUMOUR.

The very latest rumour concerning the ex-Kaiser Wilhelm emanates from Italy.

The "Populo Italia," a Milan newspaper, states that he has obtained permission from the Republican German Government to return to Germany and live on one of his estates under police surveillance.

TROOPS LEAVING HAMBURG.

The greater part of the Imperial troops who were sent to Hamburg to quell the recent distubances are leaving during the week-end. Six thousand are remaining behind to protect the town against further outbreaks.

LULL AT ARCHANGEL.

The War Office announces that little activity is being shown by either side on the Archangel front owing to the exceptionally low level of the river Dvina.

On July 11th Russian troops carried out a successful raid along the banks of the Solemenga river, capturing prisoners and setting fire to some enemy blockhouses. Many floating mines are being picked up daily in the Dvina.

WINESHOP MURDER.

DISCREPANCIES IN PRISONER'S VOLUNTARY STATEMENT.

Hendon Petty Sessions Court was crowded to its utmost capacity on Friday, when Arthur John Biggin, the eighteen year old youth who was arrested at Sheffield, made his second appearance on the charge of having murdered John Gregory, the elderly manager of a local wine store.

At the first hearing a sensational confession volunteered by the prisoner was read, in which he alleged that he struck deceased in self-defence in consequence of the menacing attitude he adopted when his improper overtures were rejected.

At the present hearing, Prosecuting Counsel, speaking of the fight in the room behind the shop, suggested that the decisive and fatal blow was struck with a bottle.

Dealing with the allegation contained in prisoner's statement, Counsel said that if the statement were true, the prisoner was aware on July 3rd of the sort of person he alleged Gregory to be, and therefore for what purpose he was being invited to the shop. He must have known quite well when he went there the next time the purpose for which he was asked to go and either consented or was prepared to pretend to consent, for the purpose of getting wine.

The number of blows delivered was quite unnecessary to protect accused from assault, declared counsel.

New evidence was given by Mr. John Dawe, who knew Gregory. He recalled how on the day before the tragedy, Gregory and a companion, whom he could not identify, had boarded an omnibus on which he was travelling. Dawe remembered Gregory saying to the other man "I'll see you to-morrow."

Accused was remanded till next Friday.

POLICE UNION.

COMMONS' IRREVOCABLE DECISION.

Yesterday the second reading of the Police Bill was moved in the House of Commons by Mr. Shortt. It gives new rates of pay throughout the country and sets up a new police federation.

Having dealt with the minor provisions of the Bill, Mr. Shortt said the Government were resolved, after full consideration of the matter, that nothing in the nature of an industrial Trade Union could be permitted in connection with the police force and that no man could belong to a Trade Union and remain in the force.

That decision might be right or it might be wrong, but it was one they intended to adhere to absolutely and entirely.

The new Police Union would be an organisation within the force itself and be entirely separated from outside bodies.

Labour members strongly criticised the Union clauses but the Bill was read a second time.

CHURCHILL'S WARNING.

SINISTER MENACE OF RUSSIAN BOLSHEVISM.

Speaking at a dinner held at the British Russia Club on Thursday, Mr. Winston Churchill dealt with the trend of affairs in Russia. He said that if Koltchak and Denikin were to be destroyed and the whole of Russia were to fall into the hands of Lenin and Trotsky, the whole power of Bolshevism would be thrown against the tottering little surrounding states.

While all the victorious nations are disarming, the Bolshevists are increasing their armaments and developing into a military power which would be able to work with Germany.

He held it to be his duty to deliver this serious warning, so that in future years, it will be on record that the facts of the situation were not withheld from the British people. Russia, he said, is the decisive factor in the destiny of the world at the present time. Her uplifting is the first duty of the League of Nations. If the League could not save Russia, then Russia in her agony would destroy the League.

COWARDLY V.C.

THRASHED AND KICKED HIS WIFE.

At Hull yesterday, John Cunningham, formerly of the East Yorks Regt., who wears the Victoria Cross, was summoned for persistent cruelty to his young wife.

It was alleged that two days before her child was born, he gave her a black eye and kicked her and that he generally ill-treated her.

Cunningham, who was wearing the V.C., denied the allegations and said that since he left hospital his wife had left him three times in one week.

The magistrates, telling Cunningham that he had treated his wife like a dog, issued a separation order and ordered him to pay twenty-five shillings per week maintenance.

QUESTION OF AMBASSADORS.

The Allied Governments are not reserving any powers, so Mr. Cecil Harmsworth informed Mr. Bottomley yesterday to supervise the appointment of German Ministers to the United States and elsewhere. So far as he was aware none of the Allies had raised the question and so far as Great Britain is concerned the Sovereign, acting on the advice of his Ministers, could refuse his acceptance of any individual proposed as a representative of a foreign state at the Court of St. James.

The German National Assembly has rejected, by 154 votes to 129, the Socialist proposal for the abolition of capital punishment.

COAL OUTPUT.

MINERS REFUSE TO PROMISE NOT TO STRIKE.

On Friday the Miners Federation discussed the Government's offer to postpone the 6s. per ton increase in the price of coal, if the miners pledged themselves to increase their output and not to strike for three months. Instead, the Federation passed a resolution agreeing to co-operate with the Government if it is prepared to put into operation the economies suggested in the first Sankey report and to introduce legislation for the nationalization of mines.

By an overwhelming majority the conference decided not to give the pledge asked for by Mr. Bonar Law, that there shall be no stoppages for three months. The essence of Mr. Smillie's attitude was that the men should not pledge themselves in any way until the Government's attitude on the Sankey report and on nationalization is made known. A feature of the discussion was an appeal made by Mr. Brace to accept the Government offer and realise the gravity of the nation's position in view of the decreasing output.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Bonar Law announced that he had received official information to the effect that the Miners Federation had rejected the Government's offer regarding stoppages and accelerated output and that under the circumstances the addition of six shillings per ton to the retail price of coal would take effect on Monday.

VICTORY LOAN.

CHANCELLOR AGAIN REFUSES PREMIUM BONDS.

The approximate result of the Victory Loan was announced in the House of Commons on Friday afternoon by Mr. Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer. The total, including conversions, is roughly 708 millions and of this the new money amounts to about 537 millions. The Chancellor said that in view of all the circumstances, the result must be considered very satisfactory.

The House would not fail to recognise that the financial situation still presented difficulties and great caution will be required both in national finance and in private expenditure.

Replying to Mr. Bottomley the Chancellor said he is not prepared to make an early issue of premium bonds.

HEROIC GERMAN.

GOVERNMENT REWARDS FOR GALLANT RESCUE.

A British aeroplane crashed and caught fire yesterday at a Wiltshire aerodrome where some German prisoners of war were employed. The pilot was entrapped in the burning wreckage and was in imminent danger of being burnt to death when one of the prisoners, Gemeiner Bruckman, 99th Infantry (Reserve) Regiment of the German Army, went to the officer's assistance and effected a very gallant rescue at great personal risk.

The Air Ministry announces that it has been decided that Bruckman shall be forthwith released from captivity and granted a free passage to his destination in Germany. It has also been decided to present him with a sum of money and a silver watch suitably inscribed in recognition of his gallant and chivalrous act.

REASONABLENESS IN WAR.

EX-KAISER'S SPECIOUS LETTER.

The Berlin periodical "Deutsche Politik" has published a number of documents, purporting to be official, dealing with the events of 1914.

Included in these is a letter written by the Kaiser to Bethmann-Hollweg under date July 28th 1914, following the receipt of the Serbian reply to the Austrian ultimatum.

In the letter the Kaiser describes the Serbian reply as satisfactory and in consequence there was no reason for war. In order, however, to give Austria full satisfaction it would be reasonable to allow her to occupy Belgrade until all the promises of the Serbian Government were fulfilled.

MENACING MINERS.

At an evening conference of the Miners Federation at Keswick yesterday it was privately decided to submit to the London Trade Conference due next week certain questions. One concerns the taking of direct action regarding conscription; another is military intervention in Russia and a third is military intervention in Trade Union disputes.

The constituent sections of the London conference will be asked to vote thereon.

WHOLESALE COURT-MARTIAL.

The Court-martial was resumed at Sutton (Surrey) on Thursday afternoon, on men charged with mutiny at Belmont Camp on June 22nd.

The clerk of the Court stated, in the case of a batch of forty men, that the defence set up was that they were not the men intended to be arrested. They had three witnesses to prove that they were at home on the day in question. Thereupon the forty men were found not guilty, and were released.

An adjournment, limited to two or three days, was allowed at the request of the prosecution to enable them to get further evidence in similar cases.

It is confirmed that Baron von Lersner will be appointed German Charge d'Affairs at Paris.

The Argentine Minister in Paris has received instructions to take part in the League of Nations without reservations of any kind.

HEAVY DAMAGES.

LORD NEWTON WINS HIS LIBEL ACTION.

The action for libel brought by Lord Newton against the "Daily Mail" was concluded yesterday. No witnesses were called for the defence, the defendants relying on a plea of fair comment.

Sir John Simon, for the defence, submitted that the reason for not calling any evidence was that now that Lord Newton had given evidence the jury had really got before them, largely by the admissions of Lord Newton himself, the matters it was necessary for them to consider.

He contended that Lord Newton had made unseemly and improper use of his opportunities of addressing the House of Lords, with a result calculated to lacerate the hearts of people, who were watching for words of comfort to be spoken by representatives of the Government.

The Jury, after deliberating for thirty minutes, returned a verdict for Lord Newton and awarded him £5,000 damages, judgment being entered accordingly.

RAYNHAM AGAIN CRASHES.

AIRMAN THIRD DISASTER AT ST JOHN'S.

Raynham has experienced nothing but ill luck in his attempts to leave Newfoundland by air. His first accident occurred when he attempted to follow Hawker and Grieve. On that occasion the wind tilted the machine and a wing caught the ground, wrecking the Martinsyde and injuring both pilot and observer. Last week a tyre on the undercarriage burst and caused another delay. Yesterday, a third serious accident again dashed his hopes to the ground and for the time being put an end to his trans-Atlantic attempt.

All preparations were complete and the machine was actually crossing the aerodrome when the disaster occurred, owing to the excessive wind. The machine crashed and was totally wrecked. Fortunately Raynham and his navigator escaped uninjured.

AVIATORS CALCINED.

TRIPLE CATASTROPHE AT HENDON.

A terrible aeroplane accident occurred at Hendon aerodrome, on Friday afternoon, by which three airmen lost their lives.

Lieutenant Cain, accompanied by Corporal Gammie and Air-Mechanic Griffiths, had just ascended in a new machine, which they were taking to another aerodrome.

In making a turn the machine suddenly nose-dived and on crushing to the ground, burst into flames.

All three of the occupants were burned to death before they could be rescued.

NAVY PAY.

RATES NEARLY DOUBLED FOR OFFICERS.

An important statement has been issued by the Admiralty, effecting considerable improvements in rates of pay for officers. Full, half and retired pay for all officer ranks up to Captain is approximately double the scale in force prior to February 1st.

The new daily rates of pay of the executive branch (exclusive of allowance) are Lieutenant, 17s. to 24s., Lieutenant-Commander, 30s. to 34s., Commander, 40s. to 52s., Captain, 60s. to 75s., Rear-Admiral, £5. Vice-Admiral, £6., Admiral, £7., and Admiral-of-the-Fleet, £8.

SHOTS IN CAMP.

ONE RECRUIT KILLED AND ANOTHER WOUNDED.

At Clipstone Training Camp on Thursday a mysterious tragedy occurred. The men were in their huts when the camp was startled by the sound of the discharge of fire-arms. In one of the huts, two privates in the East Surrey Regt. were found seriously wounded. One of them named Bell died, while the other, named Alexander, was so badly wounded that his leg had to be amputated.

An immediate enquiry will be held.

RAILWAY STRIKE SPREADING.

The strike on the North Eastern Railway system is spreading rapidly. The men at York and the Tyne dock stations are also out. The Teeside and North Yorkshire iron and steel industry and business is becoming alarmingly disorganised.

The position is greatly complicated by the attitude of the Strike Committee, which declines to meet its own executive. It was thought that the executive might make a tentative settlement with the company on behalf of the men during the course of yesterday but so far no announcement has been made.

DEMONSTRATION AGAINST LORD FRENCH.

After formally opening at Dublin the Irish Central branch of the "Comrades of the Great War" on Friday afternoon, Lord French had a hostile reception outside the building.

Hissing and booing greeted his appearance. One silver badge man mounted the railings and shouted "There is no justice for a soldier. Justice in Ireland is dead." The police rushed to the scene and pulled him down.

Lord French entered his car, which rapidly drove away.

TRADE REORGANISATION.

The raising of the blockade has brought to the fore all those problems of re-organisation of trade which, until the issuing of the order, were in some degree unsolvable.

The industrial machinery ceased to function between England and Germany four years ago and the problems that arise in getting that huge organisation into motion once again, require an effort compared with which even the spectacular activities of the war itself, take almost a secondary place.

To watch the slowly gathering momentum of industry will in the next few months be a fascinating study, and the opening phases of what will prove to be a huge trade boom are now to be seen at the offices of the Cologne Chamber of Commerce.

Consequently the offices of that body, which recently has been incorporated with the British Chambers of Commerce, are a hive of industry and a revelation as to the amount and difficulty of the work necessary for the re-opening of trade with Germany.

At the present moment, No 133 Hohe Strasse is the brain centre for the propagation of British trade, not only in the occupied areas, but throughout Germany.

In those offices there is no more hard working official than the secretary, Mr. C. Knott, ever anxious to give courteous and expert assistance on the most important or trivial matters affecting British commerce with Germany.

This week there has been an important development in the Cologne work, for offices have been opened in Berlin, Hamburg and Bremen.

They, like the offices in Cologne, are for the supply of information on such varied matters as railway rates and conditions, all those complicated regulations respecting tariffs, the opening of trade, the appointment of agents and other important questions.

In addition, these offices will deal with certificates of origin, verification of samples, identity certificates for commercial travellers connected with the Chamber, and much besides.

The Cologne Chamber is particularly anxious to impress upon British trade representatives that they should be in the three important industrial centres mentioned above as quickly as possible and every means will be taken by the Chamber to expedite their visits.

As to the work in Cologne, the offices now open, are at the disposal of all members. In addition to the usual facilities, writing and reading rooms are being provided whilst of special interest will be the departments for the textile, chemical and leather trades.

As various committees are formed, other equally important sections will be opened.

LOOKING BACKWARD.

The educated German of the upper and middle classes to-day regrets the strong rule of the Empire. There is no doubt about it, and it is not unnatural. He looks back across five years of agony and sees the old state of things enchanted by distance.

Around him are the discord, the hardship, the losses, before him the uncertainty, the struggle, the changed outlook.

He cannot yet accommodate his vision to the ugly features of the past, and realize that in this cherished background were moving and predominating the forces, ideas, and figures which induced the disaster of to-day.

Prussia and the traditions of Prussia really dominated his past. Since the days of Frederick William the 1st she has been a military and a bureaucratic power. Frederick the Great startled even the Europe of the XVIIIth century by his disregard of international rights and treaties.

He aggrandised Prussia by putting into use the weapons of military power which Frederick William the 1st had made ready, and joined with Russia and Austria in the dismemberment of Poland. Within he continued to rule the subjects of his kingdom as serfs.

His successor, within a few scanty weeks of signing a treaty with Russia against Napoleon accepted from his hands the province of Hanover, to which neither had any shred of title exept force. It was a policy of the extension of Prussia at the expense of honour and German interests. A year later and Jena and Auerstadt avenged the betrayal. Germany shook itself free from the grip of Napoleon, but it was no thanks to the Prussian dynasty. As a final result of the great movement for political freedom of 1848, Prussia set up an electoral system by classification which secured the real power to the Crown, the bureaucracy and the Junkers.

Shortly after the failure of forty-eight came the era of Bismarck and the education of the countries subject to Prussia in systematized militarism. Might is right. With a subsidized press, a huge army, an efficient secret police, docile professors and a vicegerent of the Deity for whom to act as Vizier—this is a simple policy to carry out when a certain view of right has for years been inculcated into a people, and might crowns that view with victory. First Austria was subdued, then France was crushed. Success, without, consolidated order within, and the masses who had drilled and fought to order, worked to order, also.

With Bismarck's disappearance, the policy of the limited objection—a Germany united under Prussia—gave place to the unlimited World Empire. More advanced classes from the same agents, press and pulpit and professional chair, were needed to teach that the righteous mission of the German people, which had reached its second stage at Sedan, must at some not distant date, achieve its ultimate or penultimate success in Teutonic domination from the English Channel to Constantinople at least. For this ideal the German was called on to submit in blind obedience to the orders of his superiors and to give up the ambition of sharing in the Government of the State and some degree of civil liberty. Such things as strikes and political demonstrations were rigorously put down. Repression, perversion of right and wrong, a certain brutality were the concomitants of Prussian rule, but in return the subject provinces enjoyed an ordered life from which material prosperity resulted.

Just as to Prussia must be attributed her share in the order and prosperity of the German Empire, so to her direction must be attributed the war propaganda and the catastrophe, disorder and misery which ensued. The years since August 1914 are not a separable period—they, just as much as the years of prosperity, and even more so, are the outcome of the old regime.

DISILLUSION.

It had come at last. "The Cologne Post", after holding out bravely against fifty attempts made by Private Ferdinand Jones, to enter its columns, had succumbed to the fiftyfirst.

Jones' writing had long been a joke with every one of us, albeit serious enough to Jones. Withdrawing from all society, save his own, which he might well have avoided, he had made, in the practice of his hobby, no inconsiderable hole in our stock of A.Bs. 152.

Some of our brighter spirits had, purely in the cause of literary success, offered to introduce Jones to sundry Frauleins, whilst others advocated a coure of red wine as most calculated to produce a robust literary style.

To all these suggestions, and to many others of a like frivolous nature, Jones turned a dry pen.

"Literature," he explained, sadly, tenderly fingering Reject No. 50, "isn't Life", and remembering his previous fortynine failures, we were bound to agree that, as far as Jones was concerned. Literature was far more likely to be death than life.

When, therefore, Jones, opening his "Post", saw his penetrating psychological study, "The Futurist in Love", in print, he felt that now, at last, was merit receiving its just reward.

Entering the Mess, with a look compared with which that of Longfellow's Blacksmith might be described as shifty, he received, without annoyance, the tribute of ill suppressed laughter which his arrival invariably produced.

Nevertheless, he was puzzled, for, he noticed that many of the men were reading "The Post", and, surely, must have seen the article, and would, in that case, have the good sense to restrain their contempt in face of his newly acquired dignity.

From scraps of their conversation, however, he gathered that they were interested only in the pending races.

"What know they of Literature who only Horses know?" he muttered, sardonically.

Meanwhile, he would re-read his article with, so he assured himself, the unbiassed mind of an outsider. But his chief feeling, as he read, was one of elation that he, Ferdinand Jones, an author by predestination, and an A.S.C. clerk by simple rotten luck, had done this thing.... But. dash it, the wretched printer had omitted his name. Shameful! He would write and protest.....

But, what was this? An Editorial comment! He read:

"We have decided, from time to time, to publish examples of the sort of MS. we reject at sight. To the author of the article printed above, is given the dubious honour of first place in our new series. For obvious reasons, we suppress his name. His talent for turning out useless material, we fear, from our past experience of his pertinacity, we shall never suppress, but if by the publication of such articles as the one which appears above this comment, other writers similarly gifted as our "Rejected Contributor", are dissuaded from folly, its publication will not be altogether in vain."

Jones understood, then, why mirth still greeted his appearance in our Mess.

E. J. TELLUM.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

THE GERMAN NAVY.

Sir,— I notice that one of your correspondents seems to doubt the existence of a German navy during the sixteenth century.

About two centuries previous to this period about forty towns in Northern Prussia became united under the name of the Hanseatic League who, in return for certain trading privileges, had to provide warships for the protection of the commerce of the state much in the same way as the Cinque Ports provided warships for the defence of the English coast during times of stress.

The model to which your correspondent refers is undoubtedly quite justified in flying the German colours as at the time of Queen Elizabeth the Hanseatic League was at the zenith of its power.

To-day only three towns remain, Hamburg, Danzig and Lubeck, and they like the Cinque Ports of England, only retain in name, what they once were in reality. A. HAMMOND.

WHY ONLY THE MARRIED?

Sir,—What does a single man want his relations out here for, unless it is for the purpose of sight seeing? Even in the case of a mother no good purpose would be served by bringing her here.

Now for the case of a married man. If "Man of Thirty" understood nature better and could see further than the end of his nose he would be convinced that a married man is entitled to preference, with regard to having his wife here.

I have seen my wife for thirty four days in Salonica, France and Germany. It seems that a vulgar argument, instead of a good concientious "think" is the only way to give "Man of Thirty" satisfaction. MAN OF THIRTY-FIVE.

THE THIRST FOR KNOWLEDGE.

Sir, —The cultivation of the land in France, Belgium, and now Germany, is a subject of great interest to many soldiers.

We notice the absence of pasture land, the amount of root crops grown, the number of people supported by the land, the full utilisation of every square yard. Even the grass by the roadsides, is cut and collected. There are a hundred points that interest and arouse our curiosity.

Germany, like England, is an industrial country. How is it then, that she can support a big agricultural population, while in England the men from the villages migrate to the towns? What are the agricultural methods out here? What is the system of tenure? Is it peasant proprietorship, or is the land state-owned? How does the lot of the German farm labourer compare with that of the English one? The land problem in England still awaits solution. Here is an opportunity for us to study the conditions in another country, and so gain knowledge which will help us to a right decision. I suggest that someone in the Rhine Army can give us the information.

I see that visits are being arranged to factories, and that officers in charge are to submit reports. May we hope that these reports will be published cheaply in book form? NOMAD.

SARCASTIC!

Sir,—I was rather amused at the statement made by "Aster," who says "every soldier ought to take up a hobby."

Speaking for myself and a few friends we have one—horses. CAVALRYMAN.

SHORTAGE OF CIGARETTES.

Sir,—No doubt you have noticed the shortage of cigarettes in the canteens, and I wonder if you have noticed also that the German tobacconist is selling British tobacco and cigarettes. Of course, we can buy from a German, but the price charged is beyond our means.

Who I wonder can afford to pay 3 marks 50 Pfg. for ten Gold Flake cigarettes? Surely something can be done to alter this state of affairs. DRUMMER J. W.

RACING SUGGESTIONS.

Sir,—I fully agree with "Kingsclere," but why not allow outside betting, for I am sure that the majority of the British Tommies would sooner have a few marks on his favourite with the layer of odds, knowing that he was going to receive something in return. Under the present system because of the wait to be paid out, the next race is missed while the backer is often rewarded with his stake money only.

Why not put a charge of a few hundred marks on the layer of odds and allow him to put up a stand? A LOVER OF SPORT.

THE GROWING OF BEANS.

Sir,— As an old amateur gardener I was interested in your note about bean sticks which appeared in "The Cologne Post" some days ago. Many years ago I employed a tramp to help me in the garden and instructed him to stake the runner beans.

The stakes had been carefully kept in bundles from the previous season. The tramp asked whether I could not get new "green" sticks, and he propounded the theory that they would help to produce a far heavier crop.

As an experiment I sent him to cut some fresh sticks, and I staked the four rows of beans as follows: Row 1, old sticks; 2, new sticks; 3, old sticks; 4, new sticks; the result was remarkable. Rows 2 and 4 ran right ahead of rows 1 and 3, and produced a 40 per cent better crop. What is the explanation? I suggest that the green stick, being full of sap, draws up moisture from the ground, which is conveyed to the plant.

By the way, why does the runner bean always climb anti-clockwise — against the sun? C. E. L.

WIVES AT HOME.

Sir,— I think it about time the Government did something as regards increasing the separation allowance.

We all know what the pound is worth at the present. I quite agree with your article on the unadvertised heroine. Tommy's wife calls for the best treatment one can give her. H.R.C.

SONG.

For her gait, if she be walking;
Be she sitting, I desire her
For her state's sake; and admire her
For her wit if she be talking;
Gait and state and wit approve her;
For which all and each I love her.

Be she sullen, I commend her
For a modest. Be she merry,
For a kind one her prefer I.
Briefly, everything doth lend her
So much grace, and so approve her,
That for everything I love her.

WILLIAM BROWNE.

Battle-Scarred Warrior's Fame.

WILDE RECEIVED AT SANDOWN PARK LIKE VICTORIOUS GENERAL.

A brilliant scene was witnessed at Sandown Park on Friday, when the King and Queen, who were present, accompanied by Princess Mary and Prince Henry, received a splendid reception.

A remarkable scene was witnessed when Jimmy Wilde appeared after his splendid victory over Pal Moore on the previous night. One would have imagined some victorious general had arrived from the war judging by the enthusiastic reception the little Welshman had in the paddock. Crowds gathered round and begged for his autograph.

Wilde bore striking evidence of having been in a severe battle. His face, badly discoloured, had a cut on the forehead, and he wore sticking plaster on the bridge of his nose.

Notwithstanding, he was cheery and unconcerned as usual. He was cheered by the crowd in Tattersall's, everybody being seemingly wishful of shaking hands. Such is fame.

TO-DAY'S BERLIN RACES.

The Cologne Race Committee's meeting at the Grunewald Race Course, Berlin to-day, is expected to be a huge success, as there are many interesting events on the programme.

The Rhine Prize (30,000 marks—2000 metres) will be the most important event of the day, bringing together a series of excellent horses, the best of which is thought to be "Laurel", which has defeated Scarabae and Persicus.

Further details are being arranged by a sub-committee.

CREFELD RACES.

Well-Known Horses Engaged in Today's Meeting.

The races organized by the 1st Regiment of Guides, Belgian Army, which take place at Crefeld to-day, are exciting considerable interest and a large crowd is assured.

Among the entries, there are many horses whose names are familiar to the members of the Rhine Army, by reason of their performance in the recent Cologne Meeting.

In the second race to-day Digby Grand, who defeated John Cording, Ruby Light, and others, should have a chance, although in the same event there are Johnny Walker, John Cording, Boys o' Boys, and Naboth, who have won races this year and Mary, Esmeralda, and Remember, who have been placed.

OLD KING COLE.

Several of the same horses are entered for the third race, the list for which also includes Yellow Peril, who disappointed many at the last meeting. In addition there is Old King Cole, who ran well at Cologne.

The third race includes among the entries Yes Uncle, awarded the Maiden Welter Steeplechase this month through Anthony being disqualified for taking the wrong course, Rollston a winner earlier in the year, Right There and Late Report who came in first and second in their respective races.

Paddy in the last race has won previously and was unlucky at Cologne at which meeting Polish Banker, another runner to-day, ran second to Naboth.

ETON v. HARROW.

Proposed Match In Germany Between The Two Great Schools.

Efforts are being made to arrange a match between the old boys of Eton and Harrow to be played in Germany. If estimates are correct there should be an ample number of old boys to form a representative team of each school and the match, if it materialises, will provoke considerable interest.

At the "Old Harrovian" Dinner that was given some time ago at the 6th Corps Club, no fewer than eight former members of the College elevens were included among the guests, and it is surmised that this number has by now been added to.

Several Etonians are also known to be present with the "Occupiers" and it only remains to bring them together.

Old boys of Eton and Harrow are asked to write to The Editor, "The Cologne Post," Cologne, stating their whereabouts in order that the proposed cricket match may be arranged without delay.

MILITARY SPORT.

Trials for Army Championships at Stamford Bridge.

The London District trials for the Army Championships will be held at Stamford Bridge, on Thursday, August 14, when the full programme of championship events will be run through, and there will also be two non-championship events—an Inter-Unit Tug-of-War (10 men, catch-weight), 220 Yards (Boys under 18), and 120 Yards Veterans. There will be an Open Mile (A.A.A. Laws) and a Relay Race open to civilian clubs, business house and Services units.

ALDERSHOT COMMAND CHAMPIONSHIPS

The athletic championships of the Aldershot Command A.A. will be held on the Queen's Parade Ground, on Friday and Saturday, July 25 and 26. The programme will consist of the championships at the standard Army distances. The additional events included at the Army meeting in August, are three events open to H.M. and Allied Forces (220 and 880 flat and ¾-mile unit relay, 440, 220, 220, 440), a tug-of-war (catch-weight), open to H.M. and Allied Forces and the Police, and an 880 yards race open to demobilized and discharged men.

Sergt. Loveday, New Zealand, Wins Chief Event At Bisley.

REMARKABLE INCIDENT.

The N.R.A. Meeting at Bisley had nearly run its course on Friday, when the finals for the King's Prize and the St. George's Vase were contested. The former was won after an exciting contest by Sergt. Loveday, New Zealand, with a total of 253 points.

There was a remarkable occurrence in connection with the Queen Mary's Prize. Sergt. Beard, Coldstreams, made a possible in both series and was acclaimed the winner. Later, however, when the cards were checked, C.S.M. Strickland, Hythe, was found to have made a similar score and the tie was shot on Friday, when Strickland won with the fine total of 51 points, Beard being second with 27.

The St. George's Vase final ended in a win for C.S. Newman, Canada, with 84 after a tie shot with Sergt. Pitts, Herts Yeomanry, and Sergt. Westcott, R.M.L.I.

THE KING'S SILVER MEDAL.

The King's Silver Medal for the best aggregate at the end of the second stage in the King's Prize was won on Friday by Pte. Lockwood, 7th Essex, after a tie shot with Sergt. Samways Dorsets.

Excellent Bowling.

93rd BDE. R.G.A. (142) v. 2nd M.G.C. (73) at Kalk on Thursday. The R.A. started, and it looked as though their usual habit of a big total was not to be. Three wickets were down for 42—wickets that included Gnr. Weight for 2 and Rochton for 4. But Ellis was batting confidently at the other end. Cpl. Wilson and Smyth gave him good assistance, with 13 and 25 respectively However, eight wickets were down for 113. Howden gave Ellis a good help along to 136 and then ran himself out, as did Major McLeod. The innings closed for 142. Ellis was last man out for a splendidly played 50. The Machine Gunners never looked like obtaining the runs. Weight bowled splendidly, taking 4 wickets for 16 runs. Pte. Pickles batted well for 18 for the M.G.C.

FRENCH BOXING.

On the same day Dévos beat Berger on points; and Julliard knocked out Coindet in the fifth round.

Lindenthal Tennis Finals.

BRILLIANT CONCLUSION OF MATCHES IN SPORTS CLUB TOURNAMENT.

Yesterday, under weeping skies, the final sets in the Tournament organised by the Rhine Army Officers Sports Club were played at Lindenthal. First rate tennis was witnessed amid surroundings that were bright and animated. Bathed at times in sunshine, the delightful, sylvan precincts of the Saatwald made a picturesque setting, and Nature was aided to charm the eyes of the many spectators by the judicious arrangement of green and red chairs and tables. From these were served dainty and tempting refreshments.

Among those present were many distinguished officers, including General Sir Wm. R. Robertson, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., K.C.V.O., D.S.O., A.D.C., Commander-in-Chief (who subsequently presented the prizes), and a large number of representatives of the various Ladies' organizations.

FRIDAY'S RESULTS.

The competitions were brought up to the final stages on Friday when the following semi-final decisions were arrived at;—

Gentlemen's Handicap Singles.
Major Saul (—15. 3) beat Major Hazlet (—30) 6—1, 2—6, 6—3.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS:

The ladies doubles final was particularly keen and interesting, the score standing at three games all in the third set before the winners, by virtue of more steady play, secured the verdict.

Ladies Doubles (open).
Miss Hookey and Miss Drew beat Miss Douglas and Miss McMaster, 6—4, 5—7, 6—3.

Mixed Handicap Doubles (Semi-Final).

Gentlemen's Singles Handicap:
Maj. Saul (—15.3) beat Capt. Bright-Holmes (+3.6) 6—4, 7—5.

SUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENT.

The tournament was really in the nature of an experiment—a "feeler" as it were—for a much more extensive function to be organised in September for all members of the Allied Armies. That the experiment was a great success is freely acknowledged by all, nowithstanding the many troubles that beset the committee. There was, for instance bad weather to be contended with; competitors were not infrequently unable to play off their sets. Then the races, being postponed for unavoidable reasons, clashed with the event and proved to be a cause of delay in the progress of the tournament, while cricket week was still another counter attraction. All these things notwithstanding, the tournament has not been unduly drawn out and interest has been maintained throughout.

Among the more prominent players who took part were Major Ward, Major Hazlet and Major Tarleton. Even the very busy secretary of the Club Major Bowes-Lyon, found time to take part in the competition.

BECKETT-CARPENTIER FIGHT.

Dempsey's conditional agreement to box the winner.

Mr. C. B. Cochran has received a cable from his representative in New York stating that subject to certain conditions embodied in a letter now on its way, Dempsey will box under Mr. Cochran's direction, the winner of the Beckett-Carpentier fight scheduled for September 2nd.

PROSPEROUS CHELSEA.

The prosperous position of the Chelsea Football was revealed this week at the fifteenth general meeting of the shareholders, held at Stamford Bridge, when it was unanimously agreed to pay a dividend of 25 per cent. less tax, to cover 5 per cent. per annum for the five years since 1914-15.

BOXING CHALLENGE.

On behalf of Pte. Gent, 52nd Batt. K.L.R., a challenge is issued to anyone in the Army of the Rhine at 8 stone, give or take 2 lbs, no one barred, 6, 10, or 15 rounds of two minutes duration. Any letters in answer to this challenge should be addressed to Pte. White, 113375, "C" Coy, 52nd Batt., K.L.R., Obercassel, Army of the Rhine.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

A CONTEST OF WITS.

I have been asked for humorous military anecdotes and quips that can be used by a producer of concert party "shows." Amusing things that have happened in the trenches, in billets or on parade, smart repartee and clever bon mots — funny mistakes, made by would-be linguists — all will be eligible. There are probably many of our readers who can contribute tit-bits that would help to enliven any entertainments for the troops, and I am authorised to offer money prizes of FIFTY, TWENTY-FIVE, FIFTEEN and TEN Marks respectively for the four best humorous gems sent in. The Editor of "The Cologne Post" will be the judge and his decision will be final. The competition will be open to all readers and the closing date will be July 31st. Brevity and "snap" are the points to aim at. Envelopes must be marked "QUIPS."

A Ladies Concert.

A successful entertainment was given on Friday at the British Empire Leave Club, the programme being entirely provided by the members of the Service Unit. Piano solos (including the Roger Quilter Country Dances) and a Franc Bridge Miniature Trio were played. Miss Smyth delighted the audience with her violin solos, while Miss Somers Cocks' cello playing gave great pleasure as usual. "Land of the long ago" and "If you look in her eyes" from "Going up" sung by Miss Bell were delightful. Walter Davies attractive three-part song "The Shepherd" was sung by Miss Christian, Miss Clark, and Miss Hanbury Williams, accompanied by Miss Richmond. "Miss Honey's Treasure" acted by Miss Maxtone Grahan and Miss Hanbury Williams was a great success. Miss Maxtone Graham was inimitable as the Scotch slavey, while "Between the soup and the savoury" acted by Miss West, Miss Littleton and Miss Buxton went with great éclat Perhaps the success of the play was largely due to the clever acting of Miss Buxton in the part of scullery maid.

Deutsches Theatre.

I have received several letters lately that complain, among other things, of the late arrival of several members of the audience at the Bismarckstrase theatre. Apparently it is a practice that is becoming too common, and consequently causing annoyance to all present. One correspondent suggests that our "Opera House Maxims" should be re-applied to the Deutsches Theatre. Another correspondent (a Tommy) complains that when trying to book seats at the Amusements Office, he was informed that there were no bookings for other ranks during the whole run of "The Title". This, if I am not mistaken, is clearly a case of misunderstanding; the box office at the Deutsches Theatre is besieged daily by O.R.'s booking seats.

In Few Words.

A knock-about comedian appearing at a well-known cabaret in Cologne made it known that before the war he was a member of the English V.A.F., and a frequent exponent of the noble art at Blackfriars Ring.

Harri Perkis, late of the original "Crumps", has now joined the Tabs Concert Party.

The "Tabs" (G.H.Q. Concert Party) are to commence a lengthy tour when they return from leave. "Well I'm!—!" is the revue they will present.

The band of the 3rd Hussars will give a concert to-day at the British Empire Leave Club at 6.30.

Echoes from Rhineland.

MORE MONEY FOR ECHOES.

So successful has our offer of a daily prize to contributors of "Echoes" been, that we have decided to extend our offer by giving three prizes very day of tea marks each. This increase in the number of awards will, it is hoped lead to an even greater response than hitherto from readers All who keep their eyes and ears open must see and hear many incidents in Rhineland that are informative or amusing. Lack of literary style needn ot debar no one from competing. It is the facts, however crudely expressed, that count. Our editorial staff will put the items in presentable form. So remember that henceforth there will be three prizes daily.

Tommy on Holiday.

With the Army of the Rhine on holiday the crowd of khaki visitors to Cologne was even larger than is usual for a Saturday. Particularly was this noticeable during the morning, before the heat and the incidental discomfort produced by sudden return to tropical conditions drove one from the streets in search of cool and shady places.

"Show me the Way."

The Stadtwaldt, Lindenthal, is a large rambling place and its footpaths are numerous and confusing in their similarity. Yesterday, the writer was strolling towards the cricket ground and encountered one General, one major, two captains and a sergeant in charge of a regimental brass band. They were all vainly searching for either the tennis courts or the cricket pavilion. Returning, two English ladies and three subalterns made enquiries as to the whereabouts of the same place. Such circumstances indicate the need for direction boards pointing to the various places of interest, which might be fixed to the trees in liberal numbers. They need not necessarily be large and offensively ugly.

Letters by Aeroplane.

Apropos the paragraph under the above heading, a correspondent argues that assuming that the letter in question was sent by the postman through a pneumatic tube up to an aeroplane, presumably on the district office roof in Liverpool punctually at 9.45 a.m., that the plane left immediately, flew straight to Cologne, let the letter down on a piece of string through the college office window for endorsement "Gone back to unit," flew straight back for another envelope and on to the post office for the 7 p.m. stamp, the average speed of travelling would be about a hundred miles an hour. Taking into consideration the delays in collection, sorting, railway journey via London to Folkestone, loading on to aeroplane, unloading, sorting, delivery to the college and the whole duplicated on the return journey, he questions the possibility of the task.

Beethoven and Potatoes.

We have heard much of the music loving propensities of the German people, but are their critical audiences so engrossed in their study as we have been led to believe? What an impression there is of the high plane of the discussions between the performances of the various artistes! Alas, on Friday evening at the Beethoven recital given to an almost exclusively German audience at the Konservatorium, we received a rude shock. Not the music of Beethoven, but potatoes, was the topic of conversation near us. One good frau was bemoaning the fact that potatoes are rather dear, in fact, she hardly knew where to purchase a supply. Another was heard to be commenting upon the quality of this year's strawberries, whilst another held a dissertation on the Cologne milk supply.

Good Wine.

In a café two Tommies, after examining the winecard, asked for sherry. The waiter politely informed them that only German wines were available for British troops. Now, owing to the enormous consumption of Rhein and Moselwein, much of the commodity sold is of inferior quality. Why cannot delectable and better class wines be served to the troops?

Peculiar Souvenirs.

Apart from the glut of cigarette-cases, tobacco boxes and various ornaments bearing the embossed "Dom," has anyone noticed the extraordinary postcards sold in some shops, apparently for the benefit of Tommy? One frequently sees photographs of the British entering Cologne and kindred pictures, but in some establishments one is shown sets of photographs depicting the damage done in Cologne by British air raids, marked "Good souvenirs." Even these are eclipsed by perfectly genuine photographs of portions of the Western Battle Front, clearly showing dead bodies. Evidently the German shopkeepers think that Tommy will purchase these ghastly mementoes for the purpose of sending them home, but if he is wise, he will not.

British, Please!

The periodical correction applied by Scot and Irishman when his Saxon comrade falls back too often on the use of the term English instead of British, is administered to correspondents who have fallen into the error. We seem to have heard it before and recall the acrimonious correspondence which marked the early part of the war. "Is it fair to Auld Scotia and Ould Oireland?" asks a correspondent. We agree it is not.

The Lion and the Lamb.

How many of our readers have noticed the sparrow-hawks of Cologne Cathedral? St. Paul's and the Royal Exchange have their pigeons; so have St. Mark's at Venice, and Wall Street, New York; but has anyone previously heard of hawks living in a town? They have been there from time beyond memory and it is the more surprising as their natural prey — the pigeons — live in the same tower with them. Does nature's example justify the hope that in future the Prussian hawk may so far tame its nature, as no longer to disturb the existence of its European neighbours? So often in the past has it ravaged the peaceful dovecots around it, that our French and Belgian friends are entitled to some assurance that it has learned to coo in all bona fides before it can justly claim admittance to the concert of Europe and the League of Nations.

Those Church Bells.

It is doubtful if there is any remedy to be obtained for the bell-ringing nuisance in the early hours of the morning in Cologne, but it must be confessed that continual tolling of bells with monotonous regularity is apt to upset one's peace of mind, in addition to robbing one of an hour's extra rest. Those who are billeted in the town will by this time have become acquainted with the fact that the customary Sunday morning's excess is out of the question because the German requires such early and emphatic calls to Divine worship. Whether yesterday morning's companology had anything to do with the bell ringing in London we do not know, but it started at an early hour and continued with such regularity that one was forced to stuff one's ears to escape the "gladsome" sounds. It is a nuisance which calls for drastic action.

M. G. C. Camera and Arts Club.

A camera and arts club has, we hear, been formed in connection with the 6th Battalion Machine Gun Corps, and at a meeting held recently a lecture was given by Lieut. C. V. Hancock on "How to judge exposure correctly." As a result of this lecture, it has been arranged to distribute monthly exposure tables to all members. Forthcoming events include a demonstration of methods of development, a photographic excursion, and a competition and exhibition. The work of the club in providing periodical displays at the cinema of lantern slides illustrating topical events is meeting with general appreciation.

Cleaning the Street Drains.

To make comparisons that do not reflect to the credit of one's own country may not be patriotic, but one cannot help contrasting the German system of cleaning out the street drains with our own. "In my own town many times larger than Euskirchen, where I am now stationed", writes one our readers, "a man goes round with an open cart and endeavours to remove the solid matter from the water with a round ladle fixed on a long handle. How much simpler and more efficient is the method which is in vogue here. A crane is swung out from the cart, and the inner receptacle of the drain, containing the solid matter, is hauled up by a winch. By turning another handle, it is emptied into the cart, which is provided with a lid. The interior is then lowered by the winch into the drain."

A Philosophic Pastime.

One of the most interesting as well as instructive recreations of the sojourner in Rhineland, provided he has a tolerably good knowledge of German, is to ramble through the pages of Teutonic newspapers published during the war. There in cold print lies a fascinating study for the student of German psychology—national and individual—and with the passing of the vital, never-to-be-forgotten months the changing mind and temperament present themselves. Most philosophers, happily, have an admirable knowledge of the German tongue, and this fount of richly laden and profoundly suggestive revelations can be tapped with little exertion in one or other of the quiet, academic backwaters of life, with which Cologne is happily and pleasantly provided.

Not a Slacker.

The determination of some individuals not to be taken for slackers, has produced some amusing results. In the first place we had the regimental badge worn by all and sundry next the discharged man's badge, which at least had some claim to respect and in latter days the chevron and wounded bar, both incidentally to be purchased without restriction. The latest token of service as seen on the Rhine is a small regimental crest over enamel chevrons worn on the lapel, while another wore the 1914—15 riband on a safety pin. We sympathize with the desire not to be regarded as a slacker, but would prefer to see the issue of some official token rather than seeing those which are to be had by all and sundry who may be tempted to masquerade as ex-soldiers though they have never worn the uniform.

Lesser Echoes.

Small green apples are now being sold by vendors in the streets.

The Beer-garden, run under the auspices of the N.A.C.B. on the riverside, adjoining the Hohenzollern Bridge, is now in full swing.

The "bare-leg" fashion for women, which started in Paris, has now caught on in Germany. Several examples were to be seen in Cologne yesterday.

Do the three-ply electric trams in Cologne carry more passengers than the less pretentious two-decker English tram? We wonder.

A correspondent complains of the difficulty he experienced in transferring from one seat to another at No 2 Army Cinema. There should be no trouble in regard to this.

Parties of repatriated Russian prisoners of war continue to pass through Cologne. One is struck by the high standard of their physique and the varied uniforms they wear.

A driver in the R.F.A. instead of writing Saturday on a letter home used the German equivalent, Samstag. Back came a reply addressed "Army of the Rhine, Samstag, Germany."

Apropos of learning German, every Sunday at 11.30 a.m. in the Dom, Pater Dyonisius preaches to a crowded congregation, ten per cent. of whom it is said is Protestant. He is a brilliant orator and students of German would do well to attend Mass if only to study his rhetoric.

Yesterday in a mean street of Cologne a chimney-sweep was to be seen. A grotesque figure he looked in black skull-cap, short pea-jacket, baggy trousers tied at the bottoms with string, no hose, and black sandals. Truly romantic, had it not been for the irregular smudginess of his face.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" offers every day the sum of 10 marks for the best paragraph descriptive of any phase of life or interesting incident in Rhineland, not exceeding 150 words in length. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

CONDEMNATION.

May I tell a horrid tale,
That will surely raise a gale
Of indignation!

May I tell it now at length?
That is, if I have the strength
And imagination.

Now this sad, sad, tale of mine
Was enacted near the Rhine
(Exclamation!)

For I wrote a letter long
To P. O. S. 40 Cologne
(Agitation!)

'Twas a letter full of fight
That would set the Rhine alight
(Jubilation!)

I have searched the "Post," but nay,
'Twas not there, and so I say
Oh Damnation!

Is this, Mr. Ed., the way
That my trouble you repay
And adoration?

So I hope you take the hint
And this tragic ode you print
As consolation.

AN EMPIRE OF JOY.

THE MIGHTIEST PAGEANT OF GLADNESS AND STRENGTH IN HISTORY.

WORLD CHAIN OF BONFIRES.

PEACE, OFFICIAL.

LONDON'S VICTORY MARCH AND CARNIVAL OF JOY.

London, in common with the rest of the British Empire gave itself up to wild rejoicing on Saturday. Scenes unparalleled in its history were seen in every part of the metropolis. Never before have such enormous crowds thronged the streets, never before has such a mighty spectacle been paraded, or attracted such tremendous masses as did the great Victory March of the Allies. All along the seven and a half miles route spectators waited for hour after hour; indeed many thousands had taken up a position before down.

Happily the weather remained good during the early part of the day and although towards the evening a fine rain began to fail, this did not in any way damp either enthusiasm or ardour.

COMPLIMENT TO THE FRENCH.

One of the most spectacular points on the Southern side of the Thames was opposite St Thomas hospital, at Westminster Bridge, where the Southern route terminated. Nurses dressed in their hospital grey uniform with white caps and aprons occupied the whole of the roof and balcony, filled all the windows and the raised stand over the entrance porch. On the opposite side of the road, the scaffolding in front of the new County Hall was seized upon by thousands of adventurous sightseers.

A short halt was made in the procession while the French soldiers happened to be passing this building and immediately a shower of cigarettes descended on them. Then a few of the spectators started to sing La Marseillaise, immediately taken up by thousands of voices. The poilus looked up in pleased surprise and at the conclusion clapped their hands in appreciation of the compliment.

Not a house on the route was without decorations of some sort and the chief centre of interest was the memorial to the glorious dead in Whitehall.

It wanted but a few minutes to ten when General Pershing led the procession through the Albert Gate of Hyde Park and started the great Victory March. Roars of cheering went up such as London has never before heard and there can be no doubt but that the Americans were greatly impressed. General Dourremans with the Belgian Contingent came next, succeeded by a number of Chinese officers.

FOCH'S SUSTAINED WELCOME.

Enthusiasm knew no bounds when Marshal Foch, riding a splendid charger, came into view. The famous Generalissimo repeatedly acknowledged the sustained cheers as with General Debeney and suite he rode at the head of the French troops.

Generals and officers of all the Allied Armies had passed before the first representatives of the British forces came swinging through the gates. Then Admiral Sir David Beatty came and the deafening cheers were intensified when men of the Queen Elizabeth passed with their mascot, a massive bulldog, which looked happy and proud despite its muzzle.

Following the senior service came Field Marshal Sir Douglas Staig and his Generals, place of honour being accorded to officers and men of the original 1914 Expeditionary Force led by General Pulteney. Then came the massed colours of the Guards and their bands.

There was no branch of the Imperial Army which was not represented in the procession. Guns, tanks, cavalry, infantry, engineers, ordnance, Army Service corps and airmen all had their representatives, as did every colony and dependency in all parts of the Empire.

The scene in Whitehall as the ranks opened out in order to pass on either side of and salute the cenotaph erected to the memory of the glorious dead was impressive in the extreme. Scarcely a cheer was raised during the three hours that men and women marched past this point in mute and reverent homage. At the foot of the memorial stood Guardsmen in full dress with arms reversed. General Pershing halted on reaching the cenotaph to give his salute.

KING AND PREMIER TAKE THE SALUTE.

Passing on up Whitehall and turning into the Mall, the cheers thundered forth again. At the end of the Mall, standing on the steps of the Queen Victoria Memorial were His Majesty the King and Queen and a distinguished gathering.

Standing slightly in advance of the other members of the party the King, with whom was Mr. Lloyd George, took the salute.

It was a truly great pageant, worthy of the victory and worthy of the splendid efforts which the men and women of the Allied nations had made in the cause of freedom and justice.

CARNIVAL OF PLEASURE

SIGNAL FOR AN EMPIRE CHAIN OF BONFIRES.

London's streets were packed with merry dancing crowds until far into the night but it was more sober hilarity than that which marked the demonstrations on Armistice night.

In the provinces similar enthusiastic scenes were witnessed, the feature in most towns being festivities for children, who were entertained on a most lavish scale.

In spite of wet weather the vast crowds continued the celebrations far into the night. Soon after the great Victory March was completed the rain began falling steadily. Nevertheless the crowds in the parks, where old English revels had been arranged with performances of "A Midsummer Nights Dream", folk-dances and singing, were out to enjoy themselves and did so thoroughly.

The King and Queen, accompanied by Prince Albert and Princess Mary paid an unexpected visit to Hyde Park in the afternoon, much to the delight of the people.

In the evening after a concert by a massed choir of ten thousand voices, assisted by the massed bands of the Guards there was in Hyde Park one of the most remarkable firework displays ever given, which lasted until 11 o'clock. At that hour the low hanging clouds blazed with patches of red as far as the eye could see, for a chain of bonfires had been lit on the hills round London and extended throughout the length of the country from Lands End to John o Groats.

Some of the fireworks had become so sodden during the bad weather that they would not respond to the electric fuse, so the crowds seized them and they were flung into a Niagara of flame, and finally demolished in a huge bonfire, upon which the excited throngs hurled everything to which they could lay their hands, including the wooden seats.

A strong force of police cleared the mafficking area.

Hundreds slept in the parks all night rather than walk the long distances home to the suburbs. Merry-making continued until shortly before dawn.

THE KING'S TOAST.

"I drink to the health of the troops of our gallant Allies whose representatives and leaders I am proud to welcome here today."

This was the toast proposed by His Majesty the King at a luncheon given at Buckingham Palace to representatives of all the Allied troops, British Naval and Military leaders, the premier and other visitors.

When the King and Queen returned to Buckingham Palace after visiting Hyde Park they found thousands of people around the Victoria Memorial who began to chant "We want our King". Their Majesties, responding to the call, went out on to the balcony over the centre gates and amid tumultuous cheers bowed in acknowledgment.

IRELAND REJOICES.

Peace celebrations were conducted with great enthusiasm in Dublin all the principal thoroughfares of the city being aglow with colours, the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes being generally associated. The troops taking part in the procession marched from their respective barracks to Duke-street and there the procession for the march past was formed. The saluting base was in College Green where in an enclosed area in front of the Bank of Ireland a platform had been erected for the accommodation of the Lord Lieutenant and his staff and a distinguished party.

Another platform for wounded soldiers was erected within the front railing of Trinity College.

Heading the procession were demobilized soldiers and sailors; following them came the pipers band of the Irish Guards, who marched with demobilized men of that regiment.

The Lord Lieutenant was received with great enthusiasm, the crowd cheering repeatedly.

At Limerick the celebrations were marked by a special military display and a procession headed by the troops in garrison, marched through the principal thoroughfares.

RAYNHAM SAILING HOME.

St. John's, Saturday.—Mr. Raynham, the pilot of the Martinsyde aeroplane, has received instructions to abandon the Trans-Atlantic flight, and is packing up the machine with a view to sailing for England by the steamer Grampian.—Reuter.

PEACE RIOT.

TOWN HALL BURNT AND ARCHIVES DESTROYED.

Saturday's rejoicings at Luton were sadly and disgracefully marred by a mob of infuriated rioters.

As a protest against the refusal of the Civic authorities to grant permission for the holding of a memorial service to the fallen in the public park some rioters broke into the Town Hall and proceeded to wreck the interior. The huge crowd assembled became excited and got completely out of hand. The police who were quickly on the scene succeeded in dispersing the crowd, but the trouble was only delayed.

In the evening there was a fresh outburst. An enormous crowd reassembled and commenced by throwing missiles at the windows of the Town Hall. For a time the police managed to keep them away from the actual building but force of numbers told and eventually the police were overpowered. An entrance to the building was forced and deliberate efforts were made to set it on fire. A detachment of special constables arrived and the intruders were ejected but the police were again overpowered. The mob broke into the Town clerk's office, piled up all the papers and documents and set the place alight. The fire brigade was summoned but the mob took possession of the fire engines, preventing the firemen from getting to work. A body of rioters raided a neighbouring garage for petrol which they flung into the burning building.

When at last the firemen got into position it was found that large sections of the hose had been cut, rendering it useless. The police charged the mob with their batons only to be met with a shower of bottles and other missiles. Eventually the firemen succeeded in turning an undamaged hose on the mob and drove them away from the burning Town Hall. The effort was too late and the building was gutted.

After leaving the Town Hall the crowd made their way to a piano warehouse and dragged out a piano which was used to accompany impromptu songs. A bootmaker's shop and a confectionery store were also broken open and looted, damage also being done to a hairdresser's premises, the owner of which is stated to be of foreign extraction. Some hours later a body of soldiers arrived and dispersed the crowd and later still a detachment of Royal Engineers from Bedford arrived. The town is now occupied by the military.

The damage by the loss of the Town Hall and damage to neighbouring property is estimated at a quarter of a million.

FOCH ATTENDS MASS.

Marshal Foch attended high Mass at Westminister Catholic Cathedral on Sunday morning. He was received at the main door by Cardinal Bourne, who was attended by Monsignor Jackson. The Marshal was accommodated in a seat by himself, facing the high altar. On his left were members of the diplomatic corps and on his right a large number of British, French and Belgian officers. Among those present were the French Ambassador, the Argentine and Bolivian Ministers and representatives of the Siamese Legation.

A RIGHT SPIRIT.

Referring to the gallant exploit of Gemeine (Private) Bruckmann, who gallantly rescued an officer from a blazing aeroplane and is being repatriated in addition to being rewarded the "Daily Chronicle" voices many thoughts by saying that "he will return home with the consciousness that few of his countrymen have done more than he towards restoring between them and us the bond of common humanity."

WOMAN AVIATOR KILLED.

Baroness de Laroche was killed in an aeroplane accident yesterday afternoon.

Details of the accident show that the machine, which was piloted by an airman namend Barrault, overturned during a trial flight at Le Crotoy, Somme. The Baroness was killed on the spot and the pilot died soon after.

Baroness de Laroche, who was formerly an actress, first flew in 1909. At the Rheims meeting in 1910 she sustained terrible injuries in an accident, from which she only recovered just before the war. During the war she tried several times to enlist in the French Air Force, but without success. A few weeks ago she created a new height record for women.

BELGIAN HONOUR FOR NURSE CAVELL.

On the occasion of the National Fêtes, the list of appointments to the Order of Leopold has been issued at Brussels. Amongst the names are those of Miss Cavell and Mr. Brand Whitlock, the United States Minister to Belgium, upon whom is conferred the Civic Cross of the First Class, 1914-18, for acts of notable courage and devotion to humanity.

Increase of Bigamy.—Seventy cases in the calendar of the Central Criminal Court include fifteen of bigamy.

Timely Warnings.—Further revelations with regard to the menace of the American trade invasion of England are made.

INDIAN FRONTIER.

CONVOY AND TWO GUNS CAPTURED BY AFGHANS.

The following official communiqué was issued at Simla on Saturday:—

A lashkar which had concentrated in the Bagar Valley attacked our Khyber posts (in spite of protests of the Zakka Khel, who resented this trespass).

The enemy attacked a hill south of Fort Maude on Friday and compelled our piquet to fall back. We had 40 casualties. The hill was recaptured afterwards.

Details of the attack, on July 16, on our convoy from Lakaband to Fort Sandeman show that 700 tribesmen attacked the convoy, which was forced to retire to Babar. The officer commanding the escort was killed, but the majority of the escort eventually safely reached Lakaband.

On July 15 escorts started for Fort Sandeman, and reached Kapip without trouble. Fighting ensued, in which our road piquets were pushed back.

The overwhelming strength of the enemy made further progress impossible, in spite of the support of our guns.

The advanced guards were surrounded and the escort suffered heavy casualties, most of the British officers being killed.

Many of the transport drivers bolted, and the convoy and both guns were captured—the latter being first rendered unserviceable.

The survivors estimate the enemy strength at 4,000, including Wazirs, Bhittanis, Sherannis, and Sulaiman Khel.

Four British officers are reported to have been killed and two wounded, while there were 100 casualties in the Indian ranks.

The loss of many carts and transport animals—including 33 battery mules—is also reported.

The enemy, with his wounded, proceeded to Haripal, a large camp ten miles north of Kapip.

CAPTURE OF MINSK.

POLES EJECT BOLSHEVISTS FROM THE TOWN.

A message from Warsaw states that Polish troops have forced an entrance to Minsk, which is being obstinately defended by the Bolshevists. The latter have carried off all railway material from the town and also sent part of the Polish population to Smolensk.

A report from Luck says that a peasant revolt of considerable dimensions has broken out behind the Bolshevist front. For a short time the peasants even occupied Novno but were driven out by the Bolshevists after a sharp fight. Part of the population of the town, which consists largely of Jews, is being murdered.

CARE OF RUSSIAN PRISONERS.

The Allied Council has recommended to the Council of Five that the military authorities of the principal Allied and Associated Powers shall assume all responsibility for the revictualling and support of odd Russian prisoners of war retained in Germany, until such time as the Council can take steps to repatriate them.

U.S. AND THE LEAGUE.

Leaders of the United States Senate who are fighting against the League of Nations project announce that if the changes they demand are not conceded the entire Peace Treaty will be rejected by the Senate.

They claim to have thirty-five votes on their side whereas only thirty-three are required to defeat the ratification of the Treaty.

BULGARIAN TREATY.

A Paris telegram states that the various committees are actively engaged in preparing the Peace Treaty with Bulgaria. It is hoped the treaty will be handed to the Bulgarian delegates during the week following their arrival at Paris.

WHEAT FOR GERMANY.

The Supreme Economic Council have instructed the Allied Maritime Transport Executive to arrange for the use of Antwerp as one of the ports of discharge for wheat from the river Plate destined for Germany.

RECTOR SHOT DEAD.

The Rev. Dr. W. Owen Jenkins, rector of Bagendon, near Cirencester, was on Saturday morning found shot dead in his orchard. He had been in ill-health for some time. He was formerly principal of the Diocesan College, Cape Town, and Canon of Cape Town Cathedral.

Le Matin states that the French General Headquarters at Chantilly will be dissolved on August 4th.

AUSTRIAN TREATY.

SUMMARY OF THE CHIEF POINTS.

The whole of the remaining clauses of the Peace Treaty with Austria were handed to the Austrian delegation at St. Germains on Sunday, together with a covering letter from M. Clemenceau, granting a delay of ten days within which to intimate acceptance of the treaty as a whole.

The following is a brief summary of the new clauses:—

The frontiers between Austria and Czecho-Slovakia have been modified so as to include within the limits of Austria territories inhabited by German speaking populations.

A bridgehead has been established to the South of Pressburg on the right bank of the Danube and a slight rectification of the frontier made in the region of Gmuend.

Under the military clauses it is stipulated that the Austrian Army shall not exceed 30,000 men, including officers and depot troops. Within three months the Austrian Military force shall be reduced to this number.

Universal military service is abolished and voluntary enlistments substituted as part of the plan to render possible the initiation of a general limitation of armaments in all nations. All officers must be regulars. Non-commissioned officers and men must enlist for not less than twelve consecutive years including at least six years with the colours.

Within three months the armaments of the Austrian Army must be reduced according to detailed schedules and all surplus surrendered.

The manufacture of all war material must be confined to one factory under the control of the state. Other such establishments shall be closed down or converted.

Importation and exportation of arms and war material of all kinds is forbidden.

SCHOOL FATALITY.

TUTOR ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

A distressing fatality occurred at Xaverian Roman Catholic College, Brighton, on Saturday morning, when Mr. Vincent Fothergill, known as Brother Andrew, aged 24, was accidentally shot dead by an old pupil, a youth of 17, who was on a visit to the college on holiday.

It appears that another pupil, noticing a revolver on the top of a chest of drawers in one of the staff bedrooms, suggested that, as it was Peace Day, they should fire a shot. The report attracted the other youth to the room. The spent cartridge in the revolver was replaced by a live one, and the weapon was handed to the lad, with a warning to fire upwards.

When firing, however, the weight of the revolver in the boy's hand depressed the muzzle, and the bullet struck Brother Andrew, who was sitting in a chair in the garden 35 yards away.

RIOTING AT CORK.

Following the peace celebrations rioting took place at Cork late on Saturday night. Sinn Feiners tore loyal emblems from the streets, soldiers were assaulted, knocked down and kicked and the police were stoned. They retaliated with a baton charge.

Futile efforts were made by the Sinn Feiners to rescue men who had been arrested, but eventually the police discharged their revolvers at the rioters who thereupon dispersed.

PEACE STRIKE.

Burnley was without gas and trams on Saturday because the men refused to work during the official Peace celebrations, although the local rejoicings had been postponed until the August Bank Holiday. They refused to start until Monday, but all the mills and workshops worked as usual.

On Saturday and Sunday evenings the streets were without lights.

MEMORIAL TO CAPT. BALL

It was announced by the Lord Mayor of Nottingham on Saturday that a national memorial to the late Captain Ball, V.C., would be unveiled at Nottingham in September by the Prime Minister. Towards the memorial, which is to take the form of a statue, subscriptions have come from the Air Forces of England, France, and America.

GERMAN SAILORS REFUSE DISCHARGE.

A serious conflict is impending between the Government and sailors at Wilhelmshaven, according to the "Zeitung am Mittag". Eight thousand sailors of the minesweeping flotilla are, it is said, determined to refuse the impending discharge, and they refuse to surrender their arms. Reliable troops are said to be on the way to Wilhelmshaven.

The student Toller, who was one of the foremost leaders in the Spartacist revolution at Munich, has been sentenced to five years im- prisonment.

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG ILL.

TAKEN STRAIGHT HOME AFTER VICTORY MARCH.

Sir Douglas Haig was taken ill on Saturday after taking part in the victory march.

He was at once conveyed by motor-car to his home at Kingston-on-Thames, and it was reported that he had developed a temperature.

On inquiry at Sir Douglas Haig's residence it was stated that the Field-Marshal had passed a restful night, and that his temperature had returned to normal.

It has been deemed advisable, however, that he should remain in bed for the present and take a short rest. His public engagements for the next few days have accordingly been cancelled.

Sir Douglas took part in the procession on Saturday against the advice of his doctor, as he had been unwell for several days previously. It was noticed by many people who witnessed the pageant that he looked rather pale, and did not appear to be in his usual good health.

MOTOR-CYCLE SMASH.

FAMILY KILLED THROUGH COLLISION WITH LORRY.

A motor-cycle accident, which resulted in the deaths of father, mother, and son, marred the end of the Peace celebrations at Loughton (Essex) on Saturday evening.

About seven o'clock, Mr. Cudden, of Walthamstow, was driving a motor-cycle down Church Hill, Loughton, his wife being seated in a side-car and his son sitting on the carrier behind. By some means he collided with a military motor-lorry which was proceeding up the hill.

Mr. Cudden, who was jammed between the cycle and the lorry, was killed instantaneously, and great difficulty was experienced in extricating his body. Mrs. Cudden was thrown right over the lorry, and with her son, who also sustained serious injuries, was conveyed to the Forest Cottage Hospital, but both succumbed to their injuries soon after admission.

FINE ON BERLIN.

GOVERNMENT OBJECTS ON LEGAL GROUNDS.

The body of the murdered French sergeant, Mannheim, was entrained at the Anhalt Station on Saturday morning for Paris, via Frankfort. Herr von Kühlmann, representing the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, placed wreaths on the bier. General Sylvestre, of the French Army, paid a short tribute to the dead soldier's memory, and German soldiers rendered the last military honours.

An inquiry has established that none of the soldiers, who were quarelling with Sergeant Mannheim committed the murder.

The German Government's reply to the French Note regarding the Mannheim affair, which has been despatched to Paris, says that though there is no legal obligation to do so the compensation demanded for the dead man's family is conceded, to meet the French. On the other hand, the Government refuses to sanction the punishment of Berlin by a fine of 1,000,000 francs as having no ground in international law. Should the French Government not agree with the German legal standpoint, however, an offer is made to submit the question to a mixed Arbitration Court.—Reuter.

FASHIONS IN RECREATION.

A poll taken at a Park Royal factory to ascertain the employees' tastes as to pastimes resulted as follows: Swimming 336, football 310, cricket 303, sculling 244, rambling 235, cycling 227, tennis 223, dancing 209, boxing 175, bowls 134, concert party 124, photography 97, hockey 79, string band 58, brass band 51.

AIDING EX-SERVICE STUDENTS.

So far 2,239 definite awards have been announced in connection with the Board of Education's scheme for aiding ex-Service students who wish to pursue full-time courses of higher education at Universities and other recognised public educational institutions. The Board is dealing with applications for financial assistance for such courses at the rate of over 100 a day.

ITALIANS AND TURKS.

The following statement has been issued from the Italian Embassy in London:—

"According to information received from competent Italian sources the published report that Italians joined with Turks in the anti-Hellenic movement in Asia Minor is without foundation. English and French delegations have been able to ascertain the complete loyalty of Italian action.'

According to German Government wireless news, the Entente will demand the handing over of Lieutenant Simon, who caused the burning of the French Standards in front of the Frederick the Great monument.

NATIONAL POLICY.

Anyone, who has discussed British foreign policy with people of other countries, must be aware of the acute feeling of irritation which our attitude has frequently aroused.

Without a continous policy destined to serve the best interests of our own and Allied countries, it has been the practice of our statesmen to hold aloof from Continental movements and their developments until trouble has been imminent and when interference was bound to cause grave dissatisfaction among parties when feeling had been allowed to run high.

But the fault cannot be attributed wholly to incompetent statesmanship, it lies deeper and on a broader national basis. The insularity of thought, as well as of geographical situation, of Britain has become proverbial.

Secure in his ignorance the average Briton leaves the study of international questions entirely in the hands of his parliamentary representative, who in his turn, convinced that he has not the intelligent sympathy bred of the knowledge of his people to support him, dare not imitate a policy, however desirable it may be, which shows any bold departure from precedent.

Consequently a policy marked by continuity and following clearly defined channels is not possible because interest in the matter cannot be aroused in the country.

The current discussions on foreign questions being carried out in the country at the present time, (notably those recently reported from Southport) betray very clearly this national policy of non-intervention in matters which at the moment may not display evidence of materially affecting our national interests, but which in the future are bound to influence the attitude of the country in a very great degree.

It therefore becomes possible for our Army once more to become the saviours of the country in other fields than those of battle.

It remains to be seen whether the interest aroused in our soldiers in the countries where they have served will endure and act as a stimulus to our national policy, or whether another great lesson which the war has taught us, that our continued insularity and ignorance of the doings of other countries is a danger to national safety, will be entirely forgotten and wasted.

France, Belgium, Russia, Italy, Germany, and the countries of the East where service has taken our soldiers have all added enormously to our knowledge and just whether or not the Army will apply the knowledge they have so gained will depend, whether or not, its members will play an active part in the direction of foreign relations long after it has ceased to be an Army.

The settlement of Europe by the peace treaties will leave a fruitful source of international intrigue as a legacy to every country concerned and it remains to be seen whether such a disaster as threatened the country in 1914 will be averted by the intelligent anticipation of a country which know more of its neighbours or whether the valour of ignorance will continue to influence our national policy.

THE MANLY ART.

The passing of War brings many social changes in its train. These are at times perplexing and at times consoling, but they are always interesting. No student of human nature can watch unmoved the gradual resumption of pre-war activities by his fellow-countrymen.

So far the most notable feature of English society in these days of peace has been the immense hold which some forms of sport have taken. There were many who feared that it would be long before England could take its traditional place as the home of manly games. Their fears have been baseless.

One might refer to the revival of cricket, to the University, Eton and Harrow, and county matches; one might speak of the enthusiasm which greeted Mlle. Lenghen when she won for our gallant ally the highest honour that lawn-tennis can give to its fair experts; but to-day we choose an ancient sport that has renowned memories in England.

The art of boxing was never more popular than it is at the present moment. It is patronized by Royalty, by admirals and commanders-in-chief, by politicians, scientists, philanthropists, and even by society's dames and damsels. The cult of the ring has its glamours for all sorts and conditions of mankind.

It seems as if England were back in the days of Rodney Stone. The names of old-time boxers are now familiar to all, and eager comparisons are made between pugilists old and new. Beckett, Dempsey, Jimmy Wilde, and many another are heroes of the populace.

Now that the strain of war has been removed it is natural that the joy of healthy physique should make its appeal to mankind. The tragedies of the battlefield are forgotten in the sportsmanship of the ring. The science of gloved blows is a relaxation after the horrors of death-dealing contrivances.

Human nature has a providential elasticity. It is good in these days to think that the witness of pluck and endurance can be exhibited before a public that has its English ideal of fair-play and healthy competition.

Even the boxing-ring has its dangers, and these are not confined to pugilists or spectators; but it has its lesson. Enthusiasm for manly sport may well breed enthusiasm for manly work. Without the routine of daily toil and worthy aspiration recreation soon loses its savour.

England has recovered its love of sport. Is it not a good omen of the days when England will recover its love of honest labour?

THE RATE OF EXCHANGE.

During the few weeks immediately before the Peace Treaty was signed, and especially while it was doubtful whether Germany would sign at all, it was natural that the value of the mark should fluctuate rapidly, reflecting the political outlook from day to day.

But that it should eventually settle, as it appears to have done, at so low a price that over seventy marks can now be obtained for one pound in English notes — itself a depreciated currency according to the pre-war gold standard — is somewhat astonishing.

At present it is perhaps too much to expect that trade relations can have become sufficiently table for a commercial exchange rate to be established upon anything like the old basis, but it is of the greatest importance that an early effort should be made in that direction.

To such of us as now live in the occupied area and receive pay upon a British scale but in German marks at what is the momentary exchange, it is advantageous as it stands now: we can buy so much more for our money in German shops.

But for English trade generally it is highly disadvantageous. An English seller who wishes to dispose of goods in Germany — and England is greatly needing this export market — has to demand over 70 marks for each pound's worth.

This is more than the German buyer can afford and no sale results. On the other hand, the German seller gains in like proportion. A mark is still a mark, the equivalent of a shilling, to the German; so that he receives one pound or over seventy marks for what at the rate of manufacture is worth twenty marks to him.

The present exaggerated exchange, therefore, acts as a heavy customs' duty against the English salesman, and an equally heavy premium in favour of the German, and it does so, even if the case is somewhat overstated above.

A FLIP.

"Would you like a 'flip'?"

The Flight Commander, a boyish Captain of about twenty-two summers, had threaded his way through the machines, lying on the level green of the aerodrome, to where I stood by the hangars. Officers and mechanics climbed over prostrate "Bristol fighters" and "Harry Tates" sprawled across the aerodrome like exhausted birds with outstretched wings.

Propellers began to revolve and engines roared. The terrific wind from the "props" lashed grass and bits of paper and men's scarves into dancing excitement. I borrowed a leather cap which covered my ears and deadened the roar and wind of engines tuning up.

A pilot in flying kit beckoned to me to follow him and I nervously clambered up on to the body of a Bristol and dropped into the observer's seat behind. My head just peered out of the cock-pit, the circular collar of my "observatory" coming on a level with my shoulders. Pulling down my goggles, I saw that I was sitting in about the middle of a cigar-shaped body balanced on the lower of two planes running across it and out to either side.

Before The Start.

The golliwog figure sitting in front of me was playing about with levers and studs and handles.

"Contact!"

Two mechanics holding hands were tugging the propeller round. A sudden roar shook the machine; a hurricane of wind deafened and choked me. I gasped for breath. The golliwog figure in front turned his head and appeared to ask "All right?"

I managed to nod. My teeth were chattering from cold and apprehension. We began to crawl along the ground with wings outstretched. The silent figure in front — to whom I could not speak, — and I, were alone in a gale of noise at the mercy of pistons and petrol, wings and wires. We had ceased bumping the ground; the crawl grew into a race; we were going up! God help us!

The roar of the engine melted into a deep purr, the machine glided dreamily up carrying us towards the silent clouds. Houses and roads, trees and fields sank down into a harmony of soft colour and intricate pattern. We were free as a bird to move this way or that, nothing stood in our way, nothing was hid from our view of the vast panorama of towns and countryside, opened out like a map far below us. A glow of exhilaration flowed through my veins. Somehow I thought of Shelley's "Ode to a Lark."

Hail to thee, blithe spirit!
Bird thou never wert!

The cold keenness of the air made me me laugh aloud for joy of liv —

A ghastly lurch, a clutch at the framework, a horrible sense of everything slipping down through the air at a frightful rate and angle, then the sea sickness of ten thousand voyages concentrated in one moment of time. The fear that paralysed my brain could not shout, with tongue and throat of parched clay. There would be a heap of twisted metal and bits of flesh that once were me.

A Smart Recovery.

I was conscious of beads of sweat on my forehead as the machine become level again and we floated along with a loud hum a thousand feet over the Rhine. Far below, white trams that used to run upright on wheels now lay like tiny white beads threaded on a black line over the bridge. Short dotted lines on the shining river marked tugs and barges scarcely moving. Tiny antlike men seemed to creep along the criss-cross streets of Bonn hundreds of feet beneath us. Black and white threads, strewn across the green and brown of the countryside, marked roads and railways. Obscure smudges shewed the tree-clumps on the silent earth below. How slow trains moved on the earth! How ridiculously small everything was! — pigmy fields and forest and church towers!

The silver Rhine was moving round behind us and Cologne and Bonn quietly fell back in the distance. The tiny hangars of the aerodrome gathered themselves up underneath us. The nose of the machine dropped and we dived to our landing place at a sickening angle.

Quick! Stop her before 'tis too late! O God! I closed my eyes and gripped the frame work to keep down the shrieks of fear that arose in me.

A bump, a bounce, another bump, and we were taxi—ing along the ground to our appointed place. A couple of mechanics caught our lower wing as we trundled along and pulled up. The engine was shut off, the whirling propeller slowed down dead and the gale and roar ceased. Painfully I clambered out on to the solid world of human beings and quiet voices. I felt that I had shrunk till fields and hangars were too big for my eye to measure. Gravity held me fast to the ground.

A sparrow flew off into the air, but I was only human again.

B.V.P.

FEAR.

Show me the man who knows not Fear!
Has not been gripped nor felt the sear
Of icy fingers closing round
His heart; and numbing sense and sound,
Made him afraid.

He has not loved, who knows not Fear,
Nor can to someone else be dear,
For Love and Fear go hand in hand
And he who loves must understand
What Fear is too.

Cold as the Winter's wind and shrill,
It grips the heart when all is still,
And all the weary darkened hours
Seem gifted with infernal powers
To search the soul.

From every shadow, without sound,
Phantoms leap out: and all around,
Stand Hopelessness and grim Despair,
Tainting the silent scented air,
— That comes with Fear.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

ON SERIOUS READING.

Sir,—At this period in history, it behoves us to impress the necessity for useful knowledge upon all young people. Especially in all that concerns our glorious traditions must we do this.

A good English classic story may not only ennoble, but, by providing food for thought, and by teaching history, it becomes of great educational value.

I wonder how many of the younger folk of to-day have ever read Kingsley's "Westward Ho!" or "Ivanhoe." They could learn much from both, and from many other famous works as well.

I have conversed purposely with dozens and dozens of young soldiers here in Rhineland and the majority had never even heard of the books I advised them to read.

Somebody must really take this matter up and encourage the study of good literature. It is of vital importance to our race!

I visited the Royal Air Force library here the other day and I was astonished at the splendid organisation and at the vast number of books which they have been able to gather together.

It is to be hoped that many other units will establish similar institutions. Our educational system in Rhineland at present is admirable. Let the authorities, however, encourage much more private reading; let us bring far more of those splendid books we ourselves read as boys, for they breed patriotism, an appreciation of honour and a desire to accomplish something. A good book is a firm friend! Come, let's have more!

W. R. PATTERSON (Lieut.)

GASPING FOR FRESH AIR.

Sir,—Apropos the recent correspondence respecting the efficiency of the Cologne Electric Car Services.

I cannot understand why, if the Germans are so fond of fresh air, there is very little, or practically no ventilation in the cars. Yesterday, for example, was a very hot day, and yet on the Bonn car there were only two small windows open for the ventilation of one compartment, the others apparently being fixtures. The L.C.C. cars may be cumbersome, but when the weather is hot, it will be found that all windows, both inside and on top, are opened to their fullest extent.

"FRESH AIR."

UNSIGHTLY ADVERTISEMENTS.

Sir,—As a Londoner I have always deplored the lack of posters as we understand the term, in Cologne. Take for instance an empty building, covered with flaming advertisements announcing forthcoming attractions or proclaiming the merits of a brand of jam; it has a charm of its own, which the German system fails to bring out.

The German mania for standardisation in all things inevitably kills all originality. I for one would be sorry to see London adopt such a system.

E.A.

OPERA HOUSE MAXIMS.

Sir,—During the opera season "The Cologne Post" published a few maxims for the benefit of frequenters of the Opera House, who had the habit of coming late.

I think it would be advisable to re-apply them to the Deutsches Theatre, especially when the British Rhine Army Dramatic Company is appearing.

On a recent evening the most notable interrupter was an individual, who endeavoured to get to his seat two or three minutes after each act had commenced, thus causing annoyance both to officers and men.

"BADMINTON JOCK."

DOGS IN CHURCH.

Sir,—In reply to "A lover of animals," may I ask him not to throw the onus of my letter upon the poor doorkeeper. I merely mentioned the occurrence as a good reason for not bringing dogs to church, but I do not wish to enter into an unfriendly controversy on behalf of a third person.

Also, your correspondent cannot be the sergeant referred to, because the N.C.O. in question distinctly claimed the ownership of the dog and advanced the argument that the dog would not bark if allowed inside.

As for the alleged ill-treatment, the doorkeeper made an unsuccessful attempt to kick it out but the animal evaded him and ran back into church.

In conclusion, I hope that these letters will have induced the troops to leave their dogs behind when going to church.

"GUNNER".

ARMY SCHOOLS. APPRECIATED.

Sir,— I think the general education classes organised and available for the troops should receive a little more consideration and respect from all ranks.

To my mind, the possibility of an early return to civil life, should make one all the more keen to rub up his knowledge and perhaps pick up some more.

As is generally known, there are special teachers over here and I can say from personal experience that they are glad to do all they can for students, no matter how elementary their knowledge.

SAPPER.

THE CIGARETTE SHORTAGE.

Sir,—On a visit to Brussels and other Belgium towns I was very much surprised to see English cigarettes in abundance. At every tobacconists one could buy any kind and any amount.

It would be of interest to know why there should be so many in places where there are very few English soldiers, when they are almost unobtainable in the occupied area. As the army issue of cigarettes is very small this is a great injustice, and should be, I think, attended to by someone in authority.

No English soldier will object to the Belgians having English cigarettes, but certainly Tommy should be supplied first.

"KINGFISHER."

THOSE CHURCH BELLS.

Sir,— It is to be concluded that the writer of the article "Those Church Bells," has so cushy a job that he is unable to sleep in the early morning, or does his conscience prick him?

"SOUND SLEEPER."

Carpentier Knocks Out Smith.

ENGLISHMAN COUNTED OUT IN THE EIGHT ROUND: A PLUCKY FIGHT.

Carpentier, the European heavyweight champion, won the contest with Dick Smith on Saturday evening, the Englishman being knocked out in the eight round, with a right uppercut and two left hooks.

The victory was greeted with great enthusiasm.

In the first round, neither obtained advantage. In the second, Carpentier landed heavily on his opponent and in the third Smith was sent down for a count of nine. During the fourth round, Smith was getting in several good straight punches, but towards the end of the round, Carpentier landed with a couple of hooks. Neither could claim the round.

Next round again found Smith on the ground, as the result of a straight right followed by an uppercut, but he got on his feet after a count of nine and finished. His strong pluck was recognised by a long spell of cheers. The sixth saw Smith showing a remarkable defence against a rain of swinging blows and in the seventh, Smith landed hard on the Frenchman's body.

Heavy Undercut.

In the eighth, Carpentier landed two successive uppercuts. Smith replied with right and left hooks to the face, which left their marks on Carpentier who began to look tired. He quickly recovered however, assumed the aggressive with great energy, and landed a heavy uppercut with the right. Smith staggered and, following the advantage, the Frenchman clinched the matter with a couple of left kooks. Smith dropped and was counted out.

Interviewed afterwards Carpentier warmly praised Smith's plucky fight and admitted Smith had given him a bad time.

AFTER FIVE YEARS.

French Idol's Form On Eve of Re-entering The Ring.

Writing on the eve of the Carpentier-Smith contest, "The Old Guard" in the "Daily Express" says:—

It would be no exaggeration to say that all France is anxious to see whether her beloved Carpentier is as good as he was before his country called him to her defence in 1914. Five years' abstention from active participation in the game is a very serious matter indeed for a boxer.

Many good judges think that Carpentier's longer spell of idleness may tell against him. They argue that Carpentier's war experiences—he was no carpet-bag warrior—may have robbed him of that dash which made him such a formidable opponent for any class man to tackle.

AN ATTACK OF NERVES.

They have heard that a bad attack of nerves compelled the French war authorities to suspend Carpentier's flying certificate, and naturally they wonder whether he has completely thrown off this and other troubles caused by active campaigning.

About eighteen months ago I was told by one who had been in Carpentier's company in Paris that the brilliant boxer was but a shadow of his former self. I was agreeably surprised, therefore, to see him looking as debonair as ever when I met him at Victoria just before the Wells-Beckett encounter at Olympia. It may be that youth—he is only twenty-five now—has helped him to triumph over the horrors of war.

CHAMPION IN FORM.

Winner of 1st Western Infantry Brigade Cross Country Race.

Though not counting as regards points for the Divisional "Skill-at-all sports" Cup, the 1st Western Infantry Brigade's cross country race entitled the winning team to represent the brigade in the competition for the Corps Commander's Cup. The race took place on Friday, and the course, which was roughly from 5 to 6 miles in length, ran from Brennig water-tower through Hemmerich and Waldorf, and finished on the Bornheim sports field. Teams representing the 1/4th, 9th, and the 52nd Battalions of the Cheshire Regiment, took part in the race.

Over fifty-five men started upon their long run, but the 1/4th Cheshires were the only battalion which had its twenty representatives home in the stipulated time, which was forty-three minutes. Of these, five were in the first six to reach the winning post, and the order of running was:—

1. Capt. Ryles, 52nd Cheshires; 2. Pte. Turner, 1/4th Cheshires; 3. Lieut. Willis, 1/4th Cheshires; 4. 2/Lt. Shaw, 1/4th Cheshires; 5. L/Cpl. Richards, 1/4th Cheshires; 6. Pte. Davis, 1/4th Cheshires.

A Well-known Champion.

Capt. Ryles, a well-known champion, was the winner of a recent inter-Allied one mile race.

It has not been decided as yet, which battalion is to represent the brigade in the Divisional Sports. The results at the present moment are:—

1/4th Cheshires 18 points; 52nd Cheshires 11 points; 9th Cheshires 7 points.

Basket ball and swimming still remain to be decided. The basket ball competition will be held to-morrow afternoon on the Bornheim sports field, while the swimming, which will include individual events, a relay race and a polo match is to take place at the Bonn baths on Thursday.

A BOXING CHALLENGE.

James Moore and Jack Worman to meet at Cologne.

In a recent issue of "The Cologne Post", a challenge to all light weight comers by Pte. Jack Worman was published. A match has now been arranged between him and Pte. James Moore, 78th Labour Coy., and the bout will take place at the London Divisional Sports at Cologne, on 20th August. Pte. Worman cannot accept any other engagement for the present.

Bakeries Billiard Club.

A billiard match was played at the R.A.S.C. Bakeries billet, Kalk, on Friday between the home team and the R.A.S.C. attd. 93rd Brigade. The "Dough Boys" suffered rather a big defeat, losing the match by no less than 143 points.

Scores:—R.A.S.C. Attd 93rd Bde... 56
R.A.S.C. Bakeries, Kalk.. 42

POLO MATCH AT KALK.

An American team will play a match against a Cologne Polo Club side on the Kalk Exerzier Platz about 3.30 p.m. tomorrow. In addition to this there will be a match in the open handicap Tournament to be played off immediately afterwards.

51st. D. L. I. SPORTS.

The 51st Battalion D. L. I. commenced a two days sports meeting yesterday afternoon when, in beautiful weather, the heats of several interesting events were decided on the Rhine bank, near Mülheim Bridge, Cologne.

KEEN CRICKET AT UNTERESCHBACH.

17th Royal Fusiliers and 19th Middlesex Regt. played a close game on Thursday. The fielding by the home team resulted in the Fusiliers (a strong batting side) being dismissed for 63 runs, C.Q.M.S. Robson who made 26, and Capt. Gibson who took (4 for 15) for the visitors; the wicket-keeping of Sergt. Overton and the deadly bowling of the home team's captain, Sig. Taylor (6 for 25) are also worthy of mention.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Tuesday, July 22, 1919.

Surface wind fresh Westerly. Weather fair generally and occasionally bright. Moderate temperature and fair visibility.

VICTORIOUS SIGNALLERS.

153 Siege Battery R.G.A. Sports at Hastenrath.

The sports of the above-mentioned battery were held at Hastenrath on Tuesday, the preliminary heats having been run off on July 10th and 12th. The Section Cup, kindly presented by Brig.-Gen. Willis, C.B., C.M.G., G.O.C., R.A., IV Corps, who also attended the sports, was won by the Signal Section with 63 points, after a close struggle with the Right Section, who secured 51. At the conclusion of the sports, which were most successful and favoured by fine weather, the prizes were presented by Lieut.-Col. Kelsall, D.S.O., R.G.A., Commanding Heavy Artillery, IV Corps.

An impromptu smoking concert and dance brought to a close, what was to everyone, a most enjoyable and exciting day.

Ideal Going at Crefeld.

BRITISH HORSES CARRY ALL BEFORE THEM AT BELGIAN MEETING.

At least five years must have elapsed since Crefeld, the venue of the well-known German Race Course, presented such scenes of bustle and excitement as it did on Sunday. Crowds arrived from all parts, utilizing all manner of conveyance in the process, to witness a successful meeting organized by the 1st Regiment of Guides, Belgian Army. The racing itself was excellent. Satisfactory fields and keen finishes were the usual order while the going was ideal. British owned horses had matters very much their own way.

The Crefeld course has the reputation of being one of the most picturesque on the Continent. Those present on Sunday endorsed this reputation, the bright sunshine emphasizing the natural charm of the surroundings.

Paddy was very well supported despite his recent failings and was never seriously threatened in the last race. He took every jump perfectly and won by six lengths from Polish Banker with Yes Uncle and Naboth, a similar distance away making a race for third place.

An exciting Finish.

The Paix Burkell provided an exciting finish, the first three entering the straight separated by inches. The winner gradually got ahead and won by a length, a neck separating the second and third.

Yellow Peril, who was expected to run well to the fore in the third race, again wore blinkers, but this did not prevent his nervousness. He failed to get away at once and although he gained distance at one time, he was unable to get placed.

Johnny Walker was gaining fast on Sahab, when the latter won the Prix de Crawney by a length. Digby Grand was three lengths away for third place.

THE WINNERS.

77 SIEGE BATTERY V 9th BDE. R. A. F.

The above teams met in a friendly match on Thursday at Godesberg when the Gunners again won easily. Going in first they scored 124, Bdr. Keys playing a fine innings for 72 and Cpl Fenton 32. The R. A. F only made a poor show against the bowling of Cpl. Fenton (7 wickets for 8 runs) and Lieut. Graham 3 for 15, the whole side being out for 21. For the R. A. F. Biddlewitch took 3 wickets for 1 run and Humphries 6 for 30.

41st Labour Coy (102) v 6th Bn. Royal West Kents. (7). For the winners Sergt. Ellis scored 52, and Pte Stevens 37 for the losers.

91st Labour Coy (28) v 29th Labour Coy (75), on the former's ground at Nippes on Tuesday 29th Coy had first bit and the innings realised 75 through the good batting of Pte P. Elseworth 15). Pte Sowden (12) Pte Nayhoe (11) and Pte Fareedman (18 not out). Owing to the wickets 91st could do but little against the deadly bowling of Pte Senior (7 wickets for 4 runs) and were dismissed for a total of 28.

CRICKET FRIENDLIES.

5th LABOUR COY (69) v. 78th LABOUR COY (40) at Pola Wiesen on Friday in the Labour Group League. 78th batted first and started badly, losing 6 wickets for 12 runs. The remaining batsmen show d more enterprise but the innings closed for 40. The 5th innings commenced none too well but their opponent's score was passed with 6 wickets down and the final score totalled 69. Lepl. Eccles with 24 was the only player to reach double figures. Lepl. Walker for 78th had 6 wickets for 28 while Cpl. Hayden and Lepl. Eccles for the 5th had 6 wickets for 19 and 4 wickets for 18 respectively.

17th ROYAL FUSILIERS v. 23rd ROYAL FUSILIERS at Hoffnungsthal under very fine weather conditions. The game was a slow one, not many big scores being gained. Capt. Nelson was stumped out at 12 for the 23rd R.F. C.Q.M.S. Johnson made 42; C.Q.M.S Eccles 15 for the home team. Scores:—17 Royal Fusiliers (105); 23rd Royal Fusiliers (61).

The 1st Western T.M.B. made progress in the second round of this competition at Hemmerich on Friday. The 9th Battn., The Cheshire Regt., provided the opposition and the home side batted first, but only mastered the moderate score of 57. This total, however, proved too much for the Cheshires who were all out for 29. Lomas took 5 for 13, and Osbaldeston 5 for 15.

CRICKET AT WERMELSKIRCHEN.

A very interesting cricket match was played at Buchholz, on Monday, between "B" Coy of the 15th Hants Regt. and "C" Coy of the 2/4th Hants. Regt. For the 15th Hants the best performers were:—L/Cpl. AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Choral Society.

The Rhine Army Choral Society is appearing tomorrow at the Central Y.M.C.A. Cologne at 6 p.m. and on Friday at Wermelskirchen at 6.30 p.m. At each concert, the Society will be assisted by Miss Elsa West (solo violin). Cpl. Harold Walters (solo bass) and Jock Limond (humorist).

"The Merry Micks."

Following their successful appearance at the British Empire Leave Club the "Merry Micks" faced a large audience on Saturday evening at the Central Y.M.C.A. Their new numbers were vociferously encored, and W. J. Weeks, the gifted pianist of the troupe, had to answer three encores. Lieut. McCracken's Irish Jazz Band caused roars of laughter, the curtain falling all too soon on what is one of the brightest bits of comedy touring. The troupe is appearing at Solingen for three nights this week when, in addition to their usual programme, they will introduce two new numbers.

C.C.S. Social Evening.

On Saturday evening a successful social evening was arranged by the Officers and Sisters of the 44 Casualty Clearing Station for the benefit of the N.C.Os. and men, of the unit. About 30 members of the W.R.A.F. were present. The M.C., Sgt. M. H. King, R.A.M.C., afterwards introduced and welcomed the ladies. Dancing continued till 10.15. p.m. All arrangements for refreshments were ably carried out by the matron and sisters. Fancy dress was prevalent, which helped to brighten the ballroom. Time for parting came all too quickly and after a vote of thanks was passed by Sgt. Maj. H. G. Kimber, D.C.M., R.A.M.C. the evening closed with a short waltz and the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

A Sunday Concert.

I enjoyed thoroughly the excellent Concert on Sunday at the British Empire Leave Club, by the Band of the 3rd (K.O.) Hussars. The Programme opened with a March "The Great Battle Army" by Alford, followed by the overture to Zampa. The delicacy and finish with which Paderewski's graceful Minuet in F. and Dvorak's Humoresque were played was very striking. The Ballet Music from William Tell and a selection from "Pagliacci" were also very popular items and the concert concluded with a selection from the Gondoliers. The Soloists were Lieut. Mearns, Miss Lavie and Lieut. Ramsay.

Sergeants' Soirée and Dance.

With its usual thoroughness the G.H.Q. No1 Sergeants Mess scored another brilliant success. It was a happy company of ladies of W.R.A.F. and Mess members which sat down to tea on Saturday evening in the Hotel Du Nord. After tea and a brief but appropriate speech from the Mess-President, R.S.M. Chapman, a whist drive and dance engaged everyone for the rest of the evening. Winners in the Whist Drive were:—Ladies: Miss Watson and Chief Sutton; Gents: Q.M.S. Cowan. The catering in the capable hands of S.M. Whittaker was all that could be desired and that veritable "Master of Ceremonies" Sergt. Goldie saw that the dances went with a swing. The whole affair could be summed up in the remark at parting of one young lady, "Oh, I've had a perfectly gorgeous time."

The concert was arranged by the Padre and Officers of the Battalion.

ARCHITECTURE AND NATIONAL TEMPERAMENT.

That the general temperament of a people displays itself most perfectly in its arts and literature is axiomatic: that is, it is accepted as a true statement without definite proof. It is a generality, of course, and is like all generalities in that its specific application to individual cases may, and indeed must, lead to great mistakes; and yet, broadly and generally it remains true.

And of all the arts, architecture is that in which the characteristic temperament of a people and of an age is best expressed. It is of slow growth and development, little affected by mere temporary moods and passing whims; its separate works are each the creation of many and not of any single individual for even though the individual, the architect may control, he depends for his result upon the labours of many, drawn from all classes of the community, from the humble labourer to the sculptor. And these separate works, besides being thus the creation of a multitude working in unison, are deliberately undertaken, the outcome of long thought and care and training upon the part of all concerned.

* * *

A careful distinction must here be drawn between true permanent and expressive architecture, and mere temporary building, designed to catch passing taste and meet an ephemeral need. Of such there has been much among All peoples and in all times; but, being unworthy, it has soon passed away into the oblivion it deserved.

It needs no further consideration here, except to point out, in thankful humility, that we of the twentieth century are likely to be judged in future ages by our best and most deliberate productions, and not by our worst. Even so, what is this judgment likely to be? It is worth considering, in as detached a frame of mind as that with which we approach consideration of the temperament of races long since passed away, if this be possible; for thus we may perchance come to a just appreciation of ourselves, taken collectively — a hopeless impossibility so long as we are swayed this way and that by the events of the moment as set forth in our daily newspaper.

* * *

In order to arrive at a correct frame of mind for this investigation, it is first necessary to pass in review the judgment generally arrived at on similar evidence, upon former civilisations, such as those of Egypt, Assyria, Greece and Rome, of Western Europe in the Middle Ages, or even of Renaissance Italy — or further afield, of India and Japan.

Each has left behind it architectural monuments of outstanding character, corporate yet distinctive, from which we of the present day have drawn certain definite conclusions, instinctively as a rule and yet not without thought, and almost universally accepted.

Egyptian architecture rose to great importance at separate times of considerable duration each, yet separated from one another by even more considerable intervals — in two cases approximating to a thousand years — the whole period covered being from 4300 B.C. and 400 A.D.

* * *

The first period was that of the monumental tombs which we call the Pyramids, indicating mass and stability without beauty; intended to inspire awe and wonder rather than to excite admiration, and succeeding, not for the time only, but for the whole six thousand years which have elapsed since the earliest known, that at Sakkarah, was erected.

Each succeeding phase of Egyptian architecture tells quite clearly to him who cares to read it, and even to the careless observer also to a less extent, the national temperament of the Egyptian of the day:— the rockcut dwellings and tombs of 2500 B.C. or thereabouts; the enormous temple palaces erected at Thebes during the sojourn and captivity of the Israelites; and their attempted replicas in the revival period under the Ptolemies and subsequently, just previous to and during the early centuries of the Christian era.

What to Photograph.

Several thousands of cameras must by now have clicked at the Cologne cathedral and several thousand photographs, good, bad and indifferent must be the result. But why so many amateur photographers should pay attention to this subject, when really excellent photographs of the wonderful building can be bought at numerous shops in Cologne, at a trifling cost is beyond understanding. It is surprising, indeed, that the owners of cameras do not tackle things more original, of a kind that cannot be purchased in any shop. There is always something fresh to be seen from the top of the cathedral, while a trip to Rodenkirchen invariably reveals varied scenes of interest in the way of bathing and picnic parties.

Protection Against Flies.

Many horses in Germany may now be seen wearing a long tassle hanging from the head. The object of this is obviously to keep flies from worrying the animal by settling upon its eyes and mouth. For some extraordinary reason, however, these "fly-chasers" hang only on one side of the horses head, and appear to be more irritating to the beast than would be the actual tickling of the flies themselves. It would seem, indeed, that were the horses to be asked whether or not they approved of such methods of protection their reply would be a decided neigh.

Indulging an old Craving.

One of the newest bargains offered by the street hawkers in Cologne is a selection of English novelettes. The covers are of the old pre-war style, depicting in graphic colours, some tragic or romantic situation in the story. The English price of 4d. is printed thereon, and not a few enquire the cost. Two marks is asked and then the vendor goes on to say that he pays 1.60 for them. We gather that he is a philanthropist out to help the troops pass an edifying hour or two and we buy them. If we keep them clean they may sell again or be exchanged.

Original Illumination.

One officers' mess in Venloerstrasse was illuminated on Saturday evening in an original way. Three champagne bottles with candles stuck in completed the scheme. One was hoisted up to the top of the flag staff and the other two were placed on either side of the balcony. Strange to say the lights gave the mess an appearance of a shrine. It caused a lot of amusement to the passers by.

Victory Day.

The 16th West Yorkshire officers set an example in the way of decoration on Saturday. The front of the mess was a mass of flags and streamers. Lieut. Russell and his staff were busily engaged all the morning and altogether over 300 flags and streamers were used. A crowd of children gathered and gazed with open admiration at the effect. Their elders realizing what it all indicated passed on. The day was marked in other ways. Following a cricket match tea was served for all under the trees and afterwards German children were given the remnants which were found sufficient to give each one a good feed. As a special treat, the Padre lined the youngsters up, told them to open their mouths, and dropped into each one a big spoonful of jam. The children in that quarter certainly enjoyed Victory Day.

More Economy.

A good example of economy, as practised by the Germans, can be seen on the railways, outside most of the large goods yards, where shunting is done. At one end of the yard a ramp is built, some 300 feet in length, and sloping each way at a grade of about 1 in 30. The trucks to be shunted are pushed to the top of this ramp, uncoupled there, and then gather sufficient impetus, on the downward slope, to carry them into any part of the yard required. Thus, if there are twenty trucks, each one destined for a different part of the yard, the engine, instead of making forty small journeys, lies at one end of the train, pushing the trucks over the ramp, as required. The saving of coal, to say nothing of wear and tear on rolling stock etc. must be considerable.

Traffic Control.

The long streams of traffic that entered Crefeld on Sunday in connection with the Belgian races revealed an extraordinarily efficient system of control by the German police. Points were stationed at all crossroads extending over a considerable area. Cars, bicycles, wagonettes and, in fact every conceivable method of conveyance dodged about in bewildering profusion but they were disposed of quickly and calmly by the policemen on duty.

To-day's prizes of 10 marks each have been awarded to Signaller J.B.M. McDonnell, R.G.A., Rhine Army; Sapper; G. W. Ellam, Rly. Survey Section, Düren. Gunr. F. C. Darby C 310 Brigade R.F.A. Highland Divn. Rhine Army.

Opinions of the Moment.

THE ANGLO-SAXON RACE.

General Pershing, Commander-in-Chief of the American Army, when presented with the freedom of the City of London and a Sword of Honour said: The qualities of the Anglo-Saxon race have always appealed very strongly to Americans. Those qualities are to them a cherished inheritance. The history of the Anglo-Saxon race is really the history of human progress. Their annals are replete with the deeds of stalwart men and the devotion of noble women. Their ancestors have ever fought for human rights, and human liberty has been their goal. In the crucible of conflict there has been developed the virile British race of to-day.

CONDEMNED HOUSES.

Sir Kingsley Wood M.P. has been giving his views on the housing problem of our great cities. He says: It is estimated that throughout London at the present moment there are at the very least twenty-four thousand houses, the homes of 184,000 people, which ought to be pulled down. There are probably very many more, and, in addition to these, 100,000 is certainly a most modest estimate of the population in the London area who are living in an overcrowded state.

MINERS AS CIVIL SERVANTS.

Mr. C. F. G. Masterman speaking of one important phase of the proposed nationalization of the Coal mines says: Are the miners really set upon becoming Government servants? There is nothing criminal or intolerable in the miners determining to work for the Government only, and not for private profits. What would be criminal would be if after effecting this change they refused to work or worked badly. Whether they do this can only be proved by trial. If they do this the Government will be armed with a weapon against them which at present it does not possess. Those who believe in the miners' promises and those who disbelieve in them should equally support the change. For those who believe may see the desired peace attained. Those who disbelieve will be for the first time in a position to declare effective war.

SIMPLER CALCULATING.

Mr. G. E. M. Johnson, Secretary of the Decimal Association, dealing with our equipment to face the Trade War which is now commencing, says: The instinct of racial preservation bound us as Allies during the war period into a strong defensive organisation, but now that bond is removed the old commercial struggle has revived, and we are meeting as friendly rivals those very nations at whose side we fought. The effort made by every nation to save itself from bankruptcy will make the competition very severe. Let us take stock of our tools. Among the most important are our weights, measures, and currency, for there is hardly a transaction into which they do not enter, but they are rusty and antiquated in the extreme. Designed for village trading, they are altogether unsuitable for the great manufacturing and commercial enterprises of to-day, and a positive deterrent to foreign customers. It is desirable, therefore, that our coinage system and our methods of measuring length and mass should be as simple and efficient as possible in order that manufacture and business be conducted with the least friction.

WHAT VICTORY MEANS.

Cardinal Bourne speaking to three thousand children at a thanksgiving Service for the restoration of peace said: Our great victory, after all, means more to the children than to anyone else. For in the ordinary dispensation of human affairs they have more years to look forward to than they who are adults in which to understand and appreciate all that Almighty God has done for us in enabling us to overcome our multiplied enemies and in bestowing upon us the gift of Peace. To the children it will be given to profit by this victory and to reap the harvest of peace and prosperity that others had sown, even to the shedding of their blood.

CRIMINAL PROFITEERS.

Mr. C. A. McCurdy, M.P. giving his views on trusts and trade combinations, says: Great Britain is almost alone among the countries of the world in the laisser faire attitude we have maintained. There were statutes in force hundreds of years ago which made it a criminal offence to buy up large quantities of any article for selling at an unreasonable price, to practise any artifice or device to enhance prices, or to buy victuals on the way to market to sell at higher prices. Such remained criminal acts, according to the law of Great Britain, until these statutes were amended in 1844. It may be desirable to re-enact them.

AIRSHIP ENGINES

Major C. C. Turner, Editor of "Aeronautics", the journal devoted to airship progress and invention, says: Students of aircraft problems have been not so much interested in the accomplishment of the Atlantic voyage, which was well known to be possible, as in the behaviour of the British-designed engines. The engine question has all along been a critical one. It is acknowledged that the Germans, by specialising in the design of airship engines, through eighteen years of development, had obtained a marked lead. Their Maybach motor is so peculiarly suited to airship work that great efforts have been made to reproduce it in this country. Almost invariably such efforts fail. It is far better to stick to British designs and overcome all the difficulties incidental to the perfecting process in all engines than to spend our energies on imported designs. Had this policy been adopted ten or twelve years ago, both for aeroplane and for airship engines, the Germans would never have been able to claim the best airship engine and one of the best aeroplane engines.

DEBATE ON PEACE TERMS.

PRIME MINISTER EXPLAINS WHY GERMANY CANNOT PAY IN FULL.

FOCH'S VIVID RECOLLECTION.

RATIFYING PEACE.

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATE ON THE TREATY.

The second reading of the Treaty of Peace Bill, was moved in the House of Commons on Monday night. The debate, which was followed with the greatest interest, was opened by Sir Donald Maclean who paid a tribute to the Premier and the Leader of the House for their untiring efforts. He said he thought it would have been better if the Allies had fixed a definite sum for the indemnity, instead of leaving it undetermined over a period of years. He fully agreed with the trial of the ex-Kaiser, but preferred that it should not take place in London, it not being worthy of the dignity and suffering of the nation.

Mr. Barnes said that whatever the terms might be they were quite within the limits of Justice. Further modifications might, however, be made in proportion as Germany showed good will and gave guarantees for their due fulfilment.

LOOKING OUT FOR SIGNS.

Mr. Seddon (Labour) observed that the good intentions and largeness of view expressed in the Treaty were a splendid testimony to the statesmanship and wisdom of those who had been responsible for it. He was sorry to say he had not seen signs of change of heart on the part of Germany and he was one of those who believed there could be no association with Germany until the German people had shown outward and visible signs of inward repentance.

Lord Robert Cecil associated himself with the tribute which had been paid to Mr. Lloyd George for his work in Paris. No one who did not see the terrific strain under which the work was done, could hope to realise fully the value of his labour and the services to his country, which the Premier had performed. As to reparation, there was no dispute as to what was wanted. All agreed that Germany ought to be made to pay to the uttermost farthing of which she was capable. Lord Robert pleaded for periodical review of all treaties and for modification of them to suit the requirements of mankind. He appealed to the House to support the League of Nations, not only by speeches but by endeavouring to make our policy conform to it.

IF GERMANY PAID IN FULL.

Mr. Bottomley asked the House to express its regret that the Treaty did not impose a definite and binding obligation on Germany to make good Britains' total financial loss.

The Prime Minister spoke late in the debate.

He justified the guarantee given to France by Great Britain and America in order to safeguard France from an attack such as she experienced in 1870. Dealing with Mr. Bottomley's point, he said that the total cost of the war to all the Allies was in the neighbourhood of thirty thousand millions, which meant that Germany would have had to pay with a sinking fund of 1,800 millions a year. Nobody had ever suggested that Germany could pay such a stupendous bill as that. The amount to be paid was within Germany's capacity to pay. It had been urged that no more Alsaces or Lorraines should have been set up by the Treaty. He agreed and denied that any had in fact been set up.

ARMAMENTS ENSURE PEACE.

Everyone desired to see the end of conscription as soon as possible, but it was necessary first to secure a good peace. That could only be done by great armaments which could impose terms on Germany. As to the trial of the ex-Kaiser he did not think anyone would suggest that a person guilty of wholesale murder should escape punishment, and in deciding that the ex-Kaiser should be tried in London the Allies were actuated by the confidence that he would receive a trial equal to the highest traditions of British Justice. Where a man killed another for gain he was held to be a murderer, but where a man killed millions for either glory or aggrandisement he was a hero and a great ruler or statesman. They would never put an end to war unless that idea were altered. The great point of the trial was that for the first time a man would be tried who had deliberately and wantonly brought about the death of millions. Having made a passing reference to Ireland, Mr. Lloyd George said that he did not claim the Treaty as being perfect, but he looked to the organisation of the League of Nations to remedy its defects.

Many old wrongs had been redressed and he could not think that any new ones had been created. We had established guarantees and securities against a repetition of the crimes and horrors from which the world had just been delivered. The Treaty would be like a lighthouse in the deep, warning the nations and rulers of nations to take heed of perils against which the German Empire had shattered itself.

ALLIED COMMANDERS.

PRINCE OF WALES' TOAST TO FOCH.

On Sunday evening the Prince of Wales presided at a dinner at the Carlton Hotel, given in honour of the British and Allied Commanders and their Staffs. A reception preceded the dinner. This was attended by about 400 British and foreign soldiers and sailors wearing the uniforms of their respective countries, and by Ministers of the Crown. Most of the distinguished officers present wore a large number of decorations, and the scene at the reception was a very brilliant and imposing one.

THE PRINCE'S TOAST.

In his capacity as president, the Prince of Wales proposed the toast of "The Allied Generals" (including, of course, the British commanders), and his speech was exceedingly well received. His Royal Highness coupled with the toast the name of Marshal Foch, who not only responded, but proposed in turn, the toast of all the Allied troops, to whose gallantry he paid generous tribute.

"Just now," he said "we are celebrating it all in the British and London way, and I feel that yesterday's triumphal pageant was a brilliant success. We feel that it represents the great war, that it represents victory in every sense of the word, and that no one who was present could fail to carry away the proudest and most inspiring memories which will last a lifetime and will be handed and passed down to future generations.

"To me, as one of the younger generation, these memories will be particularly vivid, as during my periods of active service in several theatres of the war, I often had the privilege and good fortune of being closely associated with many of our Allied armies.

"Now that the great war is over and the powerful enemies that have so long disturbed the peace of the world and menaced our freedom are finally overthrown and subdued, we all rejoice to welcome here those who have shared with us the perils and sufferings of the trying and strenuous campaign, and who now share with us the joy of our victory.

FOCH'S UNIQUE POSITION.

"In Marshal Foch we salute the great captain who in the later phases of the war directed the policies and operations of the Allied armies on the Western Front. His position as supreme commander-in-chief has no comparison in history, either from the point of view of power or of responsibility. In this position he has revealed a genius for war equal to the greatness of his task and the magnitude of his difficulties.

"I give you the toast of the Allied Generals, coupled with the name of Marshal Foch."

The Prince spoke very deliberately and distinctly, and his speech was punctuated by frequent applause. Immediately before proposing the actual toast he gave a short summary in French of the speech.

Marshal Foch spoke very briefly but earnestly in French. He thanked the Prince for his generous words, and said that though they all held in proud appreciation the honour and glory which the combined forces had won in the recent campaign, he saluted above all the splendid comradeship by which they had been jointly actuated. The Marshal resumed his seat amid resounding cheers.

THE ONE MAN LACKING.

MARSHAL FOCH'S TRIBUTE AND WISH.

Marshal Foch, the greatest soldier since Napoleon, received a special representative of "The Sunday Times" and gave him a stirring message. The Generalissimo of the Allied Armies, who was wearing the sky blue uniform in which he appeared in the procession earlier in the day, was looking somewhat fatigued.

"I have had a magnificent day," he said. "The feeling on all sides has been unanimous in its expression.

"This morning, when I spoke with Queen Alexandra, I told her that there was one man lacking to-day—namely, King Edward VII. Yes, while others were busy with their own affairs, King Edward was laying the foundations of the Great Alliance.

"We must safeguard the solidarity of the Allies, because any one of them taken alone might not be strong enough.

"You ask me what is the most remarkable lesson of the war? That question is not very easy to answer. There have been many lessons.

"However, the greatest of all is this one: that through united effort, the union of men and resources, the Allied and Associated nations have been able to achieve victory."

Eight hundred interned Germans are being shipped from Canada to Rotterdam this week.

ALLIES AND HUNGARY.

PROBLEM FOR THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Yesterday, the Council of Five, in the presence of Marshal Foch, discussed Hungarian affairs. The last intelligence received from Budapest is rather ominous in character. Following upon a summons addressed a few weeks ago to officers of the old army to resume their former ranks and functions, a general mobilisation was decreed on July 12. The preparations and the concentration of troops now in progress are distinctly pointing to an attack against the Roumanian front. The appointment of a French general, probably Mangin, who had a long conversation with M. Clemenceau three days ago, is reported as probable. He would take the general direction of all the armies—Czecho-Slovak, Roumanian, and Jugo-Slav—operating against the Hungarian Communists. There is every likelihood of war material, equipment, and supplies being sent at an early date by the Western Powers, but, as can easily be foreseen, no French or British troops will be sent.

Not only in the case of Hungary, but from the general point of view of the execution of the Peace Treaty, will the unwillingness of France, England, and America to assume new military responsibilities prove a great obstacle. There are important territories which have been assigned by the Peace Conference to the trusteeship of the League of Nations for a shorter or longer period. For instance, Upper Silesia, Danzig, Memel, Klagenfurth, the Sarre district—how will it be possible for the League of Nations to enforce its decisions on the contending parties? The question was raised a few days ago at the Council of Five, but no adequate reply was forthcoming. It is realised more and more that either the League of Nations will have to back up its resolutions by military force, or it will be defied and set at naught by every restive element in Europe. Upon the policy that is followed the whole efficiency of the Peacy Treaty depends.

Owing to the check suffered by Admiral Kolchak, the whole Russian policy of the Allies is bound to come again under review at no distant date.

MONROE DOCTRINE.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS GUARANTEE.

The Washington correspondent of the "Times," says that the confidence of the Republicans in their ability to secure a change in the Peace Treaty has been strengthened as the result of a message which Senator Lodge is reported to have received from a British statesman.

This declares that both Great Britain and France are prepared to agree to certain reservations proposed to Article Ten of the League of Nations Covenant definitely guaranteeing the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine.

BLACK V. WHITE.

Extensive rioting broke out at Washington, U.S.A. on Monday morning, as the result of a report that white women had been attacked by negroes.

Word passed like wildfire through the city and thousands of infuriated men made a general attack on negroes. They were pulled from trams, motors and other vehicles and severely beaten. One policeman was shot in the course of the rioting, which lasted until midnight, when it was quelled by the aid of extra police and provost guards who had to be called in.

BOLSHEVIST SUCCESS.

Reports reaching Helsingfors state that the Bolshevists claim to have captured Samari on Friday last, after hard fighting. They are now in possession of the whole Southern part of the province of Olonetz.

GERMAN FISHING FLEET.

A German in search of the Scotch herring arrived at Aberdeen within three days of the raising of the blockade. It is now anticipated that the whole of the Continental market, and particularly the German section, will be opened to the Scottish herring fishermen at an early date.

PEACE VISITS.

There were several functions in London yesterday incidental to the peace celebrations. Members of the House of Lords paid a visit to the fleet at Southend and the sailors who took part in the Victory March through London on Saturday were entertained by the Lord Major.

Marshal Foch left Victoria on Monday morning, en route for Ostend, whence he proceeds to Brussels for the festivities on the occasion of the Belgian National Fête.

ITALIAN STRIKE FIASCO.

The railway strike, planned to begin throughout the Italian railway system on Sunday night, failed ignominiously.

All the services were running regularly. In the cases of some few workers, who did not present themselves for duty, their places were immediately filled by others.

SABOTAGE.

NAVY MEN WORKING AT YORKSHIRE MINES.

The bad old days of the industrial epoch which marked the introduction of machinery on a large scale were the days when sabotage, or "ratting" as it was then called, was rife. Since then, by dint of education and inherent common sense, British workmen have very seldom resorted to wilful damage as a means of coercion or intimidation, their record being cleaner than that of any other nationality in the whole world.

Grave statements were made on Monday afternoon in the House of Commons by the Prime Minister concerning the Yorkshire miners strike. He said that the dispute was still going on, but the last twenty-four hours had witnessed a grave and unprecedented development. Already three mines had been flooded and twelve more would be flooded in a day or two owing to the abstention from duty of the pumping men.

These circumstances created a very dangerous situation. Some mines would be ruined in a few days and others thrown out of operation for a long period. In view of the serious consequences, the Government was compelled on Sunday to send men from the fleet to aid in pumping the mines.

Yesterday, the Minister of Labour sent a message to the Miners Federation asking them what action they are prepared to take to induce the regular pumping men to return to work. If they do return, the men sent to do the work by the Government will be immediately withdrawn. Until that happens, however, the Government will take all means at its disposal to save the mines and will afford every protection to those willing to render help. (Cheers.)

The action taken by the miners jeopardises their own means of livelihood and threatens disaster to everyone in the district.

EIGHT MILLION POUNDS

HUGE FRENCH CLAIM FOR REPARATION.

The following are the amounts estimated by the Peace Commission of the Chamber of Reparations that should be demanded from Germany:—For injuries in France, material damage, not including Mercantile Marine Vessel, Ministerial Offices or Business Establishments, £4,730,000,000; Military Pensions Capitalised, £1,722,040,000; Provision for Children, £216,800,000; for adults, £100,760,000; for widows and wounded, £240,000,000; Military Allocations under the law of Aug. 5, 1914, £531,000,000; help for prisoners, £6,146,800. Total, £7,636,746,800.—

THE DUTY OF EVERY GOOD CITIZEN.

In supporting an appeal for £10,000 for the work of the Society of which he is President, Sir Douglas Haig says:—"Previous to the Great War, the Society of Miniature Rifle Clubs was instrumental in forming over 5,000 rifle clubs. The great majority of their members when called upon to join the Army after the outbreak of war had a practical knowledge of shooting. This proved of inestimable value to both the country and the Army.

"In my opinion no fit man can claim to be a good citizen, or to have realized his duty to his country, until he has learnt to handle a rifle."

PAY OF ARMY OFFICERS.

The War Office announces that new rates of pay, half-pay, and retired pay for Army officers have been approved by the Government, and will take effect from July 1. A full announcement will be made at an early date, but some of the numerous and complicated details have still to be worked out. In the meantime it is pointed out that the new rates of retired pay for regular officers will apply to those who have served during the war as recalled officers, and also to those who may now retire, or may have retired since the date of the armisuce. Any officer who wishes to apply to retire, need not delay his application until the new rates are published.

CRY OF WOLFF.

In official circles at Paris it is declared that the note issued by the Wolff Agency stating that Germany refuses to satisfy the French demand for one million francs as a penalty for the murder of Sergt. Manheim was not given out as received. If silence in official circles corresponds with the facts it is evident that the Wolff telegram is intended as a "feeler." It is asserted that the French Government will refuse arbitration proposals and will show great firmness in the matter.

AUSTRIAN PEACE TREATY.

In diplomatic circles the new clauses in the Austrian Peace Treaty are regarded as an earnest effort to restore order out of chaos. It depends entirely on the spirit in which the new clauses are applied whether they are workable or not.

SPLENDID EXAMPLE.

TOWN RESPONDS TO HAIG'S APPEAL.

Merthyr has set an excellent example to the whole country, by vigorously taking up Sir Douglas Haig's call on behalf of the men who fought and won.

With praiseworthy foresight, a special campaign was opened to celebrate Peace Day by the inauguration of a fund for the discharged soldiers and sailors. A canvass of the town resulted in over £10,000 being raised in three days.

This money was subscribed in individual amounts, and the organisers are now proceeding to seek further afield for contributions.

The fund is for the relief of discharged men who are suffering from disablement caused by wounds and disease resulting from their services to the country.

LONDON TRAMS.

REDUCTION OF FARES IMPOSSIBLE.

No alterations can be made at present in the existing fares on the L.C.C. trams, says a report which the Highways Committee are about to present to the L.C.C.

The Committee say a great deal of the opposition to the revised scale of fares is in regard to halfpenny fares having been abolished, but the reinstatement of these would mean a loss of revenue, nor is the present an opportune time for reinstating ordinary transfer return fares.

In comparing tram and other fares, it must be remembered that the Council's tramway service provides certain facilities which are not provided by omnibus companies. These include workmen's cars and all-night services, the annual loss on which is estimated at about £105,000 and £2,600 respectively.

At present the fares on the Council's tramways are the lowest charged by any surface transport undertaking in the London area.

LUTON RIOTS.

DISCHARGED SOLDIERS' VALUABLE HELP.

As the result of the riots at Luton on Saturday night, forty policemen and fourteen firemen were injured. Beyond doubt the most disgraceful feature of the whole affair was the attack on the firemen, when they attempted to do their duty and save the burning Town Hall.

In connection with the attack the chief of the Fire Brigade acknowledges the valuable help given by a number of discharged soldiers when his men were overpowered. Yesterday shrapnel helmeted soldiers carrying live rounds in their pouches were on sentry duty at various points of the town, the fire station being particularly well guarded.

MOTOR CYCLE FATALITY

LORRY DRIVER CHARGED.

At Stratford Police Court on Monday, James Nicholl was charged with the manslaughter of Elias Cuddon, Minnie Cuddon his wife, and his son Francis.

It was stated that on Saturday night, accused was driving a Daimler lorry from London towards Epping. In proceeding up Church-Hill, Loughton, he collided with a motor cycle and side-car in which deceased were riding. The impact was severe, the side car being overturned and all three killed. The case was remanded.

BALTIC MINES.

According to official statements, the sea between Sweden and Finland has now been swept clear of mines, while in the waters along the Swedish coast in the Baltic and the Gulf of Bothnia, about half the mines have been disposed of.

Farther out in the Baltic there are still some German minefields which have to be got rid of. The German authorities are delivering the maps of minefields laid out by them.

In the Sound, minesweeping is being carried out by German minesweepers, but the waters near Gothenburg are still a dangerous district.

PAINS FOR PROFITEERS.

Mr. Roberts told the House of Commons that during the year the Food Ministry had instituted 5,908 prosecutions against retail traders for profiteering. In 229 of the cases the offender had been sentenced to imprisonment without the option of a fine. In 4,565 cases the penalty was restricted to a fine. The Food Controller, in reply to complaints by the Islington Labour Party regarding the penalties imposed upon those who are prosecuted for offences against Food Orders, explains that it is not within his power to interfere with the discretion of magistrates in these cases. He takes the view that one of the most effective methods of stamping out such illegal practices is the imposition of heavy fines, and he believes that public opinion would endorse the action of magistrates in imposing severe penalties.

BELA KUN ISOLATED.

PRACTICALLY DEPOSED BY HIS COLLEAGUES.

A Vienna telegram says that according to the "Neues Wiener Tageblatt" the Communist Szamuely has been the actual Dictator at Buda-Besth for the last two days. It is said that Szamuely and Bela Vagu, on learning that Bela Kun was negotiating with the emissaries of the Allies with a view to his withdrawing in favour of a Coalition Government, gathered together a large force of Red Guards who were dissatisfied at the prospect of such an arrangement and occupied the most important barracks in Buda-Pesth. Szamuely dismissed the commandant and took over the control of the town.

Bela Kun is said to be completely isolated and closely watched, but the news is not officially confirmed.

BRITISH AIR CHAMPION.

POSTHUMOUS V.C. FOR RECORD FIGHTER.

One of the finest records of war gallantry, is contained in a supplement to the "London Gazette," which announces the award of the Victoria Cross to the late Capt (Acting Major) Edward Mannock, D.S.O., M.C., 85th Squadron, Royal Air Force, in recognition of bravery of the first order in aerial combat. This highly distinguished officer, says the "Gazette," during the whole of his career in the Royal Air Force, was an outstanding example of fearless courage, remarkable skill, devotion to duty and self-sacrifice, which has never been surpassed. As far as can be ascertained officially, he was the champion British airman during the war. He is officially credited with 73 Hun machines. Lt.-Col. Bishop, the Canadian V.C., comes next with 72. Of all the Allies, Lt. Fonck, the French "ace," holds the record with 78 machines. The late Baron von Richthofen, of German "circus" fame, claimed to hold the world's record for the number of machines he had destroyed; but as the Germans worked on a different system respecting the official confirmation of each victim, the R.A.F. officials considered Major Mannock's record a far greater one.

PUSSYFEET.

PROHIBITION EXTREMISTS IN AMERICA.

If the Pussyfoot prohibitionists succeed in their present endeavours, the United States will be as dry as that district of Ecuador where rain has never been known to fall.

Not satisfied with their success in having abolished the public sale of intoxicants, they are following up their victory by trying to force through Congress a Bill to permit the search of private houses on the mere suspicion that liquor is stored therein. The Bill goes further in stating that once liquor is seized it cannot be returned. It also seeks to impose vexatious restrictions upon the use of sacramental wine and wine for medical purposes. It classes the possession of liquor on railway trains as a crime.

It is not to be wondered at, says the "New York World," that sane prohibitionists are greatly disturbed and warn their more immoderate fellowpartizans that they are going too far.

GERMAN COMMENT ON OUR NATIONAL ANTHEM.

Yesterday's "Kölnische Zeitung" comments on the Additional verses to the British National Anthem. It says:—

"At the celebration of thanksgiving at St. Paul's Cathedral, a partly-new text of "God save the King" was sung for the first time. The wish to alter the text had been already expressed during the war; it increased in force during the armistice, and with permission of the King the new text was officially sung on trial.

The first verse, which wishes victory, happiness, glory and a long reign to the King, remains unchanged. The text of the two new verses refrains from mentioning the enemies of the King and his activity as defender of the laws. Instead, it glorifies the powerful World-Empire and its peoples and ends with a wish for a lasting peace for all."

(These two verses were written for the occasion. The original words of the British national Anthem remain unaltered. Editor.)

AEROPLANE TRIPLE FATALITY.

An inquest was held at Hendon on Monday afternoon on Lieutenant Gain, Corporal Gammier and Air-Mechanic Griffiths, who were killed at the aerodrome on Friday, when their machine crashed and they were burnt to death.

Major Mounsey, R.A.F., gave evidence and said that in his opinion the pilot must have made an error of judgment, as the machine had been thoroughly tested before ascending and was in perfect order.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

THE BROADER VIEW.

One of the problems which followed the war, was that of education in the Army of Occupation, and that the problem has been tackled with a very considerable degree of success cannot be gainsaid.

There were originally many difficulties in the way, but, bit by bit, these have been practically all overcome, and there is every reason at the present time to be proud of the very complete organization which exists for the education of the young soldier.

Apart from its importance to the individual, education in the Army is of the most supreme national importance. The more educated a man is, the more susceptible he is to those steadying influences which were never more necessary to Great Britain than they are to-day. Necessarily, one of the results of war is a certain amount of discontent and strife, and there could be no better means of overcoming these than by educating the masses to a high sense of individual duty and responsibility.

One of the soundest principles of life is that the best way to eliminate the undesirable is to cultivate that which is desirable, and by implanting in the mind of the young soldier sound healthy ideas of citizenship and pride of country, a great deal will have been done towards the problem of reconstruction. Whatever the ultimate cost in labour and money, it will have been well spent.

At a time like this very large and generous views must be taken of national problems, and the tendency to regard education as a mere process of imparting knowledge must be strongly resisted. That is why the Army scheme of education may be regarded with satisfaction; it aims not only at improving the mind of the young soldier, but also elevating his conscience.

To those who have undertaken, then, in many cases gratuitously, to assist in the education scheme, all credit is due, and the satisfaction of having helped, in however small a degree, to lay the foundation for the reconstruction of Great Britain should be to them no small reward.

WE MUST FIGHT.

"I wonder if there will ever be another war?" "When do you think the next war will be?" are questions that at the present time one very often hears a man ask his friend. And the friend answers: "Oh, not for a long time, after a show like this."

They are, of course, referring to such a war as we have just experienced, a purely physical war, one nation against another—and they may be right in what they say. But let us remember that this is not the only sort of war, that there is another kind altogether, namely—the war of a nation against conditions, much more formidable because it is a much more insidious one.

England has fought and has won; and having won, she must now fight harder than ever before against this new and deadly enemy—Reaction.

For the past four years, everyone has been strung up to a high pitch. All the highest and best emotions and qualities, such as patriotism, self-sacrifice, sympathy, courage, have been called into play, and played upon almost to breaking point.

Then suddenly comes the end, the blessed relief from strain, and we are inclined to let everything slide, to let go our hold. Our mind says, "Thank God, it is over!" then drops its weapons and leaves it at that.

But we must not leave it at that. We must still fight—and against these very failings that have largely been banished by war-time, against the opposites of all the good qualities that were brought out by war conditions, against selfishness, cowardice, general apathy towards our country, lack of understanding and sympathy towards others, frivolity and relaxation of morals, if we are to keep our place in the world as an all-round first-class power. We enter this new fight handicapped by the effects of the last, by the strain, the anxiety we have undergone, by the loss of our best and bravest; but still we can win through, if we realise we must fight. That is the point—to realise, not to ignore; not to slide blindly down the easy path, without caring, without trying.

For four years we have stood up against the wave that threatened to swamp our country, resisting its sweeping rush, holding our ground. Let us remember, let us realise, that every wave has an ebb. Let us not be sucked into the sea through lack of recognition of the fact that even a spent wave has not exhausted all its power and can do even more damage than at first, by catching us off guard.

OUR TRIUMPH.

It has only been given to the great majority of us, here on the Rhine, to read about the scenes of splendour and triumph which have been enacted during the past weeks in the capitals of the victorious Allies. We have not been amongst those fortunate ones selected to take part in the Victory march through London. We can only envy those who were and wish that we might have seen that greatest of triumphs.

It is, however, an opportune moment to remember that the real spectacle of victory is to be seen in the presence on the Rhine of the British Army. Every man here is taking a part; not in a single procession through streets, that will tomorrow resume their normal aspect, when the flags and streamers are removed, but in a more enduring and tangible method of displaying victory.

We have read of the memorial to "The Glorious Dead" erected in Whitehall. We are the visible sign that their sacrifice was not made in vain. Everyone of us here represents at least three of those who are lying in the scattered graves, marking the fields of the battles, which made our presence here possible.

The aspirations they died for, are fulfilled in us, and it is no small privilege to be one of the reapers of the harvest they sowed so well.

AN ADVICE BUREAU.

From a Correspondent.

"What career shall I adopt when I am demobilized?

This question is puzzling the brains of many soldiers who are expecting to be demobilized shortly. For various reasons, they do not wish to return to their pre-war occupations, but desire to prepare themselves for more congenial posts by taking advantage of the educational scheme offered to the Army of the Rhine.

But what career? That is the question.

In America vocational libraries are run in connection with employment bureaux, and quite recently a similar library, affiliated to the National Council of Women was opened at Princess Street, London. Would it not be possible to establish an institution of this description in Cologne for the benefit of officers and men of the Occupation Army?

Such a bureau should be run by a staff of competent and sympathetic officers who are thoroughly acquainted with certain careers, and able to give practical advice to those seeking information. In conjunction with this, there should be a well-stocked library, containing a good assortment of books and pamphlets dealing with the various vocations.

Such an institution would be invaluable to a man in doubt. First he would visit the library and there decide upon the career that appealed to him. Next, he could obtain advice as to his suitability, and the course of study he ought to pursue by way of preparation.

For instance, it is not generally known that educational instructors who attend the special course at Oxford or Newmarket will be excused one year of the two years training required by the Board of Education for the teachers' certificate.

This is the sort of thing one would be sure to find out at the Advice Bureau instead of hearing by chance and then not being sure of the accuracy of the information.

What a number of men there are, too who wish to set up in business for themselves and would be glad of reliable, information on the subject

Again, a good practical man who takes over a good going concern, often comes to grief becuse he does not know the correct way to keep his books.

Some take up subjects which they will not require immediately and neglect those which are essential; while, others commence to study German before they have learned the rudiments of English Grammar, or something of that sort.

There is no doubt that an advice bureau is needed here immediately, so that no man will be at a loose-end on his discharge, for the duty of this department would be to endeavour to place the round peg in the round hole.

LOOKING IN SHOPS.

We all do it. I am not sure that we men are less addicted to it, than are the fair members of the more attractive sex—one dare hardly to-day use the adjective "weaker." Our attention is directed to different windows and other displays—that is all.

And really it is a fascinating pastime, to be enjoyed by the appreciative, even though he be, voluntarily or of necessity, confined to the role of spectator only, For a row of shops is an epitome of human life, human achievements, human industry, human needs and human frailties. The character of a people may be read in its shops and the goods there displayed. Have you tried the experiment? It is interesting.

Volumes might be written on the subject. But space and time forbid; and I only want to suggest, and to set you thinking, with me, of the wonderful fascination of a purposeful, instead of an aimless, regard of what the shops urge upon our notice.

Here, in Cologne, it is a much-used form of recreation. Suppose each of us, for a week, should study what he sees in the window-displays so lavishly afforded us? Suppose we think about, and exchange opinions on, what we see?

The first thing perhaps that strikes us is the multiplicity of hands and of processes that have gone to the production and final arrival at its present position of almost every article we see for sale. All that has been necessary to the completion and supply of a photographic camera! Think it out in detail. And so down to the simplest things—say, a rosy mound of fruit. Yet much thought, time, labour and material has been necessary to bring even this before us.

Observe the enormous variety of objects in a stationer's shop. Think of all the processes, the knowledge, the experience, the actual work which have placed all these individual things before our eyes and ready for our use.

An ivory-handled walking stick, a newspaper (follow each detail to its source), an aluminium saucepan, a silken shawl, an electric lamp-select your objects as you will, and stand amazed at the power of organised knowledge and industry to bring these finished products, the results of infinite co-ordination, within the commonplaces of everyday life. It is one of those miracles that we overlook, because they are always with us.

Then one is struck by the over-production of unnecessary things. This is a point of immense importance in a world where the problem of the moment is the sufficient production of the necessary and the desirable. Everything produced should have beauty or significance—one of the two, certainly; if possible, and it often is, both qualities should be present.

Now see how many of these things, thus judged, could be spared. And reflect on the misuse of time, energy and money that has gone to produce them, when the same effort and expenditure might have given us more things of real need and worth.

These are but a few hints of the conscious pleasure we may desire from looking in shops. Think it out for yourself.

THE LINGUIST.

In the days immediately following the decree of Fate (in the shape of Daily Orders, and the sub-heading "Movements and Postings") that I should proceed to Rhineland, I received from a well-meaning friend, a very useful present.

At first glance the utility of the article was apparent for it was entitled "The Hand-book of Ajax" and was composed entirely for the benefit of Service men.

In scanning the pages I conceived a high esteem for Ajax; an esteem which increased the more, as I realised the scope of his work.

I carefully marked the phrases which I proposed to master before reaching the Rhine; "I cannot speak German", "Where can I cross the river"?, "Where are the troops"?, and "Where can I get a drink"?,

These I studied long and carefully, and so arrived at Cologne in the murk of the morning, with a complacent heart, which feared not the future.

That point marks the extreme height of my regard for Ajax, for with daylight, and the sight of the many bridges rising out of the morning mist it became certain that "Where can I cross the river?' would be a perfectly inanemanner of opening conversation, while "Where are the troops"? would merely invite derisive remarks regarding my eye-sight.

The abundance of beer-gardens and cafes further depleted my repertoire leaving me but one remark, the value of which rested securely on its veracity — "I cannot speak German," and I did not wait long before an opportunity for using that phrase presented itself.

"Ich spreche kein Deutsch," I replied in answer to an enquiry, a curse, or I know not what; and the resultant flood of German oratory left me with the belief that instead of meaning "I speak no German," the literal translation was more probably "I bet you can't keep talking for ten minutes without a break".

So Ajax and I parted, for I have no use for a dud pilot, and I must confess that now I get along tolerably well without him.

My methods perhaps, are laconic but they meet with success.

When lost in some unrecognisable part of Cologne, the student of Ajax would make a noise like "Ich habe mich verirrt" but the result would be precisely the same as when I said "Ich spreche kein Deutsche", and he would be more thoroughly lost than before.

My method is much more simple — being lost I merely step before a passing citizen and murmur plaintively "Nix Dom."

Obviously I do not mean to infer that his respected Dom is indulging in an afternoon stroll, so Herr Citizen flourishes three fingers, and with an expressive glance at the tram lines remarks, "Drei".

Within ten minutes car number three has brought me to familiar streets.

Throughout each day, "Nix" is the key to easy communication; in the mess, "Nix speck" usually means "hustle with my bacon", and on isolated occasions — "I don't want any bacon", but in either case, the meaning is made perfectly clear by the intonation of the remark.

MORAL: —

Acquire a thorough knowledge of the intricacies of the word NIX, and to thee Rhineland will be as an open book.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

TYPES OF ARCHITECTURE.

Sir,—As a humble admirer of the "Cologne Post," I turn to you for instruction. Could you tell me, why the type of mediaeval architecture, as exemplified in the cathedrals of Amiens, Rheims, Rouen, Cologne, Westminster, and many others, is known as gothic.

This type of architecture, is quite distinct from the Renaissance style, like St. Paul's cathedral but why is mediaeval architecture called gothic? The Goths surely created nothing, they only destroyed.

Architects I know speak of the Roman, Norman, and Gothic Architecture but did the Goths even initiate the beginnings of architecture? The Lombards did, and so did the Byzantians, but surely the Goths did not.

I would like to know the truth. This letter is evoked by the view of Cologne Cathedral, a cathedral which to me is beautiful. It seems to breathe the spirit of mediaeval times, but again why Gothic?

MERIBAMUR.

DANCE ROOM ETIQUETTE.

Sir,—Being a regular attendant at the British Empire Leave Club dances, I would like to point out a few errors which some of the dancers make.

It is a common practice for a gentleman to take hold of his partner's wrist and extend her arm full length with the result that other dancers are liable to be hit in the face.

Another mistake is to "cake-walk" or "Jazz" during a waltz. This is annoying to other dancers.

Now there is too much wild dancing and it ought to be stopped. It is the fault of a few, who think they are clever, whereas it makes them ridiculous. RUNNER.

WIVES IN COLOGNE.

Sir,—May I make a proposal to the married officers who think of bringing their wives to Cologne?

It is that an hotel be rented complete with German personnel, etc., and that wives and ourselves be billeted there. Rations have been sanctioned on repayment and if we were able to procure such a place, the two principal obstacles would be overcome. A great advantage would be the social side, which would greatly enhance the visit for our wives.

If there are officers willing to take up this proposal I should be exceedingly glad to hear from them.

MARRIED OFFICER.

AN OFFICER'S GRUMBLE.

Sir,—I write in the devout hope that this may catch the eye of the President of the N.A.C.B.

Hundreds of thirsty officers are anxiously enquiring why bottled beer should be provided on the Boulogne-Cologne Express for the use of the train crew only, and not for those for whom the train is run? An officer asks for a bottle of beer, only to be met with the reply, "No beer, Sir."

On my last trip I saw a dozen empty beer bottles thrown out from the kitchen; also two men open four bottles and drink the contents, so I do not write from hearsay. It was the same when the E.F.C. catered for the train, so it is not the effect of new administration.

CAPTAIN.

THE TOTALIZATOR.

Sir,—I read with interest the letter by "W.R.B." concerning the totalizator, and I agree with him.

We would all rather know what we are going to receive, should we be lucky enough to find a winner.

Another point is that as so many in the ranks are good horsemen, would it not be a good idea to include some events for them. DRIVER.

A SILLY PRACTICE.

Sir,—I should like to bring to your notice the sneering remarks passed by various canteen customers.

These remarks are uncalled for as the majority of men serving behind the counters are demobilized infantry men.

Do those who are thus guilty, probably through want of thought, realise that the old adage "Honour to those to whom honour is due," still holds good.

DEMOBILIZED AND RE-ENLISTED.

WIVES AT HOME.

Sir,—Your article entitled "The Unadvertised Heroine" was very true and I am very pleased to note that the part played by wives at home has been recognised.

In my opinion, the wife of the retained man is a super-heroine, and not only deserves, but urgently requires practical help. Such wives should not be financially embarrassed.

"THOUGHTFUL HUSBAND."

Sir,—I agree with "H.R.C." It certainly is high time wives at home were given an increased allowance in view of the reduced purchasing value of a sovereign.

One wonders how they have managed. All cannot go out to work, and if the breadwinner is away in the nation's interests, it should, in all fairness, make sure his wife does not go short. The increase in allowances has not kept pace with the rapid rise in the cost of everything necessary for living.

"DOUBLEYOU."

SERIOUS READING.

Sir,—With reference to your correspondent's letter on serious reading, I quite agree that more might be done to improve the taste of the young soldier so far as his reading is concerned.

There are now numerous libraries, well stocked with standard classics, in Cologne, and steps should be taken to make their existence more widely known.

MY GARDEN.

A Garden is a lovesome thing, God wot!
Rose plot,
Fringed pool,
Fern'd grot—
The veriest school
Of peace; and yet the fool
Contends that God is not—
Not God! in gardens! when the eve is cool?
Nay, but I have a sign;
'Tis very sure God walks in mine.

Above is the bowling record of Pte. D. N. Jones of the 9th Corps Troops M. T. Coy., which is one of the best so far recorded.

With regard to outstanding League engagements, it is most essential that these should be played off without further delay as time is now becoming strictly limited.

To the creditable performance of Rfn. Parsons who took 7 wickets for 8 runs is due the honour of the day. The only one to reach double figures was C. S. M. Turner, A. G. S. (22) of the 12th R.I.R.

51st H. Warwick (45) v Southern Div. M. T. Coy (27).

VICTORY BISLEY.

Runaway Triumph for England in Closing Shoot.

The Victory Bisley meeting was brought to a close with the shooting for the Mackinnon Cup. It was a runaway victory for England, who had a 21 points lead from Scotland at the end of the 900 yards distance, and overwhelmed all opponents by grand shooting at 1,000 yards. At the end of the first distance the positions were:—

England	762
Scotland	741
Australia	708
Canada	696
New Zealand	693

The final positions were:—

England	1497
Australia	1424
Canada	1398
Scotland	1376
New Zealand	1368

With the closing of the N.R.A. meeting it may be said that although the Association has experienced financial loss this year, notwithstanding the presence of so many regulars in the King's Prize fixture, it may be regarded with more confidence than the last few Bisleys before the war.

Many new men have been introduced and they will doubtless return when the difficulties which beset this hastily organised meeting are unlikely to intrude.

ENGLISH CRICKET RESULTS.

Middlesex 210; Essex 155 for 2.

Yorkshire 264; Surrey 111 for 4.

Somerset 241 v. Worcester. Rain stopped play.

Warwickshire 215; Australians 144 for 3

CRICKET FRIENDLY.

The 93rd Bde R.G.A., being without a "Post" match on Saturday, entertained the 140 F.A., R.A.M.C. at Kalk. The 93rd had the opportunity of trying new men. Bdr. Bloomfield, one of the Freshmen, played a nice innings of 25, Sig. Smythe with 39 and Major McLeod gave him good assistance towards their score of 156. The Medicals replied with 83. The R.A.M.C. possess quite a good side, when one considers the smallness of the unit. In fact, this was their first defeat.

SCHOOLBOY'S SPLENDID PERFORMANCE.

L.J.Dunn, a Watson's College schoolboy, who won the Scottish Hurdles Championship, at Glasgow, won the Watson's College Championship with a series of splendid performances. He took the 100 yards in 10 4-5secs., 200 yards in 24 2-5 secs, 120 yards hurdles in 16secs., high jump at 5ft. 7½in., broad jump at 19ft. 2in., and was second in throwing the cricket ball. He broke the school record in the furlong hurdles, and high jump.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Wind South-West to South, 10-15 m.p.h Dull, occasional rain. Moderate temperature. Fair visibility.

WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP.

Dempsey to meet Beckett or Carpentier in London.

Mr. C. B. Cochran states that it is now definitely decided that Dempsey, the heavy-weight champion of the world, will meet the winner of the Carpentier-Beckett fight, which takes place at Olympia on Sept. 2. Dempsey will fight in London early next year on a date to be mutually agreed upon. Soon after beating Willard it was announced that Dempsey's next match would be fought on American soil, but evidently the offer of Mr. Cochran has led him to reconsider the question.

WILLARD v. DEMPSEY.

Rickard's profit 100,000 Dollars.

A Toledo, O., telegram to "The World," dated July 9, states: Exactly 19,650 persons paid their way into the Bayview Park arena on July 4 to see Jack Dempsey knock out Jess Willard for the heavyweight championship of the world. The receipts, after the Government tax of 11,789.94 dols. had been deducted, were 110,732.16 dols. The 7 per cent. charity fund for the City of Toledo was slightly under 30,000 dols.

There were 292 policemen in the stadium, 75 firemen, 600 ushers, 90 ticket takers, 40 ticket sellers, and 454 Press representatives.

The principal expenses of the promoters were: Willard, 100,000 dols.; Dempsey, 27,500 dols.; arena construction, 150,000 dols.; City of Toledo charity fund, 30,000 dols.; total, 307,500 dols. Other charges probably will make the cost approximately 325,000 dols., leaving profits somewhat below 100,000 dols.

JOHNNY BASHAM VICTORIOUS

Johnny Basham, the Welterweight Champion, scored a victory over Willie Farrell of London at the Liverpool Stadium on Monday night after a delightful display of boxing by both. Basham's speed was the determining factor in the result. Farrell was slow in covering up, and Basham, taking advantage of openings, frequently landed on the jaw.

Farrell was sent to the boards in the ninth round and two rounds later a left to the jaw put him down twice for nine.

Basham completed the defeat at the third time of asking.

HILL CLIMBING TEST.

44th Bn. Seaforth Highlanders Athletic Gathering at Nideggen.

BATTALION CHAMPIONSHIP.

The sports of the 44th Seaforth Highlanders were held at Nideggen on Tuesday and Wednesday, in wet and changeable weather, despite which there was a large attendance of spectators.

Amongst those present were:—Brigadier-General Marindin C.B., D.S.O., and Mrs. Marindin; Brigadier-General J. W. Sandilands C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O.; Brigadier-General I. Stewart C.M.G., D.S.O.; Brigadier-General A. G. Stevenson C.M.G., D.S.O., R.E.; Colonel H. F. Baillie D.S.O.; Lt.-Col. T. Stewart D.S.O.; Lt.-Col. H. G. Sotheby M.V.O., D.S.O.; Lt.-Col. R. Campbell D.S.O.; Lt.-Col. W. French D.S.O., M.C.; and Major N. McQueen D.S.O.

In the absence of the battalion band, which was taking part in the Victory march at Paris, the band of the 3rd King's Own Hussars rendered a most enjoyable programme of music, which, in the natural amphitheatre of the valley, was heard to great advantage.

KEEN COMPETITION.

The feature of the sports was the keen competition for the battalion championship, in which No 3 Company, the holders, worthily held their own; again emerging victorious, with a total of 51 points, and thus retaining the silver bugle. No 2 Company were second with 39 points, No 4 Company third with 25 points. The best individual effort was that of Lieut. R. J. Smith, No 2 Company, with three firsts, one second, and a third.

Towards the end of the day, the weather cleared up, and after and excellent day's sport, the prizes were very kindly presented by Mrs. Marindin, whose presence on both days, in spite of the inclement weather, was greatly appreciated by all ranks of the battalion.

A word of praise is due to Lieut. G. M. Lowther, battalion sports officer, for his untiring work on the sports ground, which contributed in no small measure to the success of the sports.

The judges were:—Lt.-Col. J. Stewart D.S.O.; Lt.-Col. R. Campbell D.S.O.; Lt.-Col. W. French D.S.O., M.C.; Lieut. J. Walker; Lieut. W. J. Odd and Lieut. J. Ransell M.C. Starter:—Lt. K. Macdonald M.C.

EXCITING MILE RACE.

12th Bn., The Loyal North Lancashire Regiment Sports at Bonn.

Splendid weather and great keenness on the part of all ranks contributed to a brilliant assembly at the Battalion Sports Meeting on Friday.

A large number of visitors were present, largely attracted by the 1 mile Open, which event proved highly exciting, there being some 40 entrants, 20 of whom were visitors. This was a well contested race, the winner being 2/Lieut. Elliott, 15th Lancashire Fusiliers. Second: Private Gaskell, Border Regiment.

The names of Lieut. Slack, Cpl. Dandy, L Cpl. Sumner and Pte. Skidmore again figured largely among the winners.

SPORTS NOTES.

The Side Shows, especially "Charlie" & Co. (Pte Webster) were a great attraction.

The "Totalizator" did a large business and was very popular.

Lieut. Colonel R.T. Pelly, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., (Commanding) distributed the prizes after the races.

A great novelty amongst the prizes was War Savings Certificates which were given in addition to the usual Souvenirs.

The Band quite excelled itself in rendering some really new tunes.

Play, Music, And Song.

OUR DEMOBILIZED STARS: WHERE TO SEE THEM IN ENGLAND WHEN ON LEAVE.

Many Rhineland soldiers going on leave to the United Kingdom would be glad to know where they may see their Army concert party stars, achieving fame in our theatres and music halls at home. The writer of the following has just returned from leave in England, and has had the pleasure of meeting and conversing with many of the "boys" who have delighted us on the green in less comfortable circumstances.

Les Rouges et Noirs.

This first rate party belonged to the First Army and was one of the most elaborately staged and produced in France. They are all professionals and were all demobbed en bloc, fortunately all being eligible. I am informed the G.O.C. sent them home with the official good wishes of the Army and a cheque for £1,000 to help them establish as a permanent professional party for engagements in England. They are doing extraordinarily well and last week were topping the bill at the Victoria Palace, London, having just had a most successful week at Brighton. Hal Bert and Reg Stone are still going strong. By the way, the Terry Twins are not now with the party.

At The Winter Garden.

Quite a platoon of old concert party stars are to be found at the new Winter Garden Theatre, Drury Lane, which everyone should visit when in town. "Kissing Time" is an enormous success, but how could it be otherwise with the one and only Leslie Henson capering about all through the show and a round half dozen of his Royal Gaieties from the Louveau Theatre, Lille (and also many a shell-shattered village) distributed among the caste. Here you may see Peter Shannon, Tim O'Connor (of the Goods), Stanley Brightman, Stanley Holloway, and "Keith" (he of the R.A.F.), whilst the Fifth Army front-of-the-house man, Frank Slepe, will hand you your ticket at the box office.

Welsh Wails at Wyndham's.

At Wyndham's Theatre you will find Eric Blore, late O. C. Entertainments for the Welsh Division, creator of "The Welsh Wails" concert party and inventor and producer of the sketch that made the King laugh, the much copied "Musical Orderly Room." Eric is delightful, tooling deliciously with Mabel Green, and is seen to advantage in a part that seems just made for him. Don't miss "His Little Widows" at Wyndhams.

Those Indian Love Lyrics.

Probably the most discussed soldier's production in France during '17 and '18 was Bert Errol's staging of "The Indian Love Lyrics." It was certainly one of the most ambitious and artistic things attempted for touring in the war zone, and everyone has been asking if it is to be presented in England. I am now able to state definitely that it will be put on and that it is definitely arranged to open at Manchester in about a month. Also, Ewart Noble will play his original part, and will drop press photography, which has kept him occupied since his demob. It is also booked for America. Meanwhile, Errol returns next week to the Palladium, and will sing for the first time in England, "If You Could Care For Me," by permission of Delysia. This was his great Lille pantomime success and will recall pleasant memories to many who are lucky enough to hear Errol again in London or on tour.

Another at the Palace.

George Glover, late of the "Em Tees" concert party, Grove Park, is now back from India and "starring" in the Palace Revue, "Hullo America."

Fancy Dress Ball.

The men's fancy dress dance at the British Empire Leave Club to-night which begins at 6.30, will continue till 10 p.m. There will be two dressing rooms for the men who come in from the outlying districts, but those stationed in Cologne are asked to come dressed with overcoats and caps over their costumes. Fancy dress is essential for admittance to the ball room.

Quite Exemplary.

Many criticisms have been heard of the behaviour of officers and other ranks in places of entertainment, but the most captious of listeners could not have complained at the first performance by the Rhine Army Dramatic Company of "General Post." During the most serious parts of the play one could have heard the proverbial pin drop.

In a few Words

In connection with the new touring scheme, several really first rate Divisional concert parties have been formed.

"GENERAL POST."

Delightful Comedy Submitted by Rhine Army Dramatic Coy.

"General Post," by J.E. Harold Terry, was produced on Monday at the Deutsches Theatre by the Rhine Army Dramatic Company with conspicuous success. Even the memory of the performance stirs one to enthusiasm. The play itself is generally acknowledged to be one of the most delightful of the many comedies that have the great war for their theme. Partly on account of this and partly because of the admirable treatment accorded it by the Dramatic Company, "General Post" was acclaimed by a packed house on Monday as a performance well worth going a long way to see.

The Book.

The story, as the title implies, deals with the topsy-turvy outcome of recruiting all classes of the community into the Army and conferring rank upon them according to ability and not in accordance with social status. In this particular case a dear old "country 'gentleman, whom everyone likes from the start, finds himself, after the war has progressed for some time, a full-blown private in the "G.R." Meanwhile his son has been gazetted to a battalion of which his erstwhile tailor is in command. Snobbishness has no sympathy as the delightful stery is unfolded, and even Lady Broughton, whose ideas about the importance of "belonging to the county" are immovable, eventually condescends to accept the said tailor—now a Brigadier V.C.—as her son-in-law.

Peace Day with the R.F.'s.

Peace day was celebrated by the 17th Royal Fusiliers with complete freedom from parades and a jolly time was spent. A jazz night was arranged. Songs and recitations were given by C.S.M. Sanderson, Sergeant Marsh, Cpls. Abell and Poulton, the pianist being Cpl. Hawes. Dancing was carried on till the "wee sma hours" and the fun was fast and furious.

Backhaus Recital.

An amusing comment on the old taunt, that the English are unmusical, lies in the fact that German newspapers have been blaming Wilhelm Backhaus for being monopolised by the English, both being contrary to the truth. One emphatic disproval of the "unmusical" bogey was shown on Sunday evening, when the mixed audience, chiefly military, at the Deutsches Theatre cheered Backhaus again and again for his superb rendering of Chopin's Polonnaise in A flat, which was the gem of the Liszt, Schubert, and Chopin programme. Alfred Barker played Elgar's Sonata (Op. 82) with felicity of touch, but passive sameness of tone, which greater intimacy with the work will remedy. He was happier in three Kreizler items. Part of the programme was sustained by the Rhine Army Choral Society.

Their singing, despite the unevenness of numbers, was exceedingly melodious, and, in soft, delicately harmonized phrases, delightful. There is, however, an entire absence of spirit. Not all the (quite unnecessary) gymnastic contortions of the conductor could galvanise them out of an apologetic rendering of "Britons never will be slaves." An exchange of energy would be mutually beneficial. The programme contained an indefensible error, Backhaus being wrongly named. The world knows Backhaus or Wilhelm Backhaus, but who on earth is "William" Backhaus?

The "Don Cees."

The newly formed concert party, the "Don Cees" (D. Coy, 4th Batt. Suffolk Regt.) made their second appearance in public at the Y.M.C.A. Hut, Neunkirchen, the other day with an ambitious programme, which met with an enthusiastic reception. "Nina" (Sergt. A.E. Flack), with the vivacious charm of her sex, became an instant success. The droll humour of "Potts" (Pte. A.T. Potter) won cordial approval and his quick wittedness caused hearty laughter-applause, dear to the comedian's heart. L/Cpl. H. Wells was vociferously applauded for his two tenor solos. The programme included two sketches, "When a woman loves" and "Rum' uns from Rome," in which performance Pte. F. Martin was especially good. The enjoyment of the evening was considerably enhanced by the instrumental efforts of the band of the 51st Batt. Royal Sussex Regt.

Peace Day at Lülsdorf.

Peace Day was celebrated in an enjoyable manner by the D.A.C. of the Eastern Division when the concert party of No. 1 Section made merry and delighted an audience which filled the hall at Lülsdorf to overflowing. For over two hours the camp was "Full of sweet strains and sounds that give delight." Captain G.H. McEwen, D.C.M., R.F.A., made an excellent chairman, and during the evening contributed several baritone songs in acceptable manner. Songs were also given by Gunners Hughes and Hawkins and Drivers Kirk and George. Several original and amusing sketches were presented, and Lieut. Chaldicott is to be congratulated on his success as author and actor. "Buying a Horse" comprised a clever piece of dialogue, while "Diamonds and Paste" was performed with pantomimic success. The song scena, "An officer's mess after dinner," was an item of outstanding merit. Capt. McEwen was particularly fine in "A soldier's toast."

In a few Words.

The orchestra at the Deutsches Theatre has reached a very high standard of excellence.

The "Oddities" are again in Cologne, this time at the Apollo Theatre.

A mix up in the music, resulted in half the orchestra, in the overture to "General Post" playing a rousing "rag" while the other half commenced an operatic selection on Monday.

JACQUES.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

"Gowf" Revolution.

It is understood that the authorities at St. Andrews contemplate altering the rule concerning the stymie and standardising the weight of all golf balls.

International Polo.

England defeated Ireland at Hurlingham by nine goals to six, after one of the keenest and most spectacular games ever witnessed in the series of encounters between the two countries.

Catching on in China.

Lawn tennis is rapidly growing in popularity throughout China—especially in the southern provinces, according to S. Lock Wei, who won the handicap event at Norwood.

A Famous Huntsman.

The death has occurred at his residence, Arnold Lodge, Bottesford, of Ben Capell, the famous huntsman. He was born at Quore in 1850, rode second horse to Tom Firr, and acted as second whipper in to the Quorn 1878-79.

Limbless Swimming.

With the object of demonstrating to men who have lost an arm or a leg that it is possible for them to swim with speed, Jabez Wolffe, who is training at Brighton for his next Channel swim, is organising a race between the Palace and West Pier at Brighton, open to men who have lost a limb in the war.

Ostend Winners

Corydon and Starr are Mr. Bottomley's latest winners at Ostend.

For Paris.

The following English horses are amongst the nominations for the Prix du Conseil Municipal at Paris on Oct. 5: Callander, Lansellon, Makepeace, Lady Farmer, Sir Desmond, and Rowland.

John Ball in Form.

The summer meeting of the Leasowe Club was held on Saturday near Birkenhead. The Cashel Cup and Gold Memento (best scratch score) were won by John Ball (Leasowe) with the splendid score of 73.

In Lighter Vein.

"This is a hole I particularly like," said the enthusiastic golf architect, as he strode triumphantly towards the tee to take the honour. "You need to play with your head." "Good Lord! man," cried his adversary, "surely you're not going to take wood to it!"

Motor Racing.

Under the flag of the British Motor-boat Club a race took place for sea-going cabin cruisers from Erith to Cowes, starting at 7 a.m. on Saturday. Thorneycroft's unnamed boat proved absolute winner, arriving at Cowes at 1.53 on Sunday morning.

On the Seine.

Cambridge won the eights championship in the finals of the Inter-Allied Regatta on the Seine.

Subalterns' Tourney.

At Ranelagh, the Subalterns' Tournament was brought to a successful conclusion, the 8th Hussars beating the 13th Hussars after a close match by seven goals to five.

Biting Well.

The recent rains have considerably improved angling prospects. Rivers during the week-end were in summer condition, and fish were biting well. Good mixed baskets of dace, roach, gudgeon, and barbel have been taken in the Thames.

Frank Dainty at Home.

Frank Dainty, the well-known steeple-chase jockey, having just got demobilised, has arrived home in Lambourn, and has started riding out at exercise for H. Young and E. Gwilt.

Royal Pigeons.

The leading pigeons in the big open race of the North Road Championship Club from Thurso did over 50 miles per hour, breaking all records from that race point, some 500 miles. The wind was favourable, blowing strong from N.W. The winner is H.M. the King, with a velocity to his Sandringham loft of 1611.

Miniature Rifle Clubs.

Previous to the Great War, the Society of Miniature Rifle Clubs was instrumental in forming over 5,000 rifle clubs.

Clever Centre-Forward.

The Reading Football Club have induced St. Mirren to part with John Hastie, who is reported to be one of the cleverest centre-forwards who has ever served the club.

Young Tingey.

A. S. Tingey, a son of the Fontainebleau professional, has been engaged by the South Beds Club. Young Tingey joined the "Niblick Brigade" in 1914, and was wounded in the arm at Pozieres.

Sweet Seventeen.

A large number of entries have been received for the National Junior Championships, which open at Ventnor on Aug. 11. Seventeen is the maximum age, and a handicap is awarded according to the years of the competitor.

"Jock" in Hostile Mood.

The Scottish League is in for trouble over its latest decision to charge 1s. admission to all matches and compell ladies to pay for admission to the ground. A movement is on foot on the Clyde to offer strenuous opposition to this latest attempt to make the great pastime a source of greater profit of the League clubs.

ARCHITECTURE AND NATIONAL TEMPERAMENT.

II.

Every other great civilisation has equally produced its own great architecture, indicative both of the civilisation as a whole and of its component parts and various phases also. There is the Greek with its polished intellectuality, rugged Doric in the West and delicate Jonic in the East.

Then there is the Roman, practical and masterful; copying from the Greek such refinement as it possessed but generally degrading it to coarseness, ostentation and vulgarity. Then, much later, there is the wonderful civilisation of Western Europe, exemplified in the architecture which men call Gothic, elevating, spiritual and pure in its early phases, and then changing rapidly through succeeding centuries to enriched loveliness and finally dying out in exaggerated exuberance—as a plant grows, develops, fruits and decays as the seasons change from spring to winter.

There is balance and counterpoise in this Gothic architecture possessed by none which went before it, each part depending on each other part for stability and beauty alike, well symbolising a state of society, in which each member has his own important place to fill, and took an equal pride in filling it. And all the time, the temperament of each nation is distinctly to be traced in the architecture of that nation. In the thirteenth century the English work is delicate and the French severe.

Two hundred years later it is the English which is comparatively severe and the French is delicate; and the German, what of that? The Gothic spirit is slow to replace the more solemn and sturdy Romanesque, which more completely represents the rugged, and even fierce, character of the people; until the later days when a characteristic Teutonic art arises, quaint and rough and often humorous.

Thus looking back it is possible to pass judgment and to draw conclusions which, generally speaking, are accepted as correct; but it is much more difficult to judge the present. There is not the same detachment of outlook. Instead of reading temperament from architecture there is more than small temptation to read into contemporary architecture personal and perhaps prejudiced views of national temperament.

Yet there is no denying that the architecture of the last hundred years, throughout the civilised world, has been an architecture of revivals and of rapid change, as if all the various civilisations of the past were being experimented with and cast aside in turn as being unsuited to the present, while that present has been too feverishly occupied with many things besides to develop a suitable architecture of its own. For want of such, it has, in all countries alike, been prone to accept the commonplace and mediocre. Yet there have been signs of change and great improvement, especially where national temperament has been allowed to assert itself.

In England, where home life in separate families is instinct in the nation, the small country house has been developed, with comfort and unostentatious quiet harmony as its dominant note. In America the same thing has been tried, but with more display and ostentation.

Here in the Rhine provinces, architectural development is taking place more in the towns — or has been up to the time when the war stopped all building progress everywhere — and apparently upon superimposed rather than native lines. The greater things are heavy even to oppression, and many buildings of a more domestic type have their true construction hidden by a profusion of stucco decoration, often good in design, but a mere veneer. One is tempted to wonder what is the truth that is underneath, and whether it will now be allowed to display itself, in freshness of thought and in the life of a new spirit, as the burden of war and militarism lifts.

WHETHER, OR NOT.

It's not such a bad old life is ours.
Why bother about civil bliss?
The price of food and the price of coal
Are things we can give a miss.
What about this three months' stunt?
Suppose we take on for a year,
Or two or three or four, if you like.
What have we got to fear?
The C.O. is most considerate and just
The S.M. gentle and kind.
Our pay is sure, and what is more,
It's ours and there's nothing to find.
So let's stop on for a time on the Rhine
And study the poems of Heine.
That's what we say on a July day
When it's fine.

Thank goodness they're getting along with [demob.
We've been out here too long.
If we're not soon back in civvy life
We'd be all of us going wrong.
We wouldn't take on for a major's crown:
Not even for one more week.
And those chaps who are staying for 2, 3, or 4
Well, there's something somewhere weak.
We've got the worst C.O. on the Rhine,
And the S.M.'s past belief.
And what do we say, if we draw any pay
It usually brings us to grief.
So far, far off from Strasse and Hof
And the banks of the Rhine let us get.
That's what we say on a July day
When it's wet.

Echoes from Rhineland.

Zeppelin Fabric.

Judging by appearances, frocks this season are to be in the gayest of colours, the bright costumes of the German women being particularly noticeable. Many of these are made from materials which were intended for the balloon coverings of the Zeppelins and which have now been marketed by the German government. Vivid colours are noticeable everywhere. New hues in silks and stuffs for blouses and gowns, coloured bags etc. which are the delight of the German fräulein are especially noticeable at Sunday church parades.

"Kartoffels."

Even nicknames undergo a change to keep in touch with languages which we at present attempt to master. Formerly the R.S.M. was known as "Spud Tamson," while others would sometimes refer to him as "Mr. Potato." With the return of the old soldier from France the nickname "Spud" was quickly changed to "Pomme de terre," but after the armistice a further change was necessary. In Germany "Pomme de terre" has now changed to "Kartoffels."

Presentations of Colours.

An impressive ceremony was the consecration and presentation of colours to the 2/4th Battalion the Duke of Wellington's (West Riding) Regiment at Gymnich, the Battalion being paraded under the command of Major J. O. Burnett, D.S.O. The consecration service was conducted by the Rev. C. J. Ruck, M.C. and the colours were presented by Lieutenant-General Sir Walter P. Braithwaite, K.C.B. who spoke of the period during which he commanded the 62nd (West Riding) Division, and of the gallant deeds performed by the Battalion in the field, to which he was not a stranger. He referred to the great distinction of the regiment, and said he had no fear that a battalion which had such a fine record would ever sully the colours, but would strive to maintain the honour and glory of the regiment to the greatness of England and the pride of the country. The commanding officer briefly replied and the battalion, having reformed marched past with the colours flying. It was a red letter day in the history of the regiment.

Tramway Comparisons.

A comparison between English and German tramway systems raised the question as to whether the Cologne cars carry as many passengers as the two decker English trams. A tram and two trailers have accommodation for sixty passengers, while the bogie cars seat eighty, and most others carry fifty to sixty seated. The English cars certainly carry more passengers both sitting and standing than the three Cologne cars together. The practice of running trailer cars, as in Cologne, is not good, for various reasons. Cologne is flat, but where cities are hilly, trailer cars would be dangerous both to passengers and road traffic.

Few Flower Gardens.

Mention has been made of the custom of sidetracking art and beauty generally in this country of sound utility of purpose. In this respect a noticeable feature is the absence in many places of flower-gardens. It is sufficiently interesting to rouse one's inquisitiveness. In most house-fronts there are no signs of defunct flower-beds, which implies that even in pre-war times they cared for none of these things. Why? Perhaps the public gardens and scraps of ornamental bedding in street-centres where all else is impossible are sufficient for them. Again, vegetables may claim time and attention, but this cannot be the reason for the exclusion of bloom for, where it might be appreciated, there is nothing.

The German Impressed.

The German has openly expressed his surprise at seeing young lads in the Army of the Rhine, but is nevertheless impressed by their drill and smart soldierlike manner. When the regimental guard of a certain Battalion is being inspected previous to mounting, the inhabitants of the town watch it with interest regularly each day. After the mounting the younger generation goe through the same performance, even to giving the words of command. At all events the Young Guards uphold the reputation of the British Army.

A Sense of Responsibility.

In a canteen a few days ago, attention was attracted by two "Wrafs" who had evidently entered the institution for refreshments. The conversation between the two and the "man behind the counter" led up to the subject of leave and marriage. The mere male getting rather talkative enquired of the Wrafs if they were "sweating on leave" and he gave them what he called fatherly advice to get married when they got that much earned privilege. To his surprise the answer was "We don't want leave. We won't get married, we are the Army of Occupation."

Satisfied.

At an aerodrome not one hundred miles from Cologne, a fire broke out the other night. Now the Squadron had certain regulations as to fire. Amongst others, the men were to parade under the orderly officer. It so happened that a raw officer, lately joined, was discharging the functions of orderly officer. Little had occurred in the course of the day, and the fire was welcomed as a schoolboy welcomes a parcel of good things. Far from taking any measures to combat it, he was gazing at the blaze, when the Major came along in his car. Seeing this, the subaltern ran across, saluted the Major, and shouted: "You shouldn't worry, sir; I'm Orderly Officer and in charge of the fire," and, indicating the flames with a wave of his hand, "it's going quite well, sir!"

A Scot's Advantage.

A growing appreciation is being shown by the young soldier of the language classes in Army schools, and one frequently now hears Tommy, in the course of his shopping expeditions, ask for what he wants in quite intelligible German. The Scotsman, of course, possesses the great initial advantage of being able to pronounce guttural sounds with much greater ease than his friends from south of the border.

Can you write?

We wish to see a great many more literary contributions rolling in from our readers on the Rhine. Not only for this column do we invite everyone to note anything interesting seen in Rhineland and compete for the three prizes we offer daily, but we should like to publish a great many more articles written by officers and men on any topic likely to be of general appeal. So will all who can handle a pen accept this intimation that their efforts are welcomed and will receive prompt and sympathetic consideration? We pay for all accepted articles, etc., and except that nothing should, as a rule, exceed 500 words in length, we place no restrictions on would-be contributors.

Heavier in Style.

The marked difference between the German and the English taste in cinema shows is bound to strike every visitor to a Cologne picture palace. In England, films of the domestic story type and boisterous comedies are probably most popular, but the German seems to prefer the heavy drama type of picture.

Practising the Dance.

That the modern craze for dancing which seems to exist everywhere at home has spread to the Rhine Army is clearly shown by the enthusiasm with which dances in Cologne are attended. To see the young soldiers practising some of the newer and more complicated movements with the utmost assiduity leads one to the conclusion that really hard physical work in some forms is a pleasure.

To-day's winners of 10 marks are L Cpl. W. H. Rondall, Co. D.G.T., G.H.Q., Cologne; Rfm B. W. Heanly, C. Coy. Rifle Brigade, Rhine Army; and Pte. M. H. Fenlon, 71. Labour Company, Rhine Army.

Notes from London Town.

AGENTS FOR THE AIR.

In Piccadilly Circus the signs of the times confront us very strikingly. Everybody is well acquainted with Mr. Cook, the veteran tourist, the major-general of civilian R.T.O.s, the gentleman whose ubiquitous agents conduct the "personally conducted" from Iceland's shores to Madagascar. But apparently there is to be another Mr. Cook, who incidentally by now must be as purely traditional as the famous Mr. Cox, the subaltern's banker and friend in constant need, whose domain will not be these terrestial glimpses of the pale moon, but the central blue of heaven's vault. It is a fact. It has already come to this. There is an advertisement for all to see in Piccadilly Circus which invites personally-conducted air tours on advantageous terms. One perceives it coming. The week-end tourist will soon be "doing" Europe or the Western states of America—an extension until Tuesday mornings, will include the Rockies and the Pacific Coast—and we shall each bring our own sandwiches, thermos flasks, and parachutes.

APRES LE JAZZ!

For some time the enterprising people who help London to amuse itself and keep the fashionable coteries merry and bright have been looking for the next sensation, which is to replace the out-worn novelty of the Jazz. I hear on sound authority that it has already been found. It is not a nigger orchestration this time. The new vagary is the hoola-hoola, which is the native performance of the ladies of Hawaii. It will presumably have to be somewhat bowdlerised even for the most advanced London coteries because experts who have heard—and seen—it, pronounce that it is extremely feminist and exotically passionate. No doubt we shall have an approximation of the real thing, as played on the beach in the sunny southern seas, and it will be called "quaint" and "temperamental" by the gratified devotees!

BOTHA AND SOUTH AFRICA.

By a lucky chance this week I ran up against a veteran of many wars who knows all about South Africa and is a relative of General Botha. The veteran was very interesting on his famous relative. Botha often says in his own family circle that he more than half regrets public life. "I should have been happier," says this Africander Cincinatus, "behind my plough." And whenever things get too much for him, the General disappears for a week or so and puts his time on his farm quite placidly and cheerfully. My informant was very certain about the splendid future of South Africa. There is no place in the world, he asserted, to compare with it. "We have magnificent agricultural and pasturage lands," he exclaimed, "and all the minerals." But what impressed me was his firm conviction about the near future. "You may laugh at me," he said, "but within fifty years at most Africa will be a far greater continent than America."

PROFITEERING.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's calculation that a cabbage, sold by the grower for 1d. or 1½d. is retailed for about a shilling, still holds the field, in spite of much protestation and statistical assertion by interested parties. But it is carried a little further to-day, in a way that shows how profiteering mounts up as it goes, like an inverted pyramid. At a West End cafe a customer, who was charged the quite normal price of 6d. for a microcopic portion of cabbage, inquired how many such "portions" went to the average cabbage, and the waiter's answer was "Ten or a dozen." So we come at once to the majestic presence of the five or six-shilling cabbage! In France they are proposing to impose a death penalty for profiteers. It might be a good thing to follow their example here, and the hangman might do worse than—pour encourager les autres—start with the vendor of the six-shilling cabbage.

FATALITY.

We have heard many strange instances of the fatality of coincidence in the course of war. Most of these centre on the number thirteen, of which an equal list could be quoted to show that much-abused numeral as being lucky and unlucky. There are necessarily many instances in which thirteen has provided a fatal date, since every date was fatal to someone. And in the same way 13 has been a lucky date for as many others, since every date saw close calls and fortunate escapes for someone. One machine-gun officer with whom I am acquainted always insisted in having thirteen men in his parties up the line, and his luck was proverbial. On the other hand, I know personally one man who joined the Army on the 13th of the month, was drafted to France on that date, and lost his left arm on the same ill-omened date. One of the most remarkable of such coincidences that have come to my knowledge and about the facts of which there is no doubt, is the case of a man whose regimental number was 13913 17. He "went west" on the 19th of September, 1917.

R 34's MASCOT.

Many people are anxious to know what happened to the mascot tabby kitten of the R.34. Over in America the kitten was really "lionised" by everybody, and especially by the ladies, who tried all the feminine wiles to get hold of the adventurous tabby as a souvenir. One enthusiast offered £200 for the mascot. But the offer was steadily turned down. The R34 had her return journey to make for one thing. No self respecting sailor, especially bound on an Atlantic adventure in the air, would sell his mascot halfway through. Moreover, there was solid sentiment to be considered. The officers and crew of R34 were deeply attached to "Wopsy." And tabby was closely guarded while in the States, where it was remembered by the kitten's custodians how Prince Henry, the Kaiser's brother, on the occasion of the visit of the German fleet years ago, lost all the knives and forks from his flag-ship's mess. "Wopsy" returned safely to England having only once been at all disturbed during her adventure—when through the fog of Nova Scotia the barking of a dog was faintly heard from below, as the airship passed over—and is now back in her native old Scotia. Even her descendants should be famous as those of the first cat to cross the Atlantic both ways by air, and to signal the perpetuation in America of the ancient feud between the canine and the feline species!

WAR 'BUSES.

The ex-soldiers now so plentiful in all walks of London life are very fond of the new war 'buses. So great was the demand for London vehicular traffic, that the 'buses, retrieved from their war service in France and Flanders, were put back on the London streets without stopping to repaint them. So men who had a ride up to the Menin road at Ypres or to the La Bassé road in old London motor 'buses can now renew their war recollections quite vividly by riding in the self-same 'buses, coloured a dark Army grey still, from the Bank to Liverpool-street, or from Piccadilly to Hammersmith. Most of the drivers have a ribbon up, too, which helps to make things companionable and old-timy! I don't know whether it is the intention of the 'bus companies to retain this Army-grey uniform for their demobbed 'buses, but if so, it will make the old London streets more sombre than ever. The bright colours and gay advertisements of the 'buses were more than half the charm of most of the London street impressions that distinguished R.A.'s used to paint for the Academy. We want more colour in our London cosmos, not less, if there is anything in the latest theory of the doctors about the triumph of colour over nerves.

THE WOMEN OF FRANCE.

M. Cambon, the French Ambassador in London speaking to an audience of six hundred representatives of the French Colony of the Metropolis said: The war, the most glorious war, perhaps, in our history—was glorious for our generals, for our army, for our navy also. It demonstrated the worth of our race to the whole world. As for the French women, it is impossible not to admire them. They are misunderstood abroad; the foreigner is apt to regard them as somewhat unstable, restless, liable to excite themselves without much cause. That may be true as regards the small things of life; but at moments of crisis no women are more calm, more resolute, more sensible than ours; none are capable of giving evidence of a nobler soul. They have proved this everywhere during the war. Thus, in raising my glass in honour of our army, of our navy, and of the people of France, I include in my toast a respectful homage to the women of France.

FORMING A PEACE CABINET.

SMALL WORKING MEMBERSHIP TO AVOID DELAYS IN GRAPPLING WITH URGENT PROBLEMS.

ILLNESS OF PRESIDENT WILSON.

PEACE CABINET.

PREMIER'S DIFFICULT TASK OF REORGANISATION.

One of the first tasks before the Prime Minister, now that he has taken up the reins again in Downing-street, is to put the Cabinet on a peace basis. The small War Cabinet, consisting of Ministers without departmental duties and sitting every day, was avowedly a temporary expedient to meet a great emergency. Its chief asset was rapidity of decision, so essential in war. But it had obvious disadvantages. It was not conspicuously successful in co-ordinating the work of the different departments, and it virtually abrogated the principle of the collective responsibility of Ministers for the acts of the Government.

It is understood that the definite constitution of a Peace Cabinet is one of the subjects which the Prime Minister has been considering during his stay at Criccieth. He has come to some definite conclusions, and it only remains to work out the scheme in detail. This may take a little time, as questions of personnel have to be settled. It is understood that the Prime Minister intends to proceed along the following lines:—

1. The War Cabinet is to go.
2. Its place is to be taken by a Cabinet of about a dozen members, including the Ministers at the head of the chief Departments of State.
3. A great part of the machinery of the War Cabinet, including the Secretariat, is to be retained.

FLIGHT TO DENMARK.

BRITISH SEAPLANE'S FAST JOURNEY.

The first flight from England to Copenhagen took place on Saturday last. At 5.30 p.m. the seaplane E 5, N 90 arrived there from Felixstowe which she left at nine o'clock that morning, making a successful non-stop trip. Captain Baily was the pilot and Major Sittwell the observer. An official of the Foreign Office and two non-commissioned officers were also on board. The airmen were heartily welcomed by Danish naval aviators. The flight was made at a height of 3,000ft to 6,000ft, and a speed of sixty knots, and the route followed was along the Dutch coast, where there was rain and fog, the Kiel Canal, the islands of Laaland and Falster and across the Sound, to Copenhagen. The machine was in wireless communication with Felixstowe till her arrival off the German coast. This morning the party left on the seaplane for Helsingfors on a special mission for the British Foreign Office, carrying a heavy mail. The distance from Felixstowe to Copenhagen is about 500 miles.

VERY FEW ACCIDENTS.

In spite of the vast crowds that filled the London streets on Peace Day, very few accidents or casualties occurred. Inquiries at the various hospitals during the evening showed that the number of cases treated have been extraordinarily light—mostly the results of sickness, fainting, and fits, and not requiring detention.

About fifty people were taken to Charing Cross Hospital, but not detained. About a dozen cases were treated at Guy's, and only two at St. Bartholomew's. At the latter hospital, the patients were two sailors who had imbibed not wisely, but too well.

Extraordinary scenes were witnessed on the Underground Railway. At Earl's Court, the trains for the City came in packed, and hundreds of people who crowded the platform fought desperately to gain a footing at every compartment. Frequent stoppages were made in the tunnel, and on arriving at almost any station, the platforms were found to be still filled with people from the receding train moving laboriously towards the exits.

POLISH LABOUR UNREST.

It is learned at Copenhagen, that serious disturbances have occurred at Warsaw, where several thousand communal workmen tried to rush the parliament building in order to enforce their demands for increased wages. During the disturbances, which were fomented by Bolshevist agitators, the workmen came into conflict with the police, who were supported by large military forces. In consequence, a large number of persons were killed or wounded.

NEUTRAL SHIPPING LOSSES.

According to statistics compiled by the Norwegian Veritas Bureau, Sweden during the war lost 17.9 per cent. of her commercial tonnage, Norway 49,7 per cent. and Denmark 53 per cent.

PRESIDENT WILSON ILL

ALL HIS ENGAGEMENTS CANCELLED.

President Wilson is ill with dysentery. Rear-Admiral Cary Grayson, his physician, says that the President's condition is not serious, but that his engagements with a number of Republican senators to discuss the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations must be cancelled.

Mr. Wilson complained of illness last week, but was only supposed to be suffering from indigestion. He left Washington on Saturday with Mrs. Wilson in the Mayflower on a trip to Hampton Roads, Va., and on his return to the White House was immediately ordered to bed.

FRANCE'S PEACE POLICY.

PROBLEMS OF INDUSTRIAL RECONSTRUCTION.

M. Clemenceau, whose lightning tour of the devastated regions in the neighbourhood of Verdun, has made him aware of grievances of the population, will probably to-day have to meet the Chamber and make his long-awaited general statement as to his peace policy.

The hostile vote against M. Boret, the Minister of Supplies, on Friday last was only a manifestation of the growing sense of Parliamentary tension. The dearness of living and the difficulty of social and industrial reconstruction in the freed regions of France have given rise to a considerable amount of criticism and it is thought that much of this will find vent during the debate in the Chamber.

The way in which M. Clemenceau handled the threatening labour situation, however, and his striking promises to reorganise the obsolete Government administration, so as to speed up relief measures for northern and eastern France, and lessen difficulties of the economic situation have eased the political situation. It is therefore fully expected that the "Tiger" will obtain his usual majority in the Chamber, though a surprise vote is always possible at the Palais Bourbon.

LETTLAND'S ANXIETY.

APPREHENSIVE OF LABOUR RESOLUTION.

According to a Riga message to the Lettish officials great uneasiness has been caused among the Lettish people by the Labour Conference at Southport, and fear is expressed lest the resolution should be interpreted as an intention to debar Great Britain from supporting the new democratic Government of Lettonia, which lately, by the help of England and her Allies, has been freed from the domination of Germany and the local reactionary German forces. Should the help of England be withheld from the Lettish people, there is little hope that the national liberty can be established.

EX-AUSTRIAN EMPEROR TO VISIT ENGLAND.

A telegram from Vienna states that according to the "Neue Tag" it is rumoured in diplomatic circles there that the ex-Emperor Karl is to visit King George. The journal believes that the visit probably relates to financial questions and to the possibility of the ex-Emperor's removing to England.

PLEA FOR TURKEY'S INTEGRITY.

A long letter on the future of the Turkish Empire and the Ottoman Khalifat has been addressed to the Prime Minister by Mr. Yakub Nasan, a delegate of the All-India Moslem League. He appeals that Turkey as a nation should be allowed to remain intact with its sovereignty unimpaired, and states that the dismemberment of the Turkish Empire and the reduction of the temporal power of the Khalifa will react seriously on the feelings of Indian Moslems.

WHEN THE PREMIER WANTS "A NEW JOB."

"As one who may be out of a job any day," remarked Mr. Lloyd George, in accepting from his fellow-townsmen a mode of Criccieth Caste, "I can have no better recommendation in applying for a new situation than the unsolicited testimonial of people of all parties and creeds who have known me for fifty years."

He would pack the model in his portmanteau, he said, and his wife would have to carry with her the clock they had presented when they went to look for a new job.

YORKSHIRE STRIKE.

ACTION UNPRECEDENTED IN HISTORY.

About 200,000 men and boys employed in the Yorkshire coalfield have been thrown out of work by the striking of 50,000 men whose work chiefly comprised pumping and other forms of labour essential to the safety of the miners.

Some of the mines have already been flooded and others are in danger of it. The dispute is about the details of the change in working hours. The trouble is having a serious effect on Sheffield trade. To-day thousands of hands have been thrown idle by the stoppage of huge engineering works. The managements of the factories announce that owing to the shortage of coal they will remain closed until the end of the strike.

Messrs. John Brown and Company have 2,000 men out and Messrs. Thomas Firth and Sons almost as many. Before the end of the week it is expected the whole of the big works will be shut down. The stocks of coal in the Sheffield district are very small. The Derbyshire pits are still working but their supplies are not sufficient. The horses are being brought out of the South Yorkshire pits to-day.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED.

There is official authority for stating that the reason why the naval stokers have been called in to save the Yorkshire mines is because they are familiar with the work of pumping and prompt measures had to be taken to prevent industrial calamity. Volunteers with knowledge of mine pumping machinery have also been called, for the Government believe that the miners in withdrawing the men at the pumps for the first time in any mining dispute have acted without reflecting on the seriousness of their action.

Sir Eric Geddes has left for Yorkshire as the representative of the Cabinet, to co-ordinate the efforts to save the mines. The immediate anxiety of the Government is to preserve the pits, leaving the matters in dispute to be settled with the executive of the Miners' Federation.

The unprecedented action of the strikers in stopping the pumping is regarded as an act of sabotage which if it succeeds will have a disastrous effect on the whole community, but the first to feel the injury will be the miners themselves and their families, whose livelihood depends on the production of coal.

In all former strikes this has been recognised by the men's leaders, and whatever else was done measures were taken to keep the mines clear of water. The Government hope that even now the Yorkshire miners will see the error of their action and resume pumping operations pending a settlement of other matters.

PORTUGAL WANTS BRITISH WAR VESSELS.

At a Council of Ministers the Minister of Marine expounded the position of Portugal in respect to naval warfare, showing the urgent necessity for the initiation of a naval policy, particularly as regards the international and colonial situation of Portugal.

A Ministerial motion was adopted by the Council for the submission to Parliament of a Bill for the acquisition of ten cruisers from England.

STRIKES AT PETROGRAD.

Reports received from Petrograd state that strikes on a large scale have broken out there. The Bolshevist defence committee has issued a proclamation declaring that the enemies of the Soviet Government lately sent a number of agitators to Petrograd, in order to excite the population and to engineer strikes, adding that such persons if caught will immediately be shot.

U.S. NEW PACIFIC FLEET.

A message received from Old Point, Comfort (Virginia), says that six super-"Dreadnoughts" and thirty destroyers, the vanguard of the new Pacific Fleet of 200 vessels, sailed on Saturday westward-bound, via the Panama Canal. This is the first time in American naval history that the fleet has been divided and half its power assigned to guard the Western seaboard.

GREEDY BARBERS.

The barbers of New York are threatening to strike for a 12-hour day, £4 10s. a week, and 50 per cent. of all receipts above £6 10s. Their employers declare that if the demands have to be meet they will be obliged to charge 2s. for a hair-cut, 1s. 10d. for a shampoo, 3s. 6d. for an oil shampoo, and 1s. 6d. for a shave.

The barbers at present earn on an average £7 a week, while some of them in the best hotels average as much as £16. The new scale would mean an average weekly wage of £10.

TROOPS FOR SCHLESWIG.

The "Temps" announces that Marshal Foch has requested the German Government to make arrangements for the transportation of an Allied battalion from Cologne to Flensburg to supervise the carrying out of the plebiscite in Schleswig.

PRINCE TO VISIT U.S.A.

EXTENSION OF CANADIAN TOUR.

A fortnight hence (August 5) the Prince of Wales will leave England for his tour of Canada. The tentative programme, as drawn up, does not mention the United States, but there will almost certainly be an American visit. Its details have not yet been officially settled and may be strictly limited.

The general plan is a visit on board H.M. battle-cruiser Renown, one of the famous "hush-hush" ships, to important centres in the Maritime Provinces of Canada, winding up in Quebec.

After the stop in Quebec, the next stage in the Prince's overseas visit will be an overland trip to the north of the Great Lakes system, through the silver-mining region and the great grain-growing districts away to the West and beyond the Rockies to British Columbia, and then back eastwards across the Dominion to Montreal.

This programme, excluding the American visit, will occupy the Prince till the end of October, and, according to present indications, he will be back in London during November.

The Renown has been docked at Rosyth, where she will be overhauled and fitted out for the Prince's tour. Built by the Fairfield Company in 1916 and designed originally as a super-Dreadnought of the Royal Sovereign class, the Renown, with her sister-ships, was modified to a battle-cruiser type. The secrecy attached to the altered plans gave rise to the name of "hush-hush" ship.

THE CENSORSHIP.

EXCEPTIONS TO ABOLITION ORDER.

With reference to the abolition of the censorship, so far as British controlled cables and wireless telegraphs are concerned, from midnight on the 23rd-24th instant, the Post Office announces that from that date telegrams will be accepted without restriction to all British Possessions (with the exception of Egypt), to the United States and Possessions, and generally to all parts of the world, with the exception of the following countries, in which restrictions have not yet been abrogated by the authorities concerned: Germany, Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria, and Turkey (including Palestine, Syria and Mesopotamia), France, and French Possessions, Italy and Italian Possessions, Belgium and Belgian Congo, Portugal and Portuguese Possessions, Luxemburg, Greece, Roumania, and Kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, Finland, Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Russia (including Caucasus and Russia in Asia), Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Switzerland, Netherlands, Japan, Siam, Cuba, Honduras, Brazil, Argentina, Chili.

The Postmaster-General is in communication with the administrations of these countries, and a further announcement will be made when the existing restrictions on telegraphic correspondence with any of them are abolished.

OFFICER DISAPPEARS IN LONDON.

A mystery is associated with the disappearance five days after his marriage in London of a British Army captain on leave from Cologne. His name is Edward Robert Evans. He is a captain in the Royal Engineers and is stationed at Cologne.

He went to London on leave on July 1, was married to a pretty Belgian nurse on July 2, and on July 7 he left his wife at the Waldorf Hotel, where they were staying and has not been seen or heard of since. Mrs. Evans stayed behind during the German occupation, and helped to cheer and comfort many wounded British officers and men.

"My husband," she said to a representative of the Press yesterday, "must be suffering from loss of memory. In no other way can I account for his disappearance. I first met him in France at the end of last year. We became engaged and were married at the registrar's office in Henrietta-street, Strand."

She said that on Monday, July 7, he complained of a severe pain in the head and left the hotel to go to a London hospital for advice. He has not been heard of in any way since.

Scotland Yard and the military authorities were informed, and it was ascertained that as late as yesterday afternoon he had not returned to duty at Cologne. Inquiries at the London Hospital show that he did not go there.

FLOATING DOCK SUNK.

According to Danzig telegrams to the Berlin papers the Imperial Shipyard's big floating dock, which was to be towed to Kiel, has been sunk by the workmen on their demand for the withdrawal of the order for its removal not being complied with. Another version states that the dock has been merely submerged until further decision can be taken.

LONDON HOUSING.

The London County Council intend to erect 260 cottages and two shops at Croydon at an estimated cost of £275,000.

It is also proposed to build tenements containing 250 rooms in Southwark at a cost of £75,000.

LORD CHANCELLOR.

CEREMONIAL VISIT TO BELGIAN LAW COURTS.

The Lord Chancellor, Lord Birkenhead, has just paid a ceremonious visit to the Belgian Court of Cassation, which held a special sitting for the occasion. The splendid robes of his lordship, who was followed by his trainbearer, afforded a sight hitherto unseen in Belgium, and attracted much attention. The Lord Chancellor was received by the First President of the Court of Cassation, who was accompanied by M. Vandervelde, Minister of Justice, Sir Francis Hyde Villers, British Ambassador, and Mr. Herbert Samuel.

After the president had expressed his pleasure at greeting Lord Birkenhead as the representative of English justice, M. Terlinden, the Public Prosecutor, delivered a moving speech, in which he described the Lord Chancellor's visit to Belgium as a "pilgrimage and a reparation." It was a magnificent idea, he said, and worthy of the illustrious representative of the great people who entered the most terrible of wars, which it could so easily have avoided, because loyal Belgium had been unjustly attacked. "When one has visited the battlefields of Flanders, M. Terlinden continued, "and prayed in the tragic cemeteries of Ypres, where 200,000 young Englishmen sleep, for ever incorporated in our soil, how is it possible to question the indissolubility of the bonds which unite your country to mine. United in battle and in tears, England and Belgium will remain united in victory for the glorification of right and justice."

IN THE NAME OF THE LAW.

Lord Birkenhead paid a glowing tribute to the Belgian nation. We are bound together, he said, by ties of devotion to a common purpose, consecrated by the blood of the citizens of both our countries, for the re-establishment and the permanent maintenance of the reign of law. Gentlemen, it was in the name of law that Belgium armed herself against her tremendous aggressor. It was in the name of law that Great Britain and her myriad children from home and from beyond the seas ranged themselves by her side. It was in open contempt of law that the enemy, alleging that "necessity knows no law," set himself to hack through your peaceful country, to destroy your prosperity, to devastate your fields, and to defile your shrines. Had the event of this great struggle been other than it was, law and justice would, for more centuries than we can foresee, have been empty names in Europe.

WE CAN BREATHE AGAIN.

Gentlemen, the long struggle is over. Law is once more enthroned in her high places; liberty of life, of nations, and of individuals has been vindicated. We can draw our breath again.

The wise man is he who contrasts his present situation, whether here in Belgium or over there in England, not with that happiness and prosperity which you and we enjoyed before the war, but with what would have been our fate had the issue of the war been otherwise. Gentlemen, if this great city of Brussels, if these Halls of Justice still rang with the feet of the invader, if his yoke here had become permanent, if the British Empire had gone down before him, what could have been the future for each one of us here and for all the generations yet unborn?

CANADA TO BELFAST.

DIRECT NEW SHIPPING ROUTE STARTED.

The development of a direct freight trade between Canada and Belfast was celebrated in Montreal Harbour with a reception and banquet aboard the Ballygalla Head, which is the first steamer of the Head Line to arrive at Montreal to inaugurate the new direct service to Belfast. It is stated by the company that this vessel will be speedily followed by one or two new sister ships, with a further development of the fleet according to the prospects of the trade. The function aboard the Ballygalla Head was attended by many representatives of the marine interests of Montreal. The hope was generally expressed that the new venture of the Head Line will prove successful.

LIVE CARTRIDGE TRAGEDY.

As a soldier named Woodward was cleaning his rifle in a hut at Clipstone it went off, and the bullet shot another soldier named Reginald Bell, of Hampton-on-Thames, through the heart and wounded a third.

At the inquest Woodward stated that he did not know that there was a live cartridge in the magazine. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.

JOY DAY FOR INCURABLES.

A £1 Treasury note was given to each of the patients at the Royal Hospital and Home for Incurables, Putney, on Peace Day, with the following message:—

"A friend who sympathises with you in your suffering sends this, with the sincere wish that, though unable to take part in the public rejoicings, you may spend a peaceful and very happy day."

WEDDING QUEUES.

GLASGOW RUSH FOR HOLIDAY MARRIAGES.

Glasgow Fair, which started last Friday, is always a popular time in Glasgow for marriages, but never before have there been so many holiday marriages as during this week. This statement applies particularly to "irregular" marriages, or what are more correctly described as civil marriages. So great has been the number of wedding parties at the county buildings that they literally have formed up in queues for registration. On Fair Friday 76 of these marriages were performed. This easily constitutes a "record" for a single day. On the previous Fair Friday 33 couples were married.

Since the end of June 322 civil weddings have taken place in the county buildings—a daily average of over 20. Up till yesterday there have been 2,373 such marriages this year. A period of war always stimulates the marriage market. The first occasion on which the number of civil marriages exceeded 1,000 in a year was in 1900, during the South African war, and then the total was 1,064. During succeeding years the total fluctuated around 1,000. In 1914 when the war broke out the total suddenly jumped up to 2,657, and in 1915 the highest number yet recorded for a single year was reached—namely, 3,676. Peace Year, however, promises to exceed even that number.

Marriage before the sheriff is becoming increasingly popular among the industrial classes, because it is a convenient and economical form of wedding.

ANIMAL ROAD RIGHTS.

HEAD AND TAIL LIGHTS FOR COWS.

Despatches from Philadelphia state that a Bill is now in the hands of Pennsylvania State legislators which provides for the placing of at least one white light on the horn or tail of a bull or cow, and also on animal-drawn vehicles one hour after sunset.

The light must be visible for a distance of a least 200 feet fore or aft of the vehicles and animals above mentioned.

One object of the bill is to curtail the activities of reckless motor travellers by reminding them that four-footed animals also have rights.

GERMAN EXHIBITS REFUSED FOR DUTCH EXHIBITION.

An Aircraft Exhibition is to be held at Amsterdam early in August. The Dutch Government by officially recognizing the exhibition has shown its interest in the future of commercial aviation.

Germany was anxious to be an exhibitor, but her goods were not accepted in order that England and France might take part. Holland has not a single aircraft factory of her own and requires many machines, especially for Dutch India.

General Seely, Under-Secretary to the Air Ministry, replying to Captain Wedgwood Benn in the House of Commons last Thursday said that the Government were giving assistance to British firms to show at this exhibition by releasing machines which had passed the experimental stage and which could be spared from the Royal Air Force. Negotiations were also in progress with the Dutch Government regarding the communication by air between England and Holland during the period of the exhibition. It is to be hoped, therefore, that British firms will be well represented.

RELIEF FOR DISTRESSED MARINERS.

At the annual meeting of the Shipwrecked Fishermen and Mariners' Royal Benevolent Society, held on Friday, it was stated that the amount of relief disbursed during the past year was £52,180 0s 3d, the persons assisted numbering 22,956 (viz., 15,292 sailors and fishermen, 3,304 widows, 3,676 orphans, and 684 aged dependent parents), bringing the total number of persons relieved during the eighty years of the society's existence to 759,918. The Emile Robin life-saving rewards (for what was regarded by the committee as the most meritorious rescue by a British ship during the past year) were adjudged to Captain Arthur Unwin and Chief Officer William Hunter Roberts, of the ss. Lord Erne, of Belfast, which saved the crew (thirteen) of the ss. Percesien, of Quebec, on Feb. 9, 1918, in very heavy weather in the North Atlantic.

FROM BUTCHER'S BOY TO M.P.

Mr. William Johnson, the Warwickshire miners' agent who rose from a butcher's boy to member of Parliament, has died at Bedworth at the age of seventy. Mr. Johnson, who was the son of a coal miner, had for more than thirty years taken an interest in the welfare of the Warwickshire miners. He founded the Warwickshire Miners' Union, and was prominently identified with the Miners' Federation of Great Britain. He represented the Nuneaton Division in the Liberal and Labour interest for twelve years.

INDIVIDUAL POLICY.

We have recently called the attention of our readers to the need for a clear and wise National Policy. Now that is a proposition to which it is easy for the individual reader and citizen to assent cheerfully and vaguely—and to lay aside for "the nation" to deal with!

But the matter is not so simply settled. The nation is the sum of its individuals; and each constituent person must furnish his own quota of action, direction and influence. Not otherwise can a policy be national; lacking the conscious and deliberate participation of all its citizens, the policy will be that of an energetic and ambitious few, who may be right or may be wrong, but who will control the lives and destinies of the mass if the latter are content to be used as pawns by the minds and wills of more forceful men than they.

Of course, in any case, government must be by the few, other work for the many. That is obvious. But the Government by the few must be for the many, with their intelligent approval and on their behalf. And this is only possible when the mass of the nation — nay, each individual competent unit thereof—gives his attention to the national problems, obtains all available information regarding them, and sets himself to form an unprejudiced, unhurried judgment upon the best solution and line of action in the national, and therefore the individual, interest.

We repeat, an unprejudiced, unhurried judgment. The man who, before he has attained adequate knowledge of a subject, allows himself and his right to clear decision to be swept away by the vigorous insistence of fanatics, or by the frothy objurgations of extremists, whose slackness accepts the direction of some political catch-phrase or of the party opinion of some particular paper as a substitute for his own Heaven-granted power of intelligent decision—such a man deserves no vote nor part in the choice of the national policy which involves his fate and that of his descendants.

We are proud — and with reason — to know that as a nation we make our changes sanely and deliberately; that we recognise the necessity of constant reform and move unhasting along the path of evolution. Long may we keep that characteristic.

But to-day events move with an acceleration, problems press with a weight, infinitely greater than in the days of our fathers. Decades cannot be given now to the slow development of remedial or progressive plans. National action and policy is of pure necessity speeded up. And mistaken action involves everyone of us in its results — may plunge us into disaster irremediable.

Therefore let each for his own sake as well as the nation's, for the future of his children and the honour of his country, decide for himself, intelligently and according to all the knowledge he can gather, what shall be that individual policy which he shall join with his fellow-citizens to make the national policy of his land and his people.

By no other means, we repeat, can a country's policy be safe, wise, or indeed truly national.

THE NATION'S HEALTH.

A recent pamphlet issued by the Ministry of Reconstruction deals most interestingly with the question of Public Health. That a more general interest should be aroused in the question is of the utmost importance; in order to make any progress it is absolutely necessary that pioneers and propagandists should have the solid support of the people, and that can only arise out of a general and intelligent interest. The work of the Ministry of Public Health, therefore, its past achievements, and its proposals for the future cannot be too widely known.

In the pamphlet referred to, the evolution of our national health service is traced from its early beginnings. The broad line of effort which it is desirable to follow in the future is the accomplishment of a greater co-ordination of work between all the Institutions and Governing Bodies concerned, and to the necessity of this, the medical profession are thoroughly alive. Towards this end greater uniformity must be introduced and much of the overlapping of areas and jurisdictions which exist at present must be got rid of. One great aim is to concentrate rather than to diffuse local power and jurisdiction.

The urgency of the whole scheme becomes immediately clear when it is realised how very intimately the health question is connected with reconstruction. The declension in the birth rate during the war makes it more and more necessary that the new generation which is to fight the battles of the Empire in the future shall be a strong and virile race, and that no child who is born shall have to combat the evils of malnutrition and sordid surroundings.

At a time when every ounce of our national strength and spirit are necessary for the uphill work which lies ahead, any influence which tends to lower the stamina of the people must be fought with all possible energy.

The supreme value of the Ministry of Public Health, then, is manifest and it becomes the duty of every responsible citizen not only to a acquaint himself with its functions and aims but to do all that lies in his power to assist and foster them.

OUR MESS.

Our Mess is a splendid house in Cologne, but its map reference I refuse to give for obvious reasons. The lady of the house, known to all and sundry as the Dragon, objected very forcibly to our taking over her premises.

One argument she used sealed her doom, and forever hardened the heart of our gallant Colonel towards her.

"You English officers break the chairs in sitting on them, but the Germans never do."

She stormed, wept and raged but to no purpose for she had insulted the dignity of our gentle O. C. and so she, and the members of her family, were banished to the upper middle regions for we took over the whole of the ground floor for our mess and anterooms, and the third floor, where the breezes blow through the open windows, for sleeping accommodation.

The middle floor is now known as the "Dragon's Den" and occasionally you can hear her voice reproving and accusing our mess waiters for a crime they would never commit: "You are taking all my things"—the "things" in question referring to pots and pans.

The moment you enter our mess you are impressed. The Hall is lofty and imposing and the floor is of polished marble with a few mats here and there. I have seen more than one gallant officer do the cake walk and come to grief in a lovely backward plunge with feet up on the threshold of our happy abode.

Our card-room to the right is a favourite resort. It is furnished in sporting style for around the walls you can see trophies of the chase; the furniture too is ornamented with carvings of stages' heads. There is a luxurious velvet couch, a thing of beauty and comfort, and an elegant carpet.

Here nightly, the gallant sportsmen of our mess gather and by the aid of certain liquid refreshment play Patience and other exciting games.

They also wax eloquent on the subject of sport—football, cricket, boxing and golf.

There is a lurking shadow however, even in this brightest of rooms, for at the desk in the corner our Mess Secretary, a canny Scot, by the aid of his imagination and certain books, makes out our eagerly sought for Mess bills and in a musical voice requests one hundred, two hundred or more marks from sorely tried married officers and others who are anxious to invest in the Victory Loan but cannot.

The ante-room is lofty but bare, for the Dragon removed her drawing room furniture to save it from the profane touch of our subalterns. There are, however, two handsome full length mirrors which are a source of joy to certain handsome officers of fraternising inclinations, and also a grand piano.

This instrument received generous treatment from the Major who plays Sankey's hymns, and a platoon commander who thrills our souls with ragtime melodies.

Leading from this room is another small one dedicated to the great game of ping pong. It is ever full of enthusiastic players and so far the Colonel and the Padre have topped the score, the latter perhaps by a mere fluke.

The Holy of Holies is the great panelled dining room with its charming paintings, fine side boards and wonderful electric light fittings. The mess President occupies the throne — a huge armchair — and as he surveys his hungry worshippers enjoying the delicious ration beef and other choice viands, his soul is at peace and his face lights up with benignant smiles. He is truly a King of Kings and even the Colonel recognises on these occasions his almighty power.

Leading out from the dining room is a wonderful winter garden with a dome of glass, palm trees and rockery. It almost seems like a shrine, for there are all kinds of little china figures in the recesses.

Words fail me when I think of the garden with its fountain, fruit trees, strawberry beds, rose trees and flowers. Here at eventide at the close of a perfect day under other conditions you might wander and talk of love. It is also a soothing spot to study Battalion Orders and read certain vexatious letters which it is the sad lot of many gallant officers to receive from time to time. G.K.

A RHINELAND RAMBLE.

"Vic, it's our day off to morrow; shall we have a little outing to the Eifel?"

"Certainly old spud; what time do you propose starting in t' morning?"

"Well, the train leaves at 6.48 so we shall —" "Right oh", said Vic," we'll go by all means, but we won't take Vic with us."

The following morning, after several vain attempts to get him out of bed, during which he reviewed my ancestors, past and present (he said they were almost human), I let his bed down gently but firmly and galloped quickly away. I caught the train and arrived at Nideggen a couple of hours later.

This little place lies on top of a hill and can be reached either by a long winding road or by a short cut straight up the cliff. I chose the latter and after a 20 minutes' climb, reached the top and made straight for the famous old castle.

The old "Burg" as it is called, was built in 1267 by one of those old robber knights who seemed to thrive so in these parts, Count William II, and although the place is partly ruined, whatis left of it seems likely to endure for another few centuries. The views to be seen from the castle windows alone are well worth the journey,

There is a deep well in the courtyard and it used to take a quarter of an hour's winding to haul up a bucket of water. One can get some idea of its depth (said to be 300 metres (by throwing down a stone and hearing it fall until it eventually arrives at the bottom with a faint "plonk".

Like all these old ruins, this one has its legends and one of them concerns the old Count and his unfaithful wife.

He got very much annoyed about it one day and determined to punish her for her carryings-on. So the amiable old gentleman sent round to the local ironmongers and ordered a large iron cage; when this arrived, he had his wife stripped, honey smeared all over her body and placed her behind the bars.

She was then set down on a convenient wasp's nest in the vicinity and was stung to death. The cage is still preserved in the little church close by.

The Kaiser paid a visit here in 1906 and a commemorative tablet has been affixed to the wall of the castle. A French wit has added to the wording—"Il n'y viendra plus".

For the rest, the surrounding scenery is Magnificent and some artistic snapshots can be taken by the amateur.

I arrived back to the billet soon after 22.00 hours and found Vic sprawled out in his laziest attitude. "Hullo Jan" said he," haven't we had a good day to-day?"

I ignored him. I was tired and turned into bed with the feeling that my day had not been wasted. E. J.

THE ANGELUS.

Wherever we go on the Continent there is a wealth of bell-ringing.

In Cologne, so rich in old and beautiful churches, the bells wake us from our slumbers before the laggard trumpeter sounds Reveille; throughout the day they mellow the atmosphere with their clanging; and at eventide they remind us that something older and deeper than Prussian philosophy measures the days and the centuries for those who dwell at Köln am Rhein.

We are used to the "call" bells in England, bidding us to come to church and worship; and of course the continental peoples have the same custom. Only they "call" much oftener because of the many general and parochial festivals that are kept.

They also have bell-ringing three times a day to remind the people of the Incarnation of the Son of God. This ringing at morning noon and eve is called The Angelus — the angel message.

It is easily recognisable, for the bell gives two rings and pauses just long enough for you to remember those tremendous verses in the New Testament, where Gabriel speaks to the Virgin and receives her acquiescence:

"The Angel of the Lord appeared unto Mary,
And she conceived of the Holy Ghost."

The bell again rings twice:

"Behold the handmaid of the Lord:
Be it done unto me according to thy word."

Two more strikes of the bell:

'And the Word was made Flesh,
And dwelt amongst us."

Then the bell rings a score or more times, the while devout Catholics pray for their salvation.

Some of us have read in Horatio Bottomley's paper a plea that we should introduce the Angelus custom into England. He thinks it would be a good thing for our people to raise the mind and heart to the spiritual and supernatural at intervals during the working day. It is a point worth some thought.

Most of us know Millet's picture, "The Angelus." A Breton man and woman are working in the fields when there comes to them the sound of a bell. They pause in their work, bow their heads and recite their devotion.

Mr. A. G. Gardiner, refers to this picture in an essay where he compares Hardy with Millet. He says "If Thomas Hardy is the Millet of literature, he is Millet without "The Angelus." His peasants are bowed to the brown earth in the mystic light, but no far-off bell tolls a message through the quiet air . . . It was with that throb of the bell in The Angelus that Millet sang through the heart of the world, and still sings. The laborious day is over, the grey sky still shadows the sombre plain; but there is a eight in the west, and a word is borne to the tired heart on the pulsing air. Hope is not gone out of the world."

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

READING CIRCLES.

Sir,—Apropos the letter on "Serious Reading" appearing in to-day's "Cologne Post," might I encroach upon your space, to draw the attention of the troops in Euskirchen and district to the "Reading Circle," which meets every Monday evening in the Y.M.C.A. here.

The meetings are held at 6.30 p.m. and are quite informal. So far they have proved very interesting and instructive. They are fairly well attended but there are still a few vacant chairs, which we would like to see occupied.

For our next three meetings, we are promised papers on "The Making of a Book," Longfellow's Hiawatha" and "The Humour of Charles Lamb." Offers of help in this direction would be greatly appreciated by the Committee.

The Circle is certainly doing something to encourage the study of good literature, and might well be copied in other centres, and even in individual units.

SECRETARY.

CHOICE IN READING.

Sir,—Your columns are, one notices, always open to suggestions for our combined profit and diversion; yesterday's issue contains a letter inciting us to more reading. May I make a suggestion "re reading and re re-reading"? (No! I am not stammering: re reading is the key to the treasure-house).

My suggestion is: know something of the life, character and personality of your chosen author, whether his works already please you or whether you are about to make their acquaintance. The voice of a friend whose experience and individuality speak to us from the pages gives a pleasure far beyond that obtainable from the words of a stranger.

A delightful series — "Writers of the Day"—has just been published by Nisbet and Co., at 2/. a volume. Each is a charming study of a well-known author through the sympathetic spectacles (are there such things?) of another, and is a guide to the man and his works. Probably the Y.M.C.A. bookshop can supply them. I don't know. But I recommend the little books to anyone who loves his Teller of Stories or wishes to choose a fresh field of fiction. It may help him towards the day when his own name shall appear in the series!

THE G. S. RIBBON.

Sir: I don't know if the wearing of this much coveted ribbon is authorized generally yet, though I have seen one or two soldiers with it on their breasts, and I know the sale of the ribbon is going on, but what I cannot understand is, what the other two ribbons are that I was shown when last on leave at a military outfitters in Woolwich. One has all the colours of the Allies in narrow perpendicular stripes and the other the Belgian French colours side by side. Who will wear these? I was given to understand that the first was for all Allied forces who had served in the great war and the other for British troops who had served overseas. Both they said were official, but not yet authorized. I would much like to know and so would many of my comrades on the Rhine.

ENQUIRER.

DANCE-ROOM ETIQUETTE.

Sir,—The letter on Dance Room Etiquette by 'Runner' calls for several comments.

As regards the first paragraph I would suggest that an enquiry be held as to the source from which 'Runner' obtains his tickets for the dances at the Leave Club, at which he is a "regular attendant". There should be no 'regular attendants' at the Thursday night dances; the numbers that may attend are limited and the tickets are strictly rationed in order that as many as possible may enjoy the hospitality of the ladies of the Leave Club. The tickets are much sought after and if 'Runner' is lucky to obtain one every week I suggest that he should occasionally pass it on to officers less fortunate than himself; I myself have been in Cologne four months and have only attended three of the dances.

'Runner's" remarks on dancing merely tend to display his ignorance on the subject. Modern dancing is far from wild; on the contrary it is soothing and restful.

'Runner' will only make himself 'ridiculous' if he adheres to the old style of dancing in a ballroom where every one else is a student of the latest style.

"DANCER NOT RUNNER."

Sir,—People who criticise the "Jazz" may be divided into two classes:—

1. Those who have never seen it.
2. Those who think they have seen it.

"Runner" comes under the second category. My I, as one who goes in for modern dancing, be allowed to criticise the old style as carried out by the gentleman who remarks "I do not go in for these new fangled steps but I waltz."

Having made this statement he seizes his partner and with his left arm outstretched proceeds to career round the room continually turning in the same direction. So busy is he turning so dizzy is she for the same reason that at the end of the dance every couple has been bumped and she is addled, bruised and exhausted.

In contrast to this the modern dancer adopts a smooth slow and simple step which requires little turning and which is known as the "Jazz". My object will be achieved if "Runner" and those of his thinking will

(1) Get up-to-date in their dancing
(2) Will not mistake the awkward gait of the bad dancer for the "Jazz."

JAZZ.

IN THE TRAIN.

As we rush, as we rush in the train,
The trees and the houses go wheeling back,
But the starry heavens above the plain
Come flying on our track.

All the beautiful stars of the sky,
The silver doves of the forest of Night,
Over the dull earth swarm and fly,
Companions of our flight.

We will rush ever on without fear;
Let the goal be far, the flight be fleet!
For we carry the Heavens with us, dear,
While the Earth slips from our feet!

Rhineland Bowlers On Top.

NOTABLE RECORDS IN "COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

Yesterday we published a notable bowling record, an average of 2. 44 runs per wicket, which has induced the sporting statisticians to burn the mid-night oil. Three more outstanding achievements have come to light, namely those of Pte. Carr, 1/6 Bn. The Prince of Wales Own (W. Yorks Regt.), Cpl. B.F. Adams, Cavalry Division H.Q., and Gunner Lemons, 145th Siege Battery. Their analyses read:—

	Matches	Overs	Maidens	Wickets	Runs	Average
Pte. Carr	9	73.5	22	49	129	2.36
Cpl. Adams	10	116	22	82	236	2.87

Club Secretaries and League Table Inaccuracies.

SIX WICKET VICTORY.

C.P.C. Club Secretaries are requested to study the League Tables carefully. Sometimes, when results are inadvertently not notified, or reports mislaid, decisions are in consequence not recorded. Therefore, should any queries arise, a list of played games giving names of opponents, results, and dates, should be sent to the Secretary, Cologne Post Cricket Cup, without delay.

Matches scratched from this date will mean the forfeiture of points. The only exception is when the other party are willing, and have a vacant date, to re-arrange the fixture.

MIDLAND DIVISION H.Q. (126) v. 1st BN. M.G.C. (76) at Brühl. For the latter Stories (17) and Hodsworth (20) did well. H.Q. made the necessary runs with 3 wickets in hand Lieut. Lawes (39) and Gibson (28) figuring prominently. The "hat trick" was performed by Walton, the H.Q. left-handed bowler, who took 4 wickets for no runs.

21st BDE. R.G.A. (157) v. MID. DIV. H.Q. (64). For 21st Bde. the best batsmen were Rev. Borrow (70 not out); Gnr. Knowles (14) and Gnr. Weston (14); while Gnr. "D" SIEGE PARK (126 for 4) v. 62nd BN. M.G.C. (110) at Arnoldsweiler on Sunday The M.G.C. batted first on a good wicket. Thanks to some brilliant cricket by Col Birkett (59), Major Gordon (16), and Major McKelvey (11), 110 runs were r gistered before the innings closed. For the Siege Park S rgt. Dickinson and Cpl. Sawyer scored freely and the score was taken to 37 before Dickinson was bowled for a well played innings of 25 On joining Sawyer, Lieut. Cohen played sparkling cricket, making 48. Lee scored 17 not out.

1/1 N. MIDLAND H.B. (86) v. No. 1 LIGHT RAILWAY SIGNAL COY. (52) at Gies enich on Monday. For the losers Spr Durien bowled very well, taking 7 wickets for 32, while Spr. B undy scored 18. 52nd WELSH REGT. (63) v. 69th SIEGE BTY. (36). The Welsh batted first, Sergt. Kay making 34 and Capt. Worlock 17. The Gunners could do little with the bowling of Cpl. Wallwork and Sergt. Kay, the former taking 7 wickets for 5 runs and the latter 3 for 31.

185 SIEGE BTY. R.G.A. (41 for 6) v. 488 SIEGE BTY., R.G.A. (30) at Flamersheim. WESTERN DIVISIONAL CUP.

1st Western T.M.B. and West Divisional H.Q. met on Sunday in the third round of the above named competition. A two innings match was agreed on, and T.M. batted first. They, however, could only master the moderate score of 71. D.H.Q. made a poor response, owing chiefly to the excellent bowling of Lomas. The whole side was out for 23, Lomas taking 8 wickets for 11 runs. In the 2nd innings T.M.'s scored 65 and Divisional H.Q. replied with 52. T.M.'s thus won an interesting match by 61 runs. The feature of the game was the fine bowling of Cpl. Lomas (T.M.B.) who in both innings took 15 wickets for 29 runs.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Thursday, July 24, 1919.

Surface wind between West and South-West, 5-10 m.p.h. Mainly overcast; dull and cool with intermittent rain. Risk of thunder. Fair visibility.

CRICKET KNOCK-OUT.

Three Matches In One Day At Kommern.

The 1/5 Bn. South Staffs Regt. held a very successful Inter-Coy cricket knock-out competition on Sunday at Kommern. Thanks to the keenness of the companies they were able to play three matches.

In the morning H. Q. and "Don" played, a win resulting for "Don" by 98 for 6 against 35. Burton hit 52 (not out), and took 4 wickets for 12 runs. Lieut. Orford made 22 and took 5 for 19.

In the afternoon B beat C Coy by 57 against 19, Davies taking 6 for 10, and Johnson 3 for 7.

The final in the evening resulted in a win for "D" against B by 74 against 29. Burton again did well, making 11, and taking 7 for 12. Cpl. Ewart made a useful 17.

COUNTY CRICKET.

Owing to rain the Middlesex-Essex match at Lords was abandoned.

Yorks (264) and 25) beat Surrey (143 and 145) by 10 wkts.

Somerset (241) beat Worcester (67 and 78) by an innings and 96 runs.

Opinion Divided.

The recent controversy over the King's Cup race at Henley looks like leading to a reconsideration of the rule of the Amateur Rowing Association defining an amateur. It is an open secret that at the Universities opinion is considerably divided on the question.

TIP-TOP SPRINTING.

2nd Western Infy. Bde. Sports Meeting.

KEEN CONTESTS.

This meeting was held at Alfter on Saturday and despite an hour's torrential downpour in the middle of the afternoon, proved very successful. The Western Division String Band, and the Brass Band of the 52nd Battalion South Wales Borderers played selections.

A great deal of enthusiasm was aroused by the Three Mile Race in which four competitors ran even until half way through the last lap, when Lance Corporal Farrell, 53rd Battalion Welsh Regiment, drew away and finished in a fine sprint. The Relay Race, too, excited much interest, being won by the 53rd Battalion Welsh Regiment, for whose team Lieut. R. Parker gained a great deal of ground in a well run 880 yards.

A feature of the afternoon's entertainment was an interesting and spectacular Physical Training display by a squad from the 53rd Battalion Welsh Regiment under the direction of C.S.M.I. J. Hopwood, A.G.S. At the conclusion of the Sports the prizes were presented by Major General T.O. Marden, C.B., C.M.G.

T.Y.O. Colts and Fillies.

MERITS AND DEMERITS OF CLAIMANTS FOR THE PREMIERSHIP.

When we come to consider the merits of the two-year-olds that have shown the best form it is to find ourselves confronted by a situation full of interest and possibilities.

Thus writes Mr. Edward Moorhouse, the well-known sporting writer, in the "Observer."

It might be possible to argue that Orpheus is not much, if at all, in front of Poltava, and if the argument carried conviction, the easy four lenghts by which Sarchedon beat Poltava at Ascot in the "Coventry" would more or less dispose of Orpheus as a claimant for the two-year-old premiership. I am not, however inclined to discuss him, because (he continues), of any conclusions resulting from jugglery with weights. He is the sort of colt that is apt to confound those who rely on arithmetical calculations. His next race will be at Goodwood, where he is engaged in the Molecomb Stakes. So is He Goes. If both go to the post we should be a little wiser after the event.

SARCHEDON'S DEFEAT.

The reputation of He Goes was to some extent enhanced by the ready victory he gained in the Chesterfield Stakes on Thursday. Too much might, however, be made of the performance. Sarchedon could not race that afternoon. His sulky behaviour is, of course, attributed to the blinkers he was wearing with a view to obviating his swerving tendencies. For some days Sarchedon had worn blinkers at exercise, and appeared to have taken very kindly to them. A Newmarket trainer told me he had seen him "going like a lion." On Thursday, however, it was obvious before the race that the colt resented having his view obstructed, and before the contest was half over his defeat was foreshadowed.

It would seem that, so far as we can tell at present, choice of the best two-year-old colt must be made from He Goes, Sarchedon, Orpheus, and the Decagone colt, who won the Chesham Stakes at Ascot. The fact that two of the four are by Prince Palatine explains why an apparently high-class yearling by the son of Persimmon should excite so much competition that the buyer has to give 6,500 guineas. If there were "books" open on next year's Derby, He Goes would probably be favourite.

THE TWO-YEAR-OLD FILLIES.

As for the two-year-old fillies, I take it that the two best we have seen so far are Lampetia and Lady Phoebe, both daughters of the defunct Orby.

BERLIN RACES.

Huge crowds gathered at the Grunewald race-course, near Berlin, this week to witness the races promoted by the Cologne race committee. In no less than five events were the favourites victorious, and betting was on a large scale.

In the race for the "Rhine Prize" the favourite "Einsiedler" was the winner after keen competition with "Mohamed", whom the former overtook when 300 metres from the post.

SPORTS AT LINDENTHAL.

Successful Meeting held by 51st N.F. Battalion.

On Friday the 51st Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers held a very successful sports meeting at Lindenthal. They were fortunate in being favoured with excellent weather, which greatly added to the enjoyment both of competitors and spectators. By kind permission of Col. J. C. Hartley, D.S.O., the band of the 52nd Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers rendered a popular programme.

There was very keen competition between A and C Companies for the Commanding Officer's Cup.

This match was played on the ground of B. Battery, H.A.C. at Berg-Gladbach and resulted in an easy win for the Artillery. Scores:—Artillery 164, Infantry 80, 1st innings; 10, 2nd innings. Soughan for the Artillery accomplished the "hat trick", and finished with an average of 7 wickets for 2 runs.

A New Golf Ball.

The enormous length of tee shots which is just now the spectacular attraction in professional golf is not entirely due to clean hitting and accurate timing. It is due in part to a new ball, lately on the market, which not only flies further but is of good behaviour on the putting green.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Leave Club Attractions.

To-day at the Leave Club the pipers of the 51st Gordon Highlanders are to play in the garden at 5 p.m., and at 6.30 there will be a whist drive. On Friday, there will be a dancing class in the music room and a cinema performance in the afternoon and evening. An impromptu concert is to be held in the music room at 5 p.m. on Saturday, followed by a dance in the theatre.

Good-Bye Khaki.

"Ye Merrie Muffins" made their reappearance at the Stadt Theatre, Düren the other evening. As a change from variety and farce, they presented a revue (if one long burlesque can be called revue) entitled: "Good-bye Khaki." It is a sort of medley which reminds one of the best parts of "Bubbly," "Us," and "Joy Bells." I was again pleased with the performance of Mr. Reg Matthews who played a sort of Bert Coote part; it was quite something above the ordinary. Teddie, Davie, Tommy (the three female impersonators), Ernest Lonsdale, Bernard Jukes, Leslie Willson, Alex Factor, and George Rae were as versatile as ever. E. Layne Runacres was musical director.

One long Laugh.

In nineteen scenes, ranging from the War Office to a drawing room, the whole show goes with a swing from start to finish. Bernard Jukes as Col. Boomer, M.P., and Mr. Reg Matthews as the Nervous Man in the latter scene were positive screams. The strange story of the man who wanted to see the Brigadier, a war-office episode, was equally funny. All parts in fact are well carried out; the girls, especially Teddie, adding considerably to the gaiety of the show. The Muffins, by the way, are due in Cologne on Aug. 4.

Sir Dennis Broughton, Bart.

A splendid performance of a real, live character, is that of Capt. C. F. Ball, Border Regt., who, as Sir Dennis Broughton, Bart., in "General Post" at the Deutsches Theatre this week stamps about and makes gruff noises with his throat in a manner wonderfully true to humanity. Miss Inez Bensusan, as Lady Broughton, is equally successful while Miss Gabrielle Paul charms the eyes and ears of her auditors, by her impression of "Betty." Alec, whom the author describes as "a young man of excellent qualities and stereotyped ideas" is thoroughly well represented by Major E. Pollock, R.G.A., while Lieut. S. E. Percy, H.L.I., by the vigour of his acting, is extremely popular as Edward Smith. Lt. Onions, Monmouth Regt., and Lieut. E. C. Stephenson, Norfolk Regt. are excellent in the little they have to do.

"The Triangles."

The latest recruits to the growing ranks of entertainers in Rhineland are the "Triangles," a concert party formed by the 53rd. Royal Sussex Regiment. Organized and stage-managed by 2/Lt. J.G.L. Green (Bn. Signalling Officer), they made their bow in the Regimental Institute at Donrath on Tuesday night, and were enthusiastically received by a packed audience. The programme was a pleasant admixture of vocal and instrumental music, and revealed a versatility of talent amongst the artistes, which augured well for future development and success. Sgt. Coysh, of the Educational Staff, who gave a breezy rendering of "A Bachelor gay am I" was heard in the ever popular "Trumpeter" song.

Delirious Ragtime.

Pte. Lubrani, Pte. Lucas and L/Cpl. Harrison supplied delirious doses of ragtime while C.Q.M.S. Pearson kept the comedy element well to the front. Pte. Wrout gave the lament of a "Profiteering Publican" with appropriate feeling. On the instrumental side, Sgt. Collins (violinist), Drummer Blake (cornet), Sgt. Wright (violinist) and Pte. Fisher (pianist) were valued contributors to the evening's enjoyment. Colonel W. F. Barker, C.M.G., D.S.O., (cmdg the Battn.) who was present with the whole of the officers, offered the "Triangles" cordial congratulations at the close.

In few Words.

The "Pedlars" commenced a completely new programme at the Stadt Theatre, Bonn, this week when the sketch "A sister to assist 'Er'" was a popular feature.

JACQUES.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

Gold Rackets.
In the final for the M.C.C. gold rackets at Lord's, E.A.R. Druce beat J. F. Marshall (present holder) by 3 sets to 0 (6—2, 6—4, 6—2.)

Swimming in Clothes.
It should be made compulsory for every person who frequents the river Thames to learn how to swim when fully clothed. —"The Referee."

Potential International.
The success of J. C. Masterman in the open singles at Maidstone and Leamington adds another to the list of potential Internationals.

Best-Boat Handicap.
George Bubear, the ex-champion sculler, is promoting a best-boat handicap, which will take place over the Putney-Hammersmith course on Monday. Sept 1. Prizes to the value of £30 will be given.

Wonderful Army Shot.
That wonderful army shot, Colonel J. H. Cowan, C.B., commenced his shooting as a small boy at Cheltenham, winning the Spencer Cup in 1872. Ever since his name has appeared, with a regularity that is as amazing as it is persistent, in the prize lists of all the rifle meetings which he has attended, no matter whether the competitions were for bull's-eye shooting or rapid.

Midland-Champion.
J. J. Barker, Polytechnic Harriers, won the 100-yards Midlands Championship at the Bournville Athletic Club Sports at Bournville.

Airmen and motorists.
Airmen and motorists have made a gallant endeavour to revive their respective sports, but the results so far have not been encouraging.

Popular Polo.
Twice this season matches have been played on the "outside" ground at Hurlingham to which the public has been admitted, and in each instance the result was entirely satisfactory.

In the Solent.
Although there is to be no yachting festival on pre-war lines at Cowes, there is a prospect of some racing, as several more yachts are being got ready for use, and a few handicap events may be arranged.

Eastern Wicket-Keeper.
Mr. S. G. A. Maartensz, the Hampshire wicket-keeper, was in the Forestry Department, Malay States, and has played cricket for the Malay States, the Straits Settlements, and for the two combined against Hong Kong and Shanghai in 1909, a year in which he also kept wicket for M. A. Noble's Australian team on their way home against Singapore.

After Death—What?
"At Milton of Campsie a small boy fishing for minnows caught a trout weighing 3lb. This is its starting weight."—"Dundee Evening Telegraph."

Suzanne.
The new lady champion, Mlle Lenglen, will make her next public appearance at Le Touquet where the thirteenth open meeting will be held on Sept. 3.

Severest Blow.
One of the best instructors of boxing for the last half century, in writing about the right-hand cross-counter, observes: "This is the most severe blow which can be dealt in sparring."

Must Come out on Top.
One of the lessons gained from the recent Lawn Tennis Championships is the doom of the base line player. The Australians have shown that in the men's game the persistent volleyer must come out on top.

Wasted Effort.
What a good boxer Pal Moore would be if had only learned the proper way to punch. His hitting in the bout at Olympia was one long succession of open-handed slaps which in the mind of any referee who has eyes to see and knows the rules, were so much wasted effort by Moore.

Fine sprint.
In the 100 yards open handicap at Guildford, the A.A.A. sprint and furlong champion. W. A. Hill, Surrey A.C., won from scratch in 10sec.

38,242 Guineas.
Seventy yearlings were sold last week for 38,242 guineas, yielding an average of 546 guineas obtained at the First July Sales.

"Demobbed Cricketers.
The M.C.C. has decided that under the new rule as to county regiment qualification, cricketers who have been demobilized may continue to play for their county till the end of this season.

More Cycle Races.
The National Cyclists' Union has been successful in obtaining the addition of more cycle races in the Olympic Games to be held in Antwerp in 1920. Originally the programme arranged contained one race only, and that on the road.

Crack shot.
Sgt. Loveday, who won the King's Prize at Bisley, is twenty-seven years of age, and a farmer. He won the championship of New Zealand — the King's Prize of the country — at Trentham, New Zealand, in 1912, after paying a visit to Bisley in 1911 in the New Zealand team.

THE RATE OF EXCHANGE.

Fresh views on the depreciated mark

Your article on "The Rate of Exchange" was very interesting but one or two aspects of the subject seem to have been forgotten.

A passage in that article reads "A mark is still a mark, the equivalent of the shilling to the German." "A mark is still a mark" but in name only even to him. Does the author really think that the German still imagines that the mark has still its pre-war value?

What is the value of money? Any unit of exchange whether it be a shilling, a franc or a mark is only worth what it can be exchanged for in goods.

Its value depends on its purchasing power and one has only to look at current prices in Germany to see that a mark is only able to purchase about a sixth of what it was able to do before the war.

Why is that? Well first of all ask another question. How is the value of money determined?

There is of course a Money Market interpretation of that phrase "Value of money" but we will leave that alone and consider the real value of money. Money is like any other commodity and its value is determined by demand and supply. The supply is the amount of actual cash multiplied by its rapidity of circulation and the demand is the amount of work the money has to do, the number of exchanges to be accomplished or in other words the volume of trade.

Now it is obvious that the supply of money in Germany has been vastly increased. Germany adopted some very unsound methods in her financial policy and one of them was the issue of huge quantities of notes which are not covered by a reasonable gold reserve.

Has the demand increased? No the volume of Germany's trade is at the moment insignificant compared with what it was before the war.

Therefore you get more money less trade, high prices and depreciated currency.

That is only one aspect of the subject. The rate of exchange besides comparing two currencies shews in normal times the balance of indebtedness between the two countries. If country A owes country B more than B owes A, there is a balance due from A to B and the rate will move against A and in favour of B.

Realizing that, are we doing anything to rectify the exchanges by encouraging exports to Germany from England and discouraging imports.

It is only pushing Germany further into debt and making the exchanges worse.

I am not advocating that England should welcome German goods, but pointing out that the tendency of the present arrangement is to depress the mark still further or to counteract any tendency for it to rise.

THE FARE LOTTERY.

"Speaking of Sweep stakes," said the Substantive Private, "have you ever thought of entering for the Jerry Tram Sweep?"

I pleaded not guilty, professed total ignorance, and expressed a desire to hear more about it.

He regretfully declined to enlighten me on the grounds that his prolonged absence from the office might necessitate an immediate stoppage of the peace, but he hoped that I would exercise my powers of observation in the future.

I did, and by Sherlock-Holmes-like process of elimination I at last discovered what the Private was referring to.

On the Cologne Cars there are various ways of legitimate travel (service dress appears to be the best), but the German must content himself with the methods of his fathers; he can provide himself with a nice green card and a "pukka", celluloid case to flourish airily when addressed by the conductor: alternatively, he can make a noise like "Swansich" and exchange some unclean paper money for a much cleaner ticket, but the more sporting citizen has another method altogether.

He buys a ticket which has several spaces on it so that it can be punched each time he travels, but it appears that there is no guarantee with this ticket; that is where the sporting instinct arises.

Watch the optimistic Hun board a tramcar and hopefully produce one of these tickets; it is perfectly clean and there are still several virgin spaces, yet the conductor is not satisfied.

He regards the weather — it is unfavourable, and presumably the other factors concerned are of evil portent, for Herr Conductor breaks forth, gives tongue, or, whatever you wish to call it, but the result resembles the Hymn of Hate jazzed on the lever of a soda-syphon.

Needless to say, the "fare" pays up — despite his Iron Cross, or is it becuuse of it?

I have never yet been able to discover how the validity of the ticket is determined, perhaps the conductor "thinks of a number, etc." in any case the system of Teutonic reasoning is beyond me, but, as a sporting chance, can you beat it?.

THE FIGHTING SWING.

Once again the regiment is marching down
the street,
Shoulders, legs, and rifle barrels swinging
all in time,
Let the slack civilian plod; ours the gayer
feet,
Dancing to the music of the oldest earthly rhyme.
Left, right, left, right, hear the cadence fall.
So Caesar's Roman legions shook the plains of Gaul.
Fighting bloods of all the earth in our pulses ring,
Step! fast, true to the past, back to the
fighting swing.
Left, right, eat, and fight! dreams are blown to bits,
Here's the old guard back to life, bound for Austerlitz.
Shake the soft and quit the sweet; loose the arms that cling,
Blood, dust grapple and thrust! Back to the fighting swing.

Echoes from Rhineland.

Music hath charms.

That a very real interest in and enthusiasm for music exists in the present day Rhine Army, is shown by the number of soldiers who attend classical concerts of the best type. At a recent recital given by Backhaus there was a very considerable proportion of khaki among the audience, and the military element were by no means the least appreciative listeners.

Beasts of Burden.

As in France and Belgium, the countryfolk of Germany use oxen as beasts of burden. Though not very fast, they are powerful beasts, and the load which they pull is not a light one. In nearly all cases their hoofs are shod with a steel or iron plate the shape of a boot protector and this covers the outer part of each hoof, the other half of the hoof being left uncovered. This plate, of course, serves the same purpose as the horse shoe.

Profitable Photography.

The suggestion in a recent "Echo" that more originality should be exercised in the selection of subjects for photographs recalls the fact that the English picture papers are always willing to pay for interesting prints submitted to them. Here is an example of what might easily make an acceptable print. The frontier village of Herbesthal is partly in Belgium and partly in Germany; one side of the main street shows French signs and the other side German. A most interesting snap could be obtained showing on one side of the road a "Café des Alliés" and facing it a "Bäckerei und Conditorei". Herbesthal is a station on the main line from Cologne into Belgium, and can be reached in a couple of hours from Cologne without expense, so a Sunday afternoon's excursion to this place might well prove a profitable trip.

Opera or Variety.

A suggestion has come to hand from a young soldier that instead of opera being presented continuously during the season at the Opera House, revue and varieties should be presented every second week. He evidently forgets, however, that continental opera houses are on quite a different footing from privately owned theatres at home. It might be pointed out for his information that they are state-aided institutions for the provision of opera entirely, and in that way are in a somewhat analogous position to art galleries at home, wich are maintained by the government in order that the masses of the people may look at good pictures if they feel so disposed. Without disparaging revues and kindred entertainments, to perform them in a large opera house would almost be like permitting jazz dancing in the National Gallery.

L. B. W.

A cricket match was played between two battalions on the Rhine the other day. The Chaplain of the fielding side, who was also its captain, bowled slows with admirable persistency at one end until he decided to have a go at the other. With equal persistency he appealed for leg-before, although the surface of the pitch was such that no man could of malice prepense prevent the ball from breaking at the least the breadth of the wicket. At last a batsman having played a ball hard on to his pads and survived an appeal for l.b.w., turned to the wicket-keeper and said, "What's he asking for? Bat-in-front?" "Dunno," replied the Aunt Sally. "The Padre's appealing is like the Peace of God which passeth all understanding."

Amusing German Customs.

A correspondent, who incidentally suggests that dancing classes should be organised for troops in Brühl, calls attention to an amusing dance custom in vogue in some of the German villages. No entrance fee in charged, but after each dance, which averages about five minutes in length, members of the committee responsible armed with a plate collect twenty pfgs. from each dancer. The interval between dances is about two minutes and with dancing in full swing for five hours a profitable return is possible. Another curious practice is that the dancers occupy seats round the dancing floor, the girls being seated on one side and the men on the other. For the most part they take their pleasures seriously and there is none of that light-hearted laughter and fun which characterises English dances.

Lesser Echoes.

A correspondent complains of the charge for the G.S. ribbon at the British Empire Leave Club.

Girls are selling flowers and postcards in the streets of Cologne for German prisoners of war. Schoolboys and girls make house-to-house collections.

The orchestra at the Officers' Club (No. 2) Cologne now plays the National Anthem at the conclusion of each programme.

All members of the R.A.O.B. are notified that the "Captain Spanton" Lodge will reopen this evening, July 24th. All communications regarding the Lodge should be addressed to C.S.M.T. Watmore. 52nd D.L.I. Riehl Barracks.

PRIZES FOR ECHOES.

To-day we award a prize of 10 marks to A. H. Weils, H. Q., 2nd Brigade R.A.F. Cologne. Owing to lack of contributions we withhold the other two prizes. Will readers please note? There is money to be gained by contributing items for this feature. Why miss the opportunity?

Opinions of the Moment.

THE VICTORIAN FATHER.

Miss Katherine Tynan, the novelist and poet says: It was a Victorian convention, of course, for the father to be an alarming person, and it died hard. Probably the war has hurried it out of existence. But according to the system, backed by the Fifth Commandment, the children, long after the age of pupilage were at the mercy of the parents or other guardians. The young seldom disputed the tyranny. The convention of tyranny was almost binding on the father. Men naturally kind and genial accepted it, so that when the father came the children scattered, and the house was uneasily silent. I have known such fathers to come with fresh and frank delight to a real and almost equal friendship with a grown-up son or daughter. Perhaps the convention leant hard on the father as well as the children.

THE WAY TO INDUSTRIAL PEACE.

Mr. G. N. Barnes M.P. the Labour representative in the War Cabinet, says: Labour wants a voice in the conditions of its daily life. It instinctively feels that, if that were secured, it would go on to greater things. It is not so much wages as status which is at the the bottom of industrial unrest. The way to appease workmen, therefore, is to give them a better place in the scheme of things, so that they may feel themselves responsible factors in industry. As this is done other things will fall into proper relation. But none of these things can come out of mere sparring at long range between employer and workman. None of them can come out of an atmosphere of suspicion and ill-will, or from a mere assertion of academic theories by one side or the other. They can only come by fair dealing in the light of the facts open to both sides as well as the community.

INDIA'S FUTURE.

The Maharaja of Bikanir, India's representative at the Peace Conference says: The proud part which India had the privilege of taking in the war has resulted in producing warm feelings in the hearts of the general populace of Great Britain towards us. It only remains for the people of India to continue to play their part in the future equally well, and with moderation and restraint, to bring about results which will permanently strengthen the links that bind India to the Empire and prove of incalculable benefit to all concerned. The future is full of the brightest promise for India

THE DRAMA TO-MORROW.

Sir Frank Benson, the eminent Shakespearean actor writing of the future of the Drama says: I believe that the drama will shortly have a new and better day. Drama is the most democratic of the arts as well as the most aristocratic. It borrows from all its sister arts, and therefore must and will play a leading part in the reconstruction of the homeland. It can and will help to bring back to the mighty people now engaged in shaping the destiny of the world the unity of selfless purpose, the splendid freedom of high endeavour that sang through four years' agony of war, in deeds that every day speak to us the living language of Shakespeare, the master player and poet of mankind. All hunger for this revival of art. It is a life-and-death question for our Empire, for our freedom—this battle with soulless ugliness. Win we must and will, just as we won the war. Then we shall have a land so just that none will wish to war with her, a land so strong that none will dare to war with her, a land so lovely that men and women will gladly give their lives for her.

GETTING A MOVE ON

Major General Sir George Aston K.C.B., has been giving his opinion on how to get a Government department to move. He says: A Government office is a machine of great power, and as with all such machines, you have to overcome the inertia before you can get it to "function." Once started in any direction, it gathers momentum, and is difficult either to turn or to stop. You can compare it to a steam-roller of immense weight; if, carried away by youthful zeal and conviction, you think that the great machine ought to move in some direction or disaster will result, you must study its mechanism, and you must locate two things—the starting lever and the brake. In every community of a hundred men you will probably find one or two starting levers, men of original thought and driving power who try to get things done; twenty or thirty brakesmen who try to stop them; and the remainder who don't know which they are, like the "little sillies" amongst the Peter Pan fairy-babies who were in doubt about their sex.

THE EX-SERVICE MAN.

Lt. Colonel S. E. Thomas writing on the future of the ex-service man in industrial and commercial life, says: Copartnership is bound to come and the only successful system must be one which grants a really considerable interest to the actual worker. It has been difficult in the past to introduce this system into already established concerns owing to the difficulty of granting an actual financial interest to any employee occupying a position less responsible than that of the head of a department, but with the new organisation such as is proposed, this difficulty would not exist, and the genuine goodwill and mutual trust with true comradeship which has existed amongst all ranks that have really been thrown together in the actual fighting line must be a great asset if it can be maintained and introduced into commercial undertakings.

SHATTERED ILLUSIONS.

General Smuts, on the eve of his departure from England to his native South Africa says: What is the good of all the wealth and comfort and glamour of the Victorian age when the next two decades bring us to the graves of ten million young men slain because of the base passions of greed and domination which lurked below the smiling surface of that age? The game is not worth the candle, and we should rather welcome the new and difficult times on which we are now entering. For doubt it not, we are at the beginning of a new century. The old world is dying around us: let it also die in us. Once more in the history of the human race we hear the great Creative Spirit utter those tremendous words, "Behold I make all things new." Old ideas of wealth, of property, of class, and social relations, of international relations, of moral and spiritual values are rapidly changing. The old political formulas soundhollow; the old landmarks by which we used to steer are disappearing.

TO KEEP THE MINES GOING.

NAVY SAVES MINERS FROM THE RUINOUS CONSEQUENCES OF THEIR OWN ACTION.

ORDERS DIVERTED TO AMERICA.

COAL STRIKE.

RAILWAY COMPANIES DRASTIC REDUCTIONS.

The extreme gravity of the coal strike was brought home to the general public yesterday by an offical intimation from the Railway Executive Committee that forthwith they may have to reduce the passenger service to a considerable extent. The Committee warns the public that they may not be in a position to gurantee a sufficient service of trains to carry passengers wishing to go or to return from the seaside. Race specials are likely to becancelled if the strike continues another forty-eight hours. Very drastic reductions are foreshadowed on all the railways and all efforts will be concentrated on the carrying of food.

In Parliament, yesterday afternoon, Sir Robert Horne, the Labour Minister, said the Government would give the fullest protection to all men desirous of returning to work at the Yorkshire collieries.

The latest news is that 10,000 Monmouthshire miners have gone back to work, but in Nottinghamshire 10,000 came out. At Burnley a mass meeting of Lancashire strikers decided to resume work last night, but resolved at the same time to send to the Government a resolution of protest against the six shillings per ton rise in the price of coal.

NAVY MEN AT WORK.

Yesterday 158 Naval men were engaged in pumping at five West Yorkshire pits and a furtner four hundred are on the way from Portsmouth. There has been no interference by the miners.

The Cabinet considered the industrial situation yesterday and the Premier is meeting the Executive of the Miners Federation this morning.

Troops are being moved into the Yorkshire coal area. Sir Eric Geddes stated that neither he nor the Government wished to fill the district with troops, but the Naval ratings engaged in pumping must be protected. He emphasized the point that the troops are not there in any offensive manner and stated that they would be kept out of sight as much as possible. By the exercise of rigid economy the public services could be maintained for eight to ten weeks. If the miners would undertake the pumping and winding he and the troops would leave Leeds at once.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Bonar Law, replying to questions, said that six collieries had actually been flooded and seventeen others were in danger. Owing to the withdrawal of the winding enginemen the boiler fires of some of the collieries had actually been put out by the strikers.

PREMIER HEARS THE OWNERS.

The Prime Minister was interviewed by the coal owners last night, and made a statement of their case. No indication of the policy the Government will pursue were given by the Premier. It is believed that he took this line of action as he wished to reserve himself until after this interview with the men's representatives.

No disorders are reported from any of the coalfields and the Naval men are quite unmolested in the carrying out of their duties.

WAIT FOR THE BALLOT.

It is understood that the Triple Industrial Alliance Conference which met in London yesterday afternoon decided by 217 votes to 11 to recommend that a ballot be taken of the miners, railwaymen and transport workers of the country on the question of direct action in order to force the Government to withdraw the Military Service Act, withdraw from Russia, and release the conscientious objectors.

AMERICAN COAL FOR FRANCE.

In the course of Tuesday's debate in the French Chamber the Minister for Industrial Reconstruction said that all production is governed by the supply of coal. If coal is dear, life is dear.

Up to one month ago, he said, Great Britain supplied coal to France at the same price as it was sold in England. Since then, however, serious difficulties have arisen. England has intimated that in future it could only export at the rate of twenty-three million tons per annum as against seventy-seven million tons formerly. In view of this enormous deficit, France has turned to America, where she is able to buy coal more cheaply than in England.

INDIAN RULER DEAD.

The Maharaja of Bhavnagar, for twenty-three years ruler of this prosperous State in the Bombay Presidency, has just died at the age of forty-four.

He was a keen sportsman, an excellent shot, and kept several hunting cheetahs, which he trained personally.

FRENCH CHAMBER.

NOTE OF CONFIDENCE IN CLEMENCEAU.

During the debate in the French Chamber on the general policy of the Government, M. Clemenceau, speaking of the cataclysm of war, said it was impossible to suppose that after such a sequence of unprecedented events, the economic life of the nation could be resumed without difficulty. He defended sundry members of the French Cabinet who, he said, had co-operated with him to an eminent degree, and then explained that if they remained in power he would proceed with the necessary elections before the presidential election in January.

At the conclusion of the debate, the Chamber adopted, by 289 votes against 173, an order of the day expressing confidence in the Government.

BRITISCH VOLUNTEERS.

BOLSHEVIST MOVEMENT FRUSTRATED.

A War Office communiqué says that General Ironside at Archangel reports that a mutiny among the Russian troops has taken place. The chief part of the front affected is Onega, where there were no British troops. The mutineers handed over the front and the town itself to the enemy. The mutiny was due to Bolshevist propaganda and was brought to a head by their realizing that the British are withdrawing from North Russia. A considerable number of Russian troops accordingly decided to go over to the Bolshevists.

General Ironside now has the situation in hand and the fresh British volunteer troops, which are fortunately on the spot, are equal to the difficult and perilous task of restoring the situation.

BULGARIAN FINANCE.

BORROWING FROM AMERICA TO PAY GERMANY.

The Bulgarian peace delegation has left Belgrade for Paris. It is reported that the Bulgarian Government is negotiating in the United States for a loan of several hundred million kronen to permit of repayment of the loan granted in 1917 by the Deutsche Bank and other German financial houses.

MISSION TO SEARCH FOR MISSING.

In order to exhaust all possible sources of information as to the fate of officers and men posted as missing in Belgium and Northern France during the war, the Foreign Office announces the imminent despatch of a Government special mission.

It will consist of Dame Adelaide Livingstone, Sir Malcolm McIlwraith and Brigadier-General Bruce. They will make an extensive tour of the districts and conduct an enquiry amongst likely peasants, priests and others who may have been in touch with our men.

FIGHTING ON N.W. FRONTIER.

A raiding party of 300 regulars and tribesmen crossed Kafiristan into the Bumboret Valley, eight miles south of Chitral, on Sunday. They were driven off by Chitral scouts, and withdrew to Bashgul, burning houses and carrying off live-stock. Afghan regulars occupied the passes between Kafiristan and Chitral.

On Friday evening, heavy firing occurred at all posts and piquets on the Khyber, from Fort Kata Kusnta (near Ali Musjid) to Fort Maude. The attacks were repulsed, with considerable loss to the tribesmen. Convoys proceeded along the Khyber on Saturday. The attackers consist of ex-Sepoys, irresponsible Afridis, and some militia deserters.—Reuter.

HANGMEN'S SPECIAL TRAIN.

Bela Kun recently sent his secretary Szamuelly, the Bolshevist bloodhound, in a special train with six hangmen to Western Hungary to carry out the trial and execution of counter-revolutionists. This commission, after shooting or hanging seventy-eight persons in a period of three weeks, returned triumphantly to Budapest to receive the congratulations of Bela Kun.

The trials were the usual farce of justice under the Bolshevist regime, the dictator's object being to strike terror in the hearts of his political opponents.

AIRSHIP DISASTER.

FRIGHTFUL COMBINATION OF ACCIDENTS.

Telegrams from Chicago and Washington record a terrible airship disaster which occurred at the former place on Tuesday night.

A dirigible which was being used for exhibition purposes burst into flames and fell through the glass roof of the Illinois Trust Savings Bank where 200 employes were at work. The gasoline tank exploded and the blazing liquid was distributed almost throughout the building. Nine bank clerks were killed almost at once, while twenty others were seriously injured and about one hundred received slighter injuries.

The dirigible had been flying over the city for several hours advertising a pleasure resort. Suddenly it burst into flames, buckled up and plunged downwards. Members of the crew and several passengers, all of whom had parachutes strapped to their bodies, jumped for their lives. Several landed safely, but the silk parachutes of others burned and the wearers were dashed to pieces.

Panic prevailed in the bank building when the airship dropped. Men and girls with their clothing in flames fought their way to the only two exits. The accident occurred after banking hours and none of the general public were in the bank, otherwise the loss of life would have been considerably greater.

PRINCE OF WALES.

UNITED STATES INVITATION ACCEPTED.

In reponse to an invitation from President Wilson to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales to visit the United States, Lord Curzon has addressed a note to the American Ambassador in London, stating that it gives his Majesty King George the greatest pleasure to accept the same, both on personal grounds and as a mark of the intimate relations that so happily exist between the American and British peoples, drawn ever more closely together by imperishable memories of their comradeship in the recent war.

The King proposed that at the close of the Canadian tour, the Prince of Wales should accept the hospitality of the American Government for a few days at Washington and New York before embarking at the latter port for the journey home.

GERMANS ARE FLYING.

REGULAR PASSENGER SERVICES IN OPERATION.

In spite of the disturbed internal conditions, a determined attempt is being made to establish aviation on a permanent commercial basis in Germany.

A fairly large number of passenger services have been running for some time, mostly radiating from Berlin. Routes from the capital are in operation to Weimar, Frankfurt, Leipzig, Warnemunde, Hanover, Westphalia, Hamburg, and Breslau. There are also services between Weimar and Frankfurt, Hamburg, and Warnemunde, Leipzig and Weimar, and Hanover and Westphalia.

All these services are operated by the Deutsche Luft Rederie, a combine of various German aeronautical firms. Return tickets are issued and are valid for a period of thirty days. Flying kit and motor transport to and from the aerodrome are provided, and are covered by an inclusive charge. Serial tickets available for ten flights on any of the routes operated by the Combine are issued at 3,600 marks each. Mails and parcels are also carried by the company.

HAIG AND EX-SERVICE MEN.

At a recent meeting of ex-service men at Woolwich Town Hall a resolution was passed that, in the event of an amalgamation of the various ex-service organisations being brought about, Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig be asked to become the first president.

This resolution having been conveyed to the Field Marshal, he replied yesterday, to the effect that in the event of an amalgamation on a basis that could be accepted by him as a soldier on the active list, he will be very proud to become the first president.

TRAITOR CONDEMNED.

A French Court-martial sitting at Lex Mans has condemned to death a soldier named Hugher. This man was taken prisoner in 1917 and gave the Germans information regarding the distribution of French and American troops, which enabled the enemy to carry out a number of raids.

NORTH RUSSIA CASUALTIES.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Forster stated that the total casualties of the British forces in Russia since November 1918 was forty-one officers and 370 other ranks. Of these nineteen officers and 185 other ranks were killed.

It is officially announced from the Hague, that diplomatic relations are about to be resumed between the Dutch Government and the new German Government.

BRITISH WAR MEDAL

REGULATIONS GOVERNING ITS ISSUE.

The following Army Order dated 16th July has been issued:—

1. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to signify his pleasure that a medal be granted to record the bringing of the war to a successful conclusion, and the arduous serviced rendered by His Majesty's Forces.

2. The medal in silver will, provided the claims are approved by the competent military authorities, be granted to the undermentioned classes who either entered a theatre of war on duty, or, who left their places of residence and rendered approved service overseas, other than the waters dividing the different parts of the United Kingdom, between 5th August 1914, and 11th November 1918, both dates inclusive:—

(e) Enrolled and attested follower on the establishment of units of the Indian Army.

3. The medal in bronze will be granted to all British subjects who were enrolled in Native Labour Corps units and who served in theatres of war.

4. The riband will be: Centre orange, watered, with stripes of white and black on each side and with borders of royal blue.

5. Instructions as to the submission of claims and the disposal of the medals will be issued in due course.

EPSOM RIOT.

CANADIANS NOT GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER.

The trial of seven Canadians who were indicted for the manslaughter of Station-Sergeant Green in the Epsom riot was resumed at the Surrey Assizes yesterday.

One of the accused, named Connors, was called to give evidence. He said he followed the crowd out of curiosity, but that during the time he was outside the station nothing happened, except shouting. He did not see any soldiers with weapons, nor did he know what the shouting was about.

Mr. Justice Darling:— Did you think it was a prayer meeting?

Witness:— No I thought they were having a bit of fun, just for a jolly night.

Other prisoners stated that on nearing a bugler blow the "Fall in" at the camp, they got out of bed to see what the trouble was and followed the crowd down to the police station, where they saw bricks and stones flying about.

All the accused denied having taken part in the assault on the police.

McCallum and Todd were found not guilty and acquitted. The other five were acquitted on the charge of manslaughter but were found guilty of participating in the riot and were each sentenced to twelve months imprisonment without hard labour.

WASHINGTON RACE RIOTS.

There was a fierce renewal of the race riots at Washington on Tuesday night. As the audiences were leaving the theatres, armed bodies of defiant negroes fired shots at the crowd.

Four more deaths have occurred. One of these was that of a detective, who attempted to enter a house where blacks were firing at random from the window. Two troops of cavalry have been called out to assist the police.

The negroes are parading the city in organized bands armed with revolvers, razors and loaded clubs. Some even have rifles. They do not hesitate to insult the whites. Numbers of negroes are also using motor cars from which they fire revolvers.

"LET US GO HOME."

"Let us go home; help us to go home; give us peace." These phrases, in letters a yard long, were painted by German prisoners of war on the roofs of buildings at Whittington, Gobowen, and Park Hall internment camps.

More than ten thousand men are still detained in these camps, and during the peace celebrations on Saturday they appeared very dejected, and the silence that prevailed was remarkable. The officers remained indoors all day.

TIRED OF THE FATHERLAND.

The Swiss Government, after long negotiations between representatives of France, Germany, and Switzerland at Berne concerning the return of German prisoners in France, has authorised the repatriation of a certain number of German officers and men through Switzerland by four trains daily, except Sundays.

The 3,000 Germans still interned in Switzerland will be sent across the frontier next week, but they are not pleased with the prospect and want to remain.

FICKLE SAILOR.

ACTS AS HIS OWN COUNSEL AND HAS TO PAY.

A sailor, sued in the King's Bench Division for breach of promise, conducted his own defence; but the judge decided against him, and he had to pay £35. He was C.P.O. Baddock, R.N., and the girl, a barmaid, of Lower Clapton-road, was Miss K. E. Dennis.

Counsel quoted a number of letters, in one of which defendant said: "I don't intend to take the chance of leaving a young widow, so roll on peace."

Later he wrote: "I was never in a hurry to marry before, or else I should have been long ago. So you have started filling up the bottom drawer again. There is one consolation about it, and that is, that it will not be filled up for nothing this time. I will look after that."

Defendant wrote about a post-war berth as a daughtsman, which he had been offered in Belgium, and this, said counsel, was the excuse which he made for breaking off the engagement.

The parties were engaged in January, 1918, and the breach took place on November 12 last.

Baddock said that, after he was offered the position in Belgium, it was "quite sickening "the way plaintiff, when passing a jeweller's, urged him to obtain a wedding ring and a special license, and "make a job of it."

He was willing to marry her after the war, but her letters showed that she was getting "more or less fed up." He did not think that Belgium was a proper place now to take a newly-wedded wife.

CHURCH SEIZED

UNTIL THE VICAR PAYS HIS DEBTS.

A curious situation has arisen at Little Ilford Parish Curch, following an action in the High Court, in which Mr. Samuel Bent-Marshall, of Wanstead, was awarded judgment for £45 10s. against the Rev. E. Maughan Ettrick, Rector of St. Mary's Church, Little Ilford.

A sequestration notice has been posted outside the church, signed by the Bishop of Chelmsford, who was ordered by the Court "to enter into the rectory and parish church of Little Ilford, and take and sequester the same into your possession, and that you hold the same in your possession until you have levied the said £45 10s. and interest aforesaid of the rent, tithes, and rent-charges."

The decision of the Court to sequester the church was made after the Sheriff of Essex had given notice that the rector had no goods or chattels which could be seized

A churchwarden stated that the services would be continued as usual.

THE FETISH OF PLAY.

Dr. Wattie, the Chief Inspector of Schools in Scotland, cries "halt" to the demand for more play and less work for children. In his annual report on the Highland and Northern Division he says:—

In the child's development, health stands first in importance in point of time, and first also during the later stages among the material conditions, but occupies a much lower place in the scale of ultimate values. Hygieia is a veritable goddess, but her role in the heavenly drama is that of a super rather than of leading lady; and the danger to the commonweal of bringing in a tribe of athletes, who know not how to live well, is perhaps as real to-day as in the time of Euripides.

In my opinion "the happy lengthening of the summer holiday" has reached the limit of reasonableness; and, if education is to play the part in reconstruction that is expected of it, a strengthening of the serious puritanic strain seems desirable.

ALL QUIET AT LUTON.

The situation in Luton is now normal and the military have been withdrawn. The first police proceedings arising out of the disturbances took place yesterday, morning when four women and two men were charged with stealing and receiving. The chief constable said that he did not intend to offer any evidence as the case would be lengthy. He asked for a week's remand which was granted.

The only evidence given, was to the effect that in consequence of the rioting on Saturday various shops were looted and a large quantity of goods stolen. For the defence it was stated that the articles were either found by the prisoners or had been given to them

FATAL FIRE AT WOOLWICH ARSENAL

One munition girl was killed and several others severely injured in a fire which broke out in one of the shops at Woolwich Arsenal yesterday morning.

The building involved was one of the cartridge filling factories, and by some means, at present a mystery, some cordite became ignited, with the result, that in a few moments the whole building was in flames. The fire itself was only of short duration and was quelled by the Arsenal firemen.

The Postmaster-General (Mr. A.H. Illingworth) has undergone an operation in a nursing home in Leeds. The operation was successful.

PRISONERS LET OFF.

MAGISTRATE'S THOUGHT OF PRISONERS' POSTERITY.

The were very few cases in the London police courts arising out of the Peace celebrations, and in some courts the number of prisoners was much below the average.

An unusual course was taken by Mr. d'Eyncourt at Marylebone, in dealing with between twenty and thirty men and women who were charged with drunkenness or disorderly conduct.

All the accused were brought into court, and, addressing them, Mr. d'Eyncourt said:

"This celebration of Peace is perhaps the greatest occasion that England has ever known, and probably all of you will have descendants to whom, in the days to come, you will describe what has happened. Will you want to tell them you were convicted of being drunk or misbehaving on this great occasion?

"England has done magnificently in the war, and is now trying to make the best possible peace, and it behoves all her citizens to set a good example to the world and help her to maintain her great position."

He ordered the prisoners to be discharged.

OLD ARMY BOOTS.

FORTUNE MADE BY KEEN BUYER.

The Army Boot Depots at Southall, near London, Irlam (Lancashire), Leeds, Huntingdon, and Southampton are still busy sorting, repairing, and disposing of discarded Army boots. They are divided into five grades. The best, after suitable treatment, are returned to the troops, the three next grades are sold to civilians, the worst are used for clogging and patching, and the refuse from the various operations is given away.

There is reason to believe that one cargo of 20,000 recently sent to Copenhagen was intended for final disposal in Germany.

Under the present system a good deal of the profit on the sale of these old boots comes back to the country, but in the earlier days of the war, when there was no grading, all surplus boots were sold by weight without reference to quality, and in one authentic case it was shown that a buyer realised £180,000 for what had cost him only £30,000.

Among the very latest arrivals at Southall are thousands of knee-high naval boots, watertight and in splendid condition. They come to the depot from minesweepers and destroyers which are no longer out on their perilous task.

HEART IN A JAM JAR.

A strange provision for his interment was made in his will by Mr. W. H. Syrett, Nightingale-road, notice-server to the Hackney Borough Council. A codicil reads:—

If reasonable, I desire my body cremated and the resultant ashes placed in a large old jam jar which belonged to my mother, that Portland cement and sand mixed with water may be poured therein until a solid block of concrete is formed, and such block buried in some place unlikely to be disturbed, or alternatively thrown into deep sea water.

REPATRIATING PRISONERS FROM ENGLAND.

Arrangements have been made for a large number of German prisoners of war to be sent home via Dover and Rotterdam. The first batch of two trainloads of these men arrived yesterday at Dover, and embarked on the Great Eastern Railway Company's steamer St. Denis for Rotterdam. The St. Denis, which has been engaged on hospital ship service on the Dover route during the war, is sister ship to Captain Fryatt's steamer Brussels.

SOLDIERS' FUNERAL EXPENSES.

A soldier who has been admitted to hospital whilst on demobilization furlough and who dies there after its expiration should, in the words of an Army Council Instruction just issued, "be treated for the purposes of the expenses of a civil funeral as if he had been a serving soldier at the time of death."

ROYAL PROGRAMME FULL

The King and Queen will go to Balmoral early in August. Ordinarily, the Scottish visit has followed Goodwood and Cowes but engagements right up to the date of the famous meeting have ruled Goodwood out for this year, while the announcement that his Majesty will take part in the Thames pageant on Aug. 4 is one of the explanations why Cowes is not on the Royal engagement list.

As a sequel to the recent racial disturbances at Cardiff, when two whites and an Arab received fatal injuries, ten men were convicted of rioting at Swansea Assizes yesterday and sentenced to terms of imprisonment with hard labour ranging from twenty months to three months.

ATWOFOLD APPEAL.

Our army needs men. War is over in most parts of Christendom, but Peace has yet to be secured. It cannot be worthily secured without an adequate display of armed strength.

The men who have borne the heat and burden of the day are being released. It is only proper that their places should be taken by their brothers who have not toiled on the stern and tragic fields of battle. Fair-play is still a cherished principle in Britain.

The army, therefore, appeals for comrades—not for a vast array of men with all the panoply of war but for such numbers as shall satisfy Imperial exigencies and human needs.

What is its appeal? It is twofold in its significance, for it has an indirect and a direct claim.

In the first place, the distracted state of the home country supplies an argument for recruiting. A war of five years' duration inevitably leaves its mark upon the social fabric of a nation. For a considerable time there will be in England much difficulty in the equipment, discipline, and organization of industry. War conditions do not easily and quickly give way to conditions of settled peace. Every people has to harvest the aftermath of Mars.

Work is not forthcoming to all who demand it, and for long the wheels of industry will turn heavily and unevenly. Time must pass before the skilled artizan or the professional man can meet with the success his experience entitles him to expect. There is disappointment for all who forget the ravages which war has perpetrated.

Then there is the more direct appeal of the army. It opens up a field of reputable service for two classes of men—men who await the return of happier conditions in the industrial world and men who are not specially attracted by any particular industry or profession.

The army offers us a career which can be and must be followed with the utmost consideration of health. No business can vie with it in attention to physique, and this attention almost invariably takes forms that are pleasurable.

Then soldiering gives a man wondrous freedom from the anxieties and perplexities of life. If any man can say he has "not a care in the world," it is the soldier. For him the tax-gatherer, the profiteer, and the taskmaster lose their terrors.

Once more, there is in the Army a boon that the business world usually denies to its followers — certainty of regular employment. Many in the home country are harassed by the fear that suddenly they may be unemployed, but that is a sword of Damocles which never hangs over the head of the fit and capable soldier.

Nowadays education and technical training have been wisely fostered and organised by the military authorities, and it is open to all ranks to continue their studies in science, language, business, or manual crafts. The schoolmaster is abroad in the British Army, and he is armed with his books.

The days are gone, too, when the services of the soldier were rewarded with a miserable pittance. He now has a competence, and in these days of increased cost of living he can often look with compassion on his hard-worked civilian brothers.

Then there is the matter of promotion. Men may not carry Field Marshal's batons in their knapsacks, but they have the prospect of rising from the lowest rank to positions of authority and distinction. A good man may carve his way through the stripes and stars of our army till he wins the Crown.

These are some points in the appeal which our military service is making to the men of England. There must be many who will be proud to serve under the old flag and to rejoice in the new sprit of emancipated times.

THE DANGER.

There is a certain aspect of the question of the possible marriage of British soldiers with German women which, despite its importance, appears hitherto to have been neglected. We refer to the probable offspring of these unions.

It is now a widely recognised fact that there goes to the forming of each succeeding generation a great many parental characteristics about which we know, as yet little or nothing. Those who are studying the effect on the individual of the sub-conscious mind are now applying their conclusions to its effect on the unborn generation.

Every one of our thoughts leaves its impress on that part of the mind, which we cannot at will, bring into operation by an effort of memory. Consciously or unconsciously, our past thoughts and experience govern our present ideas and actions.

If therefore our children contain in their minds an impress, faint or otherwise, of our own mental composition, and inherit a tendency to think and act as we have thought and acted, just as they inherit an easily recognised likeness in face or form, it behoves every man who contemplates marriage with a German woman to hesitate before perpetuating the ideas which must be latent in her mind.

For five years and more, the German nation has been nourished on hatred for Britain and it would be an unpleasant event for an English father if the first words his offspring spoke were, "Gott strafe England!"

MY MASTER.

The Revelations of a Dog.

Whisper it not in Gath, but not many moons have passed, since I scrounged a livelihood in the opposition camp. Then meat portions were at a premium, the tasty Machonochie was unknown and I had not learned of the sweetness of "shokolade." Just what I fattened on in those days is a nightmare I recall with agony.

Often enough my new found confreres, all boastful of war services and chevrons, chip me as to my alien ancestory. Strictly, between ourselves I would sooner forget it. After all I am a naturalized dog, or about to be. Did not my governor remark to the buxom fräulein that he intended to take me along with her and himself to England? Not that I would set much store as to her chances of travel over the water in that direction. You see I have overheard that story before.

But to cast my mind back. The transfer of my allegiance was a perfectly simple matter, though the improved commissariat had a deal to do with my way of thinking. The language difficulty presented obstacles.

It is hard to be called upon to sample the toes of "Boots, Ordnance, pairs one, officer for the use of," because one has failed to grasp the meaning of a funny throaty noise which sounded like "Come here."

However, by dint of much perseverance, my knowledge has improved, so much so, that anticipating the governor's wish, I turn a deaf ear to the lingo which I learned from my Teuton owner.

On the whole our relationship is undisturbed, though I would fain hie myself back to the old haunts: Cologne has few attractions for a "Dawg," though the governor seems to find a few. I think, however, he would share my opinion if he were hauled along the streets at the end of a leash. My efforts to inter-pret my thoughts by chewing it up only earned me a hiding. But again, what is one to do?

Shall I ever forget my debut in the town? My freedom gone and my jaws eased in a leather contrivance which cost the governor fifteen marks. Again whisper it, but the market value of that muzzle has dropped appreciably since in a moment of despair I got my teeth into it.

It was well worth the ructions which followed. My respectability was endangered, my pride outraged. The freedom of the countryside was gone. No longer could I hold my head up, and the maze of traffic puzzled me.

No parades by the roadside, no regimental cooker and unlimited stew, no canters across the countryside. Instead, crawls through the streets with every town guardian of the law ready to haul me off, should I appear in public except at the end of a lead.

Slowly but surely I am getting fat and dyspeptic. The governor says so twenty times a day. I try to point out that there is a pair of us in the same boat. Frankly I have no use for hotel and cafe life, the caresses of frauen and fräulein.

Not that, knowing the weaknesses of the governor, I do not try to help him in this respect, and the introductions I have brought about—well. Still I have no use for snacks. Give me the unlimited bully of the regimental cookhouse and my old billet.

Between ourselves. I've no use for towns. "STROP."

WHAT TO SEE IN RHINELAND.

I. The Royal Palace at Brühl.

In the British Army of the Rhine, there are many men who are expert in painting, architecture, and historical lore, and they could write learned accounts of the Rhineland's places of interest which would put to shame the best of our guide-books.

But there is room for an occasional article on museums, churches, ancient buildings, or other interesting places by one who wanders as the spirit moves him and claims no knowledge of the arts and sciences. These are the days of "the man in the street," and such a man has his views and reflections.

Royal palaces have a glamour for the democrat. He likes to see how the other people lord it in their magnificence, and his inquisitive bent turns him at times to the castles of the mighty. Scorn, envy, amusement are some of the emotions felt by the average British soldier when he reads the lengthy list of the ex-Kaiser's palaces.

Now there is such a palace not far from Cologne, and it is worthy of a visit. Wilhelm II. is at present a notorious example of what the Scots call an "absentee laird," so one may strut through the stately rooms of this palace without any fear that trespassers will be prosecuted.

Stronghold now a Palace.

It is close to Brühl, a town which lies midway between Bonn and Cologne, a link between a home of learning and a seat of industry. It was a stronghold of the Electors of Cologne in the later mediaeval times; but its chief glory is now the royal palace, built in 1725—28, by the genial Clemens Augustus of Bavaria, archbishop, elector, and patron of art.

The palace is the greatest of the Rhineland's buildings of the eighteenth century, and it is reckoned a good example of the architecture of the age. The ordinary visitor can see at a glance that it is a perplexing fabric, for externally it is severe in this style — "chaste" is the word the experts use — whilst the ornamentation within the palace is amazingly exuberant.

The proper thing for the visitor, is to take his stand within the large hall of the first floor, to cast his eye upon the staircase, then upon the ceiling, and finally with solemn voice to emit the one blessed word "rococo." When that is done he has stepped into the circle of the initiated in art. Rococo is the Mesopotamia of the aesthetic. To pronounce it without a blush or a tremor is an artistic achievement.

What is 'Rococo'?

Do not demand of me a definition of the word. The dictionary informs one that it means a highly ornamental style of architecture, that it is a late and not a romantic phase of art, and that it was a product of the eighteenth century. The dictionary, therefore, is a very present help in time of trouble; and it is not surprising that one of England's great literary men made one.

But a history book can explain things when the dictionary ceases to help and when even the best guide-books fail us. Think of the history one learned at school or college, and ask what the King's courtiers, ecclesiastics, and wealthy patrons of art were doing in the first half of the eighteenth century. They were copying the civilization of France.

Now that answer helps us to get a better knowledge of the royal palace at Brühl than can be gained by a study of the various artists who displayed their genius on the building. At the very time it was being built, the future Frederick the Great was moulding his tastes after the pattern of Paris. When he became King of Prussia his court was modelled on the court that Louis XIV had made famous. Science, art, and even language were French — anything else was deemed barbarous.

That is why the Brühl palace and grounds seem so alien to what we regard as German. The park with its beautiful avenue and trees and fountain are like the pleasances of Versailles that we see in many a picture postcard. The music-room, the dining-room, the Electors' rooms, even the bedrooms are elegant, sumptuous, and distinctively French.

One thing is Teutonic. It is the marvellous carpet which has the eagle, the date 1870, the ominous "Wilhelm," and, best of all, an embroidered border of German battle-triumphs. Was one a Philistine when one exultingly tramped over its velvet pile?

SOLDIERS AND SPELLING.

Sir,—I read the recent article on "An International Language," by A.M. with pleasure.

In one ov his paragrafs A.M. makes menshon ov English speling. Speling is like erly luv — most ar very shy about it! Very few wil confes that they cannot spel. An an evening's amuzement I wood sujest to our frends acros the Rhine to take eny paragraf from the "Post", reed it out to those hoo wil undertake the dictashon lesson, and see how meny hav spelt acording to the printer — I cannot say "correctly," for ther is no such thing as "correct" speling, except by sound, and English speling is far from this standard.

Perhaps sum wil demur to this impeechment ov their orthografic skil. Just listen to whot Mr. A. J. Bulfour said yeers ago conserning soljery and speling:

I hav cum acros men hoo wood make excellent soljerz, hoo from sum defect ov eye — for it was a question ov eye very much — did not acquire the "stranje art" ov speling the English langwaje. Ther is nothing more calculated to disgust pupils and to degrade the hole subject ov examinashons than the habit ov attaching undue importans to the arbitrary simbols ov unuzual words."

It has been put on record that Wellington's dispatches wer not spelt according to the regulashon or "orthodox" speling; and even the culture ov Lord Collingwood did not befrend him against our lawless speling, when he had to rite English. Just another whisper. Look into Mr. Gerard's book, and yu wil find the Kizer made sertain slips in speling a few comon words! Bismarck was a defaulting speler.

H. DRUMMOND.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

BANDS ON THE RHINE.

Sir—In Cologne one is able to hear and enjoy the music of military bands, but such a privilege is denied the smaller towns. Unfortunately most of the bands in existence before the Armistice have been demobilized. The Division to whom I belong does not possess a band, and will not, without organisation of a special kind. That there is material to work on, cannot be doubted.

It is said that musicians are born, not made; but they are not born ready made. May I suggest that a school be organised for training some of the young soldiers who are likely to be in this country for a year or two? "RIPPLE."

PHOTOGRAPHING THE DOM.

Sir,—Upon reading "Echoes from Rhineland" I find that someone, evidently not an amateur photographer, criticises the taking of snaps of the Dom, when excellent and cheap views may be obtained in the shops.

Does it not strike him that there is method in the madness? I, personally, cannot get a view of the Dom that will fit my album and neither can I get one that appears to me as being the best obtainable; i.e. taken from the entrance to the Hohenzollern Bridge. I prefer a poor photograph of my own production than a perfect one, at half the cost, from a shop. KODAK.

DOGS IN CHURCH.

Sir,—If a dog is trained to behave properly why should it not be allowed in church? If it has not been so trained it should not be allowed anywhere in public.

Surely God does not object to animals being in His house so long as they do not inconvenience His worshippers.

Sometimes a dog is a man's best friend on earth, and must he leave it behind when he goes to visit the best friend in the universe? May I also remind your readers of the lines:

He prayeth best who loveth best
All creatures, great and small;
For the dear Lord who loveth us
He made and loveth all.

A PARSON.

ON SERIOUS READING.

Sir,—Your correspondent, Lieut. W. R. Patterson, deplores the fact that very few soldiers go in for serious reading.

That, I suppose, is the reason why we see so many dusty and moth eaten volumes on the shelves of our libraries. Just as, we see in many private houses, rows of volumes in gorgeous bindings; that are usually purchased because their beautiful appearance adds to the ornamentation of the home.

We must realise that the average soldier is not of a serious turn of mind; he lives for to-day and cares very little what the morrow may bring forth. Yet I believe that guided in the right way, and given the right kind of books, he would come to take up serious reading.

Could not a sufficient number of books be provided and Literary Clubs instituted in the Rhine Army? R.M.

TYPES OF ARCHITECTURE.

Sir,—During the Parliamentary debates which took place after the great fire of London in 1666, respecting the rebuilding of St. Paul's Cathedral, certain members wished it to be designed in the native style of the middle ages.

Others desired that the Renaissance style should be employed, and hurled the epithets "Gothic" and "Barbarous" at that which had been the pride of our country in earlier centuries, but had no name. The term "Gothic" stuck. Given in opprobrium, it has come to great honour; yet those who used it first were right, for the gothic spirit was dead in the seventeenth century, and St. Paul's, as we know it now, is one of the great masterpieces of Renaissance architecture.

This appears to be the only authentic explanation of the origin of the use of the word "Gothic" to describe the architecture of the middle ages in Western Europe. G. A. T. MIDDLETON.

DANCE ROOM ETIQUETTE.

Sir,—In answer to Runner's letter, what can he know about dancing, when he says that it is wrong to hold your partners wrist? What does he think you are going to do; hold her hair?

He says there is too much wild dancing, but most dancers will pilot their partners through any dance-room, providing it is not overcrowded, like the B.E.L.C. is at times.

As for "jazzing," I don't suppose "Runner" could jazz if he tried. Dancing should be a pleasure, not hard work, as waltzing is. A good dancer will jazz to rest himself. DANCING LONDONER.

Sir,—I must strongly object to the insinuation of Runner, that any of the charming ladies one meets at dances in Cologne could be party to the risk of hitting other dancers (or Runners) in the face, even though there are obvious good reasons for holding by the wrist, which need not here be mentioned.

Lastly it would appear that the joys of waltzing cannot be very great, if marred by that quite inoffensive dance the Jazz. RUNNER-UP.

THE MOON.

And, like a dying lady lean and pale,
Who totters forth, wrapp'd in a gauzy veil,
Out of her chamber, led by the insane
And feeble wanderings of her fading brain,
The moon arose up in the murky east
A white and shapeless mass.

Art thou pale for weariness
Of climbing heaven and gazing on the earth,
Wandering companionless
Among the stars that have a different birth,
And ever changing, like a joyless eye
That finds no object worth its constancy?
